Deponent further says that from the frequent allusions of said W. C. Hyde to Mrs. Emma A. Cunningham, in his letters to said A. F. Hyde, and from the manner in which he spoke of her, and from what deponent learned from Mrs. Locada Hyde, in front of W. C. Hyde, residing in Brooklyn, Kings County, N. Y., who is as deponent is informed and believes, an acquaintance and an intimate friend of Mrs. Emma A. Cunningham, this deponent and his family were induced to believe, and did believe, previous to the murder of Harvey Burdell, of No. 31 Bond-street, that an engagement or contract of marriage existed between said W. C. Hyde and said Emma A. Cunningham; that the existence of such an engagement was often the subject of conversation in deponent's family, previous to the murder of said Burdell.

Deponent further says that he visited said Locada Hyde at her house in Brooklyn, in the Fall or 1st of December, 1856, and that the existence of an engagement or contract of marriage between said W. C. Hyde and said Emma A. Cunningham was the subject of conversation between this deponent and Mrs. Locada Hyde, and that during said conversation said Locada Hyde declared to this deponent that W. C. Hyde should never marry Mrs. Cunningham, if she could prevent it.

Deponent further says upon information and believes that, after the death of Harvey Burdell, A. F. Hyde wrote to said W. C. Hyde to ascertain whether an engagement or contract of marriage existed between said W. C. Hyde and Mrs. Cunningham, and that deponent has seen and heard read the answer of said W. C. Hyde to said letter of A. F. Hyde, and that in said letter said W. C. Hyde says in substance that such an engagement of marriage did exist, and which he was expecting to consummate on his return home.

Deponent further says that on Sunday morning, the 24th day of May inst., Locada Hyde came in company with a lady who she said was a Mrs. Wilt, and who reside, as deponent is informed and believes, in the City of New-York, to the house of this dryonent in the village of Owego; that, as they informed deponent, they arrived in Owego on Saturday, at 5 o'clock A. M., and that they left deponent's house for the City of New-York on Monday, about 1 o'clock A. M.

That as deponent is informed and believes, they saw and had an interview with A. F. Hyde, at his house, on Sunday morning, before coming to this house of deponent, and upon his own knowledge he says that she saw and had another interview with said A. F. Hyde, at deponent's house in the afternoon of the said 24th inst.; that all of the letters from W. C. Hyde to said A. F. Hyde were read by said A. F. Hyde in the presence of this deponent, and also in the presence and hearing of said Locada Hyde and Mrs. Wilt. That during the conversation at deponent's house on the said 24th inst., Mrs. Locada Hyde said, in the presence and hearing of this deponent, that if Mrs. Cunningham succeeded in getting the property of Dr. Burdell, she, Mrs. Locada Hyde, was to receive five thousand dollars.

Deponent further states that he was informed by said Locada Hyde and Mrs. Wilt, that Mrs. Cunningham started to come with them to Owego on the 23d inst., and came as far as Jersey City, where they persuaded her to return to New-York. Deponent further says, that he is informed by the wife of A. F. Hyde, and believes it to be true, that the lady who called herself Mrs. Wilt returned to Owego from New-York on Tuesday morning, the 26th inst., at 2 o'clock A. M.; that she went to the house of said A. F. Hyde early on Tuesday morning and inquired for said Hyde; and that on being informed that said Hyde was in the village of Waverley, left for Waverley for the purpose of seeing said Hyde and on the afternoon of the same day said Hyde returned to Owego and informed his wife that he was going to the City of New-York, in company with the said Mrs. Wilt; and deponent believes that said A. F. Hyde is now in the City of New-York, having gone there on the afternoon of the 26th inst., in company with the lady who called herself Mrs. Wilt at deponent's house on Sunday.

AFFIDAVIT OF JOSEPH B. UPHAM.

Joseph B. Upham, of said county, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the son-in-law of William Hyde, of the village of Owego, and brother-in-law of A. F. Hyde, of said village, and of W. C. Hyde, of California: That deponent has never seen W. C. Hyde, but has corresponded with him for a year last past, during which time deponent has received from said Hyde three letters, and has seen and read all of the letters which he supposes have been received by A. F. Hyde, or by any member of the family, for three years last past; that in this way deponent has become acquainted with and knows the handwriting of said W. C. Hyde; that during the last eighteen months said A. F. Hyde has received from W. C. Hyde from six to ten letters, which said letters said A. F. Hyde had in his possession on the 25th instant, as he then informed this deponent in the village of Owego; that in a letter which the said A. F. Hyde received from said W. C. Hyde about one year ago, which this deponent saw and read, said W. C. spoke of having received a letter from a Mrs. Emma A. Cunningham, of No. 31 Bond-street, and requested said A. F. Hyde, when he went to New-York to call on her at that place; that said W. C. Hyde for the last year has often referred to Mrs. Cunningham in his letters to said A. F. Hyde, and to this deponent, and in the manner which he spoke of her, and from what he said of her, and from the fact that the family of deponent learned from Mrs. Locada Hyde, in Brooklyn, deponent and the family friends of said W. C. Hyde were induced to believe and did believe that an engagement or contract of marriage existed between said W. C. Hyde and Mrs. Emma A. Cunningham, and that the existence of such an engagement was often the subject of conversation with deponent and his family previous to the death of Harvey Burdell.

That in a letter from W. C. Hyde said Hyde stated that he intended to return to the State of New-York in the Fall of 1856, but that in a subsequent letter he informed them that his business was such that he could not leave before the Spring of 1857.

That on or about the 18th day of December last said A. F. Hyde wrote to said W. C. Hyde, that deponent saw the letter within written and deposited in the Post-Office in Owego, directed to W. C. Hyde, California, which said letter it was supposed would leave New-York per steamer for California on or about the 20th of December last. That in February or March said A. F. Hyde received an answer from W. C. Hyde to said letter so written by him on the 18th day of December as aforesaid, in which said W. C. Hyde states to said A. F. Hyde, and which said letter deponent has seen and read, that when he received his, A. F. Hyde's, last letter he also received one from "Mrs. Emma A. Cunningham."

Deponent further states that after the murder of Harvey Burdell, deponent and the family friends of said W. C. Hyde still supposed and believed that an engagement or contract of marriage existed between said W. C. Hyde and said Mrs Emma A. Cunningham, and it was agreed by deponent and said A. F. Hyde that they would write to said W. C. Hyde and ascertain whether any such engagement existed.

That on or about the 3d of February last, deponent and said A. F. Hyde joined in a letter to said W. C. Hyde, in which they stated to said Hyde that from his letters they had supposed that he was engaged to be married to Mrs. Cunningham, and that they wished to know whether any such contract or engagement existed.

That in the month of April last, (deponent thinks after the middle,) said A. F. Hyde received from the said W. C. Hyde an answer to the letter written about the 3d of February last, which said answer deponent has seen and read, in which said W. C. Hyde distinctly states, in substance, that he was engaged to be married to Emma Cunningham, and expected to marry her on his return to the State of New-York, and that for the last or subsequent letter said W. C. Hyde says, in speaking of his engagement with Mrs. Cunningham, "I thank God that I have escaped from the snare of such a woman."

Deponent further says from what said W. C. Hyde has written, he has no doubt but that an engagement or contract or marriage existed between the said W. C. Hyde and Mrs. Emma A. Cunningham at the time of the murder of Harvey Burdell, and had so existed for several months previous thereto.

That deponent on Sunday the 24th instant, saw Locada Hyde, of Brooklyn, at the house of William Hyde, in the village of Owego, and had a conversation with her in regard to the application for Letters of Administration upon the estate of Harvey Burdell now pending in this Court. That he heard her state that if Mrs. Cunningham succeeded in getting she, Mrs. Locada Hyde, would receive from Mrs. Cunningham five thousand dollars, and that if A. F. Hyde would aid her by keeping W. C. Hyde's letters away from the Burdell heirs she would give him one thousand dollars of it.

That A. F. Hyde was not present at this time, but soon came to the house of William Hyde in company with the lady who called herself Mrs. Wilt, that deponent there saw and conversed with Mrs Wilt, and that Mrs. Wilt and Locada Hyde in a conversation with deponent, inquired of deponent what he had told Benjamin F. Tracy, of Owego, in regard to the contents of the letter received by A. F. Hyde from W. C. Hyde about the middle of April last; that deponent informed them that he had told said Tracy what was in said letter, and supposed that he had written to the District-Attorney of New-York in regard to said letter; that deponent informed them that he would go and see said Tracy and see whether or not he had written to New-York anything about said letter; that said Mrs. Wilt and Locada Hyde then stated to deponent that he would aid them he would be well paid for it.

Deponent further says that he heard Mrs. Locada Hyde and Mrs. Wilt say that Mrs. Cunnibgham started to come to Owego with them on the 23d instant, and got as far as Jersey City, where they induced her to return to New-York.

And further this deponent saith not.

AFFIDAVIT OF BENJAMIN F. TRACY.

Benjamin F. Tracy, being duly sworn, says that he is an attorney and counselor-at-law of the State of New-York, residing and doing business in the village of Owego, in said County, and is, and for more than three years has been, District-Attorney in and for said County of Tioga.

Deponent further says, that he is not acquainted with Whitehead C. Hyde, of California, but is well acquainted with his relatives who reside in said village. That since the murder of Dr. Harvey Burdell, of No. 31 Bond-street, New-York, deponent has frequently conversed with Abram F. Hyde, brother of said Whitehead C. Hyde, relative to an engagement or contract of marriage which said A. F. Hyde supposed existed between said W. C. Hyde and Mrs. Emma A. Cunningham.

That previous to the 23d day of May inst., said A. F. Hyde has ever been willing to converse with deponent upon the subject of said engagement, and always appeared to be willing to disclose any information which he possessed relative to said engagement. That some time in February last said Hyde came in company with his brother-in-law, Joseph B. Upham, to the office of this deponent, and read to deponent several letters which purported to be from W. C. Hyde of California, in some of which, according to deponent's best recollection and belief, there was reference to Emma Cunningham. That deponent was then informed by said Hyde that he and Upham had written to W. C. Hyde to ascertain whether any engagement or contract of marriage did exist between said W. C. Hyde and Mrs. Cunningham.

That about the 1st of May inst., deponent was informed by said Upham that an answer to his and said Hyde's letter had been received, in which said W. C. Hyde distinctly stated that an engagement of marriage did exist between himself and Mrs Cunningham. That upon the receipt of said information deponent wrote to S. J. Tilden, (having previously corresponded with him upon the subject,) that a letter had been received by the friends of W. C. Hyde, in which the fact of such an engagement was positively asserted. That soon after the writing of said letter he received from Charles Edwards, and also from said Tilden a note—requesting deponent to procure such facts from the friends of said W. C. Hyde as would enable them to move for a commission to examine said W. C. Hyde. That deponent soon after saw said A. F. Hyde, and was informed by him that he had received a like from Mr. Tilden through G. O. Chase of Waverley and intended to send to Mr. Tilden all the information he possessed upon the subject; that deponent heard no more of said matter until the morning of the 25th inst., when he received another note from said Tilden & Edwards, requesting deponent to obtain the affidavit of said A. F. Hyde, that he had received a letter from his brother, W. C. Hyde stating that such an engagement between himself and Mrs. Cunningham did exist, and also, if possible, to send the letters of said Hyde with affidavit of said Abram F. Hyde attached, that the letters were in the handwriting of said W. C. Hyde; that deponent soon after saw said A. F. Hyde in the village of Owego, and informed him that he desired such an affidavit from him, and also wished him to send the letters to New-York; that said Hyde then pretended that he had not the letters of said W. C. Hyde with him—that they were in Waverley, nineteen miles distant from Owego—and when deponent expressed a willingness to go to Waverley with said Hyde for said letters, said Hyde refused to allow the letters to go out of his possession; that said Hyde talked with deponent about the contents of said letters, and admitted that he had a letter from W. C. Hyde, in which said Hyde positively asserted the existence of a contract of marriage between himself and Mrs. Cunningham, and that he had expected to be married to Mrs. Cunningham on his return to New-York; that said Hyde refused to exhibit said letters, and finally refused to make any affidavit, saying that he wanted time to consider whether he had better make an affidavit upon the subject; that during said interview with said Hyde, which continued for more than one hour, said Hyde said to this deponent, in substance, that if "you were not employed by the heirs of Burdell, I would disclose to you a great secret."

That said Hyde denied having seen any person or persons from New-York the day previous at his father's house, and denied having seen or conversed with any friends of Mrs. Cunningham.

Deponent further says that from information which he had received from the relatives of said A. F. Hyde at the time of said interview with him on the 25th inst., he then supposed that said Hyde was colluding with persons either on behalf of Mrs. Cunningham to deprive the heirs of Dr. Burdell of the letters in his possession, from W. C. Hyde and thereby prevent them from obtaining a commission to examine said Hyde, and from information since received by this deponent, he is confirmed in that opinion, and that said A. F. Hyde is induced to withhold said letters and the information which he possesses by promises of money to be paid to said Hyde in case he will prevent the examination of said W. C. Hyde, upon commission, and deponent verily believes from information received by deponent that the secret, which the said A. F Hyde would have disclosed to deponent, but for the fact that deponent was in the employ of the counsel for the heirs of Dr. Burdell, was, that he, the said A. F. Hyde, had been offered a large sum of money to withhold the information which he possessed and thereby prevent an examination of W. C. Hyde,—that repeatedly during said interview with said A. F. Hyde, he expressed the opinion that the evidence of said W. C. Hyde would defeat the application of Mrs Cunningham for letters of administration.

Deponent further says that he is informed and believes that said A. F. Hyde had the letters of said W. C. Hyde with him at the time of the interview with deponent, when said Hyde pretended that they were at Waverley.

B. F. TRACY.

Subscribed and sworn to the 27th day May, 1857, before me. L. W. KINGMAN, Clerk, Tioga County.

Mr. Stafford, one of the Counsel for Mrs. Burdell, then read the following affidavits in rebuttal:

AFFIDAVIT OF EMMA A BURDELL.

City and County of New-York, ss.—Emma A. Burdell, of said City, being duly sworn, says she has heard read the affidavits of Joseph B. Upham, Wm. Hyde, and Benjamin F. Tracy, respectively, on which the motion for a commission in this proceeding to take the testimony of Whitehead C. Hyde is made, and that she has no knowledge of any collusion between A. F. Hyde and any other person or persons, to prevent Hyde from furnishing information to Mr. B. F. Tracy, or any other Attorney or counselor-at-law; that she has neither furnished any money to said Hyde for any such purpose, nor has she promised him any, or authorized any person or persons, directly or indirectly, to make any such promise, or to hold out to him any inducement or pecuniary reward, recompense or compensation, present or future, absolute or contingent; nor has she by herself or by any other person, made any such promise, offer or inducement, to said Locada Hyde. Deponent further says that she did not start with said Locada and Mrs. Wilt on Saturday last to go to Owego, nor has she ever been there or started to go there. Deponent further says that the letters she had received, prior to the death of Dr. Burdell, including those from her former husband, were seized by the Coroner and some Police officers, and examined and kept or destroyed; that they have not been returned to deponent, and that it is not in her power to give the contents of the letters of said W. C. Hyde to her husband. Deponent further says that she saw at the time of publication, the letter purporting to come from Owego, in February last; that knowing that there was no truth in the report therein stated, in reference to the marriage engagement of deponent and said W. C. Hyde, or the interview that was alleged to have taken place between herself and the brother of said Hyde, last November or December, that she paid no attention thereto, and made no inquiry about it. That after the argument before the surrogate on the 23d of May last, and after a denial on the motion for a Commission, that her counsel advised her to send to Owego and ascertain what was the origin of the reports in reference to said Hyde and herself. That on consultation, neither deponent nor her counsel knew any person there to whom they could send, that one of her counsel then advised her to send a gentleman from this City, who was named by him; that deponent then separated from her counsel and sent to procure the gentleman to go; that the messenger returned and informed deponent that said gentleman could not be found; that Mrs. Wilt then offered to go if deponent would find some person who knew any one in Owego to accompany her, and that deponent then procured Mrs Locade Hyde so to accompany said Mrs. Wilt. Deponent further says, that the letters that she wrote to said W. C. Hyde were written with the knowledge of said Harvey Burdell, and that said Burdell mailed some of them, and deponent believes that he received from the postman some of the letters from said Hyde and handed them to deponent, at No. 31 Bond-street, and that deponent never received any of said letters but what said Burdell read, and of which he fully knew the contents.

AFFIDAVIT OF FRANCIS HYDE.

Kings County, ss.—Francis Hyde, of Brooklyn, in said County, being duly sworn, says: That he was present at the house of his mother, Locada Hyde, in said City, some time in the Fall of the year 1856, when said Locada and Abraham F. Hyde had a conversation about Mrs. Cunningham and W. C. Hyde, of California, when some one in the room spoke of the return home of said W. C. Hyde, and the probability that if he returned he would marry said Mrs. C.; that said Locada replied in substance, that they need not expect that. That he informed her the preceeding Spring that she was going to marry Dr. Burdell, or the dentist in whose house she lived in Bond-street; which expression was used deponent is not certain but believes it was the latter. And further deponent saith not.

FRANCIS E. HYDE.

Sworn before me this 3d day of June, 1857.
FRANK JENKS, Com. of Deeds.

AFFIDAVIT OF CATHERINE WILT.

City and County of New-York, ss.: Catherine Wilt, wife of George A. Wilt, of said City, being duly sworn, says: That she, accompanied Mrs. Locada Hyde, of Brooklyn, to Owego on the 23d of May last, and was present at an interview between said Locada and William Hyde, and Joseph B. Upham, at the residence of said William Hyde, in the village of Owego, on the 24th day of said month. That deponent did not state, nor did said Locada in her presence to either said Upham, or any other person, that Mrs. Burdell (called by them Mrs. Cunningham) started to come to Owego with them on said 23d inst., and got as far as Jersey City, where they induced her to return to New-York, or any words whatever to that effect; on the contrary, deponent avows of her own knowledge, that said Mrs Burdell did not start to come with them to Owego, and had not expressed any such intention to deponent, or said Locada, to deponent's knowledge. That at said interview at said Hyde and said William Hyde's house, said Locada did not, in deponent's presence or hearing, make use of any expression that the said Locada would receive five thousand dollars, or any sum whatever, from Mrs. Burdett, or Mrs. Cunningham, or that if A. F. Hyde would aid her by keeping W. C. Hyde's letters away from the Burdell heirs she would give him one thousand dollars of it, or any words whatever to that effect; nor did deponent, or said Locade Hyde, to her knowledge or in her presence, say to said Joseph B Upham that if he would aid them he should be well paid for it, or any words whatever to that effect; deponent further says that at said interview Mrs. Locada Hyde mentioned the fact that she had told the said William Hyde and Abraham T. Hyde, at the house in Brooklyn, last Fall, that she supposed Mrs. Cunningham was then married or would shortly be married to Dr. Burdell, and asked said William Hyde if he did not recollect it, to which he (said William) assented; said Locada then asked how could they then, knowing this, circulate any reports of an engagement between Whitehead C Hyde and Mrs Burdell, to which said Upham replied that they had denied it, that it was a thing impossible, or words to that effect; that said Locada remarked that she would rather give five hundred dollars herself than have the family seized up in it; that said Upham then replied in substance that if it grieved her so, he would withdraw all he had said; that he did not know anything about it or his own knowledge, and that the remarks he might have made were merely on supposition.

Deponent further says that the above is substantially the whole of the conversation relating to the Burdell matter at said interview; that no offer of money, promise of reward or inducement of any kind to suppress any letters or testimony in this matter, was or has been made to any person or persons by deponent, nor was deponent ever authorized by said Emma A. Burdell, or by any person or persons on her behalf, to hold out any inducements or promises of any nature or description, or any offers of pecuniary reward to any one to suppress any letters or testimony in this or any other matter.

CATHERINE WILT.

Sworn before me this 1st day of June, 1857.
J. R. LEE, Commissioner of Deeds.

AFFIDAVIT OF LOCADA HYDE.

City and County of New-York, ss.: Locade Hyde, of the City of Brooklyn, widow, being duly sworn, says, that on Saturday, the 23d May last, at the request of Mrs. Emma A Burdell and her counsel, she left the City of New York for Owego, in company with Mrs. Catherine Wilt, for the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of information alleged to have been received from the friends of Whitehead C. Hyde as to an alleged engagement of marriage between him and said Emma A. Burdell. That deponent, on her arrival at Owego, saw William Hyde, the father of said Whitehead, Abraham F. Hyde, his brother, and Joseph B. Upham, his brother-in-law, and had considerable conversation with them. That she did not state to either of them, or to any other person, that said Mrs. Burdell started to come to Owego with Mrs. Wilt and herself, or that she had gone as far as Jersey City, or that they had there induced her to return to New York, or any words whatever to that effect; on the contrary, deponent avows that Mrs. Burdell did not start or return nor did she express any intention whatever of accompanying them, or either of them, to Owego, or that or any other city.

Deponent further says that she did not, on said occasion, or at any other interview with said William Hyde and Upham, or either of them, or on any other occasion to any person or persons say that she was to receive $5,000 or any other sum from Mrs. Cunningham, Mrs. Burdell, or any other person, or that if A. F. Hyde would aid her she would give him one thousand dollars of it, or any words whatever to that effect; that it is untrue, in point of fact, that she was to receive said sum, or any other sum whatever, from said Mrs Burdell, or any person acting in her behalf. Deponent further says that at said interview she inquired into the origin of the reports respecting said alleged engagement of marriage between said Whitehead C. Hyde and said Emma, and was informed by him that he had received a line from Mr. Tilden through G. O. Chase of Waverley and intended to send to Mr. Tilden all the information he possessed upon the subject; that deponent heard no more of said matter until the morning of the 25th inst., when he received another note from said Tilden & money, on the night of May 13. Mr. Martin had paid a temporary visit to the City, and when promenading Broadway, late at night, was entangled and astrapped by the said Celeste. He accompanied her to her room in West Broadway, and while in her company, the room, which was dark, was entered by some person, and the watch and money, which were in his vest pocket, taken therefrom. After some parley with Celeste, who said a girl must have taken it, the services of a policeman were called into requisition, and after some time, in the expectation that Mr. Martin would not prosecute, the prisoner Jones delivered up the watch. He was arrested, together with Celeste, and the Jury yesterday did not hesitate to find him guilty. Sentence deferred.

MORE GRAND LARCENY.

Louie Gemmel was next charged with stealing a quantity of silk, worth $95, from the dry-goods store of Messrs. Fanshawe, Milligan and Co., No. 36 Broadway, on the morning of April 21. He went into the store about 8 o'clock, as alleged by the prosecution, and asked to see one of the firm. Immediately a second man came in, and asked to see another of them. As neither of the gentlemen was at home, the second man asked the porter, the only person in the store, for a piece of paper and a pencil. While the latter went to get them, the movements of the prisoner were somewhat extraordinary, and before the porter could return with the paper he suddenly left the store. The man who wanted the paper made haste to follow him, whereupon the porter, suspecting that something was wrong, gave both of them chase. They took to their heels, and Gemmel, in his flight, dropped a roll of moire antique. They made good their escape at that time, but eight days afterwards the porter met Gemmel and had him arrested.

On cross-examination the porter, who is a colored man, said that he recognized Gemmel from a scar on his face, and his general appearance. He took him to be a Jew, and there was no mistaking a Jew anywhere.

The defence called a German Jew peddler, named Trubart, who swore powerfully to prove an alibi. The accused, he said, was at his house at the time of the robbery, celebrating the birth-day of his (witness') child. He came at half past six o'clock and went away at ten. On cross-examination, this witness confounded and contradicted himself in the most remarkable manner.

His wife was next called, who went through the same story; but in her turn, on cross-examination, contradicted both herself and her husband. Her sister was next called. She told nearly the same story, but on cross-examination contradicted both the previous witnesses.

Judge Osborne, and Mr. Johnson, the Clerk at the Tombs, were called by the defence to testify as to the length of the prisoner's board when he was committed for examination; but their evidence was favorable to the prosecution. The Recorder charged the Jury, dwelling very strongly on the discrepancies in the testimony for the defence. The Jury retired, but at a late hour last night there was no probability of their agreeing.

Beeves are sold by the estimated dead weight of the four quarters; the so-called "fifth quarter" (hide and tallow) is not reckoned in here as it is in Boston and some other cities. When cattle are weighed or estimated alive, the dead weight is reckoned at a certain number of pounds to the 100 lbs. of live weight, as agreed upon. The general rule in this market for medium cattle is 56 lbs. to the 100; 44 lbs. being allowed for the "fifth quarter" and offal.

The average prices to-day, as compared with last week, are about 1½c. higher.

REMARKS UPON THE BEEF MARKET.

Several causes contributed to bring about a very short supply of stock this week. A general impression went abroad from last week's results that there would be an over-supply and low prices, and everybody near enough to have reached the market thought he would get the start of every one else and stay at home with his cattle. Aside from this, farmers who have been accustomed to send a few animals from week to week, are now too busy in planting to stop to inquire after the state of the market, or to meet its demands at any prices. By reference to the table of States above, it will be noted that of 1,611 fresh cattle reported, Illinois contributed nearly a thousand, (950,) Ohio 307, and Kentucky 100, having only 194 to come from this State.... There were only 1,207 offered at Forty-fourth-street yesterday and to-day, and but 1,949 received at the four City markets and Bergen during the week. This is but a trifle over half the average weekly receipts for last year. An there are several butchers who have yearly contracts to fulfill, and others whose customers will have beef at any price, as a matter of course purchases were made on such terms as they were compelled to submit to, and owners were not slow to avail themselves of the advantages of a short supply. We think the advance from last week's rates just about equal to the decline then, and the prices just about the same as two weeks ago, with a little more favor shown to purchasers in the estimate of weights.... A general impression prevails throughout the country that there is a great deficiency of cattle to meet the increasing wants of our markets, and this is in part well founded, though doubtless too high expectations are formed by producers who are holding on to their stock. It can hardly be hoped by them that the rates of to-day, for example, can be maintained, from the simple fact that it is utterly impossible for the great mass of consumers to buy meat at these prices. Wages must increase, but this change will be very slow, and the man who receives but the present wages of laborers, and has the various necessities of a family to provide for, cannot possibly expend beyond a certain gross amount for meat. If it is higher, he must of necessity buy less in quantity, and this will diminish the demand until prices decline to lower figures. And, moreover, when a family has learned how to substitute other kinds of food for the meat so abundantly consumed in many a few years past, the new habits have a tendency to continue, and will be continued for a time at least, even though meat should become much cheaper again. Taking these facts into account, and also that there will be a much greater production of cattle stimulated by the current state of the market, we think it not probable that the present rates will be likely to continue beyond a few months, though there is little prospect that they will not continue sufficiently high to render raising beef for market highly remunerative in the future.... The yards were nearly or quite cleared out at sundown to-day, so that our next week's supply must be of fresh stock.... Very few cattle went East from Albany this week, though considerable numbers of Western animals were taken off the route to supply several local markets.... A number of Western drovers spoke in high terms of perfect arrangements, good time, and good treatment received on the Erie Railroad. The fare from Buffalo over that route is reduced to $70 ₱ car.

SMITH, BARRETT & Co. brought in 98 Cattle, originally from the Cherokee Nation, but fed the past year in Sangamon County, Ill. Home Illinois weight, 1,375 lbs. Quality good, and sold by T. WHITE & SON at 12c.@14c.

H. HENRY contributed 42 first quality Illinois Cattle, weighing ot home 1,600 lbs., gross. J. H. WILLIAMS sold them at 13c.@14c.

H. KELLY took three at $385, or 14c. D. CONKLIN bought six at $145 each, and three others brought $120 each, or a shade under 14c.

Mr. HENRY sold 25 out of the some drove, at Albany, at 7½c. live weight. They were of his own selection at that price.

D. G. CULVER sold on his own account 10 Dutchess County, N. Y., Cattle, of common quality, at 11¾c.@13c. Average estimated weight, 800 lbs. Also, 19 fine Ohio Steers, of the same weight, at $112 each, or 14c. ₱ lb.

S. B. RICHARDSON contributed 100 Cattle, bought of WM. GAINES, of Coles County, Ill., which the seller called an "extra mean lot." GAINES has fed some good Cattle, or rather made them good by feeding, but as this is the last lot he expects to feed, he probably did not consider that his reputation would suffer, in this line, even if he sent on a lot which Mr. RICHARDSON confessed himself ashamed to have in his possession. The home weight was 1,200 lbs. gross. WHEELER & TEED were trying to get 12c., and succeeded.

M. WHITE had 30 distillery Cattle from New-York State; estimated weight 750 lbs. They brought $100 each, or a trifle over 13c. ₱ lb.

SHERMAN & HOAG sold on their own account 30 fresh Ohio Cattle, and 20 which were left over from last week. The former were good heavy Cattle, rated 850 lbs. gross, and brought 12½c. @14c. ₱ lb.

LOCKMAN & BROTHER started with 119 distillery cattle from Onondaga County, N. Y., leaving 89 head at Albany. He brought on the balance, which were sold by GEORGE AYRAULT at 13c.@14c. ₱ lb. They were estimated to weigh 825 lbs. net, and were of fair quality.

FELT & SMITH sent on 97 common, thin cattle from the vicinity of Chicago, Ill.; estimated weight 750 lbs. They brought, by WM. H. BELDEN, salesman, about $96 each, or near 13c. ₱ lb.

E. H. SHEPARD sold on account of SHEPARD & WOOD one lot of 104 fine four year old steers, rated 675 lbs., at 12c.@13c. Seventy of them were wholesaled this morning and resold during the day, by T. WHEELER. SHEPARD sold another lot of 17 distillery cattle to J. CARROL at 11¼c. They were estimated to weigh about 625 lbs. net, and were of hordly medium quality.

MILLER, HARING & GURNEY sold for LOUGHRAN & MOORE 30 stall fed cattle from New-York State, at 12¾c.@14c. Rated 800 lbs., and of common to fair quality.

WHEATON, HURD & Co. purchased a good lot of Illinois cattle of G. REED, which they sold at 13c.@14c. Estimated weight, 750 lbs.

J. A. MERRITT sold 98 fairish Ohio cattle for J. MCCONNELL at about 13c. They were estimated at 725 lbs. net.

He disposed also of the balance of BAKER'S fat Kentucky cattle left from last week's sales at about 14c. ₱ lb. I. ANDERSON took 6 of them at 14c. by weight, calling them 63 lbs. to the 100 lbs. live weight, which was probably quite as much as they would do.

We present, as usual, a few extracts from our copious notes of the transactions of this day:

MILCH COWS WITH CALVES.

Milch Cows are sold at each of the above yards, usually with their Calves at their sides. The prices vary somewhat with the supply and demand, and vary greatly, of course, upon the milking value. The particular fancy of the buyer has also considerable to do with the price. Not unfrequently a Cow is sold at $90@$100, or even $120. The general price throughout the year for ordinary Cows is $30 to $40 or $50. Quite a number sell above $50, and more, perhaps, below $30. We often see apologies for Cows go at $20 @$25. The weekly reports from the different yards will give the weekly fluctuations.

The market continues well supplied, and prices are scarcely kept up, notwithstanding the advance in beef. Good fresh cows are sufficiently high, however.

ALLERTON reports 86 Milch Cows received during the week, selling at $30@$35 for common, $40@$50 for good, and $50@$60 for extras. A few as high as $75. No variation in numbers or price for the week. Selling slowly.

BROWNING reports receipts of 36 Milch cows, selling at $25@$30 for common, $40@$50 for good, and $60@$70 for extras. Supply sufficient for the demand, without a very active market.

CHAMBERLIN reports 121 Milch Cows, selling at $25@$35 for common; $40@$50 for good; and $60@$65 for extras. Market well supplied and selling slow. Prices remain about as last week.

O'BRIEN reports 132 Milch Cows, selling at $30@$40 for common, $40@$50 for good, and a few at $60@$65. Excepting a slight decline in price, the market is unchanged.

VEAL CALVES.

Veal Calves are sold by live weight, each animal being weighed alive at the time of sale. "Bobs"—that is, Calves a few days old—are usually sold by the head at such prices as can be agreed upon, sometimes for but little more than the skin is worth. The principal places of sale are ALLERTON'S, BROWNING'S, CHAMBERLIN'S and O'BRIEN'S.

The footings show an increase of about 250 calves for the City market. General quality fair, with no change in price.

ALLERTON reports receipts of 713 Veal Calves, selling for 5c.@6½c. A few at 7c.@7½c. ₱ lb., live weight. Receipts have been large, but an active market has made a demand for the whole at former prices.

BROWNING reports receipts of 92 Veal Calves, selling generally at 5c.@7c. ₱ lb. live weight. A few choice ones at 7½c. Full receipts with a fair market. Quality only medium.

CHAMBERLIN reports receipts of 167 Veal Calves, selling at 5c.@7c. ₱ lb. live weight. A plentiful supply with a dullness in the market is noted. Prices have undergone but little change.

O'BRIEN reports 112 Veal Calves, selling at 5½c.@6¾c. ₱ lb., and a very few at 7c. ₱ lb. A fair demand is just met by the supply with no variation of last week's prices.

SHEEP AND LAMBS.

These are chiefly sold at ALLERTON'S, BROWNING'S, and CHAMBERLIN'S, at so much ₱ head for a particular lot of Sheep or Lambs, or of the two together. They are also frequently sold by live weight, as this is readily ascertained. The actual prices at the different yards seldom vary greatly. The difference in reputed prices is generally due to variation in the quality. When they are sold by weight, it is usually the net weight, which is ordinarily one-half what they weigh when alive, the pelt and offal making the other half. If fat and small-boned, they will dress 55 lbs., and in some cases 60 lbs., ₱ hundred. The average run is about one-half the live weight.

The receipts at the several markets show a gain of 250 for the week. Lambs, especially, begin to arrive more freely, and find ready sales at good prices. The quality of both Sheep and Lambs is improving,—the former in flesh and the latter in age.

ALLERTON reports receipts of 550 Sheep and Lambs, which brought 13c.@14c. ₱ lb., dressed weight. Prices have declined a little. One lot of good sheared Sheep brought 6c., live weight. Lambs sell for $2 50@$6 each.

BROWNING reports receipts of 1,572 Sheep and Lambs, selling at 12c.@13c., net. Lambs are bringing $4@$6 each, or 16c.@18c. ₱ lb. Market good. Stock sells as fast as it arrives. Receipts to-day, 544 head. The whole receipts for May were 7,325, or 1,494 less than for the corresponding month of last year.

CHAMBERLIN reports receipts of 2,462 Sheep and Lambs, selling at $4 50@$6 ₱ head, or 10c.@13c. ₱ lb., dressed weight. Arrivals are more free, and a trifling decline in price is apparent. Sheared Sheep bring 10c.@11c. Wool Sheep, 12c.@14c., and Lambs, 16c.@18c. ₱ lb.

REPORTS OF BROKERS' SALES AT BROWNING'S FOR WEEK ENDING JUNE 2, 1857.

R. HOMES reports sales of 500 Sheep and Lambs at $3@$6, an 1 a few at $7 each for sheared sheep, or 7c.@12½c. ₱ lb. Lambs brought $1 50@$6 50 each.

SWINE.

These are sold alive at so much ₱ lb., gross or live weight. Considerable numbers are sold at ALLERTON'S, Forty-fourth-street, and at various other yards, while large droves are sold direct from the cars or boats, and driven immediately to the various slaughter-houses.

A falling off in the receipts, and an increasing demand for Pork to counteract the extravagant prices of Beef, has caused an advance of near 1c. ₱ lb.

ALLERTON reports receipts of 3,104 hogs during the past week. Prices for live hogs ranged during the week at 7½c.@7¾c. ₱ lb. Receipts have been light, and a marked advance is quoted on fat hogs. Very few stock hogs are now in and but little demand for these.

CORN-FED.

Philadelphia Cattle Market.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, June 3.

The supply of Beef Cattle yesterday and to-day was unusually large, and which had a tendency to knock down the price a shade. A lot of fine cattle offered at the Bull's Head, were left over in consequence of the owner wanting $14 ₱ 100 lbs., for them.

BEAF CATTLE—The entire receipts amounted to 1,825 head, all of which, except about 75 head, were sold at from $10 50@$11@$11 50@$12@13 50 ₱ 100 lbs. A great deal of the stock was rather poor, it having been forced into the market in consequence of the slim supply for some weeks past.

SHEEP AND LAMBS—The sale of Sheep amounted to 6,000 head, at from $4@$6 on the hoof, and $6 50@$7 50 grors. Lambs are quite plenty, and are selling from $3 50@$5 50 each, as in quality.

HOGS—The Swine market keeps about the same, 800 head having been sold at from $8@$8 50 ₱ 100 lbs.

COWS AND CALVES—The supply of this kind of stock only amounted to 275 head, all of which were sold a from $20@$60. A few fancy ones brought a higher figure.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, June 3, 1857—6 P. M.

COTTON—Is sparingly dealt in at drooping prices. Middling Uplands, 13¾c.@14c.; Gulfs, 14¼c.@14½c., and other grades at proportionate prices, ₱ lb. Our available supply consists of 68,000 bales, against 58,400 bales same time last year.

DRY GOODS—No improvement has occurred in this line since our last,—so that, were we to review the business of the week, we could not add anything new to what we have already advanced, more than once, within a month,—trade being very dull, while stocks, though not remarkably heavy, are increasing, and prices lean strongly in favor of buyers.

FIRE CRACKERS—Cantos, 40 packs, $2 87½@$3 ₱ box.

FISH—Dry Cod are saleable and firm at $3 62½@$4 12½ ₱ cwt.; Mackarel are in demand and are worth $12@$22 for large No. 1; $14 for small do.; and $8 50@$9 50 for small and medium No. 2, ₱ bbl.; No. 3 are scarce and nominal; Pickled Salmon, $22@$23 50 ₱ bbl., and $2@$4 ₱ tierce; Pickled Herring, $4 25@$4 50 ₱ bbl; Smoked Herring, 38c. for scaled, and 28c @28c. for No. 1, ₱ box.

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western Flour is less freely offered, while it is in better request, and prices show a little more firmness and buoyancy, holding 9,000 bbls., in lots, mainly at prices within the annexed range:

Ordinary State.....	$6 60@$6 70
Straight State.....	6 70@ 6 80
Extra State.....	6 90@ 7 10
Common to Good Indiana and Upper Lake...	6 60@ 6 90

Fancy Genesee.....	7 30@ 7 50
Extra Genesee.....	7 75@10 00
Extra Missouri.....	8 00@10 50

Canadian continues heavy and dull. Sales have been reported of about 500 bbls., in lots, at from $6 65@$8 75 for superfine to choice extra, ₱ bbl. Southern is improving. The transactions since our last comprise about 1,800 bbls very low Mixed to choice Extra, at $7 40@$8 25 ₱ bbl. Rye Flour is scarce and wanted at $6 12½@$6 12½c. for Fine to superfine ₱ bbl. Corn Meal is also rare and needed at $4 15@$4 25 for Jersey, and $4 50 for Brandywine, ₱ bbl.

FRUIT—West India Fruit is arriving and selling pretty freely at very full prices, including Barnecos Bananas, at $1 25@$1 50 ₱ bunch, do. Cocoa Nuts, $25 ₱ 100; and Pineapples, at $7@$12. Other articles are quiet on about former prices.

GRAIN—Wheat is moderately inquired for at about former prices. Sales: 17,000 bushels, including prime Canadian White, at $1 85; very ordinary to choice Western Red, at $1 40@$1 65, and inferior Southern White, at $1 50 ₱ bushel. Rye is dull and heavy, with small sales reported at from $1 20@$1 25 ₱ bushel. Barley is in good supply and fair request, at from $1 50@$1 70 ₱ bushel. Barley Malt, $1 75 @$1 85 ₱ bushel. Oats attract more attention, and are worth 56c.@58c. for Western, 62c.@66c. for State, 64c. for Canadian and Jersey; 58c.@61c for Pennsylvania, and 56c @58c. for Southern, ₱ bushel. Corn is abundant, quiet, and less valuable. Sales 15,000 bushels, at 81c.@97c. for mixed, in store; 97c.@81 for Yellow and White ₱ bushel. White Beans, $2 35; Canadian Peas, $1 10@$1 15 ₱ bushel. Black-eyed Peas, $1 75 ₱ bag of 2 bushels.

HEMP—Is in very moderate demand at quoted rates; Undressed American, $170@$195; Dressed do ot $240@ $255; Clean Russian, $225; Italian, $260; Jute, $105@ $112 50 ₱ ton; Manila, 9c @9½c.; and Sunn, 4½c.@ 4¾c ₱ lb. Stock on hand June 1: 657 bales Americas, 50 tons, and 9,169 bales foreign, in 1857, against 2,503 bales Americas, and 8,034 bales foreign, in 1856.

HIDES—Are more salable, but are rather cheaper Prime Buenos Ayres, 30c.; Rio Grande, 29c.; Orinoco, 26c.; Maracaibo, 24c.@25c.; Porto Cabello, 24c @25c.; Dry Western, 20c.@21c; Dry Southern, 15c @16½c. City Slaughter, 9½c.@11½c., ₱ lb. Stock, 221,800, against 175,000 same time last year.

LATHS—Eastern, $1 31½@$1 37½ ₱ M.

LEAD—Is rather bisker, and Pig is worth $7 12½@ $8 50 for foreign, and $7 25 for Galena, ₱ 100 lbs. Sheet and Bar, 6½c @6¾c.; Pipe, 6¼c.@7c. ₱ lb.

NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

One of our special Washington correspondents telegraphs to us the important announcement that Lord NAPIER has officially denied the report that New-Granada has ceded an island to Great Britain. Our dispatches and correspondence from the National Capital will be found highly interesting.

Letters from our special correspondent in Kansas announce the arrival of Governor WALKER at Leavenworth. On the passage up the river the Governor was requested to address the company on board the steamboat, but declined. Senator WILSON, of Massachusetts, was also on board, and acceded to the request to speak; he was followed by Hon. E. O. PERRIN, who made some remarks in response. On arriving at Leavenworth, Gov. WALKER was again requested to speak, but again declined. Gen. LANE did not refuse, but made a speech to the citizens. At Lawrence, on the 27th ult., a public meeting was held to receive the Governor. He did not speak on this occasion either, but Governor ROBINSON and others did. Governor WALKER's address to the people of Kansas was to be issued in a few days. Its publication will be anxiously awaited.

By the arrival of the Cahawba, we have dates from Havana to the 29th of May. The dispute with Mexico still agitated the public mind, and the report is given in a more authentic shape, that the design of Spain is to restore SANTA ANA to the Mexican Presidency. SANTA ANA was daily expected in Havana. We are, however, disposed to place reliance on the news received yesterday from Europe, that a settlement of the dispute is on the eve of being arranged. Accounts from Saint Domingo represent the business of the island to be in a stagnant condition. In politics there was nothing specially new.

The United States Mail steamship Washington, from Southampton, on the 20th ult., with the mails and passengers from Bremen and Havre, arrived at this port last evening. European advices by the Washington have been anticipated by the Canadian, at Quebec, the America, at Halifax, and the City of Washington, at this port.

The Pennsylvania American State Convention met at Lancaster yesterday, and nominated ISAAC HAZLEHURST, of Philadelphia, as candidate for Governor, by acclamation. Governor GEARY's name was not before the Convention, he having declined a nomination.

The New-Hampshire Legislature convened yesterday, and organized by the election of the candidates of the Republican caucus—Mr. MOODY President of the Senate, and Mr. ROLLINS Speaker of the House. No action was taken relative to the United States Senatorship.

Everything continues quiet in Washington. Coroner WOODWARD held inquests on Tuesday on the bodies of J. H. ALESON and CHRISTIAN LINDIG, who were killed on Monday. The proceedings were conducted in a loose and informal manner, and no witnesses were examined whose testimony could satisfy public anxiety or curiosity. The verdict of the jury was that ALESON and LINDIG came to their death by musket-balls, "shot from a company of United States Marines under the command of Mayor MAGRUDER, under the immediate control of Captain TYLER."

The Board of Aldermen discussed the condition of the streets at considerable length, last evening, but took no action. The Committee will, probably, report on Monday next. A communication was received from the Central Park Commissioners, asking that a Central Park Improvement Fund be created. They want $50,000. An opinion was received from the Corporation Counsel, to the effect that the Board has no power to change any stage route granted prior to April last.

The Board of Education fixed the hours for the opening and closing of the Schools under its jurisdiction for the months of June, July and September, at 8 o'clock, A. M., and 2 o'clock, P. M.; for the remaining school months, 9 A. M. and 3 P. M., as heretofore.

A vacancy in the clerical department, caused by the resignation of Mr. R. S. HART, was filled by the Board last evening, by the election of Mr. W. F. CLARK. Mr. WM. OLAND BOURNE resigned his place as Assistant Clerk to the Board, and his place is temporarily filled by MYRON FINCH, formerly of the Artizan newspaper of this City.

The Associate Alumni of the Male Normal School met last evening at the room of the Teachers' Association, for the purpose of making arrangements for their approaching anniversary. The following gentlemen were appointed orators for the occasion: CHARLES W. MORSE, WM. J. KENNARD, JACOB FEIBELMANN, WM. A. OWEN, THOS. B. SANDFORD, JARVIS JANNINGS. This Association is composed of the graduates of the Male Normal School, and has been in operation one year. Its officers are: CHAS. W. MORSE, President; JARVIS JENNINGS, Vice-President; GEO. H. ALBRO, Secretary; WM. J. KENNARD, Treasurer.

The Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of the State of New-York continued their sessions yesterday. In the morning Standing Committees on Credentials, Condition of Masonry Warrants, Grievances, Finance, Account of Representatives, Constitution and By-Laws, Charity, Unfinished Business, Appeals and Printing, were appointed. In the afternoon several portions of the Grand Master's address were referred to appropriate committees, and an announcement made that the Committee on Articles of Union would report this morning. The evening session presented nothing of interest. The Lodge will open this morning at 9 o'clock.

EDOUARD PAROT, one of the prisoners in the French Extradition case, recently discharged upon the decision of Commissioner BETTS, was arrested, yesterday, upon a civil process, and lodged in Eldridge-street Jail. The friends of PAROT are filled with indignation. M. DAVID, the other prisoner, who was discharged at the same time with PAROT, is still at liberty.

The Home Chapel, No. 29 East Twenty-ninth-street, erected by the American Female Guardian Society, as a Free Chapel for the poor, and for other purposes connected with their Institution, the Home for the Friendless—has just been completed at a cost of $30,948, and was dedicated on Wednesday; Rev. Dr. FERRIS presided. Addresses were made by Drs. DOWLING, CUYLER, and others.

From the First Ward there have been removed during the past five days 700 cart loads of dirt. In the ten lower Wards of the City all the ashes and garbage have been removed, and carts engaged to go the rounds and collect the garbage daily hereafter.

Several cases of Grand Larceny were tried in the Court of General Sessions yesterday. Much interest was occasioned by the announcement that HENRY DARLING, the Broadway merchant, charged with attempting to pass a photographed counterfeit $100 bill at the store of BECK & Co. who was at large on bail for $3,000, had disappeared,—and that all efforts to find him had been ineffectual. His bail will be forfeited, if he is not produced within a day or two.

The shad fishermen have been engaged for several days past in taking up the poles of their fisheries in the Hudson River, opposite Jersey City. The shad fishing season just ended has been one-third better than usual. Fish have been plenty and prices good, ranging from $18 to $50 per 100 fish at wholesale. They were sold as cheap as $18 during two days only. It is said to be the intention of the shad fishermen to set their poles in the deep water of the Hudson River next Spring as usual, regardless of the Port laws passed at the late session of the New-York Legislature prohibiting them from so doing under the penalty of a fine.

The Hardware Board of Trade has taken action for the correction of some swindling abuses on the part of forwarding agents, who are alleged to have systematically shaved merchants from the West in transporting their goods. The forwarders, they say, charge higher rates than their own schedule of prices warrants, delay goods to suit their own convenience, and very often charge for heavier than the true weight. Other jobbers than the hardware men make the same complaint. Some who have suffered most require, in their bills of lading, that the goods shall be delivered by a certain day, and still further, to prevent deception, plainly mark the weight upon every case.

The Metropolitan Police Commissioners have opened Station-houses in the Fifth and Ninth Wards. One is located at the Jefferson Market, in the rooms formerly occupied as the Ninth Ward Station-house, and the other in the old Empire Bank Building at the corner of Duane and Greenwich streets. About one-half the entire police force of the Ninth Ward, including Lieut. SEBRING, declared on Tuesday night for the new Board, and last evening nearly the entire force of the Fifth Ward did the same. These men performed patrol duty as usual, but under and in accordance with the directions of the Metropolitan officers. The twenty-five men detailed for duty at Seguine's Point sailed at 1 o'clock this morning, under command of Capt. WALLING.

There was a small show of Beef Cattle at the market yesterday, and the entire City receipts for the week past amount to only 1,949, against 3,060 for the preceding week, and an average weekly supply of 3,500 for last year. Most of the fresh cattle received were from Illinois and Ohio, the farmers hereabouts being too busy in planting to bring their cattle to market. They were also kept back by the large decline last week. Prices went up again nearly 1½c. per lb., or about to the rates of two weeks since, with estimate weights slightly favoring the buyers. At present prices of beef, the majority of the laboring classes at least will have to turn their attention to substitutes for this favorite food. This has already been done to many ones; we have heard from numerous patres familiarum, who say their meat bills are marvelously smaller than they have ever been before.

A fire occurred about 9 o'clock yesterday morning in the building No. 192 Division-street. Not much damage was done to the premises, but Louis SCHWARTZ, a boy of 5 years, who slept in an upper room, was suffocated.

At the Kings County Over and Terminer, yesterday, Judge BIRDSEYE, in charging the Grand Jury, made special allusion to the Excise law and to the Metropolitan Police act. Both, he said, were laws of the State, and while they remained must be obeyed.

The Brooklyn Board of Health held a meeting yesterday, when the resolution previously adopted directing the Health Wardens to obey no orders but those emanating from the Board, was reconsidered and laid on the table. This was done to prevent conflict with the new Police law.

The President and the Mormons.

The President has displayed proper and peremptory vigor in dealing with the Know-Nothing mercenaries who attempted to overthrow the Municipal rule of the Administration Party in the City of Washington. He showed no sickly sentimentality in respect to the legitimate employment of powder and ball, but gave his orders immediately for the repression, by the armed hand of the Government, of the atrocious insolence of the Baltimorean blackguards who invaded the Capital of America in order to bully it into Americanism.

The decision with which Mr. BUCHANAN has acted in this case deserves the warmest commendation, and encourages us to hope that the steps which he has already taken in regard to other outrages upon the laws of the country and the liberties of our citizens, will be followed up with equal celerity and efficiency. It appears that a cavalry force, mustering in all about twenty-five hundred sabres, has been ordered into the Territory of Utah, and that the Executive authorities about to be appointed for that most unhappy region will be supported in the only proper way, that is by a military force strong enough to compel the obedience of the reckless scoundrels who now control the ignorant masses of the Mormon population.

The latest advices which have reached us from Utah go to show that the audacity of the tyrant YOUNG has been rather inflamed than subdued by the premonitions which have reached him of the President's intention to put a stop to his high-handed proceedings. He evidently shares the belief which has of late years been gaining ground throughout the civilized world, that the American Government is powerless to deal with organized resistance to its authority: and strong in the blind allegiance of his followers, and in the very desperation of his position, he is prepared to maintain a positive war with the Republic. We have been so unaccustomed by our previous history to the notion of a deliberate contest with men of our own race on our own soil, that we find it hard to persuade ourselves of the reality of the facts now passing in Utah.

But the facts are real, and their consequences will be very speedily developed. We shall have a border war with the Mormons; a war more tedious and more expensive than any that we have ever waged with the Indian tribes of Florida or the far West, unless we can succeed immediately in wresting the sceptre from the hands of the theocratic despot who is defying not our laws and the Constitution of the country alone, but common decency and the moral sentiment of mankind. It should, therefore, we repeat, be matter of sincere satisfaction to all good citizens that Mr. BUCHANAN has manifested at Washington a character and a temper which need only be displayed in Utah to conquer the all important first step in the contest with the Mormon mischief.

The all-important first step, we say, for we do not believe that the Mormons will ever dream of resisting the forces of the Union, unless they are led into the folly of a war by the fatal success of a first encounter. The numbers of the Mormon hordes have been greatly exaggerated; their resources may be estimated from the fact that they are scattered over an extensive territory, in which few villages of even respectable size can be found. The military capacity of a people depends much more upon the number of its centres of population, and upon the facilities of communication between these centres, than upon the absolute numbers of the population itself. Thus it is that Russia, with more than twice the population of France, is far inferior to France in available military power—the proportion of towns to the area of the national territory being nearly three times as great in France as it is in Russia. And thus too it was that in the war of our Revolution the smaller province of Massachusetts, sown thick with towns and hamlets from Berkshire to the Capes, was of infinitely more value, in a military point of view, to the destinies of the nation, than the vaster and more populous territories of the Old Dominion, with its broad plantations and almost insignificant coppidan population. To impose a proper respect for the authority of the Union upon the fanatical rulers of Utah, it is only necessary that we should demonstrate at once a capacity of throwing into that Territory an overwhelming force, able to crush the first attempt at armed resistance to the lawful government.

Twenty-five hundred dragoons may constitute such a force. But we cannot quite convince ourselves that they do. And we do therefore most earnestly hope that the President will not risk the peace of the country by striking an unsatisfactory first blow. It is in every respect the dictate of policy and of humanity alike, that the armed support provided for the new Executive of Utah should be entirely adequate to any work that may be required of them. If the new Governor appears on the ground with a sufficient array at his back, we may expect to see the impotent wrath of the unveiled and shameless Prophet of Great Salt Lake verify anew the old saying of Scripture that the "adversary rages when his time is short, and he knoweth it."

Close of the Anglo-Persian War.

The Anglo-Persian war has just been closed by the capture of the town of Mohammerah. In the three encounters which have taken place between the hostile forces, the Persians have displayed nothing but incapacity and pusillanimity, and the fearful threats which heralded the opening of the war have eventuated in a faint resistance and an ignominious retreat. The standard of the Prophet was, we were told, to be unfurled, and once its folds were fanned by the breeze, Heaven only knew what the consequence might be. We have all seen what it has been.

We doubt if there be anything in the Oriental State papers at the present day at once more melancholy and more ludicrous than the application of the language of the Seventeenth century to the men and the movements of this. The Sultan and the Shah still issue their orders in the tone and with the gestures of AMURATH or BAJAZET. They are still Kings of Kings and Lords of Lords. Their arms are invincible; their wrath inevitable. The standard of the Prophet is still waved in terrorem over the heads of giaours with as much naiveté as if it were still the signal for three hundred thousand scimitars to flash in the sunlight. A "holy war" is still talked of with as much unction as if it meant a nation of fanatics in arms to a man. We thought the holy war of 1853-4 in Turkey had taught the world the full extent of the vitality which lies hidden in Mahommetan Empires, and were therefore somewhat surprised to find the old phrases, the old threats, and the old promises hurled in the faces of those who remember the exploits of the Bashi-bazouks in the Dobrudscha and the campaign of OMER PASHA on the Ingour, who were witnesses of the painful contortions with which the "Sick Man" shook his broken blade and muttered his old war-cry. The complete failure of the attempt which has been made in Turkey and Persia to substitute European discipline and drill for the fire and impetuosity of the old janissaries and volunteers, is due, of course, primarily, to radical changes in the National character, and to the general decline of the old religious zeal, but directly to the peculiarities in the social organization of Mahometan countries to which military critics do not always pay sufficient attention. Purer democracies than Turkey and Persia are, probably, not to be found everywhere. Every Mussulman is in all respects the equal of every other Mussulman, save only the monarch. Between the Sirdar e-Krem and the meanest soldier in his army there is no distinction except the distinction of official rank. All that in Christian countries draws lines of demarkation between man and man,—birth, wealth, education,—are, amongst the true believers, faint and evanescent, as lines traced on sand. To believe in one God and in Mahomet as his prophet, is the best nobility. This raises a man above the infidels, and any thing which confers higher rank than this, is, of necessity, temporary and adventitious. The Sultan may give men authority over their fellows, but he cannot give them intrinsic superiority over them.

In Christian Democracies this perfect equality forms a serious difficulty in the organization of armies. In Aristocratic countries the officer and soldier occupy just the same position towards one another which they occupied in civil life. The gentleman carries with him into the command of a company or a regiment the habits of authority formed in the management of his estate; the private the habits of obedience learned while still a clodhopper. Martial law widens the gulf between them; but the gulf exists before martial law begins to operate. The respect paid to his Captain by an English or Russian soldier is respect paid not simply to official rank, but to birth and social position.

Amongst Democracies the officer owes all his authority to the law. The soldier looks up to him purely as a public functionary, and rarely as a man. The discipline necessary for the successful carrying out of prolonged struggles and complicated operations would, therefore, become exceedingly difficult to create and maintain, if it were not aided by the superior intelligence and willingness of the men. The Democratic soldier has generally his heart in his work, and reasons himself with passive obedience. He is silent, orderly and submissive, not because he fears punishment, but because he knows order and submission to be necessary to victory.

The two great Mussulman Monarchies of the East have to contend, in the management of their armies, against all the disadvantages of Democratic equality, and are aided by none of its best incidents. The old fanaticism has died out, which so long supplied the place of discipline and generalship. In its absence good officers have become indispensable, but there exist now no class from which to draw them. The whole population is on the same level, but it is a level of ignorance and corruption. What the officers want in social superiority is not, as in America and in France, supplied by the intelligence of the privates. In both the Turkish and Persian armies, the leader, from the Lieutenant to the Generalissimo, differ from the private only in greater corruption and degradation of character. The latter is probably an ignorant peasant, the officer is of no better origin, and of no greater attainments, but has learned, in the service of some Pasha, lessons in vice and infamy, which places him in a position of decided moral inferiority. Armies of peasants, led on by pimps and panders, can only be saved from destruction by extraordinary genius or good fortune on the part of their own General, or extraordinary imbecility on the part of the enemy. But the nation which owes its existence to contingencies of this sort, has clearly not long to live.

No American Broadcloths Under the New Tariff.

The new Tariff, enacted by the last Congress, will go into operation on the first of next month. We observe that our producers and consumers, whose business is in any way related to it, are earnestly speculating upon its probable results. Our wool growers and woolen manufacturers, who represent a large portion of the wealth and industry of the country, will doubtless be benefited by the new Tariff as much as any other class of our industrial community. They will not, however, obtain from it all the advantages which they have desired, and which they really need to enable them to compete successfully with their foreign rivals, who, aided by the Tariff of 1846, have succeeded in obtaining the control of our markets.

The new Tariff, which admits all foreign wool costing twenty cents a pound, or less, free of duty, also takes off twenty per cent. from the former duty on those fine woolen fabrics of England, France and Germany, which we have imported annually in large quantities for our own consumption. While, therefore, the demand for American wools in general promises to be more steady, and their cultivation more uniformly remunerative, than heretofore, it is not probable that any new consumers of American wool will be created by the operations of the new Tariff, nor that the culture of the finest qualities of wool will be encouraged at home. Our manufacturers will be enabled to produce a larger amount and variety of coarse and heavy woolens; but the production of fine broadcloths, which, under the oppressive Tariff of 1846, was entirely destroyed, cannot possibly be revived until foreign wools of every quality are admitted free of duty. This must be evident to any one who understands the manufacture of these goods.

Raw wool forms from one-third to one-half of the value of fine broadcloths. That is to say—in every $300 worth of fine broadcloths finished for market, there is $100 worth of raw wool. One-half of this wool, or $50 worth of it, is the fine short fleece, grown in foreign countries, (which forms the woof of the cloth,) while the other half is the strong American wool. Upon this foreign raw material, which is necessary to the composition of the cloth, the American manufacturer must pay, under the new Tariff, a duty of 24 per cent.; the same duty which is affixed to the finished cloth made by his foreign competitor, who already controls our market. The practical effect of the new Tariff then, upon our broadcloth manufacturer is to give him a reduction from the old Tariff of only six per cent., or $3 on his $50 worth of imported raw wool; while it gives to the foreign manufacturer a "protection" of $18 on his $300 worth of cloth, made from the $100 worth of wool.

This is the simple fact—plain enough for any body to understand. It shows that when our manufacturers were beseeching Congress last Winter to grant unlimited free-trade in wool, they were only asking that both our producers and consumers should be protected from a ruinous competition with foreign capital and labor in our own markets.

It is certain that we are to have no fine American broadcloths under the Tariff of 1857. In spite of our "glorious independence" of the powers and potentates of the Old World, our industrial independence is not yet established; and it never will be, until our law-makers shall set themselves to counteract the hostile legislation of foreign countries by making the same products that are free in their ports, free in ours. Then Young America may clothe himself in the finest and glossiest black, without paying tribute to any industry but that of his own family. But when that day is to arrive, it is difficult to predict.

THE SPANISH-MEXICAN QUESTION.—Our Havana correspondent gives some interesting details of the plan which the Spanish Government proposes to pursue in the event of a war with Mexico. That plan is to give SANTA ANA an important post in the invading expedition, and restore him, eventually, to the Presidency of the Republic.

The scheme, doubtless, has been well considered. It has many advantages. SANTA ANA has still a large number of adherents who would gladly aid his restoration to power; and if the recent submission of the Church to COMONFORT's Government is as insincere as many believe it to be, Spain would find in her a most important ally. But, though the disordered condition of Mexico exposes her greatly to the dangers of this invasion, we do not believe that it will take place, or that Spain ever intended to push matters to extremes. She has been too loud and pretentious in her preparations. We are disposed to credit the report brought by the last European steamer, that the Mexican Envoy and Spanish Minister at Madrid are not loath to accept the mediation of France and England, and are now ready to agree upon terms of settlement. But while, in all probability, the present dispute will have a peaceful issue, it is rather curious to note that the Spanish squadron, with a large body of men fully equipped for war, has sailed from Cadiz. Is the Spanish Government beginning to doubt the faithfulness of the "ever-faithful Isle," or does it fear a descent of American fillibusters that it takes these unusual precautions to protect its property? We have already announced that General CONCHA has been recalled. Perhaps this large force is required to inaugurate his successor.

THE CESSION OF NEW-GRANADIAN ISLANDS TO GREAT BRITAIN DENIED.—Our Washington correspondent states that Lord NAPIER has officially denied the report of the cession of any Islands in Panama Bay to Great Britain. We have never placed any reliance on this rumor, which, for some time, has been floating about, and our Panama correspondent only mentioned it to doubt its authenticity. Great Britain has long wanted a coaling depôt on the Pacific for her war steamers, and her endeavors to secure this desirable convenience in a New-Granadian Port probably gave rise to the rumor that the Government of the Republic had ceded an island in liquidation of a long-standing claim. We are glad to learn that the Monroe Doctrine, in this instance at least, has not been violated.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, June 3, 1857.

Lord NAPIER has officially denied the report of a cession of an island by New-Granada to Great Britain.

W. R. C. WEBSTER, on behalf of Costa Rica and Nicaragua, and C. K. GARRISON, on the part of GARRISON & MORGAN, have proposed to this Government and to Lord NAPIER some plan of arrangement touching the conflicting interests of the Nicaraguan Transit Company, and indirectly invoking the settlement of the Central American question. The plan is well thought of by the Administration.

The Government will receive any representative the power now existing in Nicaragua may accredit to Washington. X. Y. Z.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, June 3, 1857.

Col. A. CUMMING, who conditionally accepted the Governorship of Utah, arrived here this morning from St. Louis, and had a conference with the President. Col. CUMMING has been Superintendent of Indian Affairs of Missouri, has long led a frontier life, and is a man of great energy and coolness. He was formerly connected with the army in Mexico.

Major MCCULLOCH gives it as his opinion that there will be no fighting in Utah, but that it will be impossible to extirpate the Mormons.

Private advices have been received here from Lecompton, Kansas, Governor ROBERT J. WALKER was met by a large body of citizens of Kansas, with a band of music and colors flying, and escorted to the city. His reception was very enthusiastic, and was without distinction of party. He made a short address, and hailed his fellow-citizens with sentiments of the most cordial and harmonious feelings, which were received with applause and the most friendly demonstrations.

The address published by several papers, and extracts said to be from the inaugural of Governor WALKER, were never written by Governor WALKER, and were gotten up by his enemies, as were also the accounts speaking of his tame reception in Kansas.

The report, also, that acting Governor STANTON had said in his first speech on his arrival in Kansas, in speaking of enforcing the present law, that he was for "war to the knife and the dagger to the hilt," is basely false, and done to keep up the excitement and prevent an amicable settlement of difficulties.

Dr. DUHAMEL and Dr. ANTISELL give their written opinions on the disease at the National Hotel as not being produced by miasma escapements from the sewers, but that the true cause is not yet discovered. CALVERT, the owner of the hotel, based his action against the city for $75,000 damages on the above suggestion.

It has been ascertained that five of the "Plug-Uglies" were mortally wounded, since dead, and one dangerously, not expected to live. They were concealed with a view to keeping their loss secret.

The Union of this morning has the following additions to the list of the killed and wounded:

ADDITIONAL KILLED.

Christian Lindig, German, 17 years of age, shot in the side; died Monday night.

Wm. Farrell, Island, died yesterday (Tuesday) morning.

ADDITIONAL WOUNDED.

Daniel B. Fenton, shot through the arm, and grazed on the neck; the ball making lint of his cravat and coat collar.

Ebenezer Hughes, shot in the hip by two balls, lies in a very critical condition at the infirmary.

Charles Restell, shot in the shoulder.

Mr. Biddeman, who had his arm amputated on Monday evening, lies in a very critical condition.

Colonel Wilson, it is also feared, will not recover.

[FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, June 3.

I learn that the President has written to Mr. FORNEY, offering him the position of Consul to Liverpool. FORNEY is not inclined to go, but the appointment is considered an excellent one, and his friends will urge it strongly upon him.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, June 3.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS, of Iowa, has been appointed Associate Judge of the Supreme Court of Kansas, vice CUNNINGHAM, resigned, and F. BURNS United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Missouri, vice REYNOLDS, resigned.

DANIEL BEDDLEMAN, who was injured at the riot on Monday, had his arm amputated to-day. GEORGE W. MCELFRESH received a ball in his head, and to probe would probably kill him. Several other persons who were seriously injured have just been discovered. The city has been remarkably quiet throughout the day.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, June 2, 1857.

To-day, our city is as quiet and as calm as a water-mill with a dry dam. I gave you, last night, all the principal details of the riot. Nothing further of interest has developed itself. To the citizens of Washington, and the corporate authorities, we are indebted for the bloody scenes which took place yesterday. It is a burning disgrace to our citizens and the Police authorities that they should have permitted a band of some 50 or 60 lawless men to take possession of the National Capitol, to beat off and drive back the police; to march through the public streets in broad noonday with a brass cannon, bidding defiance alike to the citizens and police by their infamous yells and imprecations, and fearlessly assaulting and menacing the Government troops! All these "Plugs" might have been easily captured, and secured in the cells of the city prison, had an effort been made by the police after the riot was put down by the military. But not a single effort or movement was made to capture them, but, on the contrary, they were permitted to leave on the trains with all their deadly weapons and accoutrements.

The truth is, the police government of this city is the most inefficient of any in the country, and it results in a great measure from its inconsistent organization. It consists of three several distinct departments, all separate and independent of each other. First, there is a Government Police, established by the Federal authorities, who pay large salaries to a set of idle hulks who lounge about the public grounds, run after little boys, and who are sure to shut the Capitol gates before 10 o'clock at night, and become condescendingly polite to let you out, should you arrive in time.

Then there is the municipal police of the corporation, consisting of justices and constables—and again there is the night watch, with a Dogberry and a Birch for captains, and a "most senseless and fit set" they are for watchmen. Fellows who are always bragging of having "recovered the most dangerous piece of lechery that was ever known in the commonwealth!" Neither the constables nor night watch are made to wear any distinguishing mark of their office, and in fact I never saw but one "desartless man" who ever claimed to be a watchman, during a sojourn here for years. Of such consists the organized police to defend and protect the National Capital! This should be remedied at once, by breaking up the municipal watch, and establishing a Government police.

At all the Navy Yards and military posts sentinels are posted to guard and protect life and property, and the same rule should at least be established here. All the public buildings and grounds should have sentries posted to guard them, taken from the United States marines, at the Washington Barracks, and Government patrols should take the place of the "senseless and fit" watchmen.

In justice to Capt. TYLER, of the marines, I must state, that when marching up Pennsylvania-avenue, the Plug-Uglies menaced the marines; he did not then arrest them because he had no authority, and was ordered to report immediately to Mayor MAGRUDER; nor was he ordered at any time, or authorized to make any arrests.

This is not the first time the "Plug-Uglies" have visited Washington. They have been in the habit of attending elections here, and frequently visit us in the Winter, brandishing their pistols in bar-rooms and on the public streets. I have seen, on one or two occasions, several shots fired at night in the vicinity of the National Hotel, between rowdy parties, and no watchman ever was known to interfere or show himself.

The prompt and energetic manner in which President BUCHANAN responded to the call of the Mayor is worthy of the highest admiration, and this exhibition of firmness has met with universal commendation.

Great dissatisfaction exists among the officers who have been tried before the Naval Courts of Inquiry, because of the Secretary withholding the sentence of the Courts until the meeting of Congress. They contend that the sentences should be promulgated immediately after the decision of the Courts, as it prevents them from obtaining employment elsewhere in the meantime, because their competency as seamen and officers is made a questionable matter. This is true. It is but just that the sentence of the Court should be made public as soon as the decision is made. In the case of Lieutenant STANLEY, of the Navy, who was court-martialed in the Pacific in 1850 and acquitted, Commodore CATESBY JONES kept the sentence back for thirty or forty days.

Com. JONES was afterwards tried on this very charge, preferred by the Navy Department itself, as being malicious and oppressive, and was found guilty of oppression, but acquitted on the charge of malice. Certainly, then, in an ordinary case like this, if it was considered oppressive to withhold the sentence of a court for a month or two, how much more oppressive as affecting the honor and livelihood of the officer, must the action of the Navy Department be in suppressing the decision of the courts for half a year, and committing that very offence on which an officer was tried and found guilty, at its own instigation! I am confident, however, that Secretary TOUCEY is desirous of doing everything in his power to aid and facilitate the officers who have been thus hardly dealt with. And no doubt, on conference with the President, and explaining this manifest injustice, that relief will be afforded.

The Washington correspondent of The South pitches into the Judge Advocate of the Third Court as being highly accomplished in the ignorance of his profession. He says: "At one passage in the trial the Judge-Advocate took a witness from the stand, when a question had been put to him by the Court, to ascertain by a private consultation how he would answer it! Mr. TOUCEY has, certainly, not been very happy in the selection he has made for this post in Court No. 3."

Major MCCULLOCH had a conference with the President to-day—but it was understood to be merely in reference to the best mode of procedure in the affairs of Utah. It is now said that Salt Lake is the place where Lot's wife turned to a pillar of salt, which has since melted, and the Mormons have reëstablished the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. UNO.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, June 2, 1857.

We have from Col. JEFFERSON DAVIS a very frank exposition of the policy of the late Administration in regard to Cuba and Central America, through his speech at his recent welcome home. It appears that a motive of the Pierce Cabinet was to acquire Cuba during that Administration—and that, in the hope of promoting it, Col. DAVIS accepted a position in it. His glance at the measures taken to promote the scheme brings the whole programme before us just as we saw it at the time.

Col. DAVIS attributes the failure of Mr. SOULE's negotiations to the failure of Congress to sustain and promote it, by carrying out the measures asked for in the Black Warrior message. The course taken by Congress impressed the Spanish Cortes with the belief that in the sentiment of the American people there was no response to the policy of the message. Col. DAVIS admits, also, that fillibusterism did not aid the design, but rendered the sale of Cuba still more repulsive to Spanish dignity.

I am not certain that Congress would not, at that time, have consented to the purchase of Cuba, at a reasonable price. But that was not the proposition of the Black Warrior Message. The President asked Congress to put at his disposal means to redress wrongs and outrages, and offered security for the future. Congress received that as a war message, not as a proposition to buy Cuba. It was an invitation to Congress to take the initiative in measures which had war for their object. They were called upon to give the President the power and means to make war at his discretion. Congress, at that time, was unwilling to trust Mr. PIERCE with the conduct of a war. Moreover, they did not think that by any war that would be waged by Mr. PIERCE, the purchase of Cuba would be facilitated and expedited.

The message was referred to the Committee of Foreign Affairs of the House, the Chairman of which was the discreet and able Judge BAILEY, of Virginia, now no more. The message was suffered by him to sleep soundly till the end of the session. I remember well that Judge BAILEY stated, at the time, in conversation on the subject, that he would not move in the matter until the President should indicate the particular "means" which he wanted and the end he had in view.

The two Black Warrior messages were intended as feelers of the public pulse on the question of war with Spain for Cuba, and neither met with any response from Congress or the people. At one time, President PIERCE was so confident of having a brush with Spain that he told several Northern Senators that it was coming in time to relieve the Administration from difficulties which it had, at that time, to contend with, among its own political friends.

Col. DAVIS bears testimony to the cordial support which Mr. BUCHANAN, as Minister in England, gave to the scheme for the purchase of Cuba. Now, as Mr. BUCHANAN believes, with Col. DAVIS, that the acquisition of Cuba is required by the interests of the whole country, and is indispensable to the South, it is extremely probable that he will direct the efforts of his Administration towards that object.

He is, moreover, fortified in this purpose by the platform of the Democratic Party. The principles laid down in his Inaugural do not forbid a necessary and peaceful expansion of territory. We have already had some indications, also, of which Senator DAVIS' speech is one, of an intended pressure upon the President in favor of the acquisition of Cuba by purchase. He has four years within which to accomplish the work, and within that time no one can tell what political changes or agitations may dispose Spain towards a treaty of cession, or encourage the Cubans to a revolt. But, at present, there is no reason to believe either that Spain would be induced to sell, or that the Cubans would consent to be sold.

The favorable time for a negotiation has passed by, and may not recur for years, even if Congress and the people should favor the projected purpose.

The Cubans, disgusted with fillibusterism, are less willing than ever to come into the American Union, and the relations between Cuba and the mother country are now more harmonious than at any time within the last dozen years. X. Y. Z.

The Great Railroad Celebration.

CHILICOTHE, Wednesday, June 3.

The excursionists arrived here last evening about 10 o'clock, having traveled here by the Parkersburg and Marietta Railroad. The run to Parkersburg, 104 miles, was made in four hours and twenty minutes, including stoppages. They were conveyed to Marietta in the steamboats Albemarle and John Buck, which were lashed together—the guests dancing during the trip for eight miles. The reception at Marietta was signalized by the firing of cannon, and the presence of a large concourse of citizens. Governor CHASE delivered an eloquent address, welcoming to Ohio General CASS, the Representatives of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, and the others. General CASS responded in beautiful style, saying that fifty-seven years since he had landed, a poor boy, within a few yards of the spot where he stood, and the recollections of that time, and the changes which have occurred since, were almost overpowering. He ventured the prediction that from the past history of the United States, persons now living would see its population augmented to one hundred millions.

NATHANIEL COX responded to the address on the part of Maryland; Hon. FAYETTE MCMULLEN on the part of Virginia, and THOMAS SWAN on the part of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company.

The guests started for this city in five trains, over the Marietta Road, at 3 o'clock. The trip was not very satisfactory, in consequence of the incomplete condition of a portion of the Road rendering rapid traveling impossible.

The reception here was very enthusiastic. A procession was formed of military companies, the guests and the citizens, and marched to the Masonic Hall.

The city was illuminated, a display of fireworks was made, and other signs of rejoicing were apparent. The guests were quartered at the Valley House and the private dwellings which were thrown open for their accommodatinn. They will start this morning for Cincinnati, at abont 10 o'clock.

CINCINNATI, Wednesday, June 3—P. M.

Six trains, containing over a thousand persons, left Chilicothe, this morning, to participate in the great Railroad celebration here. The departnre was witnessed by a large and enthusiastic throng. At the various points along the route the people were assembled, greeting the train with cheers. At Blanchester, Governor CHASE made a speech in response to a call upon him.

Gen. CASE was also called for and greeted with loud cheers. The guests arrived here at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and were received by a military escort. Accommodations were provided for them as far as was possible by the Committee.

The excursionists were welcomed at the Depot by Mayor THOMAS in behalf the people; by Judge WARDEN in behalf of the City Council, and by Mr. PARSONS in behalf of the Ohio and Mississippi Road. Mayor SWAN, of Baltimore, eloquently responded.

The excursionists were then escorted to the Burnet house, where eloquent speeches were made by Gen. CASS, Gov. WILLIARD, of Indiana, and others.

At 4 P. M. the exhibition of the steam fire-engines took place. The exhibition was eminently successful, and was witnessed by an immense crowd, among whom were many of the distinguished visitors.

The excursionists proceed to St. Louis at 6 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The weather has been delightful.

The National American Council.

ADDRESS AND RESOLUTIONS ATOPTED—REORGANIZATION OF THE AMERICAN PARTY—ELECTION OF OFFICERS—LETTER FROM A. J. DONELSON, ETC.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Wednesday, June 3.

The National American Council reassembled at 10 o'clock this morning.

The President announced that the absence o Hon. HUMPHREY MARSHALL was occasioned by the death of his sister.

A letter was read from ANDREW JACKSON DONELSON, in which he expressed the belief that the local prejudices which enabled the party called by General JACKSON the "Sham Democracy" to get possession of the Federal Government were rapidly losing their influence.

Mr. DONELSON severely attacks alien squatter-sovereignty and the present Democratic Administration He declares that the present Cabinet represents nothing that is national, and that it is composed of a Secretary, who recently denounced in the coarsest billingsgate the whole State-Rights Party; of another, who is one of the most notorious leaders of the Southern-Rights Party, and of another who had declared his heart would break sooner than approve the Compromise of 1850.

The letter was read amid at much applause.

Letters were also received from other distinguished members of the party.

The President then announced that the business order was the election of officers. He trusted the Council would make choice of another President, as he had filled the office two years, and would willingly yield so honorable a position to another.

DANIEL BOWLEY, Esq., of New-York, moved that in place of electing officers at present, that a National Executive Committee be appointed, consisting of thirteen members, with power to call a meeting of the National Council on a majority vote of the Committee, or when requested to do so by five States, and that the regular meeting of the Council be called not later than the 22d of February, 1860, as a Nominating Convention.

The resolution and election of officers was laid on the table until the report of the Committee on Resolutions and Organization was received.

Gen. SCROGGS, STEPHEN B. CUSHING, of New-York; Col. SHACKELFORD, of Mississippi, and Mr. HITE, of Illinois, briefly addressed the Council.

Hon. EBASTUS BROOKE, from the Committee on Resolutions, reported in part the address which had been determined upon by the Committee, saying the Committee had not yet been able to complete all the duties assigned to them.

The address goes into a discussion of the American question, and an examination of the Democratic policy, and concludes that the Federal Union must be maintained; the reserved rights of the States respected; the decision of the Supreme Court enforced; the union of Church and State prevented; the rights of conscience guaranteed; American interests promoted; American nationality cherished; sectional agitation terminated; foreign paupers and criminals excluded; the Naturalization laws amended; squatter sovereignty and alien suffrage repudiated; and, finally, that Americans must rule America.

The address was adopted by acclamation.

Mr. BROOKE also submitted the plan of organization stating that although dissented from by many members of the Committee it was now submitted for the consideration of the Council.

The plan abolishes national, State and local Councils with all the forms and ceremonies now in use; admits all legal voters to the party who approve and support the principles of Americanism; creates a National Executive Committee composed of one from each State and Territory to be elected annually—the first Committee to consist of the present Presidents of State Councils; creates State executive Committees for State organization—the first Committees to consist of the delegates to the present State Council; gives all the powers for calling Conventions &c., to the State and County Committees.

After a warm debate the whole matter was referred back to the Committee, who, at the afternoon session, reported the following:

Resolved, That upon the adjournment of the present National Council, the same stand adjourned till called together as hereinafter provided.

Resolved, That the American Party in each State, Territory, and District of Columbia, be authorized to adopt such plan of organization as respectively they may think best suited to the views of the members of the party in their several localities.

Resolved, That the President of the Council be authorized to select a National Executive Committee composed of 13 members, of whom five shall constitute a quorum, who shall select a chairman, and correspond with the authorized representatives of the American Party throughout the United States and call together the National Council at such time and place as they may think proper.

This was adopted by the Convention as the future organization of the American party of the United States.

The Council then adjourned till 8 o'clock this evening.

EVENING SESSION.

The election of officers for the ensuing year was announced as the first business in order.

Mr. LEWIS J. PECK, of New-York, nominated President E. B. BARTLETT, of Kentucky, for reelection. No other nomination was made and Mr. BARTLETT was reelected unanimously.

Hon. EBASTUS BROOKS, of New-York, was nominated for reelection as Vice-President, and was also unanimously reelected.

Mr. JAMES M. STEPHENS, of Maryland, was also unanimously re-elected as Secretary.

THOMAS C. WARE, of Ohio, was elected Treasurer.

Mr. BLANTON DUNCAN, of Kentucky, was elected Corresponding Secretary.

Mr. BROOKS, from the Committee on Resolutions, reported a series, as follows:

Resolved, That in view of the sectional animosity exhibited at the recent Presidential canvass, of growing contempt for law—of the spirit of nullification abroad—of the growth of foreign pauperism and crime, and increase of foreign influence—we have reason to congratulate ourselves and the country upon the fact that a gallant band of one million American freemen are entered in a common cause as the National American Party.

Resolved, That it is the desire of the American Party to form a common brotherhood throughout the Union, of American men.

Resolved, That we reiterate the standard articles of political faith as laid down at Philadelphia.

The resolution concludes by recapitulating slight alterations in the last National platform. The fourth resolution declares an unalterable determination to pursue with untiring energy the reformation of the abuses which have endangered the peace and liberties of the country, and to continue our efforts with augmented zeal until the great objects of a patriotic organization shall be consummated; the harmony of the States restored; undue foreign influence checked and American principles become triumphant.

The fifth resolution declares that those citizens of the United States who endorse the principles of the American Party are cordially invited to unite with us in open advocacy and support of the same.

[Here, owing to the lateness of the hour, we were obliged to close our report.]

Pennsylvania American State Convention.

ISAAC HAZLEHURST, OF PHILADELPHIA, NOMINATED FOR GOVERNOR.

LANCASTER, Wednesday, June 3.

The Straight American State Convention to-day nominated by acclamation ISAAC HAZLEHURST, of Philadelphia, for Governor, and JACOB BROOM, of Philadelphia, and JASPER E. BRADY, of Allegheny, for Judges of the Superior Court. After a long contest and great confusion, Mr. LINDERMAN, of Berks, was nominated for Canal Commissioner.

A ratification meeting will be held here to-night.

Gov. GRAEY's name was not presented to the Convention, he having sent a despatch declining a nomination for the Governorship.

News from Kansas.

GOVERNOR WALKER'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

ST. LOUIS, Wednesday, June 3.

Governor WALKER'S Inaugural has been received. It is long, conciliatory and persuasive. It recognizes the territorial enactments; says that all constitutional laws must be executed; urges all parties to participate in the election; believes the Convention will submit a Constitution to the people, and in that case does not think Congress will regard it; earnestly impresses the necessity of removing Slavery agitation from the Halls of Congress, and from Presidential Elections; says that Slavery will ultimately be determined by climate law, and that it was this law now operating for and against Slavery in Kansas.

In the event that Slavery cannot exist in Kansas, he says, that she has Constitutional duties in common with her sister States, especially Missouri. He trusts that her Constitution will contain clauses forever securing that State all her constitutional guarantees, both by Federal and State authority, and supremacy within her own limits without the authority of the Supreme Court of the United States.

He concludes by saying that if the questions now disturbing the Territory are decided peacefully, he sees for Kansas an immediate career of sure progress and prosperity unsurpassed in the history of the world; but that if they are not so decided, fraud, violence and injustice will reign, and history will record the fact that Kansas was the grave of the American Union.

New-Hampshire Legislature.

CONCORD, N. H., Wednesday, June 3.

The Republican caucus, last evening, took no action on the United States Senatorship.

Mr. MOODY, currier, of Manchester, was nominated for President of the Senate, and Mr. E. H. ROLLINS for Speaker of the House.

The Democrats nominated WILLIAM BARNES, of Lancaster, for President of the Senate, and LEWIS W. CLARK, of Pittsfield, for Speaker of the House.

The Legislature organized, this morning, by electing the gentlemen nominated at the Republican caucus.

Governor HALE will be inaugurated to-morrow.

The House, soon after its organization, passed a resolution for appointing a Committee to report what action may be necessary in regard to the Dred Scott decision.

There is considerable talk of a Kansas appropriation, and the opening speech of the President of the Senate indicates a proposition of the kind.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church.

TWELFTH DAY.

CLEVELAND, Wednesday, June 3.

A vote on the Slavery question was taken, resulting as follows: Yeas, 167; Nays, 26. The North vote voted yes unanimously. The South protested against the vote.

The Home Missionary question was referred to a Committee, who will report to the next General Assembly.

Several unimportant votes were then read.

The Assembly will probably adjourn to-night.

Arrival of the Steamship America at Boston.

BOSTON, Wednesday, June 3.

The R. M. steamship America arrived here from Halifax at half-past 11 P. M. The papers brought by her contain nothing of interest additional to that already sent over the wires.

Freights to America at Liverpool continued to decline, and the rates were depressed with the prospect of being still lower.

The America's mail be despatched over the New Haven road by the early train to-morrow morning which is due in New-York the same afternoon about five o'clock.

Sailing of the Niagara.

BOSTON, Wednesday, June 3.

The Royal Mail steamship Niagara sailed from here at 10 o'clock this morning, with 132 passengers for Liverpool and 32 for Halifax. She takes ont $1,220,000 in specie.

Arrival of the Steamship Clyde at Quebec.

QUEBEC, Wednesday, June 3.

The screw steamship Clyde, from Glasgow, arrived here at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Her advices have been anticipated.

THE STREETS.

The Inspector Cleaning up.

Last evening seven hundred cart-loads of dirt had been removed from the First Ward by City Inspector MORTON'S cartmen, who entered upon their work on Friday last. About half the Ward is now cleaned. The dirt is dumped at the Battery. An attempt was made to separate the dirt and garbage, in order to sell the latter for manure, but it was found to be attended with more cost than profit.

The removal of ashes and garbage was completed yesterday in the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, Ninth, Fifteenth and Twentieth Wards. Carts have been engaged to collect it daily in these Wards hereafter. In the Fourteenth and Seventeenth Wards they have hardly got to work yet. Both are in exceedingly filthy condition.

The Board of Aldermen.

DEBATE ON STREET CLEANING—A COMMUNICATION FROM THE CENTRAL PARK COMMISSIONERS RECEIVED AND READ.

The Board of Aldermen met last evening, Alderman CLANCY, the President, in the Chair.

Soon after the minutes of the previous meeting had been read, Alderman ADAME stated that at the last meeting the Committee on Streets had promised to make report on the neglect of the contractors for cleaning the streets to perform their work. The Committee had met, and made considerable progress, but they would not be able to report until the next meeting. The position in which the matter of street cleaning was, was so peculiar and unsatisfactory at present, that the Committee deemed it necessary to make a more extensive investigation, and manage the matter so that the contractors could not, after their failure to perform the work, sue the City for damages. There were too many of such suits, and the Committee wished to have them avoided in this case, if possible.

Alderman BLUNT called up the report on the ground that the imperative necessities of the case demanded immediate action.

Alderman TUCKER hoped the report would be taken up and some action taken. He was sure the Committee had not made up their minds, as there seemed to be sufficient evidence to justify the taking away immediately the work from the contractors.

Alderman OWENS thought it was better to declare the contracts null, without confirming them.

Alderman ADAME said the Committee had done all in their power, and would report at the next meeting.

Alderman BLUNT contended that from the position of the matter, the contracts must first be confirmed. Then the City Inspector could break them legally and go on with the work. He wished to have the subject taken out of the hands of the Committee and disposed of forthwith, and the necessary measures could be taken by the City Inspector to clean the streets. The Comptroller would pay the contractors for what work they had done, but no more.

Alderman STEERS remarked that he saw that the Commissioner had stated that he had not, at the time the contracts were given out, noticed that the securities for Ross REYNOLDS had not conformed to the law. Then again, the contractors might claim that they stopped work because they did not get their pay; and finally, it was said that some of the sureties wished to withdraw. With so many difficulties in the way, he thought the Committee should have longer time to prepare their report. The First Ward had already been cleaned, and men were at work cleaning others. The Comptroller had already paid out to the contractors about $61,000.

Alderman TUCKER said the Inspector gave the contractors so many hours, and if they did not go to work at the expiration of that time he took the work into his own hands.

Alderman MONEGHAN favored giving the Committee more time. There were no contracts existing now, except for the Sixteenth and Eighteenth Wards. It was another illustration of the impossibility of cleaning the streets by contract.

The Board finally refused to take the subject out of the hands of the Committee.

The following communication was then presented from the Central Park Commissioners. This time the Board consented to hear it read:

To the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York:

The Commissioners of the Central Park have the honor to state that during the few weeks that have elapsed since their appointment, they have been engaged in ascertaining the present condition of affairs connected with the Park in personal examination of the grounds, dwellings and other structures situated within its limits, and in consultation of various plans and designs for its improvement.

As connected with the Park and within the scope of the powers conferred upon them, the Commissioners have already taken action with respect to several important measures that were pressing upon their attention, one of which, that of the purchase of the State Arsenal grounds situated within the Park, is now under the deliberation of your honorable body; another of which, that of the new receiving reservoir to cover about 100 acres of the area of the Park, has been the subject of repeated interviews between the Croton Aqueduct Board and the Commissioners of the Central Park, with the common desire to combine as far as practicable in its plan, features that will be agreeable and will conform to the character and object of the new Park at the same time that its efficiency for the primary objects of its construction shall in no respect be diminished.

Already nearly four years have elapsed since the passage of the act of the Legislature by which the grounds were authorized to be taken for this Park, and more than a year has passed away since these lands were actually taken for the public use and provision made for payment for them.

By the employment of the credit of the City and by heavy assessments upon numerous adjacent and neighboring owners, these grounds have been secured to the City at a cost of more than $5,000,000, and the people of the City are desirous of some indications of life and activity about this long-expected improvement.

As yet only preliminary surveys have been made. While it is due as a matter of justice to a very numerous body of neighboring landholders who have been heavily assessed for this improvement, that it should at once be entered upon, yet the great primary objects for which the Park was established, the consideration of health and recreation for the great body of the people present more imperative and urgent claims upon the Commissioners for the immediate fulfillment of the duties imposed upon them.

All the features that can be incorporated into this Park, the most extensive in the world, to afford healthful amusement, to cultivate taste, and to conserve the principles of a sound morality, will be inquired after and adopted.

With an area 776 acres, 2½ miles in length, or as far as from the Battery to Union-square, and half a mile in width, or as far as from the Battery to St. Paul's, being more than twice as large as Hyde Park in London—larger than Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens together—with a surface so diversified as to admit of great variety in effect, competent from its extent to allow a circuitous drive of 20 miles in length, this Park, completed with its drives, walks, lawns, its groves, its fountains and statuary, will constitute an unsurpassed feature of attraction to this City, and disording in its arrangements all indications of exclusion or repulsion, giving at a development in accordance with the genius and spirit of popular institutions, this work will, at the same time, add the crowning feature to the attractions of this metropolis, and demonstrate that a people governing themselves, not only admit of but is satisfied with nothing less than the highest expressions of art, as best developing the simplest and purest manifestations of nature.

To insure to the largest number the advantages of the Park, the Commissioners will see to it that in the regulations for its government, and in the efficiency of those persons to whom will be intrusted the execution of those regulations, the most complete guarantee shall be furnished for the preservation of order and propriety. So that children from their schools, invalid persons of both sexes and all ages, shall at all times feel that their resort to these grounds is attended with entire security and immunity from all that can demoralize or harm.

In bringing to this work, as some of the Commissioners do, valuable practical knowledge in the laying out and improvement of grounds, as well as experience in the administration of public affairs, and having spent much time in examining the grounds and unveiling themselves of the best talent to be found in the country, the Commissioners are prepared to proceed at once with this great work intrusted to them, with views that will insure results likely to meet the public approval both in the character of the improvements proposed and in the prudence of the expenditures necessary to attain these results, and with the intention to apply their means in such a manner as will at the earliest possible period render these grounds immediately accessible to those desiring to walk or drive thereto, while the minor details of ornamentation are going on as time and opportunity offer.

The Commissioners of the Central Park respectfully request the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York, in compliance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act for the regulation and government of the Central Park in the City of New-York," passed April 17, 1857, to create and issue a public fund or stock, to be denominated "The Central Park Improvement Fund;" and they hereby notify the said Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York, that of such public fund or stock the said Board of Commissioners now require for the purposes of the said act, subject to the limitations prescribed by the 8th section of said act, the sum of $50,000.

Very respectfully,

JOHN A. C. GRAY, Vice-President.
CHARLES W. ELLIOTT, Secretary.

Dated NEW-YORK, June 2, 1857.

Alderman WILSON moved that it be printed in the minutes and referred to the Committee on Lands and Places. It was so ordered.

The following resolution was offered by Alderman DRAKE, and adopted:

Resolved, That the Comptroller be requested, and is hereby authorized to call in the 6 per cent. bonds issued last year in payment of the Central Park, and issue 6 per cent. bonds for the same.

The following opinion was received from the Corporation Counsel, in effect that the Board have no power to change any stage route granted to April last.

LAW DEPARTMENT OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK,
OFFICE OF COUNSEL TO THE CORPORATION.
No. 237 Broadway, June 1, 1857.

To the Honorable the Board of Aldermen:

I am requested, by a resolution of inquiry of your Board, passed April 7, 1857, to inform you "whether the Common Council have the power to change the route of any stage line, now granted, without being liable to suit for damages, if any loss be sustained by such damage."

The inquiry embraces the subject of the right of the Corporation to control the use of its public streets and highways. The legal estate in the streets is vested in the Corporation, subject to the public easement, and is held by them in trust, to be used as and for a public highway. It is competent for them to make such ordinances respecting their use as shall best promote public convenience, and from time to time, as occasion arises, to alter or amend or repeal these ordinances. The right of foot passengers is superior to the right of the owners of vehicles; and this must be borne in mind when any exclusive franchise in the streets is proposed to be given to the conductors of carriages, or omnibuses, or any description of vehicle. In pursuance of the authority which the Corporation unquestionably has in the premises, the Common Council, as early as the year 1839, passed an ordinance for the licensing and government of "stages or accommodation coaches and drivers," and the Mayor was authorized to "issue licenses to so many persons as he shall think proper to keep and use accommodation stages." The important right to revoke such licenses "at his pleasure" was reserved to the Mayor, and the ordinance in addition provided that all licenses granted thereunder should expire on the first Monday in July next after their date, and shall be renewed by the Mayor on application therefor.

If there had been no legislative intervention upon the subject since the ordinance of 1839, there is no doubt that the Corporation might at any time change or alter a stage route, without being liable for damages to the licensee, for, although the license was in the nature of a contract, the authority to make the contract of license was limited and special, and reserved the right of revocation at discretion; the stage-owner could not complain that it was a hardship, because he knew, or he might, and it was his duty to have known, that the ordinance which conferred upon the chief officer of the Corporation the authority to license, in the same section reserved to him the power of annulling the privilege.

The Legislature of the State, in 1854, passed an act entitled "An act to regulate stage routes in the City of New-York, and to provide for the formation of companies to operate the same;" and to the provisions of this act we must look for an answer to the question under examination. The act provides for the formation of companies, either to establish or to establish and maintain stage routes in the City of New-York.

The twelfth section provides that any Company formed under this act may change the route designated in the article of association, "upon obtaining the consent of the Common Council of said City thereto." The fourteenth section provides that before any route shall be established or altered to operate in said City, (except as is provided in section 16 of the act,) application should be made to the Mayor in writing, specifying the number of stages, proposed route, &c., and the consent of a majority of the members elected to each Board of the Common Council be secured therefor; and the fifteenth section secures the right so acquired against termination or alteration unless by the concurrent action of two-thirds of the members elected to each Board, and then not unless the Mayor shall approve thereof. In the event of such adverse action of the Common Council against the consent of the proprietors of the route, the law declares that they shall be entitled to receive compensation from the City for any damages they may sustain thereby. Provided that the action of the Common Council is not had in consequence of the violation of law on the part of the proprietors, or of any regulations which the Corporation may lawfully impose.

No mode of ascertaining the amount of dameges is provided by the act.

The sixteenth section makes the provisions of the act applicable to all stage routes in existence at the time of its passage, (April 4, 1854,) and such routes are thereby "deemed to have the approval and consent" quoted above from the fourteenth section.

The seventeenth section reserves to the Common Council the right to make such regulations in reference to the running of stages and omnibuses in said city as may be necessary for the convenient use and accommodation of the streets. Under this section I am satisfied that the Corporation may restrict the number of stages which shall be put upon a route, the rate of speed at which they shall be driven, the point in the route at or below which more than a specified number shall not be allowed to pass, and may make such other regulations in reference to the running of stages upon the route "as may be necessary for the convenient use and accommodation of the streets." The statute only takes away the power heretofore existing in the Mayor to revoke the license without compensation to the licensee for any loss he might sustain.

My conclusion is that the Common Council have not the power to change the route of any stage line granted before the act of April 13, 1857, (which provides that no stage route shall thereafter be granted unless a majority of the owners of property, &c., shall first consent in writing, &c.,) against the consent of the proprietors "without being liable for damages, if any loss be sustained by such damage," but that the Common Council may impose the restrictions I have stated above and others of a like character, upon the manner of using the license. I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

RICHARD BUSTEED, Counsel to Corporation.

The steam-engine matter came up again, and was made special order for Monday, to which time the Board adjourned.

Academy of Music.

There was a large attendance at the Academy of Music last night, to pay a merited compliment to Mr. MAPLESON, but considering the peculiar attraction of the programme, the house ought to have been crowded in every part, which was not the case.

The performances commenced at an early hour, and ended so late that we are unable to speak of the latter portion, which consisted of a French vaudeville, played by the members of the New-Orleans Company. The opera was the "Trovatore," with GAZZANIGA as Leonora, and the cast generally of last season. All the artists were warmly received, and sang well in spite of some evident fatigue. Previous to the opera, the petite comedy of "Simpson & Co." was performed, with BLAKE, Mrs. DAVENPORT, Madame PONIET, &c., in the leading parts.

Altogether the entertainments were of an extremely satisfactory character, and passed off to the satisfaction of every one.

Maretzek Farewell Benefit.

Of the merits of MAX MARETZEK as a conductor, a manager, an author, a composer, a disputant, a journalist, a farmer, and a patriot, we have said enough. For seven or eight years he has been pretty constantly before the public in one, some, or all of these capacities, and never without amusing and astonishing his friends, and confounding and defeating his enemies. Mr. MARETZEK being an opera manager has of course been perpetually and punctually ruined, and nothing but a vigorous constitution which seemed to thrive and fatten on failure has spared him to us in these degenerate days. Last Winter, however, Mr. MARETZEK made a trip to Havana, and imbibed the tropical idolence of that Heaven of smokers, and some effeminate ideas of money making. He returned to us with no appetite for fighting the wars of the Academy, and with an unavoidable aversion to working for nothing,—which he maintains he has done for seven or eight years in this goodly City. Clearly the northern fire of the redoubtable MAX has burnt out, and he proposes, with astonishing composure, to abandon the field to others, but without a hope that they will meet with the same liberal return that he has met with. In other words, to work seven years for the purpose of establishing Italian Opera and then be turned out from the only place fit to represent it in. We are astounded at Mr. MARETZEK'S meekness but applaud his resolve. Republics are ungrateful.

To-morrow night Mr. MARETZEK takes his Farewell at the Academy of Music, giving for the occasion a very superior entertainment of drama and Italian Opera. For the sake of a man who possesses more ability than any one of his predecessors, and who has been somewhat scurvily treated by a liberal and enlightened public (to say nothing of an intelligent and respectable Committee of Stockholders,) we hope there will be a good attendance.

DISAPPEARANCE OF A YOUNG LADY IN GREENE COUNTY.—The citizens of Greene County are greatly excited by the mysterious disappearance of a young lady, named TUTTLE. She went to visit a friend about three miles from her father's, and nothing was heard of her for eight days, when some schoolchildren found an over shoe, and a collar, which were immediately recognized as having belonged to Miss TUTTLE. On Saturday a party of fifty men started for a general search, with what success we have not heard.

DIED.

OBITUARY.—A few days ago we were called upon to mourn the loss of CAROLINE GRIFFITHS, wife of Isaac L. Hunt, Esq., of New-York. Being intimately acquainted with this estimable lady from childhood, we cannot refrain from paying this slight tribute to her memory. By her uniform kindness of heart, and urbanity of manner, she made herself beloved by all who knew her, and has left a large circle of sorrowing friends to mourn her loss. To her bereaved family we can offer no words of consolation—our best it weeps tears of sympathy with theirs.

TRAVELS AND DISCOVERIES IN NORTH AND CENTRAL AFRICA.
Being a Journal of an Expedition undertaken under the auspices of H. B. M.'s Government, in the years 1849 to 1855. By HENRY BARTH, Ph. D.
In 3 large vols., 8vo.
Extract from Preface
The principal merit which I claim for myself in this respect is that of having noted the whole configuration of the country; and my chief object has been to represent the tribes and nations with whom I came in contact in their historical and ethnographical relation to the rest of mankind, as well as their physical relation to that tract of country in which they live. If in this respect I have succeeded in placing before the eyes of the public a new and animated picture, and connected these apparently savage and degraded tribes more intimately with the history of races placed on a higher level of civilization, I shall be amply recompensed for the toils and dangers I have gone through.

E. H. LUDLOW, Auctioneer.

POSITIVE SALE OF THE ELEGANT COUNTRY SEAT OF THE LATE MONTGOMERY LIVINGSTON ALEXANDER, COLUMBIA COUNTY, N. Y., AT AUCTION.—E. H. LUDLOW & CO. will sell at auction on WEDNESDAY, July 1, 1857, at 2 o'clock, P. M., at the Mansion House (on the premises,) in pursuance of a judgment in partition.

The property consists of about 200 acres of land. On it is a mansion house built of brick and stone in the chaste style of architecture. The rooms are celebrated for their beauty and proportion. The property is so well and favorably known, having been the residence of Chancellor Livingston and afterwards of Mr Robert L. Livingston, that a particular description is unnecessary. The lawn is bounded on its eastern side for a distance of nearly half a mile by the Hudson River, along the river banks clumps of fine old forest trees break the river into a variety of picturesque landscapes. On the opposite side of the river and in the back ground of several pretty villages, are the Catskill Mountains. The view of these mountains from this place is surpassingly beautiful, and perfectly healthy.

Its lawns (for it has three), avenues, and trees (it is believed,) are unequaled in this country.

The soil is of the very best. The garden excellent; a gardener is now working it.

There are large orchards with great varieties of fruit trees.

It lies about 1¾ miles north of the railroad station at Tivoli, Dutchess county, to which the trains run in about three hours, and where the trains stop.

From New-York by one or more trains in the A. M., and attend the sale or inspect the premises and return in the afternoon.

For further particulars inquire of request made that each man would answer distinctly in favor of the old or new Commissioners. The result was as follows: Capt. ACKERMAN and Lieut. CARGILL, 4 sergeants and 23 men for the old Commissioners.

JAMES L. SEARING, and twenty two men, for the new Commissioners. Five men absent, three of these in favor of the old Commissioners. The men were about to leave, when Capt. ACKERMAN requested them to leave the property belonging to the City with him, as they would have no further use for it. Most of them then left their caps and books, and so the promise of Mr. SEDDING that the balance of the property should be returned yesterday, and that the stars should not be worn by the men, they then left the house in a quiet and orderly manner. Since writing the above ALGERNON KNIFFEN, also declared in favor of the new Commissioners, and left the station-house yesterday morning.

☞The Metropolitan Commissioners tried yesterday the eleven other insubordinate Captains, and judgment upon each (a dismissal of course) will be given to-day.

DANIEL G. MCKELVEY was sworn in as a patrolman in place of officer BOWERS of the squad at Quarantine.

CLARK KNAPP was made a Sergeant of the Ninth Ward. Mr. KNAPP has been heretofore a patrolman.

TIMOTHY CLARK was appointed a patrolman in the same Ward.

The Board adjourned after making further arrangements in reference to the men detailed for duty at Seguine's Point.

BROOKLYN POLICE MATTERS.—The following order was promulgated yesterday by Deputy Superintendent Folk:

OFFICE OF THE SUPERINTENDENT METROPOLITAN } POLICE, 88 WHITE STREET, NEW-YORK, June 2. }

To Deputy Superintendent J. S. Folk.—SIR: You are hereby directed to promulgate the following order from the Board of Police to the various Captains or Inspectors within the police precinct for the city of Brooklyn.

F. A. TALLMADGE, General Superintendent of Police.

To the Police Force of the Metropolitan Police District:

The Superintendent of Police by order of the Board of Police is directed to inform the officers and men in commission under the law of this State, passed April 15, 1856, that early provision will be made for their accommodation and the general purposes of the Department, etc., and hereafter a strict conformity with the rules and regulations of the Board will be enforced.

The Board are desirous of continuing all competent and law-abiding men in office, and trust that no misrepresentations may induce them to refuse to remain on the side of the law and order. By order of the Board. G. W. EMBREE, Chief Clerk, pro tem.

The Captains of the Second, Third, Fourth and Sixth Districts refused to read the order to their men, when the Sergeants of those Districts were supplied with copies, and directed to read the same to the men of their respective Districts. The Captains finally consulted with Mayor Powell, who, after taking advice, advised the Captains to read the order to their men, which they agreed to do.

The Armada off for Seguine's Point.

A force of twenty-five Policemen (new appointments) were dispatched at 1 o'clock this morning for Seguine's Point. Each man is armed with a club and pistol. We annex the names and residences of the force:

Armstrong, No. 245 Twenty seventh street.

The contractors for the erection of the Quarantine buildings at Seguine's Point, Messrs. Howard and Quirk, with their materials and some eighteen mechanics, masons and carpenters, started for the scene of operations at 1 o'clock this morning. The bricks and lumber were loaded upon the schooner Frank, Capt. Tavernly, and departed in tow of the steamer John J. Birkbeck. There will be some seven or eight other mechanics to join the force from Staten Island, which will make about fifty men all told employed upon the work. They left upon the last of the ebb tide, intending to reach Seguine's Point on high water, which would be about 5 o'clock this morning. The schooner will then be hauled to, and as soon as the tide falls, teams which have been provided, will take the materials off deck and deposit them in the place required for their use. The force is divided into two sections, the workmen and the Police force. Each of these departments are organized under a distinct head, and are supplied with provisions and camp equipage as if they were going upon regular field service. Mr. Howard says he does not anticipate any opposition whatever.

Judge Birdseye's Charge to the Grand Jury of Kings County—The Excise Law Sustained—The New Police Law to be Enforced.

In the Kings County Circuit Court, this morning, Judge BIRDSEYE presiding, a Grand Jury was impanneled, of which AUREL A. LOWE was appointed foreman. Judge BIRDSEYE then delivered his charge to the Grand Jury, which occupied over an hour.

After calling attention to the difficulty of obtaining jurors in Kings County, to election laws, tax laws concerning lotteries, and the usury laws, he proceeded to speak of the Excise law, and gave an elaborate history of legislation in New-York on the subject of the sale of liquor, from colonial times down to the present year. He had taken great pains to examine the new law, and the history of legislation on the subject, and he found that the law which was put upon the statute book two months ago was, in substance, (with the exception of some minor details, which might be struck out without materially affecting the general purpose of the act,) the same or nearly identical with laws which have stood upon our statute books from our earliest history.

He commended especially the provisions against impure and adulterated liquors, which, although new, appealed to the good sense and humanity of every citizen, and hoped the enforcement of the law would check the evils which arise from that source.

Whether the act was the best that could be devised to prevent the inordinate use of intoxicating drinks, was not a question for them; they were sworn to execute the law, and if it was too stringent and severe, it was the duty of the Legislature to provide a remedy.

The great body of the people have entertained, and do still entertain, the opinion that the unrestrained public sale of liquor is injurious to the public, and their representatives have provided this system for its repression. It was therefore the duty of all good citizens immediately and in good faith to conform themselves to the requirements of the statute. The several provisions of the statute were explained and commented upon.

Judge BIRDSEYE then spoke of the "Metropolitan Police act" as follows:

There is another subject to which I wish to call your attention for a moment, and it is one which may, by possibility, come before you for your action. The Legislature, at its last session, passed an act to reorganize the police of this city, the adjoining City of New-York, and the surrounding counties. I have nothing here to do with the ultimate validity of that act; it it comes before me to examine and decide, as it may hereafter, I shall examine it as a new question, and decide upon the reflection and examination which should follow the arguments presented, as every magistrate should do. But this I say: The statutes passed by the Legislature of the State, and put upon the statute-book, the moment they are there, are entitled to the respect and obedience of every citizen. And every citizen who resists such a statute commits a high crime against society.

It is well known that our police force is at present in a state of derangement. There are two bodies which claim jurisdiction over the force, and which are in conflict in regard to the new act—the former officers claiming still to hold their office, and exercise it, although the statute directly repeals their authority, and the new officers claiming to hold the authority, and exercise the duties which the law imposes upon them.

Gentlemen, when the method of testing the constitutionality of laws which has been adopted with this law shall become general, we shall cease to live under a government of laws—under an organized government established to protect and promote the interests of civil society. If every man who claims that his powers are illegally curbed, that his vested rights are wrongfully taken away—if any person in public authority, claiming to exercise public duties for the public benefit, shall, when the law authorizing the exercise of these duties is repealed, continue to exercise them nevertheless—if any person who conceives that his interests are in any manner injuriously affected by a law of the State, may test the constitutionality of that law by holding an authority, by claiming his rights, by refusing the statute; instead of submitting to the act of the State, and bringing an action in the courts to recover his rights or his authority—if that may be done, we cease to be governed by law.

Such has been the case in regard to the law establishing a police system for this portion of the State. Instead of allowing the law to go into effect, according to the statute, and then applying to the Courts for the redress of any grievances, that the statute might go before the judicial tribunals, and there be legally heard and decided upon, we have here the old Police Commissioners, as officers, formerly exercising authority, claiming that their authority is still in force, and the new Police Commissioners, the officers appointed by the statute, also claiming to exercise the authority which the law gives them. And thus we are on the brink of a conflict which may result in bloodshed, as it has already resulted in a wide-spread feeling of insecurity throughout the community.

This is I believe, the first instance of the validity of a law being thus tested, and the parties so testing it, they say, are uniting to speed the determination of the question in the Courts. We are told that, in a few months, we shall obtain the judgment of the highest authority, and if the Court of Appeals shall decide that the law is valid, those who claim to hold office under the old and repealed law will submit, and if the Court shall decide that it is invalid, the new Commissioners will submit.

Gentlemen, if this method of trying the constitutionality of laws becomes general, how soon will it be that those who now claim that they are "speeding the determination," will cease to "speed the determination?" If a person who possesses valuable privileges by law, and who has his privileges taken away by statute, still claims to exercise the privileges, and continues to retain the gains of office, the fees or otherwise, how soon will it be that instead of "speeding" his cause he will hang back and impede the determination? How long before he will neglect to press it through all the inferior courts, where it will be delayed like other causes from year to year, and kept, perhaps, for two or three years in the Court of Appeals before a determination can be reached. How soon, if this method of testing the constitutionality of laws is admitted for a moment to be a proper one, will you find that every law that takes away the privileges, powers, or rights of individuals is set at naught, and the community is convulsed for a period of years, until a judicial determination shall be obtained?

Our theory of Government proceeds upon entirely different principles. The presumption is that every Act of the Legislature is valid the moment it has passed through the proper forms, and it is the duty of every citizen of the State, whatever may be his place or condition, to submit to the act, though he may take all proper and legal means to try its constitutionality. If his rights have been improperly taken away, he may resort to the tribunals to obtain them again.

Every policeman who acts under the new statute is justified in his acts by color of law, but in what position is the policeman who acts under the authority which has been taken away by the statute? If a policeman of Brooklyn is directed to make an arrest, he is required to use all necessary force. Resistance may be offered, violence ensues, blood is shed, and the life of a human being is taken away.

The policeman who acts under the statute is undoubtedly justified by the legal definition of justifiable homicide, which would undoubtedly apply to his case. According to the statutes of this State homicide is justifiable when committed by a public officer in the execution of his duty, and whether the law is valid or invalid, the police officer acting under the authority of this new Board of Commissioners, would be justified under such circumstances.

But it is a great question whether he would be justified if he were acting under the old Board, and if the Court of Appeals shall decide in favor of this law, it seems clear that he would not be justified, if he acted under any authority but that of the legal and true Board of Police, as established by law.

So with regard to interference with the person and property of individuals; if the policeman is called upon to justify his acts, he could do so under color of the statute of the State, if he acts under the authority of the new Commissioners.

If the old law is morbid, it ceased to have effect when the new law went into operation.

Gentlemen, that law has been decided. The judgment of this court, sitting at its General Term, has been added to the constitutional presumption of validity which applies to all laws, and we have now a decision of a competent tribunal that this act is the law of the land.

Therefore it is the duty of all persons to yield obedience to the law, and it will be your duty to see whether there be any violations of its provisions.

The statutes of the State provide that any public officer who shall neglect to perform the duties of his office, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and where performance is prohibited and no penalty annexed, the performance of this act prohibition is also declared a misdemeanor, and may be punished both by fine and imprisonment.

It may be your duty, therefore, to inquire whether any persons have broken any of the provisions of this law so as to subject themselves to penalties.

It is to be hoped, however, that the presumption of validity and the added presumption which arises from the judicial affirmation of the law by this Court, will have their effect and that we shall have the Board of Police Commissioners properly organized and pass away from a state of uncertainty, and doubt, and danger in which we have been living for some time past.

He concluded with the usual instructions as to the duties of the Grand Jury.

The Mexican Question—Schemes for the Restoration of Santa Ana—News from St. Domingo—Stock Gambling in Havana—General Walker, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

HAVANA, Friday, May 29, 1857.

The Mexican question, which has been on the tapis for so long a time that it has almost lost its interest, has received a fresh impetus destined to excite more of the attention of the American people than is generally believed. Positive information has reached us from Mexico that Spain, in joint concert with England and France, intends to place General SANTA ANA in power. The recent arrest of several of his admirers and spies in the capital of the Republic, the old cock-fighter's last manifesto, dated at Carthogena, and the presence of a Spanish steamer in this latter port, are sure indications that there is a great deal of truth in these surmises. The raising of 50,000 levies in Spain, the departure for Cuba of a large naval force and three generals, are so many strong grounds in favor of the theory that I feel justified in calling the attention of your readers to this movement on the part of these European Governments. It will be lucky that the Monroe doctrine should be put to the test under the present Administration, for if resisted, we will prove that our policy is not a dead letter, a State-Department bugbear with which we frighten European despots. Spain is certainly making an unusual display of her power, which can have no other meaning, as there is no longer any fears, for the safety of this island. Two thirds of the regular troops in Porto Rico are to be sent here. They will be replaced by the new levies. The thousand men, whose term of service had expired, and who were waiting to be sent to Spain, have been retained in Cuba by General CONCHA. This determination caused great dissatisfaction at first, but the spirit of opposition on the part of the soldiers was soon quelled by Gen MANZANO, who harangued them, and told them that their country needed their services to revenge the deaths of their countrymen butchered by the barbarous Mexicans. Notwithstanding the vigilance of the authorities, these circumstances have been brought to light, and the public begin to fear that Spain has actually adopted the suicidal policy of running into a war with Mexico. As a natural consequence the funds fell considerably, and parties are somewhat loath to purchase.

The three Generals, appointed to take the command of the invading forces, are expected here about the last of this month. Before leaving Madrid for Cadiz, they were all three decorated with high military distinctions. General SANTA ANA is expected here in the course of a few weeks. There is quite a respectable force of English and French vessels of war in different quarters of the Gulf of Mexico at present, particularly at Vera Cuz. I have been informed, by parties well posted on Mexican affairs, that COMONFORT is fully aware of these plans and intrigues, and is preparing himself to resist the shock. His position is one of great danger, inasmuch as there is a large number in Mexico favorable to SANTA ANA, without taking into consideration the Church party, that would gladly throw its interest in the favor of any one who opposed the present enlightened Administration. How General CASS will view this open violation of our pet doctrine, it is hard to decide, but I think we should oppose it by every means in our power, and if Diplomacy is not enough, we should openly give our aid and protection to President COMONFORT.

Our latest advices from St. Domingo represent the Island to be in a sad state. Business of all kinds was at a stand-still, and even necessary articles were getting scarce. SANTANA'S Minister of Foreign Affairs, Señor DELMONTE, had fled the Island and joined his old Chief at Curacao. BAEZ, as was expected, has become a mere tool in the hands of the French to destroy the resources of the little Republic, so that when the time of this truce has expired, all the energies of the people will be too far exhausted to enable them to defend the national territory.

So many stock companies have been formed here lately, that the merchants have devised means to put a stop to their further increase. A meeting to this effect was held last Monday evening, and presided over by Señor SAMA, when it was agreed that the parties then present would neither aid nor abet any new Company that had not at least two-thirds of its capital subscribed by responsible parties. Singular enough, these very same gentlemen have been the greatest dabblers in our stocks.

General WALKER passed through here on his way to New-Orleans, but did not think proper to land. Some of his officers did so, however, and being mistaken for the "man of fate," managed to attract quite a crowd after them. During the General's stay in port, he had a difficulty with a gentleman belonging to the steamer, which almost resulted in a fight. The individual in question, however, had the satisfaction of casting the General some pretty ugly names, for which he was in turn abused by Colonel LOCKRIDGE, and invited to take a hand at pistols. The affair was soon hushed up, much to the disappointment of the idlers who had thronged on the Empire City to take a peep at the President of Nicaragua.

SOMETHING ENTIRELY NOVEL IN THE WAY OF A HAT TREE.—Attention is invited to a new and very beautiful pattern of Iron Hat, Coat and Umbrella Stand, just patented by Mr. J. B. WICKERSHAM, Superintendent of the New-York Wire Railing Company. It is of elegant design, formed of wrought and cast iron, divided into shelves, with adjustable hooks, and is surmounted by an ornamental casting, which groups together the emblems of American Industry—corn, wheat, cotton and tobacco. This rack is a handsome addition to any house. The adjustable hooks are so contrived that one coat may be swung at pleasure out of the way of another. The rack is furnished with or without glass, as required. Go and see it; and when you see it, you can't help buying.

A VERY SERIOUS QUESTION.

Can old and long standing secondary syphilis ever be cured? Must those who have been imprudent in their youth, forever pay the penalty of their folly, and transmit it from generation to generation? Is there no thorough, complete and perfect remedy? Answer—There is but one that may implicitly be depended upon. There are others that may or may not cure. Some alteratives are resorted to in the belief that the change they will produce may in time eradicate the malady. But, to insure a certain, unmistakable, effective eradication of the elements itself, of the disease itself, the only thing is ANDREAS' LIQUID IODINE, or PURE IODINE WATER. It never fails. It makes you as good as ever. It restores you to perfect health and removes every taint whatever from the system. It is sold at $1 a bottle, by ANNEAE & FOEDICK, No. 3 Second-avenue and No. 862 Broadway; C. H. RING, No. 192 Broadway; BARNES & PARK, No. 304 Broadway; MRS. HAYES, Brooklyn; and all druggists.

LONG ISLAND.

SEDUCTION.—In the Brooklyn City Court, yesterday, the suit brought by AI SMITH against ANDREW J. CONSELYEA, to recover damages for the seduction of his daughter, was commenced, and will be continued to-day. The offence was committed in Eastern District of Brooklyn in 1855. The parties have a male child now living.

☞ The loss in Brooklyn by fire during the month of May was $85,000.

A PHILADELPHIA GIRL IN BOYS' CLOTHES.—A girl who said she was from Philadelphia, and who was found nttired in boys' clothing, by the police of Jersey City, sitting under a stoop during a rain-shower on Monday night, was sent to Philadelphia by Chief KISSAM on Tuesday. She said that she had lived with her brother in Philadelphia, but two months ago left there on account of difficulty with his wife, and having some money came to New-York. On arriving in New York she directed a hackman to drive her to a hotel, but he drove her to a house of ill-fame in Mercer-street, she thinks, where he abused her shamefully. After three days she escaped and wandered about for two days, when she found employment in a family without wages. She wanted to get home, her money was gone, so she managed to charge her clothes for male attire and was going on foot to Philadelphia.

WEDNESDAY, June 3—P. M.

The supply of Money to the Brokers to-day is extremely liberal, and the ease in the market, owing to the limited supply of prime mercantile paper, and the dullness of general trade, is very decided. These facts excite surprise in some quarters because of the heavy export demand for Bullion, though they are not inconsistent with the Summer experience in New-York for the past two or three seasons. The Boston steamer carried out to-day $1,220,000, of which about $300,000 was put up in Boston, and the remainder sent by express from this City. The disbursements of the Sub-Treasury to-day were $112,369; receipts, $94,725; balance, $12,761,921. The Discount Brokers are pressing first-class paper at from 7@8½ ₱ cent., as in date, and the Banks are taking very short dates, outside their usual offering, at 7 ₱ cent. Demand loans on ordinary Stock collateral are made at 7 ₱ cent., and in some instances on select security as low as 6 ₱ cent.

There was less excitement on the Stock Exchange to-day than on Tuesday and Monday, though a very large business was done in New-York and Erie and Michigan Southern shares. The latter advanced to 55½ ₱ cent., cash, while the speculators for the decline were availing of the license of the Stock Board rules to put out 6 month's contracts at 52 ₱ cent., and 12 months at 50 ₱ cent. In New-York and Erie the market assumed a variety of phases and large differences were again made by the Bears upon sellers' options a few days. The transfers were running close, and 37½@38 ₱ cent., cash was paid in the street up to about 2 o'clock, when a private call, said to be at over 39 ₱ cent. (a current rumor said full 40 ₱ cent.,) was made by one of the Bulls to the extent of 1,400 shares, and upon this relief 5,000 shares were immediately put out by the Bears on a few days' option at 37 down to 35½ ₱ cent.; the seller of the high priced parcel being enabled to replace his stock at a profit of $4,000 or $5,000! The other Railroads were steady; the general market closing quiet. The principal transactions of the day were 7,000 shares of New-York and Erie, and 10,000 shares Michigan Southern. The former closed at 35¾; the latter at 55½ ₱ cent., Reading 80¼; Missouri Sixes, 83¾; New-York Central, 85½; Panama, 96; Illinois Central, 138¾; Toledo, 64¼; Illinois Central Bonds, 99½.

The failure at Liverpool in the Grain and Flour trade, announced by telegraph this morning, from Halifax, is understood to be Messrs DOUGHERTY. The correspondent of the house, in this City, suspended payments to-day.

The Herald, this morning, filed a revised indictment against the Michigan Southern Road. The stock sold yesterday at 52 ₱ cent. before this fresh emanation of malignity. To-day, ten thousand shares were purchased on the Street at from 55 to 55¾ ₱ cent! The commentary is complete without a single additional remark. We might add, if necessary, that the new Directors and their friends were large buyers to-day.

The New-York and New-Haven Railroad Company's receipts, during the month of May, were:

For Passengers	$88,805 41
For Freight	14,000 00
Total	$102,805 41
Due other roads	$25,256 60

Leaving the Company's own receipts, $77,048 81; against $77,393 05, in May, 1856.

English Capital and American Securities.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

You, last week, gave us rather a discouraging opinion of the prospects of placing American Railroad Securities, for the present, on the other side of the water.

To day your Money article is more encouraging, and I think very justly so. You are not in the habit of croaking over every tight money-market, and every undertaking, whether good, bad, or indifferent, which seems to be the amusement of some of your contemporaries.

I would therefore like to call your attention to the fact—for it is a fact—that there is room, and plenty of room for good, sound undertakings, for permanent investments, with our friends in England at the present moment. It is true that the rate is high in London for Stock Loans, but it must be remembered that these are usually for short dates, and the check is necessary to prevent undue speculation. Hence the action of the Bank of England upon this point.

The discount rate for first-class paper is also high, (although not so high,) and again you will notice the strong desire to check undue speculation, or expansion in trade. On the other hand you may upon inquiry find that there is no difficulty in procuring money on mortgage, for permanent investment, at lower rates.

I know of plenty of money waiting investment for 3 or 5 years, on mortgage, at six per cent, and some sums waiting investment on this particular class of security at 5½ for a similar term of years.

In a letter recently received by me from a leading London Banker—one of the old conservative class—he says, "we cease to regard the present high rates for money, and no longer look at 6 per cent. being the precursor of a panic"—"it is only that we are learning the value of money to the world. We have enough, and more than enough, for all the legitimate purposes of business. We have no failures—and we have only to base our estimates for future negotiations upon the higher rates."

Why cannot we give them some more of the securities that are liked? We have "mortgages to supply, of thoroughly sound undertakings. We can give them, at 55 cents on the dollar, good 7 per cent. first Mortgage Bonds, paying the holders about 8.23⅓ per cent. for a term of years, and perfectly reliable.

There is undoubtedly room for such securities in Great Britain, at the present moment even; but there is one thing necessary—let them pass through good hands. It is too commonly the case that parties going out for their Summer tour take one or two millions of Bonds—Dry Goods Merchants and all other Merchants. If they can "put them through" they are satisfied to make a commission, if not they say "no harm is done." But harm is done. Securities are injured. They are looked upon as a speculation of the negotiators. It is not the business of such parties to sell the Bonds.

There are gentlemen here to be found, who have good acquaintances on the other side, and no matter whether they are worth $1,000 or $100,000, their words will be believed. Let such persons only be sent, and a vast amount of Bonds yet languishing in inaction, may be disposed of so as to materially affect the buoyancy of things here.

If you have space for this, or the substance of it, it might direct companies and their agents to a better mode of doing their business.

AN OPERATOR ON BOTH SIDES.

Boston Money Market.

From the Boston Post.

Money is very easy on good notes and securities, and business is very dull, although some of the retail houses are having a better trade than last year. For what is known in the Streets as "first class" paper, the current rates are 7 to 7¾ ₱ cent., and at 8 ₱ cent., a large range of paper is passed without difficulty. The banks are strong in credits and coin, and in some cases they have recently found some trouble in sustaining their loans. These instances, however, are exceptional. In general there is an ample supply of money, but a current demand sufficient to consume it. The only marked feature of the market since our last is the increased demand for New-York funds, or perhaps as truly, the diminished supply. For some days considerable specie has left State-street for Wall-street, and it seems probable that exchange with New York will continue unfavorable to this city for some time; if so the bank specie has passed its maximum, and the money market

INTERESTING FROM EUROPE.

THE AMERICA'S MAILS.

OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

The mails by the America reached this City last evening from Boston. There is little news in addition to the summary telegraphed from Halifax.

A dispatch from the Paris correspondent of the London Chronicle, dated the 22d ult., says:

"Some authenticated accounts have arrived here of a rupture between China and Russia. Frontier collisions have taken place, resulting in several deaths, which are to serve the Czar to claim a share in the general settlement with China, now impending on the part of all the Maritime Powers of Europe."

The Madrid correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 16th ult., says:

"Señor LAFRAGUA, the Mexican Envoy, has arrived in Madrid, and has had a conference with the Minister of Foreign Affairs. I think there is little doubt that the dispute between Mexico and Spain will be amicably settled. The squadron conveying troops to the Havana, which left Cadiz last week, returned to port, and this gave rise to a rumor that the Government had changed its intentions; but the real cause of the return was an accident which happened to the rudder of one of the ships, the Isabel II., she having touched on a rock or come in contact with a sunken wreck."

And the Paris correspondent of the same journal, writing on the 20th ult., says:

"A letter from Madrid, of the 16th, mentions that, after several conferences between M LAFRAGUA and the Minister of Foreign Affairs, the basis of an arrangement had been agreed to. When the convention between the two Governments is signed, M. LAFRAGUA will remain at Madrid as Minister of the Mexican Republic."

The Paris correspondent of the Times writes:

"Dispatches have been received from the French Consul at Panama. They give full details of the situation of the country. It would appear, from these accounts, that New Granada is not capable of resisting the invasion prepared by the Americans who are likely to establish themselves without difficulty at Panama and Chagres."

A telegraphic congress is now sitting at Turin, for the purpose of fixing a common tariff and a more direct transmission of despatches through the territories of France, Belgium, Switzerland, Piedmont, and Spain.

A telegraphic despatch from Trieste, dated May 21, says:

"The American Minister at this port left Constantinople on the 15th for the Principalities. It is pretended that his visit has a political object."

A London paper says: The Dutch Government, it appears, like those of Portugal, Sardinia, and almost every other maritime State in Europe, both great and small, intends to take part, at least as a witness, in the great intervention or display of force which is about to be made in the harbors and along the coasts of China. We hear from the Hague that Holland has resolved to contribute one vessel of war to that remarkable naval congress which is about to be held in the Eastern Seas, and the results of which are anticipated, on behalf of the general interests of commerce and civilization with so much interest.

BRITISH POLITICS AND NEWS.

Parliamentary Intelligence—The Maynooth Infliction—The Dowry in the Princess Royal—Amendment of the Marriage Law—The Marchioness of Westmeath's Memoirs—The Niagara and the Atlantic Telegraph—Interesting Visit to the Ship.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

LONDON, Friday night, May 22, 1857.

Instead of being disturbed at present, or offering the appearance of any prospective agitation, the political calm here, now of unprecedentedly long continuance, grows deeper and more profound. The Governmental beau ideal of Lord SHAFTESBURY—not the statesman of the Second CHARLES, but of the First VICTORIA, and step-son-in-law to the Premier—namely, unlimited power respectably exercised, seems to be attained in the person of his noble relative. In PALMERSTON'S hands, the huge machine of State, with all its multitudinous wheels within wheels, revolves as regularly—at least, with as little seeming irregularity—as the works of a first-class watch. It is not that what he does he does well, for he literally does nothing; but then he prevents that fussiness which idle men, with a busy air, among us, are accustomed to regard as business, but which is really obstructiveness; and it is perfectly useless to attempt to overcome his passive resistance to their laborious trifling.

The last case in point occurred last night. You are aware that the common sense British public have an annual infliction to endure, of great severity and considerable irritation, in the shape of a motion in respect to Maynooth, by a seemingly fanatical but very cunning old gentleman of the name of SPOONER, a partner in a Birmingham and London banking-house Why such a person should have monopolized the Parliamentary agitations of such a question, is one of those anomalies in English political and social life which foreigners cannot comprehend, and which are a source of perpetual surprise to those natives whose sense of wonderment has not been wholly blunted by the frequency of the phenomena. Mr. SPOONER is probably about the very last man in the House of Commons whom any other man in that assembly, or in the whole country would imagine at home in the details for the management of a topic of this kind. He is known only in connection with the most outré currency theories and commercial crotchets of a bygone age; while as for his theologic accumen the best proof of its value is to be found in the fact that despite his ultra-protestant spotlessness, several of his near relations, the WILBERFORCES, have quitted the established Church and gone over to Rome, where they are honored with the eclat due to their conspicuous apostacy and great intellectual attainments; nor can the very loud-tongued zeal of another of the WILBERFORCES, the Bishop of Oxford, against papacy, prevent the strongest suspicions attaching to the orthodoxy of that accomplished but too subtle prelate. However, notwithstanding this evidence within his own family circle of the spuriousness of his mission, Mr. SPOONER has contrived to attain to the dimensions of a first-class bore, for there is no such thing as putting him down either by argument or derision, the latter being a weapon whose use is resented by such very large bodies of serious exemplary people here, that politicians of any status whatever are extremely careful how they employ it in this particular.

Last night was another grand demonstration of solemn folly and grave burlesque. Although SPOONER'S motion had already been disposed of once this year, and would, therefore, in the ordinary course of things, have been smothered till 1858, the fact of there having been a general election gave him the right to reintroduce his hobby; and of that right he availed to the uttermost at the earliest possible moment.

The circumstance of there being 187 new members, lent some degree of novelty to the motion, it being thought that among the novices could be found enough to redeem him from the progressive declension that has marked his recent career. Much curiosity was likewise felt to know how PALMERSTON would treat the matter in the new House; whether he would employ banter, and so laugh the motion away; or assume a tone of indignation against the attempt to bamboozle and plague the House into a recantation of its engagement to keep faith with a public creditor; or, lastly, whether he would not seize the opportunity for setting this matter finally at rest by removing it from the sphere of all future Parliamentary discussion, and also avelve the scheme he is said to intend of making this settlement a sort of stepping stone to the disposal of all objections in the House of Peers to the emancipation of the Jews. Which of these courses did he pursue? Neither—nor any other. He did nothing whatever, less than nothing; for he had not a single colleague on the Treasury Bench except his step son-in-law, Mr. W. COWPER, and left the matter of the division entirely in the hands of the two tellers, or whippers-in, Mr. HAYTER and Lord MULGRAVE, he himself never once opening his lips in the course of the debate, and leaving SPOONER to be ignominiously crushed by a large majority of independent members in a very thin house, though all the usual supporters of the motion mustered in the usual numbers. When the result was known, that even in such a house, from which nearly all the members of Government studiously kept away, and from which the Peelites, the leading Whigs, and all the natural opponents of the motion were likewise absent, the Spoonerites were nevertheless in a minority of 34, ROEBUCK exclaimed that he rejoiced the question had been decided by votes without speeches, and henceforth it would be decided even without votes. It is only PALMERSTON would have ventured on the course thus pursued. Any other Ministry would have aimed at securing a great majority by Ministerial means; but he secured a sufficient majority without the employment of any Government means whatever; and further, by emptying the Treasury Bench of cabinet and other ministers, he shamed from off the Opposition benches every man of the least political prominence; for none of the latter, of whom, however, there are extremely few, as DISRAELI, STANLEY, PAKINGTON, who are for upholding the Grant, would put themselves on a level with the liberal cyphers at the back of the minister, by going into the Opposition vision lobby.

Those familiar with the embarrassments of simi-religious, demi political, quasi party topics of this sort, in this country, will not think that the present feature in the conduct of PALMERSTON is unduly dwelt upon as an evidence of his mastery of the domestic situation. Further evidence of a like kind is supplied in his consummate management to-night of the very delicate question of the allowance to the oldest child and daughter of the Queen, the Princess Royal, on her approaching marriage with the young Prince of Prussia. This is also one of a class of matters whose bearings it is impossible to familiarize to foreign comprehension, and is fraught with endless contrarieties when subjected to the calmer analysis by those most conversant with the principle said to be at stake. Passing over the fact that the parents of the young lady are, from their provident management of their immense private revenues, putting out of consideration altogether their vast public income, well able to endow her even up to the fullest requirements of her exalted station, we are confronted by the staggering fact that the heir of one of the first military monarchies of Europe, who will one day fill the throne of the great FREDERICK, with this English woman for his Queen, stipulates that she shall become a pensioner for something more than the amount of the American President's salary, for the term of her natural life, on England, with which Prussia may any day be at war, and was on the point of being at war only the other day. Partly, perhaps, with a view to obviate all little uncomfortable contingencies of the prospective kind here hinted at, PALMERSTON, instead of arranging for an annuity for the Princess, and so leaving an opening for acrimonious debates hereafter, has made the bold innovation of paying down the full amount in a lump, and thus places this child of VICTORIA in an entirely different relationship to the British Treasury from what any member of the House of Hanover, in England, had ever been before. Of course the present arrangement will be a precedent for the settlement of all the other eight sons and daughters of VICTORIA and ALBERT, and of as many more as may hereafter be born.

The House of Commons is immensely full to-night, listening to the Chancellor of the Exchequer's statement, Mr. DALLAS, as usual, being in the Diplomatic Gallery. The sum proposed for the Princess' dowry is £40,000, and an annuity of £8,000 a year. The vote of £40,000 has been agreed upon.

While speaking of things matrimonial, it may be mentioned that the amendment of the marriage law has been the subject of a successful ministerial motion in the House of Peers this week, the debate upon it giving rise to considerable out-of-door commentaries, not much from the piquancy of the theme itself, but because of certain circumstances surrounding its present ventilation. Lady LYTTON BULWER, after flooding the country for years with pamphlets and statements of all kinds, as to the alleged enormities, infidelities, brutalities, and downright fiendishness of her husband, the great novelist and moralist, statesman, sage and philanthropist, Sir EDWARD, but all to no avail, because, as she says, a press conspiracy against her, has at last succeeded in getting her wrongs mentioned in the House of Peers, and by no less a personage than your illustrious countryman, the son of Painter COPELY, Lord LYNDHURST. Strange enough, the way she has secured this publicity, is by charging the noble lord himself with being one of the conspirators, with having kept back, in the interest of her spouse, certain documents she had forwarded for his inspection, with a view to his judgment being obtained on her affair. Lord LYNDHURST, who is one of the most zealous of the advocates for doing away with some of the monstrous evils in our laws in regard to women, disclaimed all intention of acting, even with discourtesy, much less with malice, towards Lady BULWER, whose sufferings seem to be of the most extraordinary kind, if not one thousandth part of what she has a thousand times over represented as having been inflicted upon her by her worser half, corporeally, calumniously, pecuniarily, through her maternal feelings, and in every other way in which a wife, a mother, and a woman can be afflicted, and all, as she says, because she would not connive at conduct on his part, alike dishonoring to him, to her and to their offspring, and their respective families.

Now the expose, infinitely more shocking and revolting even than this, has also been the subject of complaint in the House of Peers, and by the noble lord himself who is accused of being the criminal. The Marchioness of WESTMEATH, availing of this agitation in favor of the amended marriage laws, or rather the laws relating to the property of married women, has sent to the papers and the clubs a volume of nearly 300 pages, detailing her matrimonial experiences of some 40 years. Such a catalogue of horrors and scandals of all kinds never yet emenated from the brain of the wildest manufacturer of French romances of the most prurient school. This British peer of the realm is described as beating and kicking his wife within a fortnight of her confinement with her first child, a fortnight after, and continuously for years subsequently; also of depriving her of food and of the common decencies and necessaries of life, she herself, be it observed, being the daughter of a British Marquis of immense wealth (SALISBURY) and of the most powerful connections, and she also being the particular favorite of the late King and Queen of England. The husband is then represented as having endeavored to pollute her mind with the enforced perusal of unmentionable literature, the object of that being that she might be the more readily induced to prostitute herself to the Duke of WELLINGTON, that her husband might profit by the patronage so to be procured. The Marquis is further represented to have employed his own mother to prevail on his wife to play the part of Potiphar's wife to the Duke; and when she indignantly refused, and threatened to tell the Marchioness of SALISBURY, Lord WESTMEATH threatened to make public the scandals of Lady SALISBURY'S life if she dared to befriend his wife. All this, and more, and worse, is set forth for the regalement of London aristocratic society at the present moment, fortified with endless legal proofs from various law courts in which the illustrious pair have been wrangling for the better part of a quarter of a century. Lord WESTMEATH has protested, in his place in Parliament, against the publication, and talks of prosecution of the newspapers that have taken notice of it. But his threats are laughed at. If he were in earnest he need not touch the newspapers, but Mr. JAMES RIDGWAY, one of the oldest, best known, and most eminent of the London publishers, who puts his name to the pamphlet in the full assurance that truth and libel are no longer convertible terms even in this still lawyer-ridden land of ours. Lady WESTMEATH professes to be merely a humble assistant in the path of Mrs. NORTON, whose pamphlet, detailing the personal violence she sustained at marital hands, and the conspiracy of which she and the late Lord MELBOURNE were sought to be made the victims, for the purpose of extorting money and place from his lordship, (Lord PALMERSTON'S brother-in-law,) then Prime Minister, are at last beginning to do their work. What an estimate would not English men and women draw of any society in the world of whose condition the case of these three ladies alone could be cited; and as Sir JOHN NICHOLS, one of the Judges in Lady WESTMEATH'S case, says, innumerable are the cases of a like kind whereof nothing is never heard.

In the way of foreign news there is nothing to be said. The Central American matter is not thought of. No one understands it, and few want to understand it, the universal belief being that all will be right in good time, and that good time is coming none the less rapid because its advent is not heralded with precise assurances as to the date of arrival. A few miscellaneous items may be advantageously submitted to you; and first in regard to one of special Anglo-American interest concerning which the annexed particulars may not be quite agreeable to you.

Mr. W. BROWN, M. P., Chairman of the Atlantic Telegraph Company, with Captain KEITH, two of the directors, have this week inspected the Niagara, now lying off Gravesend, and conferred with her commander, Captain HUDSON, respecting the carrying out of that portion of the sub marine cable which is to go Westward. After going over the noble vessel it was found, to the extreme regret of the party, that, without cutting away stanchions, there was not space aboard to make circular coils sufficiently large to insure the safe delivery of the cable into the sea, a point which, in an undertaking of this peculiar nature, is one of the first considerations, as a bight or a kink might prove fatal to the success of that important operation. That this difficulty should be experienced in the case of the Niagara is scarcely a matter for surprise when it is known that, although Sir BALDWIN WALKER was most anxious that the British Government should provide suitable vessels for laying down the cable on their side, Capt. KEITH was three months looking over the dock-yards before he could find one adapted for the purpose. The Agamemnon which was at length selected, required considerable alterations to render her suitable for the peculiar service required. If time permitted, there is little doubt that a suitable vessel for the purpose could be found in the navy of the United States, and that the President would not object to sending her to England to assist in carrying out this great enterprise, which, it is hoped, will permanently unite the Old and New Worlds in harmony and peace. Captain HUDSON informed Mr. BROWN and his party, that his instructions were to do all in his power to forward the undertaking, which he, and likewise his officers and crew, felt great interest in, and whatever was decided upon as best to be done, he was ready to do his best to carry out. It was thought that the best course to adopt was for the Niagara to take the shore end of the cable, and lead the van of that part of the squadron which is to lay down the cable on the American side. To this Captain HUDSON gave his cordial assent, and his visitors then took their leave, much gratified by their reception, and full of admiration of the noble vessel which the United States sent to aid in what will be one of the most remarkable achievements of modern times.

A curious case of international law has arisen out of the recent riots in Queens County, Ireland, an appeal having been made by the American Consul for the special intervention of the Executive to protect the property of an American citizen. Mr. MAILLARD, a gentleman well known in literary circles, purchased some cattle sold by public auction on some of his own property. The removal of the cattle was resisted by an armed mob, and Mr. MAILLARD complains that, having made an affidavit to this effect before Captain WHELAN, the Maryborough magistrate, protection has not been afforded him. He has applied to the Lord-Lieutenant's Secretary, Col. LARCOM, who refers him to the civil tribunals, advising him to tender information against the parties who had broken the peace, before the magistrate at the petty sessions Mr. MAILLARD did not take this course, but laid his case before the American Consul in Dublin, who applied to Col. LARCOM, and received the same answer as his client. All attempts to recover the cattle having been unavailing, Mr. MAILLARD has prepared a statement of his case, which he has placed in the hands of the United States Consul for transmission to Washington. A copy of the document has been forwarded by Mr. ARNOTT to the Viceroy, and there the matter at present rests.

From the London Times.

Half-a-mile or so below Gravesend, just about where the river tourist might expect to recover from having seen the Great Eastern at Millwall, another monster of the deep stands full in view. She is vast as an ark, with a peculiar defiant air, and an expression which tells you at once that she was made for other than the peaceful purposes of commerce, though nothing in the way of armament, or even in the trim of yards, denotes the man of-war. This ship, along whose decks a crowd of fashionable visitors daily and hourly stream, and all round which lie a fleet of shore boats "masters of the situation," and making as much of it as if the President himself was on view, is the far-famed frigate Niagara. She is, we believe, the first States' frigate that has ever anchored off Gravesend. Let our readers, therefore, or at least such of them as love to gaze upon noble specimens of naval architecture, avail themselves of the unusual opportunity. Such an one will not soon again present itself, for in size, form, speed, and intended weight of armament the Niagara is beyond doubt the first man-of war of her class in the whole world. As the visitor approaches her lofty sides, he is struck with the easy graceful manner in which she "sits" the water, with her bows well up, slowly rising, and showing off her beautiful lines and clear run to fine advantage. But beyond this feature the general effect of her exterior is not very pleasing. The dark black hull, unrelieved by a single streak of white, gives a heavy appearance quite foreign to her shape She is also very hollow in the waist, which imparts that wall-sided aspect so characteristic of the American liners, but which their fine frigates, except in this instance, have managed to avoid, or at least mitigate. She is ship-rigged, with tall and somewhat heavy spars,—a novel feature in an American screw, as their builders have justly prided themselves on avoiding our practice of overmasting our steamers But, heavy as the Niagara seems aloft, she has not a rope or spar too much. On the contrary, the marvel is that they can do the work ascribed to them, for, under sail alone, she can run, it is said, from 16 to 17 knots an hour! This is speed which even our river steamboats would count as excellent. From the spar-deck the Niagara looks by no means imposing. The bulwarks are of such unusual loftiness, and so curved in as apparently to diminish her real size. In fact, many of our frigates, less than half her size, and not to be compared to her in any war-like or sea-going quality, seem larger on the deck. Not till the visitor has walked forward and perched himself somewhere near the bowsprit, can he fully appreciate her immense size and beautiful form, and feel that as is looking down on such a war-steamer as the world has not yet seen the equal of, and by the side of which the English navy can show nothing to compete.

The Niagara is one of twelve steam frigates which, a short time since, Congress ordered to be built, by way of a counterbalance to the enormous increase of the English and French marine. The construction of the Niagara was intrusted by acclamation to Mr. STEERS, the builder of the celebrated clipper yacht America. In building her he had four conflicting purposes to reconcile—to make her a good gun-boat, good seaboat, good sailer and good steamer. The result is the Niagara—in design a kind of compromise, and which leaves her the fastest sailer in the world, one of the fastest steamers, a fine seaboat, and a very good man-of-war. Her length, over all is 375 feet, breadth (extreme) 55 feet 6 inches, depth of hold 34 feet 6 inches, and her burden 5,200 tons, or nearly 2,000 tons larger than the Himalaya. Now she has on board only four small guns—that is, small in comparison to the armament she is intended to carry; but when the peaceful task of laying the Atlantic submarine cable is completed the Niagara will be fully armed and equipped for war. She will then carry 12 Dahlgren guns, 11 inches diameter in the bore, and throwing a solid shot of the enormous weight of 270 pounds a distance of 7,000 yards, or four miles. The shells for these guns will weigh 180 pounds, and the guns themselves 14 tons. These monster ordnance, which seems as if we were reverting to the barbarism of gunnery, and would come a last to the unwieldy pieces of the Dardanelles, with bores of 28 inches diameter, have already been cast at the West Point foundry, near New-York. We certainly wish that the Niagara had had only one of these tremendous artillery on board, as it would have enabled us better to appreciate her warlike capacities. Inspecting a man-of-war without her armament is much like judging of the strength of a lion by his skin. At first 12 guns seem but a small offensive power for a vessel of upwards of 5,000 tons, and it is only by reflecting on the stupendous calibre of her equipment that one begins to understand how formidable she will be, and to feel curious doubts as to the result of a contest between such a frigate and the largest three-decker. We have said that while alongside the spars seem heavy; yet, from the deck, compared with the vast bulk of the hull, they appear almost too light. Their extreme length from step to truck is—mainmast, 243 feet; foremast, 219; and mizen, 189. The mainyard is 105 feet long, and the foreyard 94. Between the bulwarks whispering pipes are laid running from the quarter-deck to forecastle, and all the officers' orders are thus transmitted with the most perfect certainty and speed. Without some contrivance of the kind a vessel of such enormous length would be both difficult and dangerous to manage; for, no matter how large ships may be built, there are most narrow limits to what one pair lungs can effect, and in breezy weather Stentor himself would be inaudible at half the length of the Niagara.

The engine-room of this magnificent vessel is as deeply interesting to the visitor as any other part of her. The whole motive power is placed amidships, and so carefully constructed as to occupy less space with regard to force employed than the engines of any ordinary vessel. Fore and aft the machinery in all its departments is bounded by two transverse water-tight compartments, which completely shut it in from the rest of the vessel. The engine-room is about 28 feet long by 26 wide, and nine staircases are so arranged as to make all parts of it easily accessible. The engines are by MURPHY & Co., of New-York. There are three, all direct acting, three feet stroke, with connecting rods between the cylinders and cranks. The cylinders are 72 inches in diameter, (nearly the same size as those of the Great Eastern,) and placed horizontally across the vessel, so that the motion of the piston is from side to side. The shaft upon which the whole force is brought to bear is 119 feet long, 50 inches in circumference, and weighs nearly 50 tons. The propeller is of brass, with two fans, nearly 19 feet in diameter, and having a pitch of 23 feet. On the prominent parts of the machinery are placed admirably-contrived indicators, which mark at the same time the number of revolutions, pressure of steam, vacuum, temperature of the hot well, and pressure of the cylinder at all parts of stroke. The cylinders are all on the starboard side of the vessel, the condensers on the port. Each of the latter has within itself the air-pump and hot well. The air-pumps are double acting, and work direct from the main piston-rod, as do also the force pumps. A six-inch bilge injection is attached to each condenser, and can be used at a moment's notice to free the ship from water. In addition to these there are two bilge pumps, connected by the crank shaft to the engine, and in constant operation, so that at all times the hold is as dry as a ship. The fire room or stoke hole is unusually wide and lofty, though it seems but indifferently ventilated, and suspicions on this head are confirmed by the fact that in crossing the Atlantic even at this time, the heat in it was sometimes 110 degrees. What would it be in the West Indies? There are four boilers on the vertical tubular principle. Each of them is 21 feet long by 11 feet deep, and 10 feet high, and has a total fire surface of not less than 17,500 feet, and a grate surface of 484 square feet. Working at a pressure of 20 pounds, gives a power of 2,000 horses, and at that that force the revolutions are only 45 per minute. During the voyage from New York the consumption of coal was at some periods as low as 12 tons per day, and it never rose above 56! The average for full power may be taken at 50 tons per diem, or very little more than the consumption of some steamers in the English navy which cannot do their 10 knots an hour. The stowage-room of the Niagara for coals is rather limited, considering her immense capacity in other respects A little over 800 tons is the most that can be carried. This, however, suffices for 16 days' steaming at full speed. Neither is the vessel provided with any apparatus for distilling fresh water for the crew, a rather serious drawback when the stowage is wanted for coals. The funnels are telescopic, and neither heavy nor unsightly, though only rising 32 feet from the deck. So admirably is the heat of the boilers economized that even under full steam the temperature of these funnels is rarely above 100. The lower deck, which, for a lower deck, is one of the most lofty and best ventilated we have seen, is set apart for the stokers, firemen, &c. The main deck is used by the crew, and is no less than eight feet four inches high. Here the seamen sling their hammocks, the extreme after-part being, of course, devoted to officers' cabins, and the fore to cooking for the ship's company. Every sailor on board has his locker, and each mess a very large locker for the mess kit. At present the crew is 514, exclusive of officers, but when fully armed, even this large complement is to be increased to 750 men—the crew of a 90-gun ship.

During the voyage across the Atlantic, no attempt was made to effect a quick passage; on the contrary, the engines were mostly worked at half power. All the rigging had been put up during the depth of an American Winter, and as the ship reached the moist and warmer latitudes, it slackened to an extent that made it more than probable the "sticks" would come out of her altogether, especially during some days of tremendously heavy weather. She was therefore hove to for four days while all was made taut again. With full power, she attained a speed of 13 knots, and under sail above 16. With a stiff breeze on her quarter, she can count on 14 knots. Her present draught is 22 feet, but when armed, with all stores and coals on board, she will draw 25 feet. Each 100 tons brings her down three inches in the water.

In the course of a day or so the Niagara will leave the Thames for Liverpool, where her half of the Atlantic cable is to be shipped. According to present arrangements, this process is likely to present difficulties that may materially delay the whole undertaking, and render some alterations necessary. Among the passengers on board are Professor MORSE, and Captain SCHWARZ and Lieutenant KOLONIN, two officers of the Russian Navy, who attend to witness the laying of the cable, are also on board. Commander PENNOCK is attached on special duty connected with the telegraph, and Captain HUDSON is the Commander of the Niagara.

Large Failure of a Parisian Banker.

From the London Times City Article, May 21.

Another development in connection with the speculative mania in Paris has taken place. The stoppage of Mr. CHARLES THURNEYSSEN, a banker and shareholder, with debts variously stated at an amount equal to from £800,000 to £1,000,000, has just been communicated, and also his departure for America. The chief sufferers, it appears, consist of persons who had deposited money and securities in his hands, some of the principal Polish families resident in Paris having trusted him with extraordinary amounts. One instance of this kind is alleged in which the sum is more than £300,000. It is said that M. THURNEYSSEN left Paris en route to the United States on Thursday evening last, and it is consequently inferred that he sailed by the Arabia, which left Liverpool on Saturday. M. THURNEYSSEN is a nephew of the well-known banker of the same name, who is one of the promoters of the Russian Railway Company. His family is also nearly connected with that of M. ISAAC PEREIRE, and it was probably from the influence of these circumstances that he contrived to acquire his credit. It was exactly at this time last year that the failure of M. PLACE, one of the directors of the Crédit Mobilier, was announced on the Bourse, also for £300,000; and, looking at the facts in both cases, the question is unavoidably suggested as to how far the unsoundness at this moment extends. The cause for surprise is the magnitude of the liabilities that can thus be contracted without engendering notice or suspicion. Not a fortnight had elapsed since the Crédit Mobilier affirmed that its position was that of a sentinel over the healthy development of French enterprise. Are its directors still certain that they are competent to the functions they have assumed?

From the London Times City Article, May 22.

It appears that legal steps have been taken for the pursuit of M. CHARLES THURNEYSSEN, who is supposed to have sailed by the Arabia from Liverpool on Saturday, and that his surrender will be applied for under the Extradition Treaty between France and the United States. Meanwhile his friends both in Paris and London, and also those who are connected with the Crédit Mobilier, are endeavoring to create an impression that the amount of his defalcations has been greatly exaggerated. There is no reason, however, to suppose that such is the case. Statements from the most reliable sources seem to concur upon the point, and even if nothing definite were ascertained, it would be idle to presume that a person of such connections in the speculative world would have been suffered to break down for a small sum under circumstances involving so much public damage. The names of the principal sufferers and the extent of their loss in each case seem to be currently known, and it is affirmed, moreover, that the system of misappropriation has been carried on for a long time. In the existing state of affairs at Paris a speculator possessed of an eminent name, and enjoying the favor of the distinguished operators who have taken upon themselves to control and regulate the financial genius of the country, is not likely to have committed himself to a career ending in a compulsory flight for the moderate amount that in some quarters is now alleged to be the limit of the responsibilities of M. THURNEYSSEN. When the failure of M. PLACE for £300,000 occurred, last year, there was a similar disposition to conceal the scope of the disaster. General silence on the part of the press, the combined efforts of all the speculators to deceive themselves and others, and the natural anxiety on the part of the victims to cooperate in keeping the public unacquainted with their entire or partial ruin, all assist in such cases to render the task of suppression practicable. In the present case, even if the law should ultimately reach the defaulter, the real magnitude and character of his acts will perhaps never transpire. All that can be done, therefore, is to give the statements obtained from persons who are in the best position to form an opinion, and to test them by their inherent probability as compared with those which proceed from other sources.

The Revival of the Slave Trade.

From the London Times.

If we are to believe the general evidence of the world, the slave trade goes on as vigorously as ever. The demand for sugar, coffee, and other tropical products has increased wonderfully of late years. All Europe and all America are asking for the articles which Brazil, Cuba, and Porto Rico produce. To supply our demands they must have more negroes, and Africa lies before them, ready to sell as many as they want. Can we wonder at the result? Spain and Brazil have made treaties with us, partly owing to our importunities, partly through the necessity of appearing well with the world, partly, we have no doubt, from the sincere wish of the Governments to put down a great iniquity. But the gain of the trade is greater than the danger. The worst is to lose the vessel, which is of comparatively little value, while if the trip be successful the profits are enormous. Take the account of the capture of a slaver by the Arab on the coast of Cuba. The vessel was only of 150 tons; the slave-deck was exactly two feet six inches in height, so that the unfortunate creatures could barely sit upright. Five hundred negroes, according to the confession, or rather the boast, of the captain, were taken on board. Of these, 128 perished in 53 days; 40 died in one day. Such is the state of things on board of a slaver at the present time, and we need not explain that the horrors which await the negro are much more terrible than in the days of the legalized Slave-trade, when the "middle passage," the theme of so much indignant eloquence, was not rendered more insufferable by the necessity of carrying large numbers in small craft built especially for speed, and unprovided with proper arrangements for cleanliness and health. We are told that of those who survived in this particular cargo, nearly all were in the last stage of emaciation and disease, "their thighs about the circumference of a large walking stick, mere skin and bone, eaten up with scurvy and the itch." Now, what is the inducement for a trader to risk the loss of ship and cargo, not to speak of good name, and to become the perpetrator and spectator of such atrocities? The answer is simple enough: "The captain states that he has run nine successful cargoes, and been captured six times, and that he has lost £6,000 by this trip, but that he does not mind it, as, if he had succeeded in landing the cargo, he would have received £37,000 for the adventure."

This is the end of all our exertions. For this it is that we have quarrelled with other nations, or coaxed them, compromising our position or making our names odious. For this a squadron is kept on the coast of Africa at a cost of several hundred thousand pounds yearly, and a family or two in almost every one's acquaintance has had its victim to fever or sunstroke For this we keep up settlements over 40 degrees of latitude, sending out governors and bishops to perish amid the malaria of festering marshes. For this we have societies and subscriptions at home, and sermons about the grain of mustard-seed, and speeches in Parliament about Britain's eggs thrown over the slave. Brazil and Spain care as little for our principles as the naked barbarians who sell their prisoners or subjects to the skippers. The question then is, what shall we do? To dispatch cruisers to the African coast to chase Slavers has been avowedly a failure. To remonstrate with foreign Governments has been equally ineffectual. We have the choice of two alternatives—either to leave the trade to itself, in which case it would be carried on with at least a mitigation of barbarity, since the health of the cargo would be to the advantage of the trader, or to take summary measures to prevent the landing of negroes on any point of the Slave importing coast. To blockade thoroughly Cuba and Brazil is certainly a difficult enterprise, but still it might be effected by the perseverance of diplomacy or the authority of superior force. There would at least be something of honesty and consistency in such a course, however great might be the risk and the hostility which the act might awaken. But the present position of moderate and hesitating imbecility can effect nothing, and the sooner we relinquish a policy which supports a preventive squadron on the African coast, without hindering heavily laden slavers from appearing in the harbors of Cuba, the better it will be for our character as a sincere and determined people.

From the Liverpool Times.

An extensive and valuable consignment of breeding stock was shipped on Wednesday for Philadelphia in the ship George, Captain MACLOON. The stock comprised 32 head of short-horned cattle, 3 valuable horses, 25 sheep and 25 pigs. All the animals are of the best breeds, and have been selected without regard to expense, in England, Ireland and Scotland. The task of selection devolved on Dr. JONES, Captain BROWN and Mr. JACOBY, who were sent over here by the Illinois Cattle Importing Association. The cattle are to be distributed exclusively in the State of Illinois, with a view to the improvement of the breeds in that State by crosses with the best blood to be obtained in this country. In proof of the value of high-bred English cattle in the United States, it may be mentioned that 250 guineas was paid for one two-year-old heifer, and that the cost of the 85 animals, including their freight and provision to the port of destination, will not be far short of £8,000. The horses are from celebrated studs, and most of the cattle have taken prizes at various agricultural shows. The shipment is, in fact, the most valuable ever sent from this port. Excellent arrangements have been made in the vessel for the safe keeping of the stock during the voyage, and in order that they may arrive at their destination in good condition. This department was under the direction of Mr. BELL, of the Adelphi stables, who displayed his usual skill and judgment in making the necessary arrangements for the shipment.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Utah Governorship—The California Overland Mail—Judge Lecompte to be Removed—Visit of the New-York Yagers to the President, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 4.

Colonel CUMMINS has not yet arrived here, nor had he been heard from yesterday, but the President thinks there is no doubt that he will accept the Governorship of Utah.

The bids for the contract for carrying the land mail to California are not opened yet. The successful applicant will not be known in time for the California steamer to-morrow. Senator GWIN will go out in the steamer, and will return by the overland mail route.

Judge LECOMPTE is positively to be removed, and Judge WILLIAMS is to succeed him.

C. K. GARRISON has left the city. X. Y. Z.

[FROM THE REPORTER OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 4.

The Yegers of New-York, were this forenoon escorted by their brother Yagers of Washington, to the White House, and received by the President in the East Room. In his brief address to them he said the militia must ever be the mainstay of this glorious land of liberty. Hence he considered that one of the most patriotic acts of young men, was to join the volunteer companies. He extended to them a cordial welcome, and expressed a hope that their visit to the metropolis would prove agreeable, and that they would return home with the happiest impressions.

The State Department has received an official copy of a circular issued by the Spanish authorities, to the following effect: For the purpose of preventing disputes which frequently arise between foreign Consuls, stationed in the Island of Cuba, and the local authorities of that commercial province, in regard to the intervention of the former in the estates of intestates of their respective countries, arising in that Territory, it has been determined that the 28th article of the Royal Decree, respecting foreigners, of the 17th of November, 1852, in force only in the Peninsula, shall also completely apply to the Spanish dominions beyond sea. Consequently in all cases of ab intestate death in the said dominions, of foreign subjects, domiciliated or traveling therein, the local authorities shall, in conjunction with the Consul of the nation to which the deceased belonged, draw up an inventory of the property and effects, and shall adopt appropriate measures to keep them in safe keeping until the lawful heir shall come forward, or his legal representative.

In such intestate estates, as well as in the testamentary estates, the courts of the country alone shall have cognizance of claims which may be made for a distraint of property for the payment of creditors, and of any other claim calling for the fulfillment of the obligations or responsibilities contracted in Spain or in favor of Spanish subjects; but at such time and in like manner, when owing to the numerous liabilities, the intestate estates of a foreign subject is declared under control of a general meeting of creditors, or owing to any other cause said intestate estate acquires a litigious character, the local authorities shall act by themselves and exercise their jurisdiction according to law, the consul of the nation to which the deceased person belonged limiting himself to representing the heirs who are absent or are minors, or are incapacitated, as any person would do who was provided with a regular power of attorney.

Fourteen of fifteen bids have been offered for carrying the overland California mail, but no decisive action has yet been taken upon the subject. It will be a matter for the consultation of the Cabinet, who will determine as to the starting point of the service.

A private dispatch has been received from St Louis announcing the safe arrival in that city of D H. BURR Surveyor-General of Utah Territory.

BENJAMIN F. FULLERTON has been appointed Receiver of Public Moneys at Fairbault, vice SMITH, resigned.

VOLNEY HASCALL, of Michigan, has been appointed Register of the Land Office at Kalamazoo, vice KINDER, declined.

Since the arrival of Mr. BAILEY he has tendered his resignation as Postmaster of Boston, to take effect on the 1st of October. The appointment of NAHUM CAPEN, his successor, will be officially announced to-morrow.

Mr. HOPKINS, the regularly-nominated Democratic candidate for the Third Congressional District of Virginia, has been defeated by MARTIN, a Distribution Democrat. The defeat was caused, principally, by the prejudice against HOPKINS, for resigning his Judgeship, in the hope of election to Congress.

LOUISVILLE Wednesday, June 3.

The fifth resolution declares, that those citizens of the United States who indorse the principles of the American Party are cordially invited to unite with us in the open advocacy and support of the same.

The Philadelphia Platform is reiterated in the above resolution, in the following amended section: "The natural born, or naturalized citizens of the United States, permanently residing in any Territory thereof, when lawfully convened for the purpose of framing a State Constitution with the view of admission into the Union, have undoubtedly the right to frame that Constitution, and therein to regulate their domestic and social affairs in such a manner as they may deem most conducive to their own welfare, subject to the provisions of the Constitution of the United States, with the privilege of admission whenever they may have the requisite population to elect one representative to Congress."

The Progress Northward of Yellow Fever.

There is a popular impression that the infection of yellow fever progresses only in a northerly direction. Notions of this sort seldom are without some basis of fact and often, if not absolutely true, furnish clues to important laws. We propose to examine the report made by the Physician-in-Chief of the Quarantine establishment with regard to the presence of the yellow fever and the origin and progress of infection at this port last Summer, to ascertain whether the facts recorded favor the supposition that danger from the infection of yellow fever is to be especially or chiefly apprehended, to the northward of the sites at which yellow fever has by any means been established, and as to whether southerly winds are more favorable than northerly to the progress of the disease.

AT THE QUARANTINE GROUND.—The first infected vessel was examined on the 10th of April, the second on the 15th of June, and a third on the 18th June. No record is made of the direction of the wind until the 15th of June, from which until the 18th it came from the northwest. On the 18th it changed to a stiff breeze from the southwest, which held to the 22d, on which day the first unimported case of yellow fever broke out at the Hospital. There were no new cases until the 14th July. On the 18th the wind changed from northwest to southwest, and so held till the 18th. On the second day of this southerly term the second and third cases were reported; the third day, the fourth case, and on the 19th July the fifth case. All these were stevedores who had been engaged in removing cargo from infected shipping. From the 18th to the 21st the wind was from the northwest, and with the exception of the case last mentioned, there was no progress of the pestilence. The wind then changed to the southwest, and held at that point with remarkable steadiness for nine days, there being but one entry of northerly wind among twenty-six observations in this period. This remarkable term of southerly wind was not accompanied by any remarkable change in temperature, the mercury rising but 6½° on an average above its mean mark of the week immediately preceding it. On the second day of this southerly wind, Dr. HARRIS observes, "This date marked an important epoch in the history of yellow fever at Quarantine. On this day the fever was announced as endemic within the Marine Hospital inclosure." (Dr. HARRIS apparently applies the word endemic to a disease when it has the quality of propogating itself within a certain locality.) During the next eight days of southerly wind there were fourteen new cases.

The origin of yellow fever at this locality was, of course, in the patients brought to it from the ships. The important fact is, that the disease did not become infectious on shore except under the influence of a steady southerly wind.

ON LONG ISLAND.—(1.) The first three cases here had their origin distinctly in the bedding which had floated ashore from the quarantine ships, and which was handled by the victims. The locality immediately adjoining the residences of these patients is supposed to have thus become infected.

(2.) The first certain case at the second locality of the fever on Long Island, was that of a gentleman whose residence lay at the distance of one mile east of one of the infected ships. The southerly wind had been blowing directly over her for some days before he was attacked. Two days afterwards four other persons residing a short distance to the northward were attacked, the wind still holding southerly. The southwest wind passing over this locality raked the end of the island for a distance of three miles, and in the popnlous district thus indicated not a single household long escaped the fever.

(3.) The origin of yellow fever at Fort Hamilton is thus stated by Dr. HARRIS:

"August 1st the pestilence set its fatal seal on the Fort Hamilton District, a mile south of Mr. WAITE'S residence and near to the fort. On that day died Gen. STANTON, of the U. S. Army, and as his mansion was situated on an elevation which looked out directly upon Gravesend Bay, and was surrounded on the north and west by a dense grove, it was presumed that the deadly infection had been wafted to his delightful residence by southerly winds which swept over the infected shipping at Gravesend."

Gen. STANTON'S residence was one mile and three-quarters distant, due north of the Quarantine anchorage, and the wind had been southerly (S. W.) at the Quarantine for a week previously. The nature of the ground is such that a southwest wind at the Quarantine was probably a south wind at Gen. STANTON'S residence, "drawing round" the headland of Fort Hamilton. Dr. HARRIS continues the history of the fever:

"On the day of Gen. STANTON'S death two soldiers in the Redoubt were attacked with the fever, and up to Aug. 8, twelve cases had occurred in the fort. The history of these cases was such as to convince the intelligent and distinguished physician of the garrison at Fort Hamilton, that the infection had reached that stronghold by atmospheric agency alone."

The Redoubt is the southernmost point of the Fort and nearest the quarantined fleet. The same remarks as to wind apply as in the previous case. The pestilence progressed northerly from these cases until every house was desolated up to the locality last described as a starting point of infection.

GOVERNOR'S ISLAND.—The first case here occurred July 29. The Quarantine establishment, in which the fever was at this time raging violently, is about six miles distant in a due southwest direction, from which quarter the wind had been steady for a week previously. The fever was at the same time established, however, on the Long Island coast, four miles distant, and infected ships were anchored about five miles off, in a direction a little west of south, with no land between. Thirty-four cases of fever occurred at this generally salubrious and very isolated post, and it is remarkable that "the victims were selected exclusively from the South Battery, which has southern and eastern exposure." The officers of the command assured Dr. HARRIS that "no material cause of infection was conveyed to or existed upon the island." The inference as in previously mentioned cases is, that the infection was conveyed atmospherically, by a southerly wind, across water, from a source at least four miles distant.

ON THE NEW-JERSEY COAST.—Caven Point, four miles north of the Quarantine Hospital, is a high-water island. It was the only inhabited ground in this direction, and we believe its inhabitants were but a single family, with Summer boarders from the City, who all but one died of the fever. The origin is considered to have been infectious material from the Quarantine ships, thrown on the shore by the tide. The same is said of two cases of fever occurring near the shipping in Gravesend Bay.

STATEN ISLAND.—For a distance of four or five miles southwardly and westwardly from the Quarantine station, there is a town, or a succession of towns, more closely built and populated than any of the localities hitherto described. Yet there is not the slightest reason to suspect that a single case of fever originated here from atmospheric communication from the Hospital. In nearly all the cases the origin of the disease was directly traced to contact either with those previously sick, or with materials which had come from them.

Many of the victims were bathers, fishermen, boatmen, &c., whose occupation induced them to remain upon or in the water in the tide-way sweeping from the Quarantine ships. Of the thousands who merely passed on the water, without long delay, to leeward of the shipping, none suffered.

It should be said that Dr. HARRIS, from whose report we compile these particulars, does not himself draw any conclusion from them. He states that his object was merely to record and arrange medical facts with reference to the construction of a rational system of laws and regulations to preserve the public health.

From among the medical facts we believe we have collated by far the most significant series, and they seem to us to entitle the popular hypothesis with regard to the atmospheric conveyance of disease to be provisionally respected as a law.

We made the examination of Dr. HARRIS' Report with this hypothesis under consideration, at the suggestion of a Staten Islander, and without any expectation of the results to which it has led us. Since writing this article, our attention has been called to a paper on yellow fever prepared by the late Dr. SAMUEL R. SMITH, an eminent physician of Staten Island, and we find in it further evidence to the same effect. Writing of the yellow fever season of 1848, which carried off from 150 to 180 citizens of Staten Island, Dr. SMITH observed:

"The source of infection was undoubtedly vessels from New-Orleans (where yellow fever prevailed) riding at their ordinary anchorage opposite the Quarantine; said vessels having been employed in transporting troops among whom cases of fever prevailed. The means by which the infection was communicated were threefold. Most of the cases occurring from its commencement on the 19th of August up to the middle of September were probably communicated through the medium of the air. Easterly winds had prevailed for many days together, varying from N. E. to S. E., and blowing constantly from the ships to the shore; and only those living immediately on the shore suffered; and where a building of any kind intervened, so as to break the horizontal current of wind, those so protected escaped. Moreover, from the point where the vessels were anchored, taking the range of the prevailing winds N. E. and S. E., it would just include the infected district, which extended from the upper end of the Quarantine ground to Vanderbilt's Landing, a distance of one and a quarter miles."

"Its second mode of propagation was perhaps in a very few cases among the lightermen and boatmen, by direct intercourse with the infected vessels. Only one case can be positively proved to have arisen in this way, and this was after the vessels had been removed to Sandy Hook. The symptoms in this case were similar to the others, showing the identity of their origin.

When the infected vessels were removed, we hoped, after the lapse of a few days, that the disease would disappear; and so it did from the greater part of the infected district, but continued to linger in one small locality, extending along the shore south from the Quarantine ground about three hundred yards. Here the poison, animalcular, miasmal, or whatever its nature, had evidently obtained a foothold, and cases continued to occur until after severe frost, the last case being the 21st of October. The cases were not many, probably for want of subjects; for most of the inhabitants had fled, and the few remaining had either passed through the disease or were insusceptible to its influence."

We say that this evidence also sustains the popular hypothesis. We mean that it does so as the basis of a practical law for our circumstances, which is this, that the infection of yellow fever is chiefly to be feared from its progress with the wind which usually prevails during the dangerous season at this point from the south, and that the danger is lessened as the distance across water from an infected locality is increased: that where it becomes established on land it rapidly extends in a direction down the wind, that is northwardly, if a population is found to furnish "subjects" at frequent intervals.

I noticed by an extract in your columns of the 27th, taken from the Syracuse Journal, that the Editor of that paper, in order to sustain its character for political independence, states that previous to the assumption of his duties, he entered into a contract with the proprietor of that paper, that he should not be fettered in the expression of his political opinions while conducting its columns, thereby plainly intimating, that his predecessors had been guilty of succumbing to a political clique, and making the Journal a purely partisan paper.

As one of the former editors of the Journal, I consider such an intimation as unjust and ungenerous. Its first Editor, VIVUS W. SMITH, Esq., although an ardent Whig during the days of that party, never hesitated to express his opinions on political subjects as he deemed the good of the State and nation required. The writer of this article succeeded Mr. SMITH and pursued the same course, irrespective of party interests or party behests; and the immediate predecessor of the present Editor, Mr. ANDREW SHUMAN, now of the Chicago Journal, did the same thing.

To be sure the Journal from the day of its first issue to the time the present editor assumed his duties, was a party paper as the term is generally construed, but it never blindly followed the lead of any party in all the devious shiftings and changes of politics. It advocated a creed of political principles which it considered the best calculated to promote the public interest, and was always consistent. How it has been under the management of the present editor I cannot say, but from the fact of your having a controversy with it, I judge it has been somewhat erratic.

I deem this public condemnation of the editor's unjust course towards his predecessors, as an act of justice to them. Will you therefore please publish this in your columns, and much oblige.

Yours, &c., GEORGE TERWILLIGER.

Nuns in Baltimore.

From the Baltimore Catholic Mirror.

On Thursday last the following ladies were received into the Carmelite Convent: Miss Jane R. Edwards, of Philadelphia, and Miss Elizabeth Murray, of Brooklyn. Miss Edwards, now Sister Agnes of the Immaculate Conception, was attended by Miss Mary Carroll, daughter of Charles Carroll, Esq., and Miss Murray, now Sister Julianna of the Blessed Sacrament, by Mrs. C. Oliver O'Donnell. The Mass was offered by Rev. PACCIARINI, S. J. The Archbishop, KENRICK, preached, and afterwards officiated in the reception ceremonies. The ladies just admitted make the number of members in this institution 22. One is over 96 years of age, and another is over 82 years of age. One, now in good health, has been a member of the community for fifty-eight years, and a majority of the whole number from twenty to forty years. On the morning of the 14th, in the chapel of the Convent of Visitation, in this city, Sisters Mary Cephas Sullivan, Mary Therese Adam and Mary of the Cross McNihill were admitted to the holy profession.

PRESBYTERIANISM IN THE UNITED STATES.—The relative strength of the various sections of the Presbyterian denomination in this country is as follows: Old School, 1,100,000; New School, 150,000; Cumberland, 100,000; German Reformed, 75,000; Dutch Reformed, 80,000; other classes, 50,000; making a total of 625,000. These are embraced in 7,250 churches, supplied by 5,500 clergymen.

NICARAGUAN AFFAIRS.

GEN. WALKER IN NEW-ORLEANS.

From the Delta, May 28.

The telegraphic announcement that Gen. WALKER and staff had arrived at the Balize on board the Empire City, yesterday morning, created considerable excitement among our citizens. Men who had watched with a keenest interest the career of the gallant young American, from the moment he set foot upon the soil of Nicaragua, and saw with alarm the cordon of fire which the chances of war and the belligerent army of the allied States brought into being, draw closer and closer around Rivas, breathed easier when it was known that the champion of Isthmian Republicanism was safe; and even those who disliked what they conceived to be filibusterism, indulged in something of the same feeling.

Towards morning the interest became universal, and the coming of the steamer was eagerly looked for. Every body was anxious to see the man who had linked his fame indissolubly with the history of Nicaragua, and who won an exalted name in the annals of heroic warfare when the luminous flashes of victory shot up from the streets and plazas of Rivas, Massaya and Granada.

Long before the expected arrival of the Empire City at her moorings, the extensive steamship wharf began to wear a crowded and animated aspect. The eager throng hastening from the city, including many of the companions in arms of WALKER, and our city authorities, was a goodly sight on the landing as the first glimpse of the vessel was seen several miles down the river. In quick time one came round the turn and bore up towards the wharf, firing a gun as she passed opposite Canal street. The salute from the guns of the Washington Artillery then commenced and sent its echoes over the waters, and above the din of the busy city, and to the hearts of the hero and his comrades, welcoming them as brave warriors should be welcomed, by the thundering and martial roar of cannon.

Presently the proud vessel, borne lightly on the swelling bosom of the Mississippi, and bearing a nobler freight than ever she did before, came slowly towards the wharf, while thousands of eyes were directed towards her in search of the gallant soldier on board. Three cheers were given for WALKER as the steamship closed in to her mooring, and then the multitude became hushed in eager expectation of the appearance of the General on deck. The crowd was stilled, but not quiet, for the excitement of the hundreds who were near the vessel to get on board, if possible, was intense.

Some two or three succeeded, by using not a little activity, in keeping on a ledge of the vessel and climbing on board; but the command of the Captain to prevent this mode of getting on the vessel, compelled the crowd to await the usual access. It was with considerable difficulty the gangway was put in its place, and with much greater difficulty the rush to the vessel was opposed successfully. In the meantime the cry of "WALKER" was heard, and looking aloft we beheld the unmistakable form of him whose name has become a "household word" in the South, and whose deeds have been the subject of American and European conversation, comparatively speaking, as much as any of the great captains of modern times.

Again and again he waved his hat and bowed his head in acknowledgment of the thundering and hearty cheers that greeted them. It was a gallant sight, indeed, to see that unassuming, mild looking, light-complexioned man, the impersonation of so glorious and daring chivalry as these latter days of ours have seen, with head uncovered, and doubtless a heart moved to its inmost core, responding, not by words, but by the eloquent language of silence and the soul-felt looks of proud consciousness, to the enthusiasm his presence excited. He of the "pine-gray eye," the man of destiny, looked on the excited crowd with emotions, perhaps, as lofty as ever filled his brave and unconquered heart.

He had only proceeded a few paces from the gangway towards the carriage in waiting, which was thirty or forty yards off, when cries were heard to raise him, which was quickly done. On the shoulders of two gentlemen who were beside him, he was borne towards the carriage, amid the loud cheers of the assembled thousands. He was at length got to the vehicle and driven to the St. Charles Hotel, accompanied by Col. FISHER, Lieut.-Col. JACQUES, and others.

Had he come to our city as the victorious ruler of the fairest of Central America, instead of its baffled conqueror—but for a time—so sure as the stars shine out in the heavens to-night—the feelings of those who were present could not have been more inspiring or grateful. We have no doubt had he arrived, as we trust he will one day, in the full flush of power, we should have seen more loud mouthed congratulations and after-dinner manifestations, wonderfully expressive of—mean sycophancy. As it was, the intense feelings of admiration and affection showered on him were the most profuse liberality; the outspoken and rapturous words of welcome and manifestations of personal regard could only have been given to one who had secured and earned a place in the hearts of those who thronged around him. When the gangway was got ready and WALKER came towards the landing, the rush to get near him was tremendous. The scene was almost equal in enthusiasm and love to that celebrated event, of which every one has a vivid remembrance, either by the aid of pen or pencil—the return of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE from Elba—when soldiers and officers crowded round and almost worshipped him. We were close by when he left the staging, but it was an utter impossibility to get near. We could almost imagine as he disappeared in the rushing and apparently half-crazy crowd that he was appropriated bodily by a hundred people, each of whom took as much of him as he could carry away, and treasure, as a devoree does a relic.

In due time he arrived at the St. Charles Hotel, where an immense crowd was in waiting, and who hailed him with great enthusiasm. He was brought to the balcony, from whence he addressed the people in a short and soldier-like speech, expressing the intense gratification he felt at witnessing the sympathy shown him, and of his pride in knowing that the good will of the American people was with him. It gave assurance that the cause of Nicaragua would yet be triumphant.

After a short interval, he was again obliged to come out and address the crowd, which he did from the table of the rotunda of the Hotel. In his calm, earnest manner, and with manly eloquence, he said it was a proud consolation, after months and years of trial, to experience the approbation that was given to the cause he advocated. It was a triumph greater than arms could ever win. With such manifestations, it was impossible that the cause of Nicaragua could fail, no matter who were its enemies; no matter how much they labored; no matter how much they willed. The enemy, he said, would yet be put beneath our feet.

From the New-Orleans Daily Times.

It was interesting to witness the imperturbable manner of him who was the receiver of all this congratulation. Standing in the middle of the room, with his hands clasped before him, he coolly surveyed each person who approached him. The General resembles closely the portraits that have been drawn of him. The features are prominent, the "blue-gray-eye" steadfast, the form little and apparently made to endure fatigue. He looks a man destined to face the boldest danger unappalled.

After the lapse of some time, during which persons were advancing and retiring, the General and the writer drew aside, and, seated together, attempted to enter into conversation; but, it was in vain. People at each moment would come forward, one would attempt a speech and all would wish to say a word. A happy thought was hit on by a friend, lights were placed in the inner chamber and in a minute afterwards we were closeted alone with Gen. WALKER.

Gen. WALKER has evidently great faith in the Nicaraguan cause, and still sees victory before him. He tells us that his stay here will, in all probability, be limited to three or four days, when he will leave for other sections of the country to advance the objects for which he labors. Our interview, which lasted some fifteen minutes, was one of the most pleasurable nature, and we parted from the General with the conviction that he possesses the calm and determined will necessary to conquer every obstacle that bestrews his path.

Address by General Walker on Nicaraguan Affairs.

Gen. WALKER, as will be seen by the following correspondence, was to address the citizens of New-Orleans on Saturday evening last:

NEW-ORLEANS, Thursday, May 28, 1857.

To his Excellency, Wm. J. Walker:

SIR: The undersigned, in common with their fellow-citizens of New-Orleans, are desirous of hearing from your own lips an account of the recent movements in Nicaragua, in which you have taken such a conspicuous part, and respectfully request that you will address them (at such time as may suit your convenience) on a subject fraught with such great interest to the people of the United States, and more especially to our fellow-citizens of the South.

Signed by D. W. ADAMS and forty others

ST. CHARLES HOTEL, Thursday, May 28, 1857.

GENTLEMEN—In reply to your note of this date, I beg leave to say that it will afford me pleasure to comply with your wishes, and to address the citizens of New-Orleans on Saturday evening next. I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

WM. WALKER.

Messrs. D. W. ADAMS, MASON PHELPS, W. A. JOHNSON, MAUNSEL WHITE, and others.

Letter from Captain Faysoux, Nicaragua Navy, to General Walker.

SAN JUAN DEL SUD, Sunday, May 3, 1857.

To His Excellency William Walker, Commander-in-Chief and President of the Republic of Nicaragua:

SIR: On Wednesday, April 8, the enemy came into San Juan del Sud, numbering some 200. They fired a few shots at the schooner Granada, but without effect. I shipped my chain and dropped out of their reach. Capt. CHARLES H. DAVIS, of the United States sloop of war St. Mary's, came on board and asked me if I would agree to a truce; if I did not, many innocent Americans might be killed, and much property destroyed. Seeing that it might be of great advantage to our cause to remain in port, if recruits should arrive, or you should wish to communicate with me, and that it was not in my power to drive them (the enemy) from my place, I agreed. Captain DAVIS being guarantee for both parties faithfully observing the truce. The enemy left the same night, neither of us having to complain.

April 9—The enemy, to the number of 200 strong, again returned [illegible] of the St. Mary's, was sent by Captain DAVIS to say that if I would consent, the truce formerly entered into should be renewed, between Colonel ESTRADA, commanding the enemy, and myself. The same reasons existing, I consented.

April 18.—At 10 A. M. I received notice that the enemy intended to take possession of the hulk, and other positions commanding the schooner, and at daylight to fire upon her. I immediately dropped out of reach. In less than an hour the enemy occupied the above places. April 24.—Col. GARCIA, second in command of the enemy, requested an interview, stating that he had something of importance to communicate. We met on board the St. Mary's. His object was to bribe me to turn the schooner over to the allied army. April 25.—I notified Capt. DAVIS that the enemy were violating the truce by building barricades, and if he did not stop them at once I would fire upon them. He said that I must not do it. After my pointing out to him the necessity for immediate action, he went to ESTRADA, who promised to discontinue them, pleading ignorance. April 27.—The enemy started another barricade. I wrote to Col. C. J. MCDONALD to urge upon Capt. DAVIS the necessity for his putting an immediate stop to it or I would fire upon the town. Capt. DAVIS said to MCDONALD that he wished him to come on board, and say he would take me if I fired a shot; at the same time acknowledging that it was my duty to do so. He sent First Lieutenant MAURY to ask me if I would not wait until he got an answer from Gen. MORA, to whom he had written on the subject of barricading San Juan del Sud. I replied that I would if Capt. DAVIS would then demolish all that were being built. Lieut. MAURY could not promise that. I then said that I would open fire in half an hour. Lieut. MAURY went to ESTRADA and told him that if he did not cease work on them that I would fire. He stopped, and again plead ignorance. April 28.—The enemy building a barricade in sight on the Transit Road. Called Capt. DAVIS' attention to the fact, but there was no notice taken of it. Capt. DAVIS informed me that if Gen. MORA, in reply to his letter, said that if he (Capt. DAVIS) wished it, no more barricades should be put up, though he thought it of much importance to place the town in a state of defence.

May 2—At 4 P. M. First Lieut. MAURY came on board the schooner, and requested me to turn her over to Capt. DAVIS. I asked why I should do so. He answered that Capt. DAVIS considered it his duty to seize her if I did not give her up, as he looked upon her as included in the treaty between himself and Gen. WALKER. I refused to give her up. At the expiration of half an hour the St. Mary's broadside was brought to bear on the Granada, her guns shotted, and half of her crew at quarters, (the vessels being about 250 yards apart,) the remainder, about 100, under Lieut. MAURY, with small arms and a howitzer, boarded the schooner, showed me an order from you to turn her over to the United States. He hauled down the Nicaraguan flag and hoisted the United States flag in its place, and sent my officers and crew on shore, informing me that they were to be sent to the United States. The crew, all told, were 16. I would have insisted on Capt. DAVIS' destroying the barricades of the enemy, as from the position he occupied it was his duty to do, had he not, upon all occasions, led me to believe that he was inclined to render any assistance that I might need. He, on one occasion, agreed with me that the schooner should never fall into the hands of the enemy. At another time, he said if the three vessels of the allies were sent to attack me he would get under weigh, run out, and show fair play. Your obdt. servant,

C. J. FAYSOUX, Capt N. N.

A Dreadful Murder near Westfield, Mass.

From the Springfield Republican, June 4.

We give the details, this morning, of one of the most cold blooded and even reckless murders which it has ever been our duty to record. Certain it is that western Massachusetts has not seen a parallel to this foul deed since the murder of LYON, on the bank of Chicopee River, in Wilbraham, some fifty years ago. In this instance, as in that, the murder was committed on a public thoroughfare, in a secluded spot, bordering upon a mill stream, and the object in this case as in that was plunder. We presume a fate parallel with that of HALLIGAN and DALEY awaits CHARLES JONES.

ISAAC JACKSON, a young man of only 17 or 18 years, the youngest of four brothers, Jews, who have a store at Westfield, and maintain travelling merchandize wagons, was shot and killed on the main road between Westfield and Russell, within the limits of the latter town, at about noon, on Monday. He had started from Westfield on his accustomed tour through Russell, Blandford, Chester, Becket and the towns in that vicinity, and, when about two and a half miles below the village of Russell, and only thirty rods from the residence of WM. D. MALLORY, was accosted by a man named CHAS. E. JONES. What words passed between them none but the murderer himself can now disclose. The only other circumstance happening at about this time, of which there is positive information, was the report of a pistol heard at Mr. MALLORY'S house, at about 11¾ o'clock. The road is here somewhat secluded by a mountain on one side, heavily wooded; and no one except Mr. MALLORY lives within half a mile of the spot. The theory established by later developments, is, that young JACKSON was shot on his wagon, the ball entering near the right shoulder-bone and passing out at the left breast, having gone entirely through the heart. The bullet having exhausted its force in passing through the body, did not go through the outside clothing but dropped down and was left in the garments. JONES then threw the body over the fence, got upon the wagon, and drove it past MALLORY'S house, to the Blandford Road, (the junction being near MALLORY'S,) which he followed for about a mile. He then led the team into a piece of woods, where he left it, and sought the residence of the late KING S. HASTINGS, in Blandford, four miles distant. He had left HASTINGS' house in the morning, and there he commenced to pass Monday night, but it appears that he left the house soon after midnight, repaired to the scene of the murder, and completed the work of secreting the body by dragging it some thirty rods to the river, and hiding it in the swift current near the shore, under two large rocks. The appearance of the trail maintains this theory, the track where the body was dragged across the road being wet by an evening rain, while that leading from the fence to the river, also plainly visible, was dry. The murderer then returned to his team, which he removed to another place, and, having changed his clothing, went down to SIMEON MALLORY'S early in the morning, to have him make some boxes for packing goods. This Mr. MALLORY lives west of WILLIAM D., and has a saw-mill. Failing to get his boxes, he went to the village, and applied to the livery-stable for a team to go to Blandford.

Nothing had been heard about the murder when JONES applied for his boxes, although WILLIAM D. MALLORY had spoken of the pistol report as a suspicious circumstance. It seems, however, that an old man named WHEATON noticed the trail in the road, while driving his cows to pasture on Tuesday morning. He immediately reported the fact to his neighbors, and a half dozen men turned out to examine the locality. They were proceeding in their search, when HENRY K. LOOMIS, who keeps the village hotel, passed on his way to Westfield, and being told the story, said he had seen a suspicious-looking man in the village, to look after whom he promptly returned. He found the man applying at his barn for a horse, as above mentioned. By this time the wagon had been discovered, and word was brought to Mr. LOOMIS of the fact. He questioned JONES, who said the wagon was delivered to him, the day before, by a man named BROWN, to be secreted; he acknowledged the circumstances were suspicious, but consented to ride down the river to see about the murder. NELSON D. PARKE Justice of the Peace, also took a seat with Mr. LOOMIS and JONES in the wagon. On their way down, they noticed suspicious movements on the part of their companion, and found he was holding a loaded pistol in his hand, behind his back. He surrendered his weapon with a casual remark, was further searched and appeared unconcerned, even inquiring if capital punishment had been abolished. The body was found one they reached the spot, and soon Dr. JESSEL ABBOTT, of Westfield, and a large number of men from the same place and Russell, were assembled on the spot. Dr. ABBOTT being a coroner, impanelled a jury, which viewed the corpse, and having sent it back to Westfield went themselves to Russell to hold the inquest.

CHARLES JONES, the murderer, is a native of Montpelier, Vt., and is about twenty three or twenty-four years old. A good many years ago his father, WATSON JONES, was a stage-driver, and at one time kept a hotel at Northfield, Vt. He was dissipated, and died long since. His mother was a good and religious woman. She is now living in Montpelier; one of his sisters lives in Stafford, Ct. His brother, Dr. GEORGE JONES, was formerly a dentist in Chicopee, where he died three or four years since, and where still reside his widow and child. He had two or three sisters, and the family generally have borne an excellent name. About four years ago, JONAS robbed DEAN'S and other stores in Hartford. He was known there as the "ministerial burglar," dividing his time between burglary and the preaching of Millerism. For his burglaries, which were accompanied with heavy robberies, he was sent to the Connecticut State Prison for four years. His sentence expired last February.

Six or seven years ago, JONES lived with KING S. HASTINGS, a noted Millerite in Blandford. There he worked for him on a farm. He spent last Sabbath at the house of HASTINGS. In the afternoon, himself and ERSKINE, son of widow HASTINGS, went out on the farm and practiced with JONES' pistol. JONES hit the bull's-eye once, though pretending entire ignorance of the handling of the pistol. HASTINGS fired twice and loaded the arm again. They then returned to the house, and cast a lot of bullets. It is not supposed, of course, that HASTINGS had any complicity with the murder, and it is hardly probable that JONES himself knew then what use he was to make of the charge in his weapon.

JONES is described as a dark complexioned man, and hard-looking. He maintains a singularly composed and even stolid deportment, and is evidently a hardened fellow.

THE PHILADELPHIA MELODEON BURNT.—About 12½ o'clock last night fire was discovered issuing from the upper portion of the building on Chestnut street, above Sixth, immediately east of the Arcade, known as the Melodeon. The upper part of the structure was occupied as an Ethiopian opera house, under the management of MYERS & LANDIS, and the flames spread with great rapidity through the light and combustible material in this portion of the structure. The building was destroyed, no portion of it escaping the ravages of the fire except the two stores which occupied the front portion of the first floor. With this exception the entire interior, from the top to bottom, was totally destroyed. The entire loss by the fire will probably not exceed $6,000, the greater part of which is covered by insurance.—Bulletin of this morning.

THE BURDELL ESTATE.

Further Impeachment of Miss Augusta Cunningham's Testimony.

Evidence of Sundry Parties to Prove that Dr. Burdell was in Herkimer on the three days Previous to the Alleged Marriage.

Before A. W. Bradford, Esq., Surrogate.

The interest exhibited by the public in this extraordinary case seems, as it progresses, to increase greatly. The Surrogate's Court—although hardly larger than one of the cells of the City prison—was yesterday crammed to overflowing by the curious to listen to the proceedings.

During the investigation, the Surrogate and lawyers have been much annoyed by crowds of persons staring through the windows, consisting of that class who superintend the erection of our public buildings, control our primary elections, punctually attend fires, and who may be seen on the Sabbath morning congregated at grocery stores, engaging in the pleasant and innocent pastime of a game at pitch and toss. Where are the Police? If some "intelligent officer"—no matter of which party—could be spared to prevent a recurrence of this nuisance, he would be most heartily welcomed.

Mrs. Mary Wilson sworn—Examined by Mr. Tilden.—I reside at the village of Herkimer; the name of my husband is Alfred Wilson; he is a dentist in practice at that place; I am cousin of the late Dr. Burdell; I saw the Doctor in October last—on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, the 25th, 26th and 27th; I saw him on those several days at my house at Herkimer; I saw him on Saturday a little after twelve at my house; he remained there about half an hour; he called on that day two or three times; he was there again on Sunday; on Monday I saw him at our house—I think it was as late as three o'clock—perhaps after; we dined on Monday after three o'clock, and he was there at dinner; he told me he had dined and took some dessert and a cup of tea; he was there about half an hour; I fix these dates by reason of my leaving Herkimer for New-York the following Wednesday morning; I came to Albany in the cars and in the boat New World to New-York; I arrived here on Thursday at three o'clock; we went to my sister, Mrs. Williams, in Brooklyn; when I arrived there I saw her daughter, the servant and a little girl; Mrs. Williams was not in; I sent for Mrs. Williams; I had been in New-York early in the Spring of 1856, and remained until August, then again in October, as just mentioned, and not again until this Spring; I had expected to come on the 25th; I wrote to my sister that I would be here on Tuesday morning; the little girl told me that they were disappointed at my not having arrived on that day; I saw Dr. Burdell at Herkimer on the afternoon of Monday; I had some conversation with him, as to coming to New-York on Saturday; I asked him if he would remain and accompany me, but he said he could not, as he expected to leave on Monday morning; he afterwards said that he was detained by the Court so that he could not get away on Monday; he said on Saturday or Monday that he was after some money; he mentioned no names; he said he was going to Saratoga; he said he was sorry he had been detained over, as he feared the trains would not take him directly to Saratoga; I sent a message by him to my sister that I would be here on Wednesday or Thursday morning; he said he thought I might get ready to accompany him; I was only to go with him to Schenectady; he said he had some business at Saratoga; while at Herkimer he asked me if I would not take his house in New-York; I think this conversation occurred on Sunday evening; he said he was uncomfortable and desirous of getting some other tenant in the house, and would like a friend of his; he had no conversation with my husband on the subject; Dr. Burdell said, as my husband was of the same profession he would give him an office, and treat it would be very much to our advantage to take his house; he wanted us to take the house that Fall; he said if we would conclude to take it he would get Mrs. Cunningham to leave, even if he had to hire her, as she had a lease; he said he had been deceived in Mrs Cunningham.

Q.—How deceived? A.—He said she had stolen a note or notes from him.

Q.—Did he say anything more? A.—He said he had been very much deceived; that she was a very artful woman, and his great desire was to have her leave.

Q.—What else did he say? A.—He said he thought she was a very dangerous woman—she was always planning, and she told him that she had never been thwarted in her life; that whatever plans she attempted she generally carried through; but he said that she would be mistaken, for that he never would marry her and he had told her so; I had seen Mrs. Cunningham, but never conversed with her but once; this took place at my sister's, in Brooklyn; Burdell told me that Mrs. Cunningham had asked him to marry her; he had often spoken of that subject before to me; I had seen him in June at Brooklyn, and in August at Herkimer; he spoke to me about lawsuits in December in Herkimer, about the 1st of the month; I asked him the question about the lawsuit at that time; I heard that he had a lawsuit; I heard that Mrs. Cunningham had taken him for breach of promise; I asked him about that in December; he rather evaded the question, smiled, and asked me if it were not for a breach of contract; I told him no—I understood it was for breach of promise; I asked him if he ever promised to marry Mrs. Cunningham, and he said "No," in very strong terms; I then asked him why she brought such a charge against him, and he said, "I suppose to extract money, and he said no one knew what he had suffered at the hands of that woman; nothing was said as to our coming to New York in December, as we had given him an answer previously; he said the suits were settled, and now we should allow her to remain until May; he said nothing about going abroad in June; he did not say how the suits had been settled; he said nothing further in December as to her consent than what I have already stated; December was the last time that I saw him.

Q.—When did he speak to you in October about coming down to take his house, and what answer did you make to him? A.—I told him that I would consult with my friends and give him an answer after my arrival here.

Q.—Who were those friends? A.—My brother and sister; I think I went to church on the Sabbath when he was there, and I think he accompanied me; I did not notice his whiskers particularly, but they were short, intermixed with grey and sandy; I have no recollection as to his having whiskers at the side of his face, altho' he may have had; the Doctor spoke quickly and generally loud; he was quick in his motions and erect; he carried his head straight.

Cross-examined by Judge Dean.—I remained in Brooklyn on my visit in October for four weeks.

Mr. Tilden, (interrupting.)—Q.—Are you able to fix the time when this was from any circumstance connected with your husband's coming down here—the time that you came to New York? A.—Yes.

Q.—State what that circumstance is. A.—I wished him to accompany me, and he declined. He said he did not like to lose his vote, and it was so near election time.

Cross-examination resumed—I stayed here until the 1st December; I left to go to Herkimer on Friday evening in company with friends; I went up in the boat, and arrived in Herkimer about half past ten the next morning; I expected the Doctor to go, but he did not; he arrived there on Saturday, at six o'clock in the afternoon; he remained until the succeeding Monday morning; I think he came to collect rents; he had some property there; he rented a house opposite our house; I don't know the amount, but it was small; I saw the man pay him a quarter's rent; I don't think it was $100 a year rent; he spoke of raising money on some notes; I saw him in December about 6 o'clock in the evening, and he spent part of the evening with us; I saw him again on Sunday about eight, and he accompanied some friends and my husband to Church, but I did not go; I saw him at 10 o'clock on Sunday evening; my husband was present; he did not join in the conversation as to Mrs. Cunningham, as he did not know her; never spoke to my husband on the subject of marrying Mrs. Cunninghnm; some of us were in favor of it about a year ago; I never heard any opposition upon their part; Miss Dennis Hubbard, his cousin, said that she was desirous that the Doctor should marry Mrs. Cunningham.

Q.—Whore was Demis Hubbard living at this time? A.—With Mrs. Cunningham.

Q.—Was that before or after Domis obtained the divorce from her husband? A.—After; it was soon after Mrs. Cunningham commenced housekeeping; I heard of this in Brooklyn.

Q.—Who was present? A.—No one.

Q.—Demis told you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you assent or dissent to it? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Were you surprised to hear it? A.—Yes—of his thinking of marrying.

Q.—Did you tell the Doctor what Demis said? A.—No; I don't think I told my sister.

Q.—How did Mrs. Williams come to say there was anything talked about the Doctor's marrying. A.—I do not know, Sir.

Q.—What were the rumors that she said she had heard about it? A.—I do not know.

Q.—Can you recollect what was said? A.—No.

Q.—She mentioned the subject? A.—I heard her speak of Mrs. Cunningham, but, as to the subject of marriage between her and the Doctor, I have no recollection of her saying anything about it?

Q.—What other members of his family have you heard speak about it? A.—Not any; I know Mrs. Bulen, but have never talked with her upon the subject of the marriage; I think I asked her if she had ever seen Mrs. Cunningham, and she said, I think, that she had seen her in Bond-street, but had no acquaintance with her; Mr. Bulen did not visit there, but there was some difficulty between him and the Doctor; I first heard her name mentioned in Herkimer a year ago last New-Year's; I heard she was boarding there as the "ministerial burglar," dividing his time between burglary and the preaching of Millerism. For his burglaries, which were accompanied with heavy robberies, he was sent to the Connecticut State Prison for four years. His sentence expired last February.

Six or seven years ago, JONES lived with KING S. HASTINGS, a noted Millerite in Blandford. There he worked for him on a farm. He spent last Sabbath at the house of HASTINGS. In the afternoon, himself and ERSKINE, son of widow HASTINGS, went out on the farm and practiced with JONES' p did, and his adopted mother was; I saw the Policemen at the house; he stood in the h-ll, and Dr. Burdell came to meet him; Mrs. Cunningham came there; I did not hear what the Doctor said to the Policeman; Mrs. Cunningham accused the Doctor of ruining her and her family, and spoke in a very strong accent of voice; I knew of no other difficulty; Mrs. Cunningham told me to listen to what took place between the Doctor and Mrs. Stevens when she visited the Doctor; she came into the back parlor, and was there with the Doctor; I listened more than once; I only heard a few words on one occasion; never listened to conversations between the Doctor and other women; when I lived with the Doctor his whiskers were dark and gray; I mean by dark, black; they were of small size

Cross examined by Judge Dean—I was not asked, while I was there, to examine his whiskers; they were always black and gray; I don't know whether the Doctor shaved or not; he wore beard on his lips as well as on his chin; there was nothing peculiar about the appearance of Mrs. Stevens; she wore green glasses and a green veil; she came three or four times to see the Doctor while I was there; with the exception of the difficulty between the Doctor and Mrs. Cunningham as to the note, they appeared to be on friendly terms; Mrs. Cunningham told me that the reason why the Doctor got up this charge of stealing the note was, that he was under promise of marriage to her, and that he did this to get her out of the house, so that the promise of marriage would be broken off, and she said she would not do it; that was the same day the difficulty occurred; Mary, the servant girl, was present at that time; I did not hear Mrs. Cunningham deny the stealing of the note; I observed no excitement on the part of the Doctor, but Mrs. Cunningham was; I never heard Mrs. Cunningham call the Doctor "Harvey;" I have heard her call him "Doctor" once as he was going out; I saw Mrs. Cunningham and the Doctor sitting together in his room and talking together apparently pleasantly; they went together to Saratoga with one of the daughters; this was in the Summer, in July or August; a carman came and took their baggage away; she returned before the Doctor; her daughter did not return with her I believe

Re-Direct—While I was living there Mrs. Cunningham was always addressed by that name.

John I. Buschell testifies that he is fifteen years of age, and resides at No 319 East Thirteenth-street; I lived with Dr. Burdell at No. 31 Bond-street, and attended to the door; I went there this first part of December; I stayed there until the murder; I was present at a difficulty between Dr. Burdell and Mrs. Cunningham as to coals; I told Dr. Burdell that the coal was out, and Mrs. Cunningham said it ought to be out, as she had burned ten tons of coal while he was burning two; the Doctor said that they must get some; I observed the Doctor's whiskers while I lived there; they were of a light color, with some gray hairs in them; the size did not reach over his chin.

Cross examined—Burdell had no whiskers at the lower part of his ear; about three weeks before the murder he had his whiskers dyed black; the size of his whiskers were the same when he was dead as while living; his whiskers before they were dyed were a kind of red; don't know the color of his hair; Mr. Tilden has asked me about his whiskers but not as to his hair; Mary Donaghne took care of the Doctor's room; never saw the Doctor down stairs in the kitchen.

To the Surrogate—I was engaged there the first part of December; I went there in the morning between 7 and 8, and left at 5 o'clock; I never saw Mrs. Cunningham in the Doctor's room but once; I never saw her daughters in the room; I attended to the door.

To Judge Dean—During the day my business was not to stay in the room.

To Mr. Tilden—I built his fire in the morning; I was never in his room before he was out of bed.

Miss Emily Salenbach testified as follows; I reside No. 373 Broadway; I reside with my mother, who is a corset maker; our business is carried on on the third floor; we live on the floor above that; she did business last fall in the same rooms; I know Mrs. Cunningham and her daughter Augusta; I saw them on the 28th October, when they came to our place to wait for a gentleman; this was about 7 o'clock; we had to light the gas very soon after they came in; they came into the back parlor on the third floor; they said they wanted to wait for a gentleman, who was coming to meet them there; they asked me to play on the piano, which I did, but when the gentleman came, Augusta took my place; she seemed as if she wished to occupy my attention; they waited 20 minutes before the gentleman came; when I went to let the gentleman in, Augusta was at the piano and her mother was standing by her; the gentleman said that there were two ladies up stairs, and he went up into the room and I went up with him; they welcomed him, and said "good evening, Sir, how do you do;" he said the same to her; Augusta remained at the piano; Mrs Cunningham then showed some papers to the gentleman, which were about the size of foolscap; they were open; there were two or three of them; I think the papers were lying on the sofa; the gentleman talked to her, but I don't know what it was about; they were very much interested in examining the papers; the gentleman was standing; they conversed about so much as; I saw nothing else in their hands besides these papers; neither she nor the gentleman had anything but the papers in their hands; I heard nothing about the conversation; I saw the gentleman after that in Bond-street at the inquest; I saw him then in the front room; he was alive; Capt. Dilks took me up stairs and I picked him out; the captain did not tell me his name until after I picked him out; the captain then told me his name was Eckel from the peculiarity about his eyes, I recognized him as the person who came to our house; I did not not know Dr. Burdell, and never saw him.

Cross examined by Judge Dean: I did not see Dr. Burdell after his death; I had no difficulty in recognizing Eckel as the man; I think he was dressed in black; I think he spoke like an American.

Dr. George E. Hawes, sworn—Examined by Mr. Tilden: I reside at No. 21 Bond-street; am 47 years of age; am a dentist; I have known Burdell, as a professional man, for twenty years; during last Summer I saw him daily and weakly when I was in town; I returned to town on the 16th September, and remained here up to the present time; between the time of my return and the 28th October, I noticed Dr Burdell's whiskers; I saw him about the 20th October, and his whiskers were mixed—gray and dark brown—gray rather conspicuous; they were quite short; they were not so thick then on the cheeks as under and on the chin; I saw the Doctor frequently after that; he called on me on the 11th November, at my house in the morning, before 9 o'clock; his whiskers were then in a progressive state—not long, and of the same color; during that interval I noticed no change in their color; in business his motions were quick, and his manner of speaking animated; he had a sharp ringing voice and a very earnest manner.

Cross examined by Judge Dean—My attention was not particularly called to his whiskers when I returned to town; during the Summer he had not been in the habit of wearing whiskers; there was a peculiarity about his voice—it was loud and ringing.

The Court then adjourned till to day at 10 o'clock.

THE FRENCH RAILWAY FRAUDS—PAROT REARRESTED.

The Northern Railway of France vs. Charles Carpentier, et. al.—In yesterday's TIMES it was stated that David and Parot, the two remaining prisoners charged with defrauding the plaintiffs, were discharged from the custody of the United States Marshal by Commissioner Betts. A civil suit was commenced by the plaintiffs against the defendants about a week ago, but as they were already in confinement, they were not arrested on that suit. On Wednesday, however, the Sheriff arrested Auguste Parot. Yesterday Mr. Townsend, for Parot, made an application for an order to show cause why the defendant should not be discharged. He read an affidavit of Parot, stating the facts of his arrest and discharge by the Commissioner. His Honor granted the motion, making it returnable on Saturday at 10 o'clock.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

NOTICE.—On the second Saturday of June, (13th) at 11 o'clock A. M., the Trial Calendar will be called through in the room in which the principal Trial Term is held, for the purpose of selecting such cases as may be tried within the hour. Such cases will be placed on a special calendar. These cases will consist not only of actions arising on contract, and brought for the recovery of money only, but of all actions liable within the time above stated. So much of the last week of the June Term as may be required for the purpose, will be devoted to the trial of the causes on such Special Calendar.

During that week four Judges will sit for the trial of actions by Jury.

A day calendar will be made up, consisting of causes taken in their order from such Special Calendar. When they are disposed of, the Day Calendar will be made up of causes taken from the General Trial Calendar, commencing at the place which had been reached when the trial of the Special Calendar causes was commenced.

GEORGE T. MAXWELL, Clerk.

Extract from minutes.

Before Hon. Justice Bosworth.

DECISIONS.

De Pierre and wife vs. Thorn and wife.—Judgment that defendants specifically perform the antenuptial contract of June 4, 1842, between them and Baron De Pierre and Demoiselle Thorn. The judgment to be settled on notice, when the parties may be heard on the question of costs.

Atkins & Freeman vs. Chastelain & Turner, Assignees, and Fowler, Receiver.—Judgment for defendants, dismissing the complaint with costs.

Hayn M. Andrews vs. Joseph J. Andrews and others.—Judgment dismissing complaint with costs.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM.

Before Judge Ingraham.

PUTTING A MAN'S EYE OUT IN SPORT.

Lucien Etcheberry vs. Joseph Laveille.—This action was brought to recover $10,000 damages alleged to have been caused by the gross and malicious use of an instrument used in many of the German saloons about town in firing at a target, and is generally called a "blower." It is a long tube into which is put a piece of pointed steel wire with a tuft of wool on the end, which is blown out of the tube at a target, generally at the distance of forty or fifty feet. It appears from the pleadings that the defendant keeps an establishment on the Eighth-avenue, and that the plaintiff was in the saloon sometime in the month of November, 1856. The defendant commenced firing at him with a tube, or blower, in the manner above described, whereupon plaintiff remonstrated with defendant and desired him to desist; but the defendant heeded him not, and, finally, just as the plaintiff was about to turn around, he was struck in the pupil of the right eye with the steel wire blown through the tube, and with such force as to entirely destroy his eyesight. The defence say that the instrument is harmless, unless it hits a person in the eye, and that the firing at plaintiff was all in the way of sport, and the hitting in the eye purely accidental.

The case is still on.

SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Brady.

QUESTION OF COSTS.

Ostrander vs. Crane.—BRADY, J.—A person alleged to have property of the judgment debtor was examined under section 294 of the Code, and having no property in fact of the debtor, claims costs under section 301. There may be cases in which an allowance to a person so examined would be just, but this is not one. Where a person is required to appear, and there is anything to justify the conclusion that the creditor had reason to know that he had no property of the debtor, and the proceeding is manifestly to annoy him; or where it appears that the proceeding for other special reasons should not have been adopted, or where the party to be examined has necessarily, and in good faith, disbursed any monies in reference to such examination, in these cases an allowance would be proper and should be made. In the absence of any of these incidents, however, I think the person examined should be treated as a witness only, and paid the fee for attending as such.

Application for costs denied.

Linge Gallarati vs. The Bank for Savings.—Motion to open default, &c., granted on payment of costs.

Darling Still Missing—His Bail Forfeited.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

Counsel for Mr. Manning, who became bail for Henry Darling, the photographic hill forger, appeared at the opening of Court yesterday morning and stated that the search for Darling had again been ineffectual. They had had the assistance of several police officers, but their utmost exertions had only succeeded in discovering the man who removed Darling's baggage and the spot he removed it to, together with the fact that $500 had been paid to Darling to defray the expenses of his trial, which he had undoubtedly used to remove himself beyond the reach of justice. They had still hopes, however, of tracing his whereabouts, if the District Attorney would grant them a little further time. It would not surely be the object of the prosecution, for the sake of a paltry $3,000 paid into the public treasury, to allow a culprit like Darling to escape.

The District Attorney said the application was a most extraordinary one, and he could not entertain it for a moment. The bail would have been forfeited some days ago, but he was desirous of giving fair opportunity for the production of Darling. Counsel need not be afraid that if the bail were forfeited there would be no end to the search for the accused. The forfeiture of the bail was one thing, and the search for Darling was another. They (the prosecution) would see that the search for him was persevered in. He therefore moved that the recognizances be forfeited.

The Recorder remarked that the rule hitherto had been very lax, and ought now to be made more stringent. He thought that in all cases when a person became bail for an accused party, he should be impressed with the fact, that as soon as the accused was not forthcoming, the bail should be at once forfeited.

Counsel for Mr. Manning desired to know what was the use of bail in any case, if the bondsman had to lock the accused up for safety. He might as well be in prison at once.

The Clerk of the Court summoned Henry Darling to come forth and answer to his recognizances, or his recognizances would be forfeited. There being no response, Mr. Manning was then called upon to produce Darling, and as he failed to do so, the bail was declared forfeited.

GRAND LARCENY.

Dennis Lyons was then charged with stealing from the bark Great Republic, at the foot of pier No. 7 East River, 90 bags of Indian corn, worth $75, the property of Mr. Van Ness, on April 16. The evidence on the part of the prosecution was very slight, and it being proved that the accused had borne a very good character for ten years past, the Jury at once acquitted him.

GRAND LARCENY.

Catharine Russell, a young and modest looking girl, pleaded guilty to stealing from Mrs. Julia Jacobs, her mistress, a breastpin, valued at $150. The Recorder deferred sentence, in order that he might make some inquiries respecting this girl's previous character.

COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS.

CHURCHES IN THE DIFFERENT STATES.—The last official returns show that there is one church for every 557 free inhabitants in the United States, or for every 646 of the entire population. The average number these churches are found to accommodate is 334, and the average value $2,400. Churches are more numerous, in proportion to the population, in Indiana, Florida, Delaware and Ohio; and less numerous in California, Louisiana and Iowa. Those in Massachusetts are the largest, and have the greatest average value.

MARKET REPORTS.

Wholesale Produce Markets.

Reported exclusively for the New-York Daily Times.

THURSDAY EVENING, June 4, 1857.

The prices given in our report from week to week are the average wholesale prices obtained by producers, and not those at which produce is sold from the market. The variations in prices refer chiefly to the qualities of the articles.

Valuable additions have been made to the vegetable list, as will be seen below, and last week's prices have suffered a decline under the "growing" influence of a hot sun.

While the new vegetables already quoted are in greater abundance, we add to our list new Potatoes, Squashes and String Beans from Charleston, S. C., Onions from Bermuda, Cherries and Carrots from Norfolk, Va., and Strawberries from New Jersey.

There is only a moderate inquiry or sale for old vegetables, with the exception of Potatoes. These remain about as last week, although a few kinds are out of market. Arrivals of new ones from Bermuda continue free, and prices decline.

Butter is unchanged, with only a moderate trade. The supply of grass is now abundant and good packages begin to arriva.

Poultry continues high, with a dullness in the market. Spring Geese, Ducks and Chickens are now on sale.

Eggs have declined a little, although the stock on hand is not heavy. Receipts mostly from Ohio and Canada.

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, JUNE 5, 1857.

The Times for California.

THE TIMES FOR CALIFORNIA will be issued This Morning, in season to mail by the U. S. Mail steamship Illinois. Mail closes at 1 o'clock P. M. This paper will contain complete Summaries of Foreign and Domestic Intelligence, received since the sailing of the last steamer for California; Reports of all Public Meetings, &c.; Commercial Affairs; full Lists of Marriages and Deaths. Editorial Articles on Current Topics, and a great amount of Miscellaneous Matter.

PRICE—In wrappers ready for mailing, 6 cents per copy. Agents will please send in their orders as early as possible.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The European mails by the steamer America reached this City from Boston last evening. With regard to the Spanish-Mexican dispute, the precise state of affairs seems to be that a basis of an arrangement has been agreed upon between the Mexican Envoy and the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs. The Dutch Government has resolved to contribute one vessel of war to swell the naval demonstration against China, and it is said that frontier collisions between Russia and China have given the former a pretext for claiming a share in the general settlement. Particulars are given of the failure of M. CHARLES THURNEYSSEN, banker of Paris, to the extent of a million sterling. His stoppage is attributed to the speculating mania that is raging just now in the French capital. M. THURNEYSSEN is supposed to have sailed in the Arabia for the United States, and it is said that his surrender will be applied for under the Extradition Treaty between this country and France. Our London correspondent, whose letter is published elsewhere, gives an interesting summary of English news for the week ending the 23d ult.

In reference to the denial by Lord NAPIER of the report that New-Granada had ceded an island to Great Britain, the Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun writes as follows: "Lord NAPIER, who has charge of all movements, diplomatic and naval, which concern the British Government in Central America, has informed the Government that there is no foundation for the report that New-Granada had ceded an island to England."

Advices from the City of Mexico to the 16th ult. have been received. The report of the execution of Gen. CRABB and his party was confirmed. The Presidential election had taken place, and returns received were favorable to the reelection of COMONFORT.

The American National Council, in session at Louisville, concluded their business on Wednesday night, and adjourned sine die. The old officers of the Council were generally reelected, and the Philadelphia platform of principles was reaffirmed, after striking out the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth resolutions, relating to the Pierce Administration.

The inauguration of Governor HAILE, of New-Hampshire, took place yesterday. A brief summary of the points of his inaugural address will be found under the Telegraphic head.

We publish this morning, from the New-Orleans papers, details of the arrival and reception in New-Orleans of Gen. WALKER. The denizens of that goodly city appear to have been thrown into the most intense spasms of excitement on the occasion. Gen. WALKER was to deliver an address to them on last Saturday evening. A letter from Captain FAYSOUX to WALKER, detailing his operations on board the schooner Granada, will also be found in our columns this morning.

The Burdell investigation was resumed yesterday, when several witnesses were produced on behalf of the heirs to impeach the testimony of Miss AUGUSTA CUNNINGHAM in relation to the Doctor being in the City a few days previous to his marriage.

Mr. BUSTEED declines to answer the Excise Commissioners' late inquiries, on the ground that their office is not enumerated in the list, which by law he is made to have a legal care over and to counsel.

Mr. MORTON, City Inspector, consulted counsel yesterday as to the extent of his power to clean the streets under the new act, since the refusal of the Common Council to authorize him to proceed with the work. Alderman COOPER, of the Second Ward, has a number of men at work cleaning the worst sections of his Ward on his individual responsibility.

At the Board of Councilmen on Thursday, a lengthy opinion was received and read from Mr. BUSTEED, Corporation Counsel, to the effect that he does not believe in the legality of the demand on the part of Gas Companies for the use of a meter. He illustrates by supposing the Croton Department to attempt a charge for the use of their implements of admeasurement. An exceedingly dull discussion followed in an unsuccessful effort to defeat a contractor who sought an additional hundred days for the completion of a sewer on Murray Hill.

The corner stone of the new Third-avenue Railroad Dépôt was laid yesterday, amidst speeches, eating and drinking. The dépôt (corner of Third-avenue and Sixty-fifth-street) is to cost $210,000.

Owing to the fact that the notices calling the June meeting of the New-York Academy of Medicine were but partially distributed to the members, and for which Mr. BOYD (the Express man) was called to an account by the President, a small number were assembled on Wednesday evening, and most of the usual business of the meeting was deferred. Still some seven or eight persons, being a strong addition to the "German element" of the Society, were elected members. Dr. BAILEY'S (late Drug Inspector for the port of New-York) communication was in some measure discussed, notwithstanding the expressed unwillingness of many to enter into political matters.

Yesterday Judge MITCHELL granted an order to show cause why AUGUSTE PAROT, one of the French Railroad defrauders, should not be discharged from arrest. The order was made returnable on Saturday at 10 o'clock.

A Bonded Warehouse in Brooklyn was destroyed by fire yesterday, with a loss of $150,000, of which scarcely more than $50,000 was covered by insurance.

An adjourned meeting of the Councilmen's Committee on Streets was held yesterday, in reference to the proposed widening of Nassau-street. A number of property owners were present, and several of them expressed their views. That the property owners might have time to mature their opinions, the Committee adjourned to Thursday in next week, the 11th instant, at 2 o'clock.

The United States steam frigate Minnesota, on her late trip from Philadelphia to Norfolk, attained a speed of nine knots with a head wind and sea, the engine working satisfactorily.

The United States ship Jamestown, which has lately arrived at Philadelphia from the Coast of Africa, is to be thoroughly overhauled during the Summer.

Yesterday, Mr. JONAS N. PHILLIPS, President of the Board of Councilmen, informed Mr. FLAGG'S Secretary that he should commence a suit to-day against the keeper of the City money bags, for the month's pay due him as Councilman. Mr. FLAGG, not at all daunted by the prospect of another legal process, and relying on the "opinion" of his legal adviser, the Corporation Counsel, has directed that gentleman to defend his opinion and see what it is really made of.

The Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons were again in session yesterday, at 2 o'clock A. M. The Committee on Condition of Masonry reported resolutions relating to the union of the two bodies, which were adopted, but the discussion was subsequently reopened in another form, and will probably be finally decided on this morning.

The New-York Club's Regatta came off yesterday in the finest possible style. The Julia, Una and Edgar took the regular prizes—the Widgeon taking the schooner prize.

The fleet and force detached by the Quarantine and Police Commissioners made a successful landing at Seguine's Point yesterday, meeting no other opposition than a speech from a delegation of the natives. Going down the bay, the lime in the hold of the schooner took fire; the schooner had to be beached at Stapleton, the stuff unloaded, and the lumber reloaded again: after which, all went happily.

The Chamber of Commerce had an interesting meeting yesterday. The Committee on the Port Wardens bill reported that WM. ALLEN BUTLER and CHAS. O'CONOR, Esqrs., had given their written opinions that the bill was unconstitutional, illegal and invalid. Another Committee reported hard things of Harbor-masters generally, and urged all good citizens henceforth to aid in fetching them to justice when guilty. Another Committee hopes the Commissioners of Pilots will enforce the Port Regulations—but don't recommend the Chamber to guarantee them any money.

There were interesting scenes at the Eleventh and Thirteenth Ward Police Stations last evening. Capt. SQUIRES made his appearance in the former just before roll-call, and stated to Capt. CROFT that he (SQUIRES) had an order which he wished to read to the men. Capt. CROFT would not permit any order to be read by an "outsider," whereupon Capt. SQUIRES retired. The men of the Second Platoon were then called upon to declare themselves, whereupon eight men expressed a preference for the new Commissioners. These eight then surrendered their emblems and repaired with Capt. SQUIRES to a new Station house in Sixth-street. In the Thirteenth Ward also, several men declared themselves last evening for the new Commissioners. Speeches were made on the occasion by the two Lieutenants. Eleven more insubordinate Captains were dismissed yesterday by the White-street Commissioners.

J. W. MCALPINE, who has figured in the police reports so often during the past year, is again in trouble, and in the Tombs, this time on a charge of subornation of perjury.

The body of a drug clerk named GREEN, who has been missing for some time, was found yesterday in the river at Pier No. 22.

Two boatmen amused themselves last night by a prize fight on an up-town pier. They battered each other badly, but the sport was brought to a sudden stop by a squad of policemen. The principals, seconds and bottle-holders made good their escape in boats.

At Dr. CHEEVER'S church, last night, a very exciting meeting was held. The report of the committee appointed to propose amendments to the standing rules of the church was, after a bitter debate, adopted. The election of officers for the ensuing year then took place, and the meeting had not adjourned at midnight.

National Sports and their Uses.

When some much-tormented victim of spiritual afflictions asked MARTIN LUTHER what prophylactic was likely to prove most effectual against the assaults of the devil, the great-hearted Reformer answered him that he knew no better assurance against the inroads of the Evil One than a capital supper and a bottle of good Rhine wine. In the sound good-sense of this celebrated reply lurks a complete system of practical morality worthy the grave attention of all people, and particularly of the "universal Yankee nation." The unbalanced despotism of the intellect is the sorest social curse under which we labor in the United States. Sports of all kinds, and especially the hearty athletic sports which develop the body with the brain, and bring forward the sharp, quick, active qualities of what may be called the physical mind in an equal degree with the subtler faculties of ratiocination, have never been encouraged among us as they should have been. Our muscular nature rarely gets a fair chance in our life. We exist by and for the nerves; and it is no fanciful theory which attributes the sudden excesses and equally sudden relapses of political feeling the partisan intolerance and the coquetish impatience of our public life, in no small degree to the want among us of national games and pastimes, mainly joyous and earnest.

We are continually told that the European races are degenerating physically on this Continent, and no longer ago than last Summer an elaborate paper was read before the British Association at Cheltenham, in England, to prove that at no distant day the Anglo American and Hispano-American races in the New World must utterly disappear by their own default, and give place, in all human probability, to a mighty Republic of pig-tailed Chinamen! The paper was written seriously and seriously discussed, and not a few facts of somewhat portentous significance were adduced to support its position.

Absurd as such notions are, there is very good reason, however, for believing that the standard of physical vigor in the older regions of this country is by no means equal to that standard as it exists in the newer States of the Far West, or the more genial nations of Europe. While the average wealth of the individual in New-York, for instance, exceeds considerably the average wealth of the individual in London, the average length of human life, which is the only tolerably safe test that can be applied to determine the sanitary condition of a people, is decidedly greater in London than in New York. That is, the average citizen of the American Metropolis, with more ample means of subsistence at his command, enjoys less of the priceless boon of health than the average citizen of the British capital. It is easily possible, of course, to find a hundred plausible suppositions which may serve to account for this surprising and very unsatisfactory truth. But there can be no reasonable doubt that one very prominent and efficient cause of this difference between ourselves and our Transatlantic kinsmen. In respect of physical developement, is to be found in the greater prevalence throughout England of a taste for all manner of manly and athletic exercises. While the coarser and more brutal amusements of bull and bear baiting, or of dog and cock-fighting, have gradually disappeared before the advancing spirit of the age, (since the death of the late Lord SEFTON, the present chief of the Tory Churchmen, the Earl of DERBY, is, we believe, the only respectable representative left in England of the aristocratic patrons of the cock-pit,) the cordial and invigorating sports of the field and the sea,—hunting, cricket, salmon-fishing and yachting—have been as steadily on the increase. The young Englishman who begins his education in self-reliance and fair-play, through the trying ordeal of foot-ball at Eton or Rugby, graduates on the back of a sixteen-hand thorough bred, or on the deck of a clipping schooner. Englishmen of all ranks share according to their degrees and opportunities in the exhilarating and healthful influences of these national tastes—and the pleasure of the few enures, in a thousand different ways to the profit of the many.

To reprodnce the tastes and habits of English sporting life in this country is neither possible nor desirable. But to develope analagous tendencies of an original and specific character appropriate to our national trials and our national opportunities is both very possible and very desirable. And therefore it is that we hail with the warmest sympathy every successful instance of an attempt to interest our community in healthful and pleasurable pursuits extraneous to the business of their ordinary life.

Such an attempt is the institution by the New-York Yacht Club of an annual Regatta, the prizes for which are to be contended for by vessels which are the private property and the private delectation of individual citizens, sensible enough to love the sea and its exciting amusements, and rich enough to gratify their commendable tastes. This institution has rapidly assumed proportions which entitle it to national consideration. Special privileges have been accorded to the vessels which compose the Yacht Squadron by the Secretary of the Navy, and these privileges have contributed to make the graceful models designed for marine amateurs familar to the practical builders of the whole country.

The waters adjacent to the harbor of New-York are peculiarly favorable to yachting as a sport. They offer quite sufficient opportunity for the exercise of considerable seamanship, while they are safe enough to take from the sport that character of positive peril which belongs to the Icelandic and Norse voyages of the English yachter. The Englishman in his yacht has a boy's predilection for the most ticklish possible fun. He rejoices to shave a maelstrom—to fight a nor'wester all night in disagreeable proximity to a lee-shore; and to entangle himself in Fiords out of which nothing short of a special Providence or a steam-tug can extricate him. We have seen an English yacht which had been lying in the Bay of Naples for weeks during pleasant sailing weather, suddenly put out to sea at the first symptoms along the horizon beyond Capri of one of these tremendous squalls which so often make the navigation from Amalfi to the capital a very serious joke.

The American idea of yachting is much more agreeable, and certainly not less profitable. We regard the yacht as a pleasurable thing in itself, and as susceptible of large national uses. The gentlemen who have built the best boats of our New-York squadron have a right to read, with peculiar pride, the glowing tribute to the splendid qualities of the steam-frigate Niagara, which we extract, today, into our columns, from the London Times; for the lamented GEORGE STEERS, to whose genius, as a naval architect, our marine is mainly indebted for its present unquestionable superiority, made his first mark as a builder of yachts for our Club. Had the institution borne no other fruit than this, it would be worthy of the high place in the public esteem and interest which it has conquered. But we look for still further services to the maritime and naval world from this quarter. We have no wish to interfere with the private arrangements of a Society which, although so valuable to the public weal, is still a strictly private body. But we think the members of the Club will do well to consider whether they may not make themselves still more extensively useful to the interests which they have at heart, by establishing a system of prizes for the encouragement of ship-building of a strictly mercantile character. Our pilot boats, for instance, deserve the attention of such a body, and we have no doubt that an annual pilot-boat race, under the auspices of the Club, would not only prove to be a most interesting occasion in itself, but by tending still further to popularize the growing interest in our seagoing ships and seafaring men, do a great deal also to further the ends of general good which ought to be connected with every legitimate development of national sports. Precedents for such a proceeding are not wanting, if precedents be needed. The Agricultural Societies of several States have for years been in the habit of offering double sets of prizes to their own members first—and then to all the seafaring world at large, and this example might certainly be acted upon by the Yacht Club with the best possible results.

Our Yellow Fever Fortifications.

In another part of this paper will be found an analysis of a valuable Report of the Quarantine physician, made with a view to discover if the facts recorded at all sustain the popular theory that danger of Yellow Fever infection is peculiarly great to the Northward only of localities already overtaken by it.

If there is the least plausibility in this theory, and no one will be disposed to make light of it, we think, after reading the evidence we have thus presented, it will be a matter of surprise to none of our readers that a state of feeling should exist among the people of Staten Island of a nature that will render it very difficult to establish and maintain, even temporarily, an effectual Lazaretto at Seguine's Point.

The ground upon which the buildings are to be placed is low: a few hundred yards to the Northwestward is a large marsh; across this marsh and a low country it is but a mile distant to the village of Lemon Creek: the main road of the Island passes through this village to Tottensville, a thriving village about two miles distant. The population of Tottensville is about one thousand, and the road thither is completely lined the whole distance with cottages, seldom more than a hundred yards apart, which are occupied chiefly by the families of the oyster-men. From Tottensville two steamboats ply daily to the City. The masted oyster craft trading with New-York, and all dependent on Prince's Bay, number from two to three hundred.

Northwardly, from Seguine's Point, it is one mile to the church in Bloomingview, whence runs a stage-coach daily with passengers for New-York by the east side ferries. A mile further North is the church and hamlet of Woodrow, and a mile further, or at three miles North of the hospital, will be the town of Rossville, from which there are daily from eighty to a hundred and fifty passengers for New-York. Altogether, within a half circle of a radius of three miles, northward from Seguine's Point, our Reporter saw seven churches and not far from a thousand dwelling-houses.

So much for the land vicinity. The anchorage ground which is reported to have been selected, bears southeast from the Point, and will be distant a mile and a half. It stretches, at about this distance, in a line parallel with the shore for three miles, occupying the whole channel entrance to Princes' Bay, Raritan River and Canal, and the Sound back of Staten Island. The flood tide draws from it directly in a strong current right upon the shore at the very point most frequented by the oystermen. The South wind blowing over it will take the most beautiful part of Staten Island for the whole width of three miles.

The tide, as well as the wind, will sweep directly across the principal oyster beds, and if the oystermen, who have not far from a million dollars involved in the matter, are allowed to pursue their avocation at all, they will be precisely in the track of the boats plying between the infected ships and the infected Hospital.

It is is their custom to dredge and tong their beds chiefly at night, and to run to market at New-York before daylight. There are from two to three hundred masted craft and an innumerable fleet of small boats thus occupied at the very worst period of the usual yellow-fever season.

Whether the Commission propose to destroy this business, or to allow it to be carried on under these circumstances, their design must be thought equally inhuman and impracticable.

In view of the facts we have stated there can be little doubt that, in a season only equally favorable with the last to the infection, the adjacent district would be, in a very short time, completely desolated by yellow fever, after it had become endemic at the proposed hospital at the Point. From each of the villages we have mentioned there is a dense resident population on several roads towards New-York, and the communication from the district is of a nature that it would be impossible to interrupt. In fact, the danger of the fever's reaching New-York City appears to us much greater from a Quarantine establishment at Seguine's Point than from that at present occupied. From the latter the southerly wind rakes no habitable land for a distance of many miles. From Seguine's Point it would sweep the densest part of Staten Island, and that on a course directly towards New-York.

WHO IS TO PAY THE MUNICIPAL POLICE?

A small sentence in the recent Police act seems to have escaped the attention of the Municipal Solons and of those legal gentlemen who are using certain obsolete sections in the Dongan charter to establish a day and night watch. Section 26, after providing that the moneys collected in 1856 and 1857 for purposes of police and those sums apportioned for succeeding years, closes with these words: "The said several sums of money apportioned, levied and collected within each of the said cities of New-York and Brooklyn shall be in lieu of all taxes within each of the said cities for the support of police government therein." The ordinary revenues of the City not being sufficient to pay its expenses, the Supervisors have to resort to the Legislature for permission to levy the additional taxes, but according to the preceding words, the levy for police, whether small or great, in the City of New-York, goes to the Metropolitan police and excludes all else. The next Board of Supervisors, it must be remembered, will consist of twelve persons, distinct from the Aldermen elected, six by general ticket, and six appointed by the Mayor from the next highest candidates. The minority on this police question will be equally represented with the majority in that Board, and whether it will back up the Treasury for the day and night watch is highly problematical.

TROUBLES IN DR. CHEEVER'S CHURCH.

Adoption of the Report of the Committee appointed to amend the Standing Rules of the Church—Election of Officers, &c.

In accordance with previous announcement, the annual business meeting of the Church of the Puritans (Dr. CHEEVER'S) was held last night.

The meeting was opened with singing and prayer, after which Dr. CHEEVER stated that the present was the annual meeting of the Church, and the first step to be taken was the election of a Chairman. He also stated that he had occasion to be absent for a time, but would shortly return.

Rev. C. J. WARREN was nominated as Chairman, and after the question had been put, a division was called for, and it was found that eight only were opposed.

Mr. THEODORE WARREN was then nominated as Clerk, but he declined, saying that he was too young a man for the office, when so many more competent were present.

Mr. S. W. KING was then nominated, when

Gen. MATHER said it was usual in deliberative bodies for action to be taken when a member declined to accept office, and he therefore moved that Mr. WARREN be excused. The motion was carried, and Mr. KING was unanimously elected.

The Chairman announced that this was the annual meeting of the Church for the choice of officers, and the transaction of such other business as properly came before it.

Gen. MATHER supposed that they had a programme marked out in the rules, and referred the Chairman to rule six, which prescribed that the records of the last annual meeting should be read.

The records of the last annual meeting were called for, but they were not in the house.

Mr. HAVENS supposed the first thing in order then would be the presentation of reports.

Gen. MATHER supposed not. He believed in abiding by the rules, and by reference to rule 6, it would be seen that the next business in order was the revision of the catalogue of members.

Mr. FRY replied that there was no specified order of business in the rules and asked that the report of the Committee appointed to revise the standing rules of the Church be then heard.

Gen. MATHER did not understand what it meant, if, in this free country and in this Christian Church—supposed to be composed of free men and good Christians—such an utter disregard should be paid to rule and order. To act in that matter was not creditable to them as an associated body capable of self-government. He advised them to act like men and treat matters fairly—to treat them as a worldly man was required to treat his ordinary business, with fairness and honesty.

Mr. FLINT called the gentleman to ordar.

Gen. MATHER asked the gentleman to state his point of order.

Mr. FLINT stated he had reflected upon the honesty of the members.

Gen. MATHER.—I take it back, because honesty and fairness—

SEVERAL VOICES.—"Order, order."

THE CHAIRMAN.—The brother is clearly out of order.

Gen. MATHER said he had a right to speak, and he should maintain his rights in spite of the badgering and opposition he met with. He contended that the revision of the catalogue of members was the next business in order.

The Chairman intimated that the brother had not been speaking to the question; and said although the gentleman had a right to express his views, the Chairman had power to call him to order when he was not speaking to the subject under consideration. He then said the motion to call up the report of the committee appointed to propose amendment to the standing rules of the Church was the question before the house.

Gen. MATHER offered as an amendment to the motion of his youthful friend, (Mr. FRY,) that they now proceed to revise the catalogue of members.

Mr. FRY called Mr. MATHER to order. He had been called a youth by the gentleman, and he had been called a youth, too, by one of the daily papers, but he could always act manfully, and he was old enough to act with discretion.

Gen. MATHER begged to apologize; but he wished it to be understood that this rule of revising the catalogue was introduced and prescribed for the purpose of ascertaining who were entitled to vote.

The CHAIRMAN—Have you reduced your amendment to writing?

Gen. MATHER—No, Sir.

The CHAIRMAN—I would like to have it in writing.

Gen. MATHER—I would like to know if my friend has reduced his motion to writing?

The Chairman was of opinion that the amendment of Gen. MATHER was not on the subject of the motion, and, therefore, was not in order. Mr. FRY'S motion was to call up the report of the Committee, while the amendment was to call up the catalogue of members for revision.

Gen. MATHER—How are we going to have anything to guide us in taking a vote, if we abide by the rules of the Chair?

Mr. HUNT—I call the gentleman to order. The Chairman has decided the amendment out of order.

Gen. MATHER—Allow me to say that it comes strictly within the order of proceedings, as laid down in the standing rules of the Church.

The CHAIRMAN—I still rule that the original motion is in order, and that for the reasons already stated—the amendment is not.

Mr. HAVENS—I call on the Chair—

Mr. ARNOTT—(interrupting)—Permit me to remark to the members of this Church, that the New-York Herald said, a few days since, that we were preparing for a grand row to-night, and it is beginning to look like—

Cries of "Question, question."

Gen. MATHER—I object to any action upon that resolution. The fourteenth rule prescribes that "no resolution shall be adopted at the same meeting at which it is offered, if any objection is made thereto," and I wish my objection noted.

Mr. FRY—I have a motion to make.

The CHAIRMAN—It is perfectly proper for the meeting to call upon a committee appointed at a previous meeting to make their report; it is perfectly proper for this Committee to make their report.

Cries of "Question, question."

Mr. HAVENS—Is not that question open to discussion?

The CHAIRMAN—It would have been, had not the President commenced to put the question.

Mr. HAVENS (emphatically)—The question has not been put. Is it open for discussion?

The CHAIRMAN—The question would have been put, had not the brother interrupted me.

Mr. HAVENS (with renewed emphasis)—Is not the question open for discussion?

The CHAIRMAN—I suppose it is.

Mr. HAVENS—Then I hope we shall proceed and not have the gag rule applied.

THE CHAIRMAN—The gag law shall not be applied.

Mr. HAVENS then called for the reading of the resolution, and inquired to what Committee it related.

The Chairman did not suppose that more than one Committee had been appointed to revise the rules.

Mr. HAVENS thought it was no matter for suppositions.

The Chairman said as there had been only one Committee appointed consequently there could be but one report.

Mr. FRY amended his resolution by inserting the words "the Committee appointed on Tuesday, the 26th ult."

Mr. HAVENS then objected to the report on the ground that the meeting on that day was not a legal one, and recited the rule of the Church on calling meetings, saying it had not been complied with.

Mr. F. W. KING stated that the call for the meeting had not been placed in the hands of the Clerk of the Church because he was absent from the City at the time, but that a copy had been given to Dr. CHEEVER to read from the pulpit.

A very long debate followed, characterized by personalities and bitterness. After the question was put, the Committee made the following report:

The Committee to whom was referred the subject of amending the 8 and 1g Rules of the Church of the Puritans, respectfully report:

That they have looked carefully at these rules, as they have existed for some years. They find a small number of these in need of amendments, not of great importance, but yet such as the convenient transaction of business seems to require. Indeed the proposed amendments do little more than conform the rules to the practice of the Church.

The only rule of great importance, whether considered on general principles, or with reference to the present necessities of the Church, is the one from which a life tenure is inferred in the Deaconship.

Such a tenure implies rule rather than representation. This is not in happy accordance with the fundamental constitution of Congregationalism. According to this all the power of the Church resides in the body. Whoever is appointed to perform any service, acts by authority of the body, and as its representative. His is a delegated power, in the exercise of which he is responsible to his constituents.

The evil of a life-tenure, or a tenure which can be terminated only by a direct vote of displacement—always delicate, and usually regarded as a hostile act—is that the deacons of the church often come to feel themselves a distinct order, having an authority beyond the functions of their office, a right to lead the opinion and the action of the church, and to expect a deference on account of their official position. In the infirmities of our nature this tendency is unavoidable.

Another and cognate evil is, that deacons, though they may represent the sentiment and will of the church when appointed, may cease entirely to represent the sentiment and wishes of the present.

The changes in our cities of the membership of a church are rapid, and deacons come to be in a very few years the representatives of a past generation. When a large proportion of the present members have had no voice in their election, they are likely to look upon them as official persons, and not as representatives of the church in living sympathy with its pulsations.

It is of importance to accustom as large a number of members as practicable to the discharge of the duties belonging to the deaconship. The proportion of those fitted for such duties will depend much on the demand for them, and this demand will be increased by the necessity of periodical changes.

Your Committee deem it wise to render deacons ineligible for one year after their term expires. If eligible, a reelection will be expected, and if not accorded, the omission will be regarded as a censure. The same persons must be continued for fear of wounding feelings, when a change would be expedient. These are reasons which induce your Committee, on general principles, to advise a short term of office and ineligibility.

But there are considerations which render it especially important to apply these principles in this Church at the present time. And your Committee deem it the part of Christian frankness to declare, without disguise, yet in all courtesy, the reasons why they believe what is fit and wise at all times as to this office, is of imperative necessity in this Church and at this time.

It is well known that our deacons, without invoking the advice or consulting the wishes of the Church, have attempted to drive its pastor to a resignation. The letter addressed to him by these and others has been laid before the Church, and through the press, has become known to the community. It is irregular, partizan and unjust to the Church. Two, at least, of the deacons are generally understood to have been active in getting this up and in procuring signatures. The Church cannot safely confide in men, as its representatives, who thus seek, of their own will, and without the voice of the Church, or even calling for an open expression of its wishes, to sunder the ties of pastor and people.

But aside from the impropriety of the proceeding in its very nature, there are objections to it at this time of gravest import.

In the midst of abounding treason against God and humanity, of silent consenting, or of striking hands with the oppresser, there are ministers in this City who stand up unfaltering in the power of truth and the Gospel. All honor to such. Their outspoken words shall go down to future ages. They are doing their part to redeem the nation from error and falsehood and wickedness and shame. They know too well that this redemption will never come from political parties without a holier fire in the heart than can be caught from the fitful torch-light of expediency. To these political parties present success is everything. Not so with those who proclaim to the understanding and the heart the great truths of rigoteousness. They know that these truths belong to God and are lasting as his throne. They fight a battle with a certainty of victory, though a thousand fall at their side and ten thousand at their right hand.

Among the champions of right against wrong—of the oppressed against the oppressor, of christian principle against selfish cupidity, the pastor of this church has taken a prominent stand. Here on Union-square, in the heart of the City, he has fought the battle against Slavery, its abettors and apologists, with a brave heart. With powers of logic and illustration rarely matched, raised up by God to do a work for the nation, for mankind, and for the age, he has sent his thunder tones from the Atlantic to the Pacific—from our northern to our southern border, calling men to be true to themselves and to their God—holding up to scorn, contempt and loathing the principles and sentiments which brand our nation with infamy and make it a reproach among all people. His tones have reverberated beyond the Atlantic, stirring the best blood of the heart, wherever that heart is true to freedom.

God has honored the pulpit of this Church by making it a great watch-tower for the nation. Its guardians have a duty to perform before the world. All eyes turn to us to inquire whether we will be faithful to our trust. It is ours to shield, to sustain and to encourage the man whom we have placed in this pulpit. Shall we ask of a heartless despotism—of those who, in the stolidity of their hearts, fear not God nor regard man—leave for our pastor to speak for right, for truth, for equity? Are we so lost to manly courage as to take counsel of our fears?

Dr. CHEEVER is pastor of this church; but he is more. His mission extends beyond the little precincts of Union-square. He is a watchman on the walls of our American Zion, proclaiming truths to the nation—truths as enduring as eternity. A Luther Hamlet of Germany—a contracted parish in Eisenburg—might as well have claimed Luthers and Knoxs for their sole property, as this church the man who stands in its pulpit. His mission extends wide beyond the precincts of a little parish. Through him and in him we owe a duty to the nation—the duty of upholding, sustaining and encouraging. And to this sentiment of duty this Church, before the eyes of Christendom, watched and noted by the good and the wise—nay, by the tyrannic and the wicked—this Church, set by the power and God-given fidelity of its pastor on a pinnacle so high, will not, cannot, be false. Your Committee call on you, brethren, to dare and to do whatsoever God in his providence shall demand of you.

The great mistake of the fifteen or twenty men who have attempted to remove the pastor of this Church from his pulpit and his people, is this, that they have never measured themselves nor their pastor by the right standard—have never considered his mission either in its breadth, or height, or depth; in its reach of power or the greatness of our nation's need. They profess to sympathize with him in his principles, and yet, as far as on them depends, they would hush his voice in silence. They would honor him for his fidelity to truth, but would drive him from our midst.

Well, it was possible that these mistaken brethren, acting in secret conclave, might prevail. They believed they could. They attempted the task—whether successful or in vain this Church must say. Dr. CHEEVER can afford to be driven out from the midst of us—to go naked, penniless, friendless. Of his honor as the champion of liberty and right—as the messenger of God to the nation—he will go unshorn. He has made a mark which we cannot blot out. He has proclaimed truths which shall live when we are forgotten. He can afford to be driven out. And we, too, brethren, can afford to be scattered, all of us—to go down, one by one, to the silent grave; or, if so God will, to be dashed by some sudden calamity, all of us together, from earthly life. Pastor and people can afford to go down together to the grave, to be buried in the ruins of the edifice where we worship. Like a pebble dropped in mid ocean, the tiny circles marking for a brief moment the place where it fell, and then ships with their living freight pass on, all unconscious that ought had disturbed the waters.

But can we afford the other? Can we afford to seem to the world false to all the principles we profess to honor? Can we face the reproaches of the just, the brave, the large-hearted throughout the world? Can we afford to leave our children to blush for our cowardice? Can we afford them the legacy of a dishonored name?

Brethren, these things we cannot afford. Let us gather round our pastor. Let our hearts beat in unison with his, warming, cherishing, upholding him. Let us, at least, go down in memory with him to posterity as not unworthy the man whom God, in his providence, has set in our midst. And so may God succeed us as we are true to Him and to the cause of the oppressed. Respectfully submitted.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, June 4, 1857.

After a long debate, in which Messrs. MATHER and HAVENS took a prominent part, a motion was made to adopt the Report of the Committee, with the alteration of the rules as recommended at a previous meeting. The report was adopted, as follows: In favor, 42; against 17.

The Chairman declared the Report adopted.

The Committee on the Election of Officers reported the following:

The Committee appointed to nominate officers of this church recommend the adoption of the following order:

Ordered, That the number of the committee of brethren to be chosen for the present year be five. Adopted,

They report for officers, and recommend to the church the following brethren

For Deacons—Francis P. Schouls and Asa H. Wheeler—to hold for one year. Alonzo S Bull and James B Thompson—to hold for two years. William C Gilman and James C. Woodruff—to hold for three years.

For Clerk—Frederick W. King.

For Treasurer—James C Woodruff.

For Committee of Brethren—Charles Abernethy, Thomas Rigney, James W. Halsted, Elisha Peck and Isreal P. Warren.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

These names were being balloted for after midnight. It was considered certain that they would be elected, with the exception of WOONERFF, who declined.

THE QUARANTINE WAR.

Successful Descent of the Commissioners' Fleet upon Seguine's Point—Hazards of the Voyage—Interviews with the Natives—The Latest News.

The very materials of the new Quarantine establishment seem predisposed to combustion. The schooner dispatched to Seguine's Point, early yesterday morning, with her whole cargo, narrowly escaped destruction by fire. Whether it was through treachery on the part of the contractors or the crew, or from an improper inspection of the agent of the Commission, will not probably be known till a careful investigation shall have been made by a Court Martial—but, when about midway between the land of Long Island and Staten Island, a cry of fire was suddenly raised, and it was discovered that water was pouring into the hold of the schooner, in which was stored a large quantity of lime, which was thus immediately thrown into fierce and sputtering combustion.

As the smoke poured up through the hatches, the crew supposing some of the incendiaries were concealed below, and had already commenced operations, were thrown into a fearful state of panic. The officers, however, retained their presence of mind, and the order was immediately given to head the vessel for the nearest land. Clifton landing, on Staten Island, was soon reached, and all hands set to work to throw off the bricks and lumber from the deck. In the course of half an hour they cleared the hatches, and after throwing overboard each portion of the lime as was not consumed, put a stop to the fire. The materiale were then put on board again, and the steamer again took the schooner in tow for her destination. During this trying scene, Mr. HALL, who accompanied the vessel, rolled up his sleeves and worked with characteristic impetuosity with the crew and police force.

The design of effecting the descent upon the enemy's country under cover of darkness was thus frustrated. It was now anticipated that on perceiving their approach the insurgents would make effective preparations to resist the landing. On arriving off the Point however not only were no defensive works to be seen but even no array of force.

Fearful of an ambuscade a considerable delay occurred after the fleet came to anchor while the officers made a careful reconnoisance of their position. The time was not lost however for the men were ordered to take breakfast. No liquor was served, Commissioner HALL having prevailed on the Commander to put to the test the theory he has long advocated that a clear head is better than Dutch courage for any emergency.

At precisely eight bells of the morning watch a landing party of volunteers embarked in a boat, gallantly led by the first lieutenant. The feelings of those left on board as they watched the progress of events, may be better imagined than described. So near had the zealous daring of the pilot anchored the fleet that from the quarter deck of the flag-ship Commissioner HALL could, with the naked eye, perceive every circumstance that occurred on the shore or in the boats. Whether from prudence in view of the imposing force arrayed against them, or because they were taken by surprise, it was soon evident to all that all design of opposing the landing had been relinquished by the malcontents.

By the cheerful energy of all, seamen, police and laborers, the schooner was soon beached, and the materials of the temporary buildings were rapidly passed on shore.

Scarcely, however, had the carpenters commenced to sit up the portable houses, which had been prepared to be used as barracks, when a party of twelve natives, accompanied by three of their women, were discovered. Commissioner HALL, advancing in front of the hastily-formed line of the police force, made signs of peace, and they approached apparently without fear. A chief, whose name was reported to us as ABELARBIT, immediately commenced a violently abusive and denunciatory oration, using no little improper language.

The noble leader of the little band of Christians deigned to make but terse reply, and the interview was soon concluded by the withdrawal of the natives. The carpenters returned to their work, and all going on well, the Commissioner at 12 o'clock, after a short address to the men, gave the welcome order to go to dinner and return unguarded through the midst of the enemy's country to the city. At 2 o'clock another party of five or six appeared and held a confab with Mr. VOORHIES, the superintendent, who had been left in command of the shore party. These also soon retired, and the work again proceeded with energy.

At 5 o'clock P. M., when our last dispatch was dated, ample quarters for the laborers, and so much of the police force as would not be required on duty during the night, had been erected, and Captain WALLING had just returned from the grand round and reported no signs of an enemy at any of the outworks. Messrs. DOBSON & LEWIS have the contract for the erection of the Quarantine buildings at Seguine's Point. Messrs. HOWARD & QUICK do the fencing. This is in correction of a statement before now published.

The Yacht Club Regatta.

Nothing but a somewhat stiffer wind was lacking, to mark yesterday's Regatta of the New York Club in the memory of all yachting men, as the most brilliant race ever seen in our waters. The day, in respect of atmosphere, was all that could have been desired. Warm, yet not sultry, the air was refreshed with a desultory breeze eminently agreeable to the spectators of the exhilarating but pacific manœuvres; and the aspect of all things proclaimed, if not a "hunting," certainly a "yachting" morning, with which no reasonable mortal could find fault.

Those who remembered the gusty and drizzling day which unfriendly June last year set apart for us, could not but feel a thrill of gratitude to the gracious month for her altered mood. Many of the ladies, in particular, who had been fortifying their minds by the previous perusal of carefully prepared works on "Sea-Sickness," or surreptitiously purveying for themselves the small and subtle prophylactic globules devised by the Homœpathic wizards against the assaults of that remorseless foe of all marine fun, must have sent up sweet and secret ejaculations of delight as they gazed out from the somewhat unpicturesque pier at the foot of Spring-street over the smooth and glassy surface of the almost unruffled Bay.

The sincere and growing interest which is felt in the noble sport of yatching by our citizens was charmingly indicated, let us say en passant, by the unusually large and unusually elegant assemblage of queens of beauty who deigned this year to honor the Regetta with their presence and their smiles. The proportion of the better to the worser half of creation on board the Club steamer is always such as very severely to task the powers of entertainments of the members who avail themselves of their privilege. Every man is called upon to multiply himself indefinitely, and to make himself as agreeable as a single clergyman in a sewing circle without the single clergyman's advantage of prestige. Fancy, too, the difficulty of keeping the minds of twelve or fourteen luscious young ladies so constantly and so pleasantly occupied that they shall have no time to think of the tricks which the disreputable old ocean is playing with the centre of gravity, and you will understand that the yachty yachting man who sails on a Regetta Day has a much less exciting and exhaustive duty to perform than the yaching man who steams.

This year the ladies, as we have said, doubled the duty upon the shoulders of every gallant adventurer who boarded the Erie.

Alongside of the steamer chartered for the Club lay the John Styles, which had been procured by the Regetta Committee for the accommodation of "outsiders," admitted on application to the Committee. This vessel, too, was crowded, as were two others which accompanied the flotilla, one of them rejoicing in a magnificent new pennant, with the inscription "Union." Add to these steamers and their living freight, a vast number of "inexpressible" boats, yachts, pilot-boats, pleasure-boats, and craft of all sorts, all equally packed with human beings—line the piers of the lower part of the City and of Jersey City with multitudinous and vociferous citizens—throng the bluff on Staten Island, the Bay Ridge on Long Island, and the ground about Fort Hamilton with carriages and pedestrians—and you will form some notion of the vastly-increased interest which was this year manifested in the Regetta by our people. Many of the ships at our wharves were gaily dressed—flags flew from the Long Island hotels—from Fort Hamilton—from the Pavilion and from Mr. ASPINWALL's house on Staten Island—in fact from all manner of places conspicuous and inconspicuous—and a handsome salute was fired from the station of the Cunard steamships at Jersey City. Cowes itself does not present a more animated, though it may sometimes show a more gorgeous and crowded spectacle when the trident-bearing British Queen comes over from Osborne to "rain influence" upon her yachting liege, in the hazy August weather. Such a Bay—such a panorama of City and rural shores—of stationary masts, and hurrying steamers shimmering to and fro—of scattered islands and stately heights abutting in so splendid an expanse of glittering waters, Cowes certainly never can present. Sub Jove serene than the contending yachts were arrayed as carefully as the galleys of the philandering, fillibustering ÆNEAS for that celebrated regetta which VIRGIL has sung so well—and which terminated in so disastrous a stylo. It would be hard to imagine a prettier sight, or one more calculated to kindle a thrill of national exultation in the heart of an American spectator than was afforded by the waters around the flag-boat which was moored just off the yacht Club house at Hoboken. There they lay, sweeping to the big, approaching contest the big, staunch, cunningly devised sea witches that have led the van of our marine in these last few years of wonderful progress and development. The crew scarcely resist the notion that the creatures had a life in them of their own, and were impatient for the encounter. At least this was the opinion of the ladies, who always incline to the figurative and the amiably hyperbolical. The entries were removed, and the growing faith in the schooner rig was ridiculed pretty plainly along the line. This faith has been fostered by the Regetta Committee, Messrs. HASWELL, WAINRIGHT and COLT, and a prize was made up a short while since for a schooner prize, to be adjudged in this day's race.

The yachts started well at 11:30, with a fair breeze from the northwest, not by any means strong enough for the larger vessels, and affording much less promise than one could have wished of a really exciting race. They had the last of the ebb with them, and ran down in good style, laying their course all the way, without tacking at all, and passed to the west of the Staten Island stake boat in the following order:

	Tonnage.	Spread of Canvas.	H.	M.	S.
Luckey	15 2	1,5 5.18	11	45	—
Una	67 5	3,061 21	11	45	90
Minnie	59.14	3,066.18	11	47	50
Irene	57 85	3,078 40	11	49	15
Rowena	40 5	2,3 8.25	11	49	55
Madgie	89 3	2,773.17	11	50	30
Julia	83 4	3,307 55	11	51	53
Haze	87,23	3,936 11	11	54	5
Favorita	135	5,103 55	11	55	37
Silvie	105 4	——	11	56	35
Undine	44.15	——	11	58	20
Widgeon	101.9	3,413 60	12	3	—
Seadrift	63.7	3,143.14	12	—	48

They passed then to the East of the Long Island stake boat, the Lucky leading.

	H.	M.	S.		H.	M.	S.
Lucky	11	57		Haze	12	5
Una	11	58		Favorita	12	7	15
Minnie	12			Silvie	12	7	30
Julia	12	2	30

Having away to the Southwest Spit the wind lulled for a moment, but they took the young flood, and wearing round from the westward came up with a reviving breeze—the wind at least three points free, say abaft the beam, having canted to the South and westward. They turned the Southwest Spit in the following order:

	H.	M.	S.		H.	M.	S.
Richmond	1	1		Margaret	1	7	34
Edgar	1	1	20	Island Fawn	1	8	26
Haze	1	2		Escurt	1	9	28
Minnie	1	2	5	Widgeon	1	11	10
Juha	1	3	15	Rowena	1	13	50
Silvie	1	4	15	America	1	16	25
Irene	1	5	5	Undine	1	18	15
Madgie	1	6	45	Sea Drift	1	20	5
Luckey	1	7	5

On the whole, the race, though by no means of the "crazing" or ecstatic kind, was one of the most interesting ever witnessed in our waters. The third class alone had a fair chance with the wind—and it is worth noting that, in running down to the first stake-boat—which, however, she did not time—the pilot boat A. B Neilson (No. 21) kept wall with the Haze. Two other pilot boats, however, (No. 1 and No. 55,) did not make quite so good a figure.

The prizes, which were made by TIFFANY & Co., are of the substantial dinner service order, and are more likely to keep alive the recollections of the day's sport and triumph, over well-loaded mahoganys, than the gigantic, naturly impracticable and indescribable pitcher carried off by the America from our Transatlantic brethren.

And so ended a very pleasant day, memorable in the lighter annals of our New-York marine, and not to be wholly overlooked by the more serious historians of those that go down to the sea in ships.

Several communications, having relation to the routine business of the institutions, were received and read.

Governor ANDERSON offered a preamble and resolution to the effect that the children of the Primary Department of Randall's Island, having been removed by a resolution of the Board passed April 14, and being thus deprived of a common school education, they not being able to receive the necessary instruction, that therefore, the Warden of Randall's Island be instructed to place them in the Grammar School.

After some debate the matter was referred to the Special Committee on Randall's Island, with power. Adjourned.

The Liquor-Dealers' Programme.

The plan adopted by the New-York Liquor-Dealers' Association for testing the constitutionality of the New License law, in contrast with that which Mayor WOOD has pursued with regard to other acts of the late Legislature, is worthy of remark. The members of the Association have resolved conjointly to defray the expense of defending any suit which may be commenced against any one of them for a violation of the law by selling liquor without a license. Meantime, many of them, to save trouble and risk, will procure licences under the new law and treat it as constitutional, until and unless it is decided unconstitutional by proper judicial authority.

ANOTHER PROBABLE MURDER.—The body of a man drifted into the Fulton Ferry slip about 5 yesterday morning, and was seen by a boatman who was rowing by the slip. It was taken from the water and conveyed to the Fulton dock adjoining. On examination, a gash was discovered on the back of the head, sufficient to cause death, leading to the supposition that the unfortunate man had been murdered. The face was so swollen, and the features so distorted, as to leave but a faint chance of recognition. The body was dressed in a black frock coat, black vest and black pants. An inquest was held during the forenoon, and a verdict to the effect that the deceased was an unknown man, and came to his death from causes unknown to the Jury. The doctor who examined the body was of opinion that it had been in the water about three weeks.

PSI-UPSILON CONVENTION, AMHERST COLLEGE.—The next annual Convention of the Psi Upsilon Fraternity, composed of chapters at Harvard, Brown, Yale, New-York, and Weleyan Universities, and at Bowdoin, Dartmouth, Amherst, Union, Columbia and Hamilton Colleges, will be held at Amherst College Amherst, Mass., on Monday and Tuesday, the 10th and 11th of August, prox. The Oration will be delivered by Rev. JULIUS H. SEELYE, of Schenectady, N. Y., and the Poem by JOHN G. SAXE, of Vermont. An "Alumni Hall" is now erecting on the site of "North College," lately destroyed by fire; and a new "Dormitory Hall" will be built the coming season. The Psi-Upsilon Chapter there has also just completed a new hall, with a magnificent dome.

GEORGIOS MELOS, a Greek, residing in England, has offered a prize of five thousand drachmas for a religious work on the means of improving the morals of youth, and assigned five thousand more drachmas for printing and distributing the work.

GAS-FIXTURES AND GAS-FITTING AT the warerooms, No. 54 Greene-st., near Broome. M. W. EMMONS.

THE STEPMOTHER'S PLOT.

Let the veil of a City Hospital be partly raised, and an interior by no means uncommon exposed to view. A row of humble bedsteads run down each side of a ward, into which the light of day is not admitted in any degree of abundance, and at night the gas lights are carefully shaded and subdued. Each bedstead is screened off from its neighbor by faultlessly white curtains, and the glimpses to be obtained of the bed-clothes show them to be equally stainless. Indeed, the aspect of the whole place affords the impression of the most scrupulous cleanliness, and you might have fancied the room cheerful, had it not been for the ear being pained by sobs of anguish, and startled by the peculiar cries of infants in their earliest baby-hood.

At the extremity of the ward were two beds occupied like most of the rest, but those who reclined upon them gave no signs of life. It seemed impossible to say which was the palest, or which was actually dead, so coldly white were the two faces that gleamed out from the pillows. Both were young, and one was wondrously beautiful even in that deathly state, when forehead, hands and lips were blanched to the whiteness of a corpse. The other was less beautiful, but very young, and so fragile that one wondered why death had waited to find her in that miserable place, for she was dead. The gray shadows settling like a mist upon her face, the locked whiteness of her features, the imperceptible stiffening of her white hand upon the coverlet, all proclaimed the truth with terrible distinctness. But there was yet a breath of life close to her heart, a faint flutter, as if a wounded bird had folded its wings forever, and then all was quiet, as if sleep were there, or death had come twice.

The gray shadows of a Winter's morning crept through the curtains of a neighboring window, and hung coldly around that charity couch; and amid the muttering of patients restless with fever, or clamorous for nourishment the wail of sick infants and the outcries of bed sby ones, this poor young creature died and grew cold, unwatched and unwept. And the other—she who lay so like an exquisite statue on the neighboring couch—would no life ever return to her? The e was a faint motion of the bedclothes, as if life still lingered there, but did it exist in that fair young mother, or in the child, for she, too, was a mother, and, even in the chill of insensibility, she held clasped to her bosom, the little being into which her own essence had to have merged.

Just as the day dawned a nurse came into the ward, not with her usual dauntless step but stealthily, and casting sidelong glances from bed to bed, like a partner fearing to arouse his prey. Then she stole softly between the two beds, drew the curtains of both, and bending down her face till her soiled curl papers almost touched the cold head on the coverlet, and cautiously turned down the bed clothes.

The woman scarcely breathed, but stood upright again casting furtive glances around her. All was quiet save the murmurs of a child at the further end of the room, who was struggling to keep its place in the arms of a drowsy mother.

The nurse was relieved by this sound. It gave her time to breathe. The rustle of her own dress seemed less startling. She turned from the bed, stooped over it still more cautiously, and laid her hand down upon the heart of the senseless woman.

She half rose, gave a sharp glance over her shoulder, and taking each of the fair hands, clasped so fondly around their treasure, she forced them gently apart, and lifted the child from its mother's bosom.

A shudder passed through the frame of that young mother, as if the last gleam of life had been torn from her heart. Her eyebells quivered, and her lips were, for an instant, faintly convulsed. The nurse turned suddenly, and looked, while this life struggle was going on. Which, out unclosing her eyes, the poor creature reached forth her arms, and clasped them fondly again, with a sigh of ineffable delight, and sank down motionless, and without a perceptible breath.

But it was not for joy. As the child, a moment before, had seemed to drain the vitality from her heart with its own warmth, so now some outward chill drove back the blood to its centre. With a moan and a struggle she came to life, opened her great blue eyes, and fixed them wildly on the nurse.

"I am cold—oh! so cold," she said, shivering, and covering herself up in the bed; "what have you done to me?"

"Done to you?" said the nurse, faintly—"done to you? Nothing, but try me best to bring you to. Why, it's almost dead you have been, I don't know how long."

The living child did not hear this. A momentary impulse of strength seized upon her. She flung back the bed clothes, and, bending her face downward, fixed those wild eyes upon the child. One glance, and she lifted them, with a sharp, questioning look, to the woman, and, passing her head over the little face, whispered hoarsely, "What is this?"

The nurse put her hands down, and touched the infant. The poor mother felt those coarse hands shaking against her own, and shrunk away, with a faint cry; it seemed as if they had inflicted some wound upon her.

It was some moments before the woman spoke. When she did, it was with a sort of unnatural quickness, accompanied with hurried glances round the room.

"Where's the doctor? It might have been expected. Fainting fits all night—overlaid and smothered it—half on your face when I come in—arms grasped around it like a vice. No wonder it's cold."

"Cold. Is that all—only cold?" cried the mother, trembling all over—"only cold?"

"Cold as a stone, and dead as a door nail, that's what it is!" answered the nurse sharply, for that moment the physician of the ward came in sight, and the nurse knew well what effect her brutal speech would have on the young creature.

With a cry that from her feebleness scarcely rose above a wail, she fell back perfectly senseless.

"What is the matter here?" inquired the doctor, coming forward. "Oh, I expected this!" he added, glancing at the dead; "scarcely a breath of life in her from the first. The baby, too, I suppose?"

"No!" answered the nurse, quickly, "that poor creature has lost her baby. Her baby is just alive yet. I wish they wouldn't send such delicate creatures here. It's enough to destroy one's character to have them die off so."

"But she is not dead," replied the doctor, passing between two beds, and taking the little hand that had fallen away from the child—"almost as bad though; a herd chill—we shall have fever next. Take the child away; no wonder she feels cold. How long has it been dead?"

"It was cold when I came in."

"Well, well, have it removed. She will never come to with that chilling her to the heart."

"And the other baby?" questioned the nurse, anxiously.

"Give it to one of these women to nurse, till something can be done, and order two coffins. The bodies mustn't lie here, or we shall have a panic among the patients. Mind what I say—order two coffins. I never allow a child to be placed in the same coffin with the body of a woman who was not its mother."

The nurse made an effort to take the child once more from its mother's arms; but, for the first time, she seemed nervous and reluctant to touch the dead, till the doctor startled her, saying impatiently:

"There, be quick, or he woman will die! That will do—now let me see if anything can put life into her? Poor thing, poor thing! It's a pity the baby is dead—but then what chance has an orphan in this world?—better dead, if she could only be brought to think so!"

While he was talking, the nurse bent suddenly to the floor and snatched up a small, silken bag, which, suspended by a braided chain, had been torn from the invalid's neck when the babe was first removed from her arms. The doctor turned his eyes that way.

"I am always dropping this pin-cushion from my side!" she said, hurriedly, gathering up the chain in her hand; "there is no keeping anything in its place."

"Don't stop for such nonsense," cried the physician, impatiently, "or the woman will die under our hands!"

The nurse thrust the silken chain and its appendage into her bosom, and began in earnest to render assistance. The poor young creature was aroused at length from the torpor that had seized upon her; but she awoke to a hot flush of fever, raving with pathetic wildness of a thousand things which no one could comprehend—of a husband that had left her in the depths of trouble, of the child that she fancied herself sleeping, and of the nurse who seemed forever and ever over her bed, as she persisted in thinking, like a great black statue, that had chilled her to death beneath its shadow. Then she raved and muttered, while the fever had kindled wilder and hotter within her veins, and her eyes grew star-like in the glittering brightness.

Hour after hour she kept up these mental wanderings, and then sank down.

Late in the evening, after the scene we have just described the hospital nurse, who had been an evil actor in it, stood with a candle in her hand in a closet or storeroom where the patients' garments were kept. From one of the shelves she took a bundle tied up in a coarse woollen shawl, and drew forth a long merino cloak. She folded the cloak cautiously around her, then, selecting a bonnet from a score or two that filled a side cupboard, she tied a black veil closely over it and extinguished her light.

The woman had evidently intended to disguise herself, and she stole like a thief down the dark passages of the building, avoiding the offices, and keeping close to the shadow whenever she came within the range of a light, like one who feared to be seen.

At last she came out in front of the hospital. Here she paused, and, heaving a deep breath, walked more leisurely forward, drawing her veil closer, and folding the cloak over her garments more resolutely as she advanced.

An omnibus stood at a neighboring corner; she entered it, and, seating herself, subsided, to all appearance, into a state of passive indifference.

The hospital nurse got out in Regent-street, and disappeared, after walking half-way down one of the cross streets. Again she was threading her way up through the darkness of a large building, divided into offices and rooms of various sizes, mostly untenanted at that hour of the night. The passages were profoundly dark, the staircase narrow, and winding in and out, with no reward to architectural rules, in some places considerably out of repair, while in others black coal and nut shells crunched under foot, and gave evidence of a general state of untidiness perceptible even in the dark.

At last the woman reached a door, at which she paused. A gleam of light came through a crevice over the threshold, and struggled around an iron key half turned in the lock, and through it came a faint noise as of some person moving within.

Jane Kelly knocked at this door rather timidly, as if she were a little uncertain whether it was the place she sought.

There was no answer. But the noise of a moving chair, and a shuffle of feet as if approaching the door, kept Jane Kelly stationary. After some delay, the door was partially opened, and a face looked through.

"Who are you? What do you want here with a veil on that nobody can see through? Go away!" said a sharp, angry voice.

"You told me to come!" said the woman, lifting her veil, and bending forward that her features might be seen.

"Not at this time of night," cried the voice, which now exhibited a slightly foreign acc

TRAVELS AND DISCOVERIES IN NORTH AND CENTRAL AFRICA.

Being a Journal of an Expedition undertaken under the auspices of H. B. M.'s Government, in the years 1849 to 1855. By HENRY BARTH, Ph D.

In 3 large vols., 8vo.

Extract from Preface

The principal merit which I claim for myself in this respect is that of having noted the whole configuration of the country; and my chief object has been to represent the tribes and nations with whom I came in contact in their historical and ethnographical relation to the rest of mankind, as well as their physical relation to that tract of country in which they live. If in this respect I have succeeded in placing before the eyes of the public a new and animated picture, and connected these apparently savage and degraded tribes more intimately with the history of races placed on a higher level of civilization, I shall be amply recompensed for the toils and dangers I have gone through.

OFFICE OF THE ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY.—NEW-YORK, April 3, 1857.—Notice is hereby given, that the Directors of the ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY have resolved to increase the Capital Stock of the Company, from One Hundred and Seventy Thousand Shares, to Two Hundred and Fifty-five Thousand Shares, which new shares will be allotted to the holders of the present stock, at the closing of the books on the 20th June next, and to such persons as may become stockholders by the conversion of Optional Rights, which expire on the 1st day of January, 1858, in the proportion of one share of new stock, to two shares of the old stock.

The Transfer Books will be closed on the 20th day of June next, and reopen on the 1st day of July next.

The holders of the present Stock are required to receive one-third the number of shares to which they may be entitled on the 1st day of July, 1857, and to pay an installment of $30 per share thereon. Optional Rights for the remaining two-thirds will be issued—one-half convertible into the Stock of the Company, on or before the last day of February, 1858, and the remainder on or before the 1st day of July, 1858; such installments as may then have been called in, on the present Stock to be paid to the Company at the time of conversion.

Those persons who shall become stockholders by the conversion of the present Optional Rights into Stock, on or before the second day of January, 1858, and after the first day of July next, will be required to receive, and pay for one-third of new stock to which they may be entitled, at the time of such conversion. Optional Rights for the remaining two-thirds of the new Stock to which they may be entitled, will be issued to them, of the same tenor as those issued to parties who shall appear as stockholders, at the closing of the books on the 20th June next.

Parties converting Optional Rights will be required to pay to the Company all accrued interest on the installments from the time that interest shall have been paid on the installments to the holders of the present shares.

If stock which is not applied for before the 10th day of July, next, and the installment paid thereon, will be forfeited to the Company, together with all rights which attach thereto.

The Directors have resolved to extend the time for the conversion of the existing Optional Rights, which, by their terms, expires on the 1st of January, 1858, so as to include the 2d day of January, 1858.

Information, pending in the details of this issue, can be obtained by inquiring at the office of the Company.

Interest will be paid, as usual, upon the Stock of the Company, on the 1st of July next.

By order of the Board of Directors,
J. N. PERKINS, Treasurer.

EIGHT PER CENT. LAND GRANT FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.—The Chicago, St. Paul and Fon du Lac Railroad Company propose to sell to Stockholders their Eight per Cent. 25 year Construction (Land Grant) Mortgage Bonds, of $1,000 each, of date May 1, 1857, and secured upon their entire Road and line of Road from Chicago to Lake Superior, and upon a million of acres of the grants of Public Lands from Congress, as made to this Company by the States of Wisconsin and Michigan.

Accompanying each Bond will be a Scrip Certificate, entitling the purchaser or his assigns, at his or their option, to ten shares, of $100 each, of Privilege Land Grant Stock, on electing, at any time within two years from June 1, 1857, to subscribe and pay ten per cent. of the par value thereof, the same never to be subject to any further assessment, but to be credited with proceeds of sales of lands until full paid, to share dividends and be entitled to vote pro rata, as provided by said Company, and set forth in said Stock Privilege Certificate, and in their Circular to Stockholders of May 25, 1857.

The subscription price for said Bonds to be 80 per cent, their par value and accrued interest, payable 10 per cent. in hand, 10 per cent. on 1st July next, and 20 per cent. on each of the first days of August, September and October next, or as much sooner as parties may elect, at the office of the Company in New-York.

The subscription list will be opened at the office of the Company, No. 12 Wall-st., on MONDAY, the 8th inst., and will remain open till the 20th June inst.—Dated New-York, June 1, 1857.

FINANCIAL.

PITTSBURGH, FORT WAYNE AND CHI- CAGO RAILROAD COMPANY.
$10,000,000.
MORTGAGE BONDS CONVERTIBLE.
$3,500,000 FOR CONSTRUCTION. $6,500,000 FOR REDEMPTION OF FUNDED DEBT.

Date, January 1, 1857. Principal payable January 1, 1887.

Interest at seven per cent., payable July 1 and January 1.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN NEW-YORK.

To provide means for the immediate completion and full equipment of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad of 468 miles, as well as to make timely provision for the redemption of the Funded Debt of the Ohio and Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, and Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Companies respectively, maturing at different periods between Sept. 1, 1858, and July 1, 1875, the PITTSBURGH, FORT WAYNE AND CHICAGO RAILROAD COMPANY, into which those three Companies were legally merged by consolidation August 1, 1856, has authorized the issue of TEN THOUSAND BONDS, of which $3,500 of $1,000 each are known as Construction Bonds, and 6,500 of $1,000 each are known as Redemption Bonds, and are of the tenor above stated.

These Bonds are secured by a MORTGAGE IN TRUST to JOHN FERGUSON and THOMAS E. WALKER of New-York, covering the Company's Road of 468 miles, from Pittsburgh to Chicago, with all its Depôt grounds, appurtenances and franchises, embracing the Railroad Bridge over the Allegheny River at Pittsburgh, and Depôt grounds of great value in Pittsburgh, Allegheny, Chicago, Fort Wayne and at other points.

The Mortgage provides for a Sinking Fund.

The Redemption Bonds will remain under the control of the Trustees, and be issued only from time to time, as they can be exchanged for, or are required to be sold to redeem the outstanding Bonds of the three Companies consolidated, and the privilege of such exchange is now extended to holders of those Bonds, and their attention is especially invited to the advantages that will result alike to the Consolidated Company and themselves by such exchange.

The Construction Bonds are offered for sale to provide means to finish the Road between Plymouth and Chicago, 82 miles, and to ballast it and equip and furnish it with a full stock of Rolling Machinery, Engine-Houses, Shops, Station-Houses, &c., the estimates for all of which are nearly $3,000,000.

The Capital Stock of the Company is fixed at.....$16,000,000
The present cost of the Road is about.....13,000,000
The paid Capital is nearly.....8,000,000
The Funded debt secured on the Road is.....6,638,000

The earnings of the Road, mainly from local traffic, since the consolidation, from the 1st of August, 1856, to the 1st of May, 1857, eight months, have been over $1,320,000. The net earnings for that time are at a rate of over 7 per cent. on the entire cost of the Road. They are the earnings of an unfinished and but partially ballasted and equipped road.

The earnings for 1857 are estimated at $3,000,000.

The Road is operated for 353 miles, from Pittsburg to Plymouth, Indiana, where its business passes to and from Chicago over another more circuitous route of different gauge.

The 82 miles between Plymouth and Chicago are in progress of construction, and far advanced toward completion. Four thousand tons of American iron are purchased, 40 miles of track can be laid this season, and the whole work completed to Chicago within twelve months; after which the earnings will increase, as is believed, with the development of the resources of the road, to a permanent income of $4,000,000 per annum.

The guaranties of this result are believed to exist in these facts:

1. The road has immense resources for local traffic in passengers and freights. It connects by the shortest line Pittsburg and Chicago, and passes through 24 counties and 16 county towns, (including the terminal,) the valuation of whose property for taxable purposes in 1856 exceeded $96,000,000—the counties embracing some of those the best developed and most productive in Ohio and Indiana, and the towns being among the most important centres of trade between Pittsburg and Chicago.

2. The road has over 15 lateral railway connections, bringing it in communication with the whole Western Railroad system—these connections conferring marked advantages to the road as a route over various and large portions of its line from Chicago to Toledo, Cleveland and Buffalo, and from Pittsburg to Indianapolis, St. Louis, Cincinnati, &c. A reference to a map will more fully illustrate this point.

3. The Road is a single line, without branches, and the longest CONTINUOUS Railroad in the United States, and for its whole length of 468 miles, part of a great central route, in connection with the Pennsylvania Railroad, of 818 miles from Philadelphia to Chicago, and of 906 miles from New-York to Chicago, viâ Philadelphia, and on completion of the Allentown Road in Pennsylvania, of 695 miles only from New-York to Chicago, thus saving from 52 to 72 miles in distance viâ Philadelphia, and from 73 to 93 miles viâ Allentown, as compared with the great routes through New-York—making also the shortest route, of 798 miles viâ Harrisburg, between Baltimore and Chicago. In alignment and grades the entire line from Chicago to Philadelphia has marked advantages, no grades existing between Chicago and Philadelphia, going East, over 52 feet per mile. Between Pittsburg and Chicago no grades occur exceeding 47 feet per mile, and for 335 miles there are no grades over 26 4-10 feet per mile, and for more than that distance the route is practically a straight line. The Road, therefore, must become one of the most important, if not the most important, PERMANENT avenues of American commerce, and its traffic will be limited only by its capacity.

4. The Road will be completed at a low cost, as compared with other leading lines, and has corresponding advantages in grade, alignment, &c., for safe, speedy and economical operation, and easy and cheap maintenance.

A full Exhibit of the history, condition and prospects of this Road, with copies of the Bonds, Mortgages, Articles of Consolidation, &c., has been prepared and will be furnished for the information of parties desiring to invest in the Bonds.

The Company solicits a full investigation of the merits of this loan. It is offered as one in every respect worthy the attention of capitalists, and applications are now invited for the Construction Bonds, $150,000 of which have already been sold.

A subscription for $1,600,000 of the Construction Bonds, conditional on that amount being taken, with the option to subscribers of taking $2,000,000 at the same rate, is open at the office of the Company, No. 37 William-st., (2d floor,) where all needful information will be furnished.

METROPOLITAN BANK, New-York, May 18, 1857.

AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DI- rectors of the METROPOLITAN BANK, held on the 8th inst., it was resolved to increase the Capital Stock, $1,000,000; say, from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000.

Subscription books will be opened at the Banking House, No. 108 Broadway, as the 1st day of July next, and remain open until the 10th of said month. Those holding stock at the close of business on the 25th of June next, will be entitled to subscribe at par, for said million of additional capital, and will receive one share of new stock for every three shares of old. They will also have the right to assign the privilege of subscribing, for which purpose a form will be furnished.

Shareholders will have the right to pay in full on the 1st day of July next; to such as do, there will be no charge of interest. Those who do not pay at that time, are required to pay 50 per cent. on or before the 15th of said July, and the remaining 50 per cent. on or before the 15th day of October next.

Interest at 7 per cent. per annum from the 1st day of July, will be added to all instalments paid after that day, in order to make all the payments equal to a full payment on the said 1st day of July.

For partial payments, scrip receipts will be issued; but whenever a shareholder shall pay the full amount due on his subscription, he shall be entitled, at once, to the usual certificate of full paid stock. All shareholders will have the benefit of the dividend which may be paid in January, 1858.

Shareholders at a distance, wishing to take the stock they will be entitled to, may make their subscriptions to the new stock by sending to this Bank, duly signed and witnessed, a power of attorney.

It is very desirable that such shareholders as intend to avail themselves of the opportunity to subscribe, or who wish to assign their rights, do so to some other party, shall give notice of their intentions as early as the 1st of July, if practicable, but certainly by the 10th.

It will be necessary for parties to whom such rights shall be assigned, to appear at the Bank, in person, or by attorney, to sign the articles of the Association.

JOY TO THE AFFLICTED!

It cures diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, Dropsy, Obstructions, Female Complaints, Chronic Gonorrhœa, Strictures, Gleets, and all diseases arising from excesses and imprudencies in life, NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED SUFFERERS, and removes all improper discharges from the Bladder, Kidneys, or Sexual Organs, whether existing in male or female, from whatever cause they may have originated, and gives health and vigor to the frame, and bloom to the pallid cheek. Debility, brought on by abuse, a most terrible disease, which has brought many of the human family to untimely graves, thus blasting the brilliant hopes of parents, and blighting in the bud the glorious ambition of many a noble youth, can be cured by the use of THIS INFALLIBLE REMEDY, and as a medicine which must benefit everybody, from the simply delicate to the confined and despairing invalid, no equal is to be found. If you have contracted the terrible disease, which when once seated in the system, undermines the constitution, sapping the very vital fluids of life, procure this remedy at once.

The Leprous distilment, whose effect
Holds such an enmity with blood of man,
That swift as quicksilver it courses through
The natural gates and alleys of the body,
Curding, like eager droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood.

BEWARE OF QUACK NOSTRUMS AND QUACK DOCTORS.

HELMBOLD'S Highly Concentrated Compound FLUID EXTRACT OF BUCHU is prepared directly according to the rules of Pharmacy and Chemistry, with the greatest accuracy and chemical knowledge and care devoted to its combination. Its popularity has exteaded in all directions, and whether used in town, country, hospital, or private practice, has invariably given the most decided and unequivocal satisfaction, and produced the most salutary and beneficial effects. It has been and is used in all the principal cities in the United States and British Provinces, in both public and private practice, with great success. Henceforth, let it be understood, for the proofs are too overwhelming to be contradicted, that HELMBOLD'S Highly Concentrated Compound Fluid Extract Buchu is the most valuable remedy ever offered to the afflicted.

The mass of voluntary testimony in possession of the proprietor is immense, embracing names well known to erieace and fame, celebrated Physicians and distinguished Clergymen.

See Professor DEWEES' valuable work on the Practice of Physic, and most of the late standard works of medicine.

It is a medicine which is perfectly pleasant in its taste and odor, but immediate in its action, and it is taken by persons of either sex, without hindrance from business or medical advice, as explicit directions for use, and an ample number of reliable and responsible certificates, to convince the most skeptical, will accompany each bottle.

NEW AND IMPORTANT DISCOVERY IN THE SCIENCE OF

THE POLICE.

Dismissal of Insubordinate Candidates

A New Station-House for Capt. Squires, of the Eleventh Ward.

THE TEST PUT IN THE THIRTEENTH WARD.

Secret Meeting of the Old Board.

The great turn-out of nearly the entire Fifth Ward Police in favor of the new law, was yesterday the great topic of conversation in police circles about the City Hall and in White street. Those in favor of the new order of things, were made more sanguine, and the wavering more confident, especially as it was pretty well understood that the Police of the other Wards would follow the example set in the Fifth, as soon as the proper accommodations were arraigned for their reception.

Everything passed off quietly in the Fifth Ward on Wednesday night; and yesterday, one of the detailed force of that Ward—Deckmaster Money pennyreported himself to Sergeant Hutchings, at the station house in Duane-street, as did also Mr. Mundy, of the two doorkeepers.

The Mayor, on being informed of the state of affairs in the Fifth-Ward, gave notice to the detailed men from that district to return and report themselves for duty to Captain Horrigan. Nearly all of them complied. Last night five men from the Twentieth and five from the Twenty-First Ward were detailed for patrol duty in the Fifth-Ward. The force of the new Commissioners were also sent out on street duty so that the Fifth-Ward had never so large a patrol force.

Yesterday morning also notices were served upon nearly the entire detailed force at the Chief's Office and elsewhere to report themselves forthwith—some at the office in White street and some to their Captain's for patrol duty. Among the latter was Joseph Keefe, one of the Chief's Aids.

The Metropolitan Police Commissioners met yesterday morning. Mr. Draper, the President, was absent. The seven Captains tried the previous day for insubordination were all dismissed. Mr. Bowen voted against dismissal in every case, except in that of Capt. Tooney, who declared in a letter to the General Superintendent that he could not be induced to serve under the new Commissioners, nor do anything else that would cast a stain upon his honor or injure his standing in the Democratic Party.

No other business was done by the Commissioners.

The old Commissioners met yesterday afternoon with locked doors. The Clerks were all busy at work at their shirt sleeves, with the usual amount of routine notes and orders, the contents of which were hid from the reporters. It was understood, however, that the Mayor will to-day remove a large number of every man in the Department known to favor by word or act the new Commission, and that all the vacancies will be instantly filled by new men.

The great event of yesterday was the utmost wonder among those of the Third ward. Capt. Speir, lately dismissed by Mayor Wood, being restored the command of his old apartment in Stanton-st. near Avenue C, for police purposes, called that evening before roll-call, at the old station on Pearl Market. He informed Mr. Croft, Mayor Wood's new Captain, that he had come to speak to the men, and to read them an order.

A dialogue then ensued between the captains about as follows:

SQUIRES—Put, Sir, I have orders to read to the men and I must and shall do it.

CROFT—I tell you, Sir, you shall not. If you have any orders from the Commissioners leave them here, and either myself or the Lieutenant will read them to the men. You have no right here, Sir,—no right to read orders to my men, and I repeat you shall not.

SQUIRES—But I will read the order, Sir, and speak to them to.

CROFT—Attempt it, Sir. If you do I shall order you out, and if you refuse to go I will put you out, Sir. You must not come here to harangue and incite my men.

SQUIRES—I have no such intention, Sir, I merely wish to—

CROFT—It matters not to me, Sir, what you wish, I am Captain here, and shall be, too. Now, do not compel me to resort to force to eject you.

SQUIRES—Beware, Sir, how you lay your hands on me!

CROFT—I will take the responsibility and abide the consequences. I want no further discussion. If you attempt to address my men or read any orders I shall chuck you down stairs!

SQUIRES—Oh, you cannot alarm me; I am not afraid of your threats. But, (hesitatingly,) I want no difficulty of such a nature with you. I shall speak to the men below.

Mr. Squires then retired. In a moment thereafter the roll was called, and the platoon came forward. After the names of the men had been called, Capt. Croft informed them of the visit of "a Captain" Squires, and said that it was as well to learn how many were in favor of the Albany Commissioners. All those in the platoon that were so inclined would step forward, and surrender their stars and caps, which were municipal property, and their buttons also, as speedily as possible.

Seven men, thereupon, stepped from the ranks, and, after delivering up their stars and caps, left for the new Station house in company with Captain Squires, who had stood, during the time, at the door below stairs. The ranks of the seceders were increased, soon after, by one man from the first platoon, who was out on duty, and who had not been called upon to declare themselves.

Sergeant Leggett, Sergeant Smith. Privates—Abbott, Lake, Cram, Willis, Wells, Griffin and Lyons.

Lieutenant Cameron, who was dismissed by Mayor Wood about the same time with Captain Squires, was also present. So that, at present, the force of Metropolitan Police in the Ward consists of eleven men, including the officers. This force will be increased, to-day, by others from the old station. The men were at once put on duty—four were sent on a patrol and four detained in the house as a reserve to relieve at 12 o'clock.

Messrs. Leggett and Smith were Sergeants when Capt. Squires was deposed by the Mayor, but were reduced to the ranks, because they had expressed sympathy with the old Captain. Mr. Abbott, whose name is men tioned above, was made a Sergeant by Capt. Croft, but of course Capt. Squires did not recognize the legality of such an appointment. Capt. McKinney, of the Third-ninth Ward, having been dismissed yesterday, by the new Commissioners, it was determined to take a test vote of the men, at the hour of evening roll-call. Accordingly, at that hour the two platoons were marched in, and the roll called. There were one or two absentees. All those under officers were present. Lieut. O'Keefe then addressed the men as follows;

"You have been called together, gentlemen, in consequence of the complicate state of affairs in our Police organization at present. As act has lately been passed by the Legislature of this State which has created a new set of Police Commissioners, and the Constitutionality of the said law even the Judges have disagreed upon. It is now, therefore, a matter of consequence that we should now see who among us will sustain the new Commissioners or the old ones. I this day received a notice from Mr. Tallmadge, ordering me not to report myself at the office of the so-called Police Commissioners in White street; this is the first official notice I have taken of this matter and it will be the last. I am anxious to treat all parties with proper respect, but if by recognizing the new Board, I am placed in such a position as to turn my back upon the old, I must certainly decline. The roll will be now again called, and those who are in favor of the old Commissioners will please answer "New-York," those who are for the others will answer "Albany."

Officer THORN requested to see the order, but Mr. O'KEEFE refused, stating it was simply an order appointing him a Sergeant. Captain MCKENNY said that he had this day been dismissed from his situation by a Board which he had never seen, and he therefore wished to see how far his authority would be recognized.

Second Lieutenant SEMMES also addressed them one as follows:

GENTLEMEN: The state of things in our Station house is becoming very disagreeable. We are all aware that we have two parties in here, one party willing to stick as heretofore to the only one existing authority of our Police Department, that is the Mayor, Fernando Wood, the Commissioners with whom he is associated, and to our Chief of Police George W. Matsell, Esq; and the other party, who recognizes the "so-calls" new Commissioners from Albany.

Officer THORN—(interrupting)—You'd better go and study law, I think.

Mr. LUBACH—Silence! I am still your officer.

Officer THORN—You are, are you.

Mr. LUBACH—(continuing)—The Superintendent of this so called new Commissioners, went up to the house of a citizen our Captain this afternoon from the position he holds now as Captain of this District, before he has faithfully discharged his duty in obeying the orders of his superiors, by whom he was appointed.

It will be a mutual relief to us all, to end this unpleasant condition we are placed in, and I shall, therefore, at roll-call, with the full consent of our Captain, and my brother officer, Lieut. O'Keefe, take a test vote, so as to ascertain now we actually stand. Every man who recognizes the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge, and the Chief of Police, as the only existing heads of our Police Department, and Captain McKinney as our Captain, will please answer ONE, and every man who does not recognize the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge as the only existing authority, and Captain McKinney as our Captain, will please answer NEW.

If there should be any amongst you who would not be willing to answer at all, and not open and freely show his color, he will be marked down as doubtful, so that everybody knows the double faced man.

Officer THORN—Where do you get your orders from?

Mr. Lubach did not deign an answer, and then called the roll, with the following result:

New Commissioners—Sergeant Connell. Officers Acker, Vantassell, Parrish, Bedell, Thorne and Osborne.

Officer THORN then said he should no longer recognize Capt. W. King, whereupon the Captain suspended him.

Mr. O'KEEFE asked if Mr. Thorn recognized him, to which he answered in the affirmative, when Mr O'Keefe demanded his star, which he refused to give up; but subsequently Serg. Cowell and Officer Vantassel gave theirs up.

The detailed officers of the Ward volunteered for patrol duty, but were not required.

When Serg. O'Connor's name was called, he answered "Old," and said he wanted the Marines and United States Troops out to protect the City.

Others said they should obey the law of the State and no other, consequently they declared for the Metropolitan Board.

The men shortly after went on patrol duty, and although a large crowd was around there was no excitement, and all passed off peaceably.

FEGLEY.—SAILOR RUDOLPH, aged 19 years, was arrested Wednesday by Officer TITUS, of the Reserve Corps, and brought before Justice OSBORNE for forgery. The prisoner, it was shown, was in the employ, as clerk, of MESSRS. SCHMIDT & METZLER, manufacturers of ladies' dress goods in John-street, and that he had the firm's name to certain trade checks, which were afterwards signed by the firm. He was then intrusted with the presentation of the checks, many of which he altered, and obtained sums of money ranging from fifty cents to ten dollars. He always returned to his employers the amount for which the checks had been originally drawn, and kept the surplus for his own use. The forgeries were discovered on Saturday last, when the checks were returned by the Bank of the Manhattan Company. Rudolph is a native of Germany, and was born in Prussia, and has a family in that section. Justice OSBORNE committed him for trial, in default of $2,000 bail.

A VERY SERIOUS QUESTION.

Can old and long standing and necessary sufferers be cured? Must those who are weak, dependent on their youth, forever pay the penalty of their folly, and transmit it from generation to generation? Is there no cure, complete and perfect remedy? Answer—There is but one that may be implicitly depended upon. There are others that may or may not relieve. Some deceivers are resorted to in the belief that the change they will produce may in time eradicate the malady. But, the famous, certain, unmistakable, effective eradication of the elements of, of the disease itself the only thing is ANDREW JACKSON LOUDON'S PIKE LOUDON WATER. It never fails. It makes you as good as ever. It restores you to perfect health and removes every taint which never from the system. It is sold at $1 a bottle, by ANDREW J. POSTER, No. 3 Second avenue and No. 862 Broadway; C. H. RIKER, No. 192 Broadway; BARNES & PARK, Nos 365 Broadway; Mrs. HAINS, Brooklyn; and all druggists.

LONG ISLAND.

Burning of a Bonded Warehouse—Loss $150,000.

At one o'clock yesterday afternoon a fire broke out in building No. 5 of Baxter's Stores, on Furman-street, at the foot of Clark street—a bonded warehouse—and the building, with most of its contents, was destroyed.

There was in the building at the time property valued, as we learn from MR. BAXTER, at $150,000, belonging to MOSES TAYLOR, LEACRAFT & Co., and others, New York merchants, the whole of which is covered by insurance.

The principal loss is 1,100 hogsheads of sugar and molasses, which was insured in the following offices: Fulton, $5,000; Security, $10,000; Clinton, $10,000; Manhattan, $15,000; Indemnity, $10,000, and a large amount in the London and Liverpool, and other New-York offices, belonging to the "Association," the names of which were scrupulously concealed.

The insurance on the Security we understand was effected less than two hours before the fire broke out.

The building covered several lots, and was one story high, built of brick, and belonged to the estate of H. J. SANFORD, and was valued at $12,000. Insured for $6 000.

The origin of the fire is not known, but is supposed to have been accidental. The fire was first discovered in a bale of hay; and Mr. VANDEVEER, one of the Assistant Engineers of the Fire Department, says that he could have prevented the destruction of the building and contents, if a person in charge had not stepped him from removing the hay on fire, who supposed that it could be put out with a few buckets of water.

The firemen turned out promptly and aided materially in saving adjoining property, as did, also, a force of men from Corse Ferry Company, which plugged a large stream right in the river from the river.

OUR RELATIONS WITH CHINA.

Important Correspondence between American Merchants at Hong-Kong and Commodore Armstrong.

[Per Overland Mail—Correspondence Received at the General Appraisers' Office in New York.]

HONG KONG, Monday, March 30, 1857.

DEAR SIR: For the information of our constituents in the United States, we herewith inclose copies of a correspondence between their Minister to China, the Commodore on this station, and three American houses established in this colony; and we believe it is unnecessary to add anything to the remarks contained therein to secure some expression of opinion from those engaged in the China trade at home upon the subject of American relations with this country.

We are, dear sir, your obedient servants,

RUSSELL & CO., of Canton.

HONG KONG, Monday, March 23, 1857.

SIR: We beg leave to inclose herewith, for the information of your Excellency, copies No. 1 to 4 of correspondence between Commodore JAMES ARMSTRONG, commanding the United States Naval forces in these waters, and ourselves, citizens of the United States, lately resident in Canton.

We are of the opinion that it would be useless to continue the correspondence, as it appears evident that the Commodore has determined, for reasons that he will doubtless communicate to his Government, to leave American interests in this neighborhood to the care of the British; but we would call your attention to the entire omission in his last communication of the 21st inst., of any reference to the principal source of danger against which we would guard ourselves, viz: The fleets of armed Chinese vessels, cruising between this and Macao.

We consider it our duty to place this correspondence before you, that it may be recorded in the form of a protest on our part, and on the part of our constituents in America, against the course of policy that our Commodore finds it his duty to pursue; but we desire to avoid any expression of opinion upon the probable nature of his instructions from Washington, and content ourselves with stating certain points with reference to the position of American interests in China, that we believe should receive the early attention of our Government.

During a period of thirteen years past, we have repeatedly had the honor of addressing the resident ministers of the United States in China upon the subject to which we now propose to direct your attention; but for reasons best known to your excellency, none of our communications have been acknowledged by the Government at Washington, while we have been verbally assured in repeated instances by the Minister Plenipotentiary, that their own dispatches on China affairs excited so little interest at our capitol that months have frequently elapsed without a return communication from the Secretary of State.

The British and French Governments have differed from ours in their estimation of the importance of relations with China; and we are in hopes that the present position of affairs here will have convinced our authorities at Washington that American interests in the East cannot receive too early attention.

We would, in the first instance, point out the fact, that while the Americans have a commerce with this country nearly equal to that of the British, and far beyond that of any other nation, the citizens of the United States have almost invariably been indebted to the forces of Great Britain for the protection of themselves and their property, and to the same forces for the suppression of piracy on this coast on many occasions; and it is worthy of note, that while the British have during the past twelve years published surveys of the whole coast of China, including bays and harbors from Hong Kong to Shanghai, we are not aware of a single contribution of the same character from the American navy on this coast, although Commodore PERRY surveyed the new ports of Japan and Formosa.

The only exceptions to the general system of dependence upon British protection that we can recall are an expedition against pirates at Ko-lun, by the United States steamer Powhattan, and the late operations at the Barrier Forts, near Canton, both most gallantly conducted, but attended with great loss of life, in consequence of the want of vessels adapted to the service undertaken, and it would appear that this latter fact has induced the Commodore to assume his present attitude.

We would beg your Excellency to lay before our Government the necessity for an early revision of the present Consular jurisdiction at the five ports, and we believe you will agree with us in the opinion that the Chinese have a strong ground of complaint against us, in consequence of long periods having frequently elapsed, during which no legal jurisdiction under the treaty agreement has been maintained at the various ports. This has been owing to the absence of the Consuls from their posts, without first communicating with their Government, and obtaining judicial powers for those acting at the respective stations after their departure.

We forbear entering at length on the merits of various claims outstanding on the part of Americans against the Chinese people and authorities, the necessity for enforcing those claims being already sufficiently established; but we are prepared to allow that our own Government has not altogether maintained the obligations it assumed under the treaty of Wanghai; and we trust that full weight will be given to all these considerations, should our authorities at Washington take part in the coming negotiations or operations that the British and French Governments are understood to be on the point of undertaking jointly in this country.

We avail ourselves of this opportunity to assure your Excellency that we are, respectfully, your most obedient servants,

AUGUSTINE HEARD & CO., of Canton.
KING & CO., of Canton.
RUSSELL & CO., of Canton.

To His Excellency. Dr. PETER PARKER, Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to China, Macao.

No. 1.

HONG KONG, Wednesday, March 18, 1857.

SIR: The undersigned, American merchants of Canton, but compelled by the present position of matters in China to reside and conduct our business at Hong Kong and Macao, would call your attention to the great danger incurred by the local steamers, under the American or other flags, which form our only means of communication between these two places, and which are constantly liable to capture by the so-called Mandarin junks, which are committing piracies, without regard to flag or nation, in every direction.

It is well-known to you that two of these steamers have already been taken, plundered of their cargo, and nearly all those on board murdered under circumstances of great atrocity. We are aware that the Chinese are nominally at peace with us, but it is a notorious fact that no confidence can be placed in their professions, and that a vessel under the American flag is quite as likely to be the next object of attack as any other.

It is currently reported that plans exist for capturing the remaining steamers now running, and in view of the important interests we represent, as well as the personal security of all our countrymen in China, we would respectfully urge upon you the adoption of such measures, as, in your judgment, are most calculated to restore the security of life and property, now in such great peril. We have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedient servants,

RUSSELL & CO., of Canton.
AUGUSTINE HEARD & CO., of Canton.
KING & CO., of Canton.

To Commodore JAMES ARMSTRONG, Commanding United States Naval Forces in the China Seas.

No. 2.

U. S. Flag-ship San Jacinto,
HONG KONG, 19th March, 1857.

GENTLEMEN: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 18th instant, urging upon me the protection of the "local steamers" running between this place and Macao.

I am most desirous of doing all in my power for the support of the interests of the United States and its citizens in the East Indies and China Seas, and regret that the means placed at my disposal will not permit me to comply with your and various other demands which are urged upon me.

The steamers plying between this and Macao are, I believe, the Willamette, Spark, Fei Ma, Canton and Min—two under the United States flag, two under the English and one under the Portuguese. As the distance between the two points is only about forty miles, it is to be expected that the sovereignties of Great Britain and Portugal occupying the termini of the route, and having their own flags exposed to its dangers, will take all the steps necessary for its police, and will guard it from the risks you apprehend, without the interference of a foreign and neutral power.

The squadron of the United States, or that of any other neutral power, had it all the facilities for assuming this duty, could perform it only partially, as it could not protect the British flag from any legitimate attack of the Chinese, without becoming an ally of one of the belligerents in the present war.

Although there is a diversity of opinion as to the faith to be placed in the declarations of Chinese authorities, and your views are so little favorable to their sincerity, yet, the positive assurance these authorities have given (since the recent rupture) of friendship to our flag, affords a reason for anticipating its immunity from any authorized attack between this and Macao.

But, as both the Thistle and Queen were taken, not by outside assault, but by inside stratagem or mutiny, the great precaution which should be used to prevent the recurrence of such unhappy events is strongly indicated. Although I feel some hesitancy in suggesting any course to able business men, better capable of judging what concerns their interests than I can possibly be, yet it seems to me that the most ready and efficient security would be found in substituting in these vessels European for Chinese crews, though at some greater expense, and a careful observance of that ordinary prudence, an entire neglect of which, it is alleged, tempted and brought on the catastrophe of the Queen.

I shall be most ready, gentlemen, to comply with any of your suggestions which are within the compass of my means, and in accordance with my own sense of duty. I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. ARMSTRONG,
Commanding United States Naval Forces, East Indies and China Seas.

To Messrs. RUSSELL & Co., of Canton, KING & Co., of Canton, AUGUSTINE HEARD & Co., of Canton,

HONG KONG, Friday, March 20, 1857.

SIR: We beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 19th instant. We note that it is not practicable to afford the protection requested by us in ours of the 18th, and accordingly the only object we have in again addressing you, is to remark upon one or two clauses of your communication, for the information of our home authorities, to whom we conclude you forward copies of the correspondence.

We unite with you in regret that the means placed at your disposal would not permit you to comply with the moderate request that we placed before you.

We are not aware of any written international law of treaties, that place the Chinese waters between Hong Kong and Macao—an extent of upwards of thirty miles, and crossing the main river to Canton—under the jurisdiction of the British or Portuguese Governments.

We would not, under any circumstances, invite your protection for the British or any other flag except for the American, during the present state of the Canton River, but that the American flag requires an exercise of force for its safety at this time, we think has been satisfactorily proved by the Chinese operations at Whampoa since your departure from that station.

The capture of the Thistle and Queen steamers was caused by the grossest negligence of the people in command of those boats, but the Spark appears to be laid up here for want of protection in running, while our own knowledge of Capt. CURRY, of the Willamette, and of his arrangements proves to us that it would be impossible for people on board of her to obtain possession, except in case of assistance from the armed Chinese vessels cruising between this and Macao. We are, Sir, most respectfully,

Your obedient servants,
AUGUSTINE HEARD & CO., of Canton,
KING & CO., of Canton,
RUSSELL & CO., of Canton.

To Commodore JAMES ARMSTRONG, Commanding United States Naval Forces, East India and China Seas.

UNITED STATES FLAG SHIP SAN JACINTO,
HONG KONG, March 21, 1857.

GENTLEMEN; I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of to-day's date, from which I make the following extract;

"The capture of the Thistle and Queen steamers was caused by the grossest negligence of the people in command of those boats, but the Spark appears to be laid up here for want of protection in running, while our own knowledge of Capt. CURRY, of the Willamette, and of his arrangements, proves to us that it would be impossible for people on board of her to obtain possession of her, except in case of assistance from the armed Chinese vessels cruising between this and Macao."

As the two unfortunate steamers which have been captured suffered in consequence, as you think, "of the grossest negligence of those in command," and as Capt. CURRY'S ability and discretion, of which I entertain the highest opinion, render such an accident to the Willamette impossible, the inference is, that the said qualities would render any other steamer equally secure; and hence the protection of a naval force is the less necessary, and the limited means of protection at the disposal of the United States less to be regretted.

You also state, "We are not aware of any written international law, or treaties, that place the Chinese waters between Hong Kong and Macao—an extent of upwards of thirty miles, and crossing the main river to Canton—under the jurisdiction of the British or Portuguese governments."

I feel confident, gentlemen, there is neither such law nor treaties in existence, or if so, I am unacquainted with them, and am sure an opinion to the contrary cannot be drawn from any portions of my letter of the 19th instant. In that communication there is a paragraph to the following effect:

"As the distance between the two points is only about forty-five miles, it is to be expected that the sovereignties of Great Britain and Portugal, occupying the termini of the route, and having their flag exposed to its dangers, will take all the steps necessary for its police, and will guard it from the risks you apprehend, without the interference of a foreign and neutral power."

There is, I think you will see, gentlemen, nothing in the above language which asserts any jurisdiction of the British and Portuguese over any Chinese waters, but simply expresses the expectation that, with possession at the ends of the route, and with their flags upon it, they have facilities for extemporizing any means of protection necessary; and reasons at least equal to our own for doing so, and which, I will repeat, were the more stringent upon the English, as they alone could protect their flag from an assault of the Chinese authorities.

Desirous as I am of doing everything in my power for the security of the interests of our country and our countrymen, it is a gratification to me to know from yourselves that the avoidance of "gross negligence" and the observance of prudent "arrangements" will give every reasonable security. I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. ARMSTRONG, U. S.
Commanding U. S. Naval Forces, East India and China Seas,

To Messrs. Augustine Heard & Co., of Canton, King & Co., of Canton, Russell & Co., of Canton.

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,
MACAO, Friday, March 27, 1857.

SIR: Your communication of the 23d inst. has just come to hand, inclosing copies of your recent correspondence with the Commander-in-Chief of the United States Naval forces in the East, and in which attention is directed to subjects of grave importance to you as merchants and citizens of the United States, and to our national interests in China.

It will be my endeavor to transmit the same to the Government at Washington by the earliest practicable opportunity. I shall also embrace an early occasion to address you upon the subjects embraced in your dispatch. In the meantime accept the assurance of my earnest desire to promote to the extent of my power your interest, and those of the Government of the United States in this country.

I have the honor to be, Sirs, very respectfully, your obedient servant, PETER PARKER.

The Regatta.

The following is the official report. It was made at 12 M. yesterday by the Sailing Committee:

REGATTA OF THE NEW-YORK YACHT CLUB, JUNE 4, 1857.—The following table exhibits the results of the race in the different classes, so far as the areas of canvas set and the times of sailing are alone concerned:

FIRST CLASS.

Sloop Julia beats the

	Min	Sec		Min.	Sec.
Widgeon	19	42	Haze	32	20
Sylvie	25	15	Favorita	44	01

SECOND CLASS.

Sloop Rowena beats the

As protests have been received by the Committee against the Julia, Favorita, Minnie and Luckey, the final decisions are necessarily reserved until those cases are considered.

in behalf of the Regatta Committee.
June 5, 1857. CHAS. H. HASWELL.

Protests have been lodged against the Favorita, the Julia, and the Una, for running to the windward of a buoy on the west bank, which by the sailing directions should have been passed to the eastward. There is a protest also against the Luckey.

Academy of Medicine—June Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the New-York Academy of Medicine was held on Wednesday evening, in the small Chapel of the University, the President, Dr. VALENTINE MOTT, in the Chair.

The meeting was an unusually small one, some omission in the delivering of the notices being the supposed cause.

Dr. FOST, by permission, exhibited a child from whom he had removed the elbow joint, for anchylosis, with the result of very considerable freedom of motion and increased power.

After some discussion, it was voted that, hereafter, any non-member of the Academy, in order to read a paper to the Academy, must obtain permission of the President, who alone shall have authority to grant such permission, and, who he may doubt its propriety, he shall consult with the Vice-Presidents.

A communication from Dr. BAILEY, late inspector of drugs in this City, was, after some discussion, referred to this source for permission to be brought before the Academy.

Dr. J. R. WOOD desired to call the attention to the proceedings of the American Medical Association, at its late meeting at Nashville, to be published, and for which subscriptions may be made to Dr. BEASLE, at $3 per copy.

Owing to the small attendance, the Academy adjourned to meet the 17th instant, to continue the discussion of Puerperal Fever.

BALLOON ASCENSION.—A successful balloon ascension was made from Newark, N. J., on Thursday evening, by Mons. A. G. MORAT, accompanied by Messrs. S. BAILEY and J. A. CONGDON. The highest altitude, 12,550 feet, at which point the thermometer marked 37°, was reached about 9 o'clock. The balloon descended, and was anchored in Brooklyn at 9¼ o'clock.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT FROM KANSAS.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF GOV. WALKER.

Enthusiastic Reception of Gov. Walker at Lecompton.

The Governor's Dinner Speech—Popularity of the New Executive—Glances at Town and Country—What Kansas is.

[OUR SPECIAL KANSAS CORRESPONDENCE.]

LECOMPTON, Friday, May 29, 1857.

I have just succeeded in obtaining a slip of the Governor's Address, which I transmit to you herewith.

It is a document, as you will see, of momentous importance.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS

DELIVERED IN LECOMPTON, K. T., MAY 27, 1857.

FELLOW-CITIZENS OF KANSAS—At the earnest request of the President of the United States, I have accepted the position of Governor of the Territory of Kansas. The President, with the cordial concurrence of all his Cabinet, expressed to me the conviction, that the condition of Kansas was fraught with imminent peril to the Union, and asked me to undertake the settlement of that momentous question which has introduced discord and civil war throughout your borders and threatens to involve you and our country in the same common ruin. This was a duty thus presented, the performance of which I could not decline, consistently with my view of the sacred obligation which every citizen owes to his country.

The mode of adjustment is provided in the act organizing your Territory, namely, by the people of Kansas, who, by a majority of their own votes, must decide this question for themselves in forming their State Constitution.

It is my duty, in seeing that all constitutional laws are fairly executed, to take care, as far as practicable, that this election of delegates to the Convention shall be free from fraud or violence, and that they shall be protected in their deliberations.

The people of Kansas then are invited by the highest authority known to the Constitution, to participate freely and fairly in the election of delegates to frame a Constitution and State Government. The law has performed its entire appropriate function, when it extends to the people the right of suffrage; but it cannot compel the performance of that duty. Throughout our whole Union, however, and wherever free Government prevails, those who abstain from the exercise of the right of suffrage, authorize those who do vote to act for them in that contingency, and the absentees are as much bound under the law and Constitution, where there is no fraud or violence, by the act of the majority of those who do vote, as although all had participated in the election. Otherwise, as voting must be voluntary, self-government would be impracticable, and monarchy or despotism would remain as the only alternative.

Under our practice the preliminary act of framing a State Constitution is uniformly performed through the instrumentality of a convention of delegates chosen by the people themselves. That Convention is now about to be elected by you under the call of the Territorial Legislature created and still recognized by the authority of Congress, and clothed by it, in the comprehensive language of the organic law, with full power to make such an enactment. The Territorial Legislature, then, in assembling this Convention, were fully sustained by the act of Congress, and the authority of the Convention is distinctly recognized in my instructions from the President of the United States. Those who oppose this course, cannot aver the alleged irregularity of the Territorial Legislature, whose laws in town and city elections, in corporate franchises, and on all other subjects but Slavery, they acknowledge by their votes and acquiescence. If that Legislature was invalid, then are we without law or order in Kansas, without town, city or county organization, all legal and judicial transactions are void, all titles null, and anarchy reigns throughout our borders.

You should not console yourselves, my fellow citizens, with the reflection that you may, by a subsequent vote, defeat the ratification of the Constitution. Although most anxious to secure to you the exercise of that great Constitutional right, and believing that the Convention is the servant, and not the master of the People, yet I have no power to dictate the proceedings of that body. I cannot doubt, however, the course they will adopt on this subject. But why incur the hazard of the preliminary formation of a Constitution by a minority, as alleged by you, when a majority, by their own votes, could control the forming of that instrument?

But it is said that the Convention is not legally called, and that the election will not be freely and fairly conducted. The Territorial Legislature is the power ordained for this purpose by the Congress of the United States; and in opposing it you resist the authority of the Federal Government. That Legislature was called into being by the Congress of 1854, and is recognized in the very latest Congressional legislation. It is recognized by the present Chief Magistrate of the Union, just chosen by the American people, and many of its acts are now in operation here by universal assent. As the Governor of the Territory of Kansas I must support the laws and the Constitution; and I have no other alternative, under my oath, but to see that all constitutional laws are fully and fairly executed.

I see in this act calling the Convention no improper or unconstitutional restrictions upon the right of suffrage. I see in it no test-oath or other similar provisions objected to in relation to previous laws, but clearly repealed as repugnant to the provisions of this act, so far as regards the election of delegates to this Convention. It is said that a fair and full vote will not be taken. Who can safely predict such a result? Nor is it just for a majority, as they allege, to throw the power into the hands of a minority, from a mere apprehension (I trust entirely unfounded) that they will not be permitted to exercise the right of suffrage. If, by fraud or violence, a majority should not be permitted to vote, there is a remedy, it is hoped, in the wisdom and justice of the Convention itself, acting under the obligations of an oath, and a proper responsibility to the tribunal of public opinion. There is a remedy, also, if such facts can be demonstrated, in the refusal of Congress to admit a State into the Union under a Constitution imposed by a minority upon a majority by fraud or violence. Indeed, I cannot doubt that the Convention, after having framed a State Constitution, will submit it for ratification or rejection by a majority of the then actual bona fide resident settlers of Kansas.

With these views, well known to the President and Cabinet, and approved by them, I accepted the appointment of Governor of Kansas. My instructions from the President, through the Secretary of State, under date of the 30th of March last, sustain "the regular Legislature of the Territory" in "assembling a Convention to form a constitution," and they express the opinion of the President, that "when such a constitution shall be submitted to the people of the Territory, they must be protected in the exercise of their right of voting for or against that instrument; and the fair expression of the popular will must not be interrupted by fraud or violence."

I repeat, then, as my clear conviction, that unless the Convention submit the constitution to the vote of all the actual resident settlers of Kansas, and the election be fairly and justly conducted, the constitution will be, and ought to be, rejected by Congress.

There are other important reasons why you should participate in the election of delegates to this Convention. Kansas is to become a new State, created out of the public domain, and will designate her boundaries in the fundamental law. To most of the land within her limits the Indian title, unfortunately, is not yet extinguished, and this land is exempt from settlement, to the grievous injury of the people of the State. Having passed many years of my life in a new State, and represented it for a long period in the Senate of the United States, I know the serious encumbrance arising from large bodies of lands within a State to which the Indian title is not extinguished. Upon this subject the Convention may act by such just and constitutional provisions as will accelerate the extinguishment of Indian title.

There is, furthermore, the question of railroad grants made by Congress to all the new States but one, (where the routes could not be agreed upon,) and, within a few months past, to the flourishing Territory of Minnesota. This munificent grant of four millions and a half of acres was made to Minnesota, even in advance of her becoming a State, under the auspices of her present distinguished Executive, and will enable our sister State of the North-west speedily to unite her railroad system with ours.

Kansas is undoubtedly entitled to grants similar to those just made to Minnesota, and upon this question the Convention may take important action.

These, recollect, are grants by Congress, not to companies, but to States. Now, if Kansas, like the State of Illinois, in granting hereafter these lands to companies to build these roads, should reserve, at least, the seven per cent. of their gross annual receipts, it is quite certain that so soon as these roads are constructed, such will be the large payments into the treasury of our State, that there will be no necessity to impose in Kansas any State tax whatever, especially if the Constitution should contain wise provisions against the creation of State debts.

This grant to the State of Illinois for the Illinois Central Railroad, passed under the wise and patriotic auspices of her distinguished Senator, was made before the pernicious system lately exposed in Washington had invaded the halls of Congress; and therefore that State, unlike most others which obtained recent grants, was enabled to make this great reservation for the benefit of the State. This constitutes of itself a sufficient reason why these railroad grants should be reserved in the ordinance accompanying our State Constitution, so that our State might have the whole benefit of the grant, instead of large portions being given to agents appointed to obtain those grants by companies substantially in many cases for their own benefit, although in the name of the State.

There is another reason why these railroad grants should thus be reserved in our ordinance.

It is to secure these lands to the State before large bodies of them are engrossed by speculators, especially along the contemplated lines of railroads. In no case should these reservations interfere with the preemption rights reserved to settlers, or with school-sections.

These grants to States, as is proved by the official documents, have greatly augmented the proceeds of the sales of the public lands, increasing their value, accelerating their sale and settlement, and bringing enhanced prices to the Government, whilst greatly benefiting the lands of the settler by furnishing him new markets and diminished cost of transportation. On this subject, Mr. BUCHANAN, always the friend of the new States, in his recent inaugural, uses the following language:

"No nation in the tide of time has ever been blessed with so rich and noble an inheritance as we enjoy in the public land. In administering this important trust, while it may be wise to grant portions of them for the improvement of the remainder, yet we should never forget that it is our cardinal policy to reserve the lands as much as may be for actual settlers; and this at moderate prices. We shall thus not only best promote the prosperity of the new States by furnishing them a hardy and independent race of honest and industrious citizens, but shall secure homes for our children and our children's children, as well as those exiled from foreign shores, who may seek in this country to improve their condition and enjoy the blessings of civil and religious liberty."

Our American railroads, now exceeding twenty four thousand miles completed, have greatly advanced the power, prosperity and progress of the country, whilst linking it together in bonds of ever-increasing commerce and intercourse, and tending by these results, to soften or extinguish sectional passions and prejudice, and thus perpetuate the union of the States. This system, it is clearly the interest of the whole country, shall progress until the States west of the Mississippi shall be interlaced like those east of that river, by a network of railroads, until too whole at various points shall reach the shores of the Pacific. The policy of such grants by Congress is now clearly established; and whatever doubts may have prevailed in the minds of a few persons as to the constitutionality of such grants, when based only upon the transfer of a portion of the public domain, in the language of the inaugural of the President, "for the improvement of the remainder," yet when they are made, as now proposed in the ordinance accompanying our Constitution, in consideration of our relinquishing the right to tax the public lands, such grants become, in fact, sales for ample equivalents, and their constitutionality is placed beyond all doubt or controversy. For this reason, also, and in order that these grants may be made for ample equivalents, and upon grounds of clear constitutional authority, it is most wise that they should be included in our ordinance, and take effect by compact when the State is admitted into the Union. If my will could have prevailed as regards the public lands, as indicated in my public career, and especially in the bill presented by me, as Chairman of the Committee of Public Lands, to the Senate of the United States, which passed that body, but failed in the House, I would authorize no sales of these lands except for settlement and cultivation, reserving not merely a preemption, but a homestead of a quarter section of land in favor of every actual settler, whether coming from other States, or emigrating from Europe. Great and populous States would thus rapidly be added to the Confederacy, until we should soon have one unbroken line of States, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, giving immense additional power and security to the Union, and facilitating intercourse between all its parts. This would be alike beneficial to the old and to the new States. To the working men of the old States, as well as of the new, it would be of incalculable advantage, not merely by affording them a home in the West, but by maintaining the wages of labor, by enabling the working classes to emigrate and become cultivators of the soil, when the rewards of daily toil should sink below a fair remuneration. Every new State, besides, adds to the customers of the old States, consuming their manufactures, employing their merchants, giving business to their vessels and canals, their railroads and cities, and a powerful impulse to their industry and prosperity. Indeed, it is the growth of the mighty West which has added, more than all other causes combined, to the power and prosperity of the whole country, whilst at the same time, through the channels of business and commerce, it has been building up immense cities in the Eastern Atlantic and Middle States, and replenishing the federal treasury with large payments from the settlers upon the public lands, rendered of real value only by their labor; and thus from increased exports, bringing back augmented imports, and soon largely increasing the revenue of the Government from that source also.

Without asking anything new from Congress, if Kansas can receive, on coming into the Union, all the usual grants, and use them judiciously, she can not only speedily cover herself with a net work of railroads; but, by devoting all the rest to purposes of education, she would soon have a complete system of Common Schools, with Normal Schools, free Academies, and a great University, in all of which tuition should be free to all our people. In that University the mechanic arts, with model workshops, and all the sciences should be taught, and especially agriculture in connection with a model farm.

Although you ask nothing more in your ordinance than has been already granted to the other new States, yet in view of the sacrifice of life and property incurred by the people of Kansas, in establishing here the great principles of State and popular sovereignty, and thus perpetuating the Union; Congress, doubtless, will regard with indulgent favor the new State of Kansas, and will welcome her into the Union with joyful congratulations and a most liberal policy as to the public domain.

The full benefit of that great measure, the graduation and reduction of the price of the public lands in favor only of settlers and cultivators, so often urged by me in the Senate and in the Treasury Department and finally adopted by Congress, should also be secured in our ordinance. Having witnessed in our States the deep injury inflicted upon them by large bodies of their most fertile land being monopolized by speculators, I suggest in accordance with the public policy ever advocated by me, that our entire land tax, under the Constitution, for the next 20 years should be confined exclusively to unoccupied land—whether owned by residents or non-residents—as one of the best means of guarding against a monopoly of our choice lands by speculators. I desire, in fact, to see our Convention exercise the whole constitutional power of a State, to guard our rights and interests, and especially to protect the settlers and cultivators against the monopoly of our public domain by speculators.

As regards the school lands of the new States, the following views will be found in my reports of the 8th of December, 1847, and 9th of December, 1848, as Secretary of the Treasury of the United States:

"The recommendation contained in my last report for the establishment of ports of entry into Oregon, and the extension there of our revenue laws, is again respectfully presented to the consideration of Congress, together with donations of farms to settlers and emigrants, and the grant of a school section in the centre of every quarter of a township, which would bring the school house within a point, not exceeding a mile and a half in distance from the most remote inhabitant of such quarter township."

And again:

"My last report recommended the grant of one section of land for schools in every quarter township in Oregon. * * * * * * Congress, to some extent, adopted this recommendation, by granting two school sections in each township, instead of one, for education in Oregon, but it is respectfully suggested that even this extended, the grant is inadequate in amount, whilst the location is inconvenient, and too remote for a school which all can attend. This subject is again presented to the attention of Congress, with the recommendation that it shall be extended to California and New-Mexico, and also to all other new States and Territories containing the public domain."

Acting upon the first of these recommendations, but not carrying them fully into effect, Congress donated the school section grants—an advance upon the former system. But in my judgment, the benefits intended will never be fully realized until four school sections, instead of two, are granted in every township, locating the school section in the centre of every quarter township; thus, by only doubling the school section, causing every section of the public domain in the new States to adjoin a school section, which would add immensely to the value of the public lands, while at the same time affording an adequate fund not only for the establishment of Common Schools in every township, but of High Schools, Normal Schools, and free Academies, which, together with the five per cent. fund, and University grant before referred to, would place Kansas in a few years, in point of science and education, in the front rank of the States of the American Union and of the world. This is a subject always regarded by me with intense interest, inasmuch as my highest hope of the perpetuity of our Union, and of the continued success of self-government, is based upon the progressive education and enlightenment of the people, enabling them fully to comprehend their own true interests, the incalculable advantages of our Union, the exemption from the power of demagogues, the control of sectional passions and prejudice, the progress of the arts and sciences, and the accumulation of knowledge, which is every day more and more becoming real power, and which will advance so much the great interests of our whole country.

These noble grants for schools and education some of the new States, have not produced all the advantages designed, for want of adequate checks and guards against improvident legislation; but I trust that the Convention, by a distinct Constitutional provision, will surround these lands with such guarantees, legislative, executive, judicial and popular, as to require the combined action of the whole under the authority of the Legislature in the administration of a fund so sacred.

It will be observed that these school sections and the 5 per cent. fund, or their equivalent, have always been made good to the new States by Congress, whether the lands were sold in trust, for Indians, or otherwise.

Upon looking at the location of Kansas, equi-distant from North to South, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific, I find, that within reasonable boundaries, she would be the central State of the American Union. On the North lies the Nebraska Territory, soon to become a State; on the South the great and fertile Southwestern Indian Territory, soon, I hope to become a State also. To the boundary of Kansas run nearly all the railroads of Missouri, whilst westward, northward and southward, these routes continued through Kansas, would connect her directly with Puget Sound, the mouth of the Oregon River, and San Francisco. The southerly boundary of Kansas is but 500 miles from the Gulf of Mexico, and the same railroad through the great Southwestern Indian Territory and Texas, would connect her with New-Orleans, with Galveston, with all the roads of Arkansas, and through Texas to San Francisco and other points on the Pacific; northward and eastward our lines would connect with the roads of Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Minnesota, and the Lakes of the North.

It is the people of Kansas, who in forming their State Constitution, are to declare the terms on which they propose to enter the Union. Congress cannot compel the people of a Territory to enter the Union as a State, or change, without their consent, the Constitution formed by the people. Congress, it is true, may, for constitutional reasons refuse admission, but the State alone, in forming her Constitution, can prescribe the terms on which she will enter the Union. This power of the people of a Territory in forming a State Constitution is one of vital importance, especially in the States carved out of the public domain. Nearly all the lands of Kansas are public lands, and most of them are occupied by Indian Tribes. These lands are the property of the Federal Government, but their right is exclusively that of a proprietor, carrying with it no political power.

Although the States cannot tax the constitutional functions of the Federal Government, they may assess its real estate within the limits of the State. Thus, although a State cannot tax the Federal mint or Custom-Houses, yet it may tax the ground on which they stand, unless exempted by State authority. Such is the well-settled doctrine of the Supreme Court of the United States. In 1838, Judge MCLEAN, of the Supreme Court of the United States, made the following decision:

"It is true the United States held the proprietary right under the act of cession, and also the right of sovereignty until the State government was established; but the mere proprietary right, if it exist, gives no right of sovereignty. The United States may own land within a State, but political jurisdiction does not follow this ownership. Where jurisdiction is necessary, as for forts and arsenals, a cession of it is obtained from the State. Even the lands of the United States, within the State, are exempted from taxation by compact."

By the recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, so justly favorable to the rights and interest of the new States, especially those formed out of the territory acquired, like Kansas, since the adoption of the Constitution, it is clear that the ownership of the public lands of such Territory is viewed by the Court exclusively as a proprietary right, carrying with it no political power or right of eminent domain, and affecting in no way the exercise of any of the sovereign attributes of State authority. When Kansas becomes a State, with all the attributes of State sovereignty co-extensive with her limits, among these must be the taxing power, which is an inherent element of State authority. I do not dispute the title of the Government to the public lands of Kansas, but I do say that this right is that of an owner only, and that when Kansas becomes a State the public lands are subject to taxation by State authority, like those of any individual proprietor, unless that power is relinquished by the State in the Ordinance, assuming the form of a compact, by which the State is admitted into the Union.

This relinquishment of the taxing power as to the public lands, so important to the general Government, and which has heretofore been exacted by Congress on their own terms from all the new States, is deeply injurious to the State, depriving her almost entirely of the principal resources of a new State by taxation to support her Government. Now, that this question is conclusively settled by the Supreme Court of the United States, as a consequence of their recent decision, it is proper for the State, in making this relinquishment of the right to tax the public lands, to annex the conditions on which she consents to such exemption. This should be done in the Constitution, upon terms just to Kansas and to the Federal Government.

Should Kansas relinquish the right of taxing the public lands for equivalents, she should, in my judgment, although sustained by irresistible conclusions from the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, and sound constitutional views of State rights, place the question in its strongest form, by asking nothing more than has been granted to the other new States, including the grants for education, railroads, &c. She will thus give the highest proof that she is not governed by sordid views, and that she means to exact nothing from Congress that is unjust or unusual.

I cannot too earnestly impress upon you the necessity of removing the Slavery agitation from the halls of Congress, and Presidential conflicts. It is conceded that Congress has no authority to interfere with Slavery in the States where it exists; and if it can now be established, as is clearly the doctrine of the Constitution, that Congress has no authority to interfere with the people of a territory on this subject, in forming a State Constitution, the question must be removed from Congressional and Presidential elections.

This is the principle affirmed by Congress in the act organizing this Territory, ratified by the people of the United States in the recent election, and maintained by the late decision of the Supreme Court of the United States. If this principle can be carried into successful operation in Kansas,—that her people shall determine what shall be her social institutions,—the Slavery question must be withdrawn from the halls of Congress, and from our Presidential conflicts, and the safety of the Union be placed beyond all peril: whereas, if the principle should be defeated here, the Slavery agitation must be renewed in all elections throughout the country, with increasing bitterness, until it shall eventually overthrow the Government.

It is this agitation which, to European powers, presents the only hope of subverting our free institutions, and, as a consequence, destroying the principle of self-government throughout the world. It is this hope that has already inflicted deep injury upon our country, exciting monarchical or despotic interference with our domestic as well as foreign affairs, and inducing their interposition, not only in our elections, but in diplomatic intercourse, to arrest our progress, to limit our influence and power, depriving us of great advantages in peaceful territorial expansion, as well as in trade with the nations of the world.

Indeed, when I reflect upon the hostile position of the European Press during the recent election, and their exulting predictions of the dissolution of our Union as a consequence of the triumph of a sectional candidate, I cannot doubt that the peaceful and permanent establishment of these principles now being subjected to their final test in Kansas, will terminate European opposition to all those measures which must so much increase our commerce, furnish new markets for our products and fabrics, and by conservative peaceful progress, carry our flag and the empire of our Constitution into new and adjacent regions, indispensable as a part of the Union to our welfare and security, adding coffee, sugar, and other articles to our staple exports, whilst greatly reducing their price to the consumer.

Nor is it only in our foreign intercourse that peace will be preserved, and our prosperity advanced, by the accepted fact of the permanence of our Government, based upon the peaceful settlement of this question in Kansas, but at home, the same sentiment will awaken renewed confidence in the stability of our institutions, give a new impulse to all our industry, and carry us onward in a career of progress and prosperity, exceeding even our most sanguine expectations; a new movement of European capital will flow in upon us for permanent investment, and a new Exodus of the European masses aided by the free emigration principle, carry westward the advancing column of American States in one unbroken phalanx to the Pacific.

And let me ask you, what possible good has been accomplished by agitating in Congress and in Presidential conflicts the Slavery question? Has it emancipated a single slave or improved their condition? Has it made a single State free, where Slavery otherwise would have existed? Has it accelerated the disappearance of Slavery from the more northern of the slaveholding States, or accomplished any practical good whatever? No, my fellow citizens, nothing but unmitigated evil has already ensued, with dangers still more fearful impending for the future, as a consequence of this agitation.

There is a law more powerful than the legislation of men, more potent than passion or prejudice, that must ultimately determine the location of slavery in this country; it is the isothermal line, it is the law of the thermometer, of latitude or altitude, regulating climate, labor and productions, and as a consequence, profit and loss. Thus, even upon the mountain heights of the tropics slavery can no more exist than in northern latitudes, because it is unprofitable, being unsuited to the constitution of that noble race transplanted here from the equatorial heats of Africa. Why is it that in the Union Slavery recedes from the North and progresses South? Is it this same great climatic exclude all considerations connected with our own happiness and prosperity? And is it for the handful of that race now in Kansas, or that may be hereafter introduced, that we should subvert the Union, and the great principles of self government and State sovereignty, and imbrue our hands in the blood of our countrymen! Important as this African question may be in Kansas, and which it is your solemn right to determine, it sinks into insignificance compared with the perpetuity of the Union and the final success of the establishment of the principles of State sovereignty, and free government. If patriotism, if devotion to the Constitution and love of the Union, should not induce the minority to yield to the majority on this question, let them reflect, that in no event can the minority successfully determine this question permanently, and that in no contingency will Congress admit Kansas as a Slave or Free State, unless a majority of the people of Kansas shall first have fairly and freely decided this question for themselves by a direct vote on the adoption of the Constitution, excluding all fraud or violence. The minority, in resisting this will of the majority, may involve Kansas again in a civil war, they may bring upon her reproach and obloquy, and destroy her progress and prosperity; they may keep her for years out of the Union, and, in the whirlwind of agitation, sweep away the Government itself. But Kansas never can be brought into the Union with or without Slavery, except by a previous solemn decision, fully, freely and fairly made by a majority of her people in voting for or against the adoption of her State Constitution. Why, then, should this just, peaceful and constitutional mode of settlement meet with opposition from any quarter? Is Kansas willing to destroy her own hopes of prosperity merely that she may afford political capital to any party, and perpetuate the agitation of Slavery throughout the Union? is she to become a mere theme for agitators in other States, the theatre on which they shall perform the bloody drama of treason and disunion? Does she want to see the solemn acts of Congress, the decision of the people of the Union in the recent election, the legislative, executive, and judicial authorities of the country all overthrown, and revolution and civil war inaugurated throughout her limits? Does she want to be "bleeding Kansas" for the benefit of political agitators within or out of her limits, or does she prefer the peaceful and quiet arbitrament of this question for herself? What benefit will the great body of the people of Kansas derive from these agitations? They may for a brief period, give consequence and power to political leaders and agitators; but it is at the expense of the happiness and welfare of the great body of the people of this Territory.

Those who oppose Slavery in Kansas do not base their opposition upon any philanthropic principles, or any sympathy for the African race. For in their so-called constitution, framed at Topeka, they deem that entire race so inferior and degraded, as to exclude them all forever from Kansas, whether they be bond or free, thus depriving them of all rights here, and denying even that they can be citizens of the United States, for if they are citizens they could not constitutionally be exiled or excluded from Kansas. Yet such a clause inserted in the Topeka Constitution was submitted by that Convention for the vote of the people, and ratified here by an overwhelming majority of the Anti-Slavery Party. This party here, therefore, has, in the most positive manner, affirmed the constitutionality of that portion of the recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, declaring that Africans are not citizens of the United States.

This is the more important, inasmuch as this Topeka Constitution was ratified, with this clause inserted, by the entire Republican party in Congress, thus distinctly affirming the decision of the Supreme Court of the Union, that Africans are not citizens of the United States, for if citizens they may be elected to all offices State and National, including the Presidency itself; they must be placed upon a basis of perfect equality with the whites, serve with them in the militia, on the bench, the Legislature, the jury-box, vote in all elections, meet us in social intercourse, and intermarry freely with the whites. This doctrine of the perfect equality of the white with the black in all respects whatsoever, social and political, clearly follows from the position that Africans are citizens of the United States. Nor is the Supreme Court of the Union less clearly vindicated by the position now assumed here by the published creed of this party, that the people of Kansas, in forming their State Constitution, (and not Congress,) must decide this question of slavery for themselves. Having thus sustained the Court on both the controverted points decided by that tribunal, it is hoped they will not approve the anarchical and revolutionary proceedings in other States, expunging the Supreme Court from our system by depriving it of the great power for which it was created, of expounding the Constitution. If that be done, we can have in fact no unity of government or fundamental law, but just as many ever varying Constitutions as passion, prejudice and local interests may from time to time prescribe in the thirty-one States of the Union.

I have endeavored heretofore faintly to foreshadow the wonderful prosperity which would follow at once in Kansas the peaceful and final settlement of this question. But if it should be in the power of agitators to prevent such a result, nothing but ruin will pervade our Territory. Confidence will expire, and law and order will be subverted. Anarchy and civil war will be re inaugurated amongst us. All property will greatly depreciate in value. Even the best farms will become almost worthless. Our towns and cities will sink into decay. Emigration into our Territory will cease. A mournful train of returning settlers, with ruined hopes and blasted fortunes, will leave our borders. All who have purchased property at present prices will be sacrificed, and Kansas will be marked by universal ruin and desolation.

Nor will the mischief be arrested here. It will extend into every other State. Despots will exult over the failure here of the great principles of self government, and the approaching downfall of our confederacy. The pillars of the Union will rock upon their base, and we may close the next Presidential conflict, amid the scattered fragments of the Constitution of our once happy and united people. The banner of the Stars and Stripes, the emblem of our country's glory, will be rent by contending factions. We shall no longer have a country. The friends of human liberty in other realms will shrink despairing from the conflict. Despotic power will resume its sway throughout the world, and man will have tried in vain the last experiment of self-government. The architects of our country is ruin, the assassins of her peace and prosperity, will share the same common ruin of all our race. They will meet, whilst living, the bitter curses of a ruined people, whilst history will record as their only epitaph: These were the destroyers of the American Union, of the liberties of their posterity and of the world.

But I do not despair of the Republic. My hope is in the patriotism and intelligence of the people: in the love of Country, of Liberty, and of the Union. Especially is my confidence unbounded in the hardy pioneers and settlers of the West. It was such settlers of a new State devoted to the Constitution and the Union, whom I long represented in the Senate of the United States, and whose rights and interests it was my pride and pleasure there as well as in the Treasury Department, to protect and advocate. It was men like these whose rifles drove back the invaders from the plains of Orleans, and planted the Stars and Stripes upon the victorious fields of Mexico. These are the men whom gold cannot corrupt, nor foes intimidate. From their towns and villages, from their farms and cottages, spread over the beautiful prairies of Kansas, they will come forward now in defence of the Constitution and the Union. These are the glorious legacy they received from our fathers, and they will transmit to their children the priceless heritage. Before the peaceful power of their suffrage, this dangerous sectional agitation will disappear, and peace and prosperity once more reign throughout our borders. In the hearts of this noble band of patriotic settlers, the love of their country and of the Union is inextinguishable. It leaves them not in death, but follows them into that higher realm, where, with WASHINGTON and FRANKLIN and their noble compatriots, they look down with undying affection upon their country, and offer up their fervent prayers that the Union and the Constitution may be perpetual. For recollect, my fellow citizens, that it is the Constitution that makes the Union, and unless that immortal instrument, bearing the name of the Father of the Country, shall be maintained entire in all its wise provisions and sacred guarantees, our free institutions must perish.

My reliance also is unshaken upon the same overruling Providence which has carried us triumphantly through so many perils and conflicts, which has lifted us to a height of power and prosperity unexampled in history, and, if we shall maintain the Constitution and the Union, points us to a future more glorious and sublime than mind can conceive or pen describe. The march of our country's destiny, like that of His first chosen people, is marked by the foot-prints of the steps of God. The Constitution and the Union are "the cloud by day, and the pillar of fire by night," which will carry us safely under his guidance through the wilderness and bitter waters into the promised and ever-extending fields of our country's glory. It is His hand which beckons us onward in the pathway of peaceful progress and expansion, of power and renown, until our continent, in the distant future, shall be covered by the folds of the American banner, and instructed by our example, all the nations of the world, through many trials and sacrifices, shall establish the great principles of our constitutional confederacy of free and sovereign States.

R. J. WALKER.

Glances at the Territory.

[OUR SPECIAL KANSAS CORRESPONDENCE.]

LECOMPTON, Wednesday, May 27, 1857.

Leavenworth, where my last letter left us, is a promising town of some three or four thousand people, and only two years old. Its progress has been extraordinary: its culmination may be unprecedented. It is built on a pleasant slope leading down to the brink of the Missouri, and stretches backward (though merely in imagination as yet) over a splendid rolling country. In politics it seems to be pretty evenly balanced; the present Mayor, however, and a majority of the Council, I believe, are Free Soilers. The new Governor, by his bonhommie, his unpretending manners and his accessibility, seems to have won golden opinions from all sides. Yesterday morning when he asked for the hotel bill for himself and suite, he was informed that the city authorities of Leavenworth had insisted on defraying all his expenses. I am told he got into a towering passion, but eventually succumbed, which was the wisest course under the circumstances.

On Monday morning about 8 o'clock we took our leave of Leavenworth. The Governor was furnished with a wagon and team of four mules by Gen. HANNY, who is now stationed at Fort Leavenworth. Accompanied by Major DEAS, one of his Aid-de Camps, and several others, Mr. WALKER started for Lawrence. The country between is one of the most beautiful I have ever seen. Instead of the monotonous prairie land I had been led to expect, I found a magnificently undulating country, interspersed with small ravines which were thickly wooded on either side and penetrated by rapid streams. Half way between the two towns is a settlement of Delaware Indians. The lands in its immediate vicinity are exceedingly cultivated and exceedingly valuable. I asked a quarter-breed how much he would take for his quarter section, and was informed that he valued it at $100 an acre at least.

One of the most singular features of the place is an old Indian woman whose age is far beyond the memory of that distinguished and venerable individual, "the oldest inhabitant." She is said to be 116 years old.

We stopped at the house of the Indian with whom she lives, and had some refreshment. She is a queer, wrinkled, helpless and withered old hag, though her eye-sight is still good, her hearing acute, and her powers of speech but little impaired. We endeavored to converse with her, but as she spoke only the Delaware tongue, and was probably in a state of dotage, we could gather nothing intelligible from her. The Indian in whose house she lived was asked whether she was a relative of his, and he said "not much." And that was the sum total of our information concerning her. Our attendant was a good looking girl, in whom traces of Indian blood could be discerned. On inquiry we learnt that her name was ZEIGLER, her father being a Pennsylvania Dutchman, who emigrated from his native State some twenty-five or thirty years ago, married a Delaware woman, and cast his lot among her tribe. He is now an extensive landholder in Kansas, worth perhaps $50,000.

The Kaw River (or Kansas River, for they are the same name) flows northeast of Lawrence, and must be crossed before reaching the town. The mode of passage is somewhat peculiar. The river is so shallow that a steamboat on it is an impossibility. In the very middle of the stream the bottom is rarely over fifteen inches below the surface. A flat-bottomed boat, therefore, is used for crossing it, and in this way: Across the river a rope is stretched, each end of which is fastened to a pole planted on either bank. By means of a pulley arrangement, connected with the rope, the boat is carried from side to side by the mere force of the current.

Lawrence is a thriving town, most excellently located. The population is from ten to fifteen hundred. We took lodgings in a hotel just opened, and which is nameless as yet, else I should have pleasure in mentioning it, for our accommodations were very superior, everything considered.

Immediately preceding the Governor's arrival we learned that a party of Bostonians, including Senator WILSON, Rev. Mr. PIERPONT and Dr. HOWE, had unanticipated him by a few hours.

The citizens had made arrangements for giving a public reception to their Massachusetts friends, and now took advantage of the opportunity to invite the Governor and his suite.

The demonstration occurred at 8 o'clock in the evening in the Unitarian Church, a stone building not yet completed. The meeting is said to have been one of the largest, most respectable, and most influential ever held in the Territory. A large contingent of the assemblage was composed of the fair sex. The Church and the neighboring buildings were illuminated, an amateur band was in attendance, the wall above the rostrum was dressed with flags, the enthusiasm was immense, the reception of the Governor sincere, the speeches good, and the occasion, as a whole, interesting beyond parallel.

Judge CONWAY presided.

REMARKS OF GOV. WALKER.

The Governor, in acknowledgment of the Chairman's friendly introduction, said:

FELLOW CITIZENS, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: It gives me much pleasure to exchange the friendly greetings with which the people of this prosperous and beautiful town of Lawrence have received me. I do not design on this evening to address to you any remarks in relation to those political questions which, unfortunately, have agitated so long the people of the Territory of Kansas, and which have produced so deplorable results in this Territory, and especially in the town of Lawrence. In a few days I shall publish my inaugural address, in which I shall disclose fully, not only to my fellow-citizens of Lawrence, but to the whole people of Kansas, those views and opinions by which I shall be guided in my humble efforts, under the guidance of a superintending Providence, to endeavor to establish peace, harmony and prosperity throughout the whole of the Territory of Kansas. [Cheers.] I hope I may ask from you, my fellow citizens, to give to that address, which will discuss these grave and important questions, a calm, deliberate and impartial consideration.

Without detaining you any longer at this period, I can only say that I hope you will see it most clearly indicated in that address as my fixed and determined purpose, that as the will of the majority of the people has prevailed in every State of this Union, as that is the great fundamental basis upon which reposes all our American institutions in every State, that so it will be my purpose to endeavor to establish that principle in all its way, full and complete, throughout the entire Territory of Kansas. [Loud applause and cries of "good," "good."] So that, my fellow-citizens, in the shortest practicable period, these difficulties may be brought to a peaceful and final close, in the one only practicable way, which is this, and it is the rule which prevails in every other State, and which must prevail here, sooner or later, and the sooner the better, and that is that the majority of the people of Kansas—[loud cheers]—I mean the whole people—[renewed cheering and cries of "good," "good,"—I do not mean a party—[immense cheering, and cries of "Good"]—but I mean the entire, actual, bona fide residents of the Territory, [cries of "Hear, hear!" "Right! right!"] shall, by their votes, fully and fairly given, and ultimately to be received by impartial judges—[cheers]—decide for themselves, by an actual vote, not only that great sectional question which has so much agitated and disturbed the happiness and repose of this Territory—that they shall not only decide that question, but also their whole form of State Government, which concerns their dearest rights and liberties. [Loud cheers.]

I thank you, my kind friends, for the greeting which you have extended to me upon this occasion, and I shall only say that, at some future occasion, it will be my pleasure to renew my acquaintance with you. [Loud and prolonged cheering.]

SENATOR WILSON.

Senator WILSON was then called for, and ascended the platform. His appearance was hailed with much enthusiasm. In the course of his speech he said: Gentlemen, you have listened, to night, to your Chief Magistrate, and have welcomed his views. He has pledged to you his influence and his power, for the preservation of your rights. [Cheers.] Hold him, I know you will, and the country will hold him, and he, no doubt, will be willing to be held, by you, to the performance of that pledge, in all its length and breadth. You want peace; you want your rights; you want the rights belonging to American citizens. [Applause.] See to it that you have peace, that you have your rights, that you are worthy American citizens, and that your rights shall not be taken from you by fraud or violence. [Cheers and cries of "Good."] I am not here, gentlemen, to give advice in regard to any peculiar mode of action. I have come to this Territory on no political mission. I have come to see this beautiful and glorious land, to see the men, and the women, too, who, in the past, have made Kansas immortal in American history. [Cheers.] I come not here to give advice to you in regard to any peculiar mode of political action. You know your rights; I trust you know how to maintain and vindicate them, and I leave to you, without one word of advice, either public or private, to take your own course of peculiar action. But, gentlemen, as a man who loves his country, and his whole country, North and South, East and West—as a man who is ready to live for that country, and, if he knows himself, to die for that country, and the whole country—I conjure you to maintain, in the Territory of Kansas, peacefully, if you can—and I believe you can—justice and law and liberty, and the great cause of human liberty and improvement. [Loud cheers.]

Speeches were subsequently made by Rev. Mr. PIERPONT, Dr. ROBINSON, Rev. DANIEL FOSTER, late Chaplain of the Massachusetts Legislature, Mr. PHILLIPS, and Judge CONWAY. Each dwelt more or less on the deprivation of elective rights to which the Free-State men had been subjected, though each alluded, with marked favor, to the Governor's expression of sentiment as to the principles on which the rights of the whole people should henceforth be secured.

Mr. E. O. PERRIN made a very conservative speech, eulogistic of the Governor and his projected measures, which was warmly applauded.

AT THE CAPITAL.

Yesterday morning Mr. WALKER left Lawrence for Lecompton, the head-quarters of the "Border Ruffians," where he was received with an enthusiasm which could hardly be equaled out of Connaught. He read a rough draft of his inaugural to the citizens which was received with demonstrations of unqualified approval.

At three o'clock he partook of a public dinner, which was got up in his honor, and which was enlivened by some excellent speaking.

The festivities were wound up with a ball—but of these more anon. It is now very late, and I am writing under considerable difficulties. Squat on the floor of a room devoted to six of us, I conclude this epistle on the crown of my hat.

Things About Lecompton.

A BANQUET—GOV. WALKER MAKES A DINNER SPEECH.

[OUR SPECIAL KANSAS CORRESPONDENCE.]

LECOMPTON, Thursday, May 28, 1857.

Standing on the summit of the lofty hill which lies southeast of the town of Lawrence and adjoins another eminence on which there yet remains the stone fort erected by the Free-State men during the troubles of last year, the prospect which stretches out on every side approximates to the sublime. Imagine to yourself a vast amphitheatre sloping gently upwards by gradual undulations which at first are almost of an equal height, but rise tier above tier in the distance, changing from a brilliant emerald to a misty blue as they recede until they culminate in a gorgeous violet rim coincident with the horizon itself. Over the verdant prairie land which they encompass, fancy you see thickly sprinkled numerous rude huts and sunny farmhouses, incipient villages, wooded ravines lying in perpetual shade, distant towns buried in deep woods and hardly discernible but for the ascending smoke as it curls above the trees; rapid streams whose thickly timbered banks wind through the valleys like strips of dark green velvet; at your feet a noble river glittering in the sunlight like molten silver and losing itself in impenetrable woods lying far away to the East, whilst between the base of the hill and the river's brink rises a thriving town from which the din of busy industry, the excited hum of men mingling with the whir of the saw and the stroke of the hammer and the axe reecho over the plain and fill the whole air with the music of prosperous labor.

Add to these a sky brilliant as sun ever shone through, a bracing breeze which blows over the prairie swells your in, year out, unceasingly, and an atmosphere as clear as crystal, and you have a faint conception of a scene which I should never attempt to describe.

Lecompton is a small place of about five hundred people, and built close to the Kansas River. It is not particularly progressive, and owes what trade it has more to the fact that it is the seat of Government than to any advantage of location. Being recognized throughout the Territory as the rendezvous—the point d'appui of the "Border Ruffians"—its social reputation in the Free State towns is not peculiarly flattering. So far as I have seen it, however, I feel called upon to say that a more friendly, generous, warm-hearted and intelligent people than that of this same Lecompton I have not met since my entrance into Kansas.

Governor WALKER's reception yesterday was exceedingly enthusiastic. His address (which I shall soon be able I hope to forward) he read to the assembled citizens in the Court House, and it received the highest commendations.

At 3 o'clock he and his friends were entertained at a public dinner by the inhabitants of the town. Mr. CALHOUN occupied the chair, and in introducing the toast of the health of the guest of the occasion, alluded in terms of high eulogy to Mr. WALKER's political precedents, his talents, his ability, his integrity, and his peculiar fitness to conduct to a successful conclusion the present difficulties of Kansas.

The Governor rose amid a perfect storm of applause and said:

My friends, I am very sure that after the very long inaugural which I inflicted upon you to-day at the Court House, you will scarcely expect from me an address of any considerable length in relation to the affairs of Kansas.

In that address I have distinctly detailed the principles upon which I propose, with the aid of the people of Kansas, to administer the Executive Department of the Territory. Those principles are such as have met the approbation of the Chief Magistrate of the Union, just chosen by the nation, and have the cordial approbation of all his Cabinet. [Cheers.] Gentlemen, I do not come to Kansas as a volunteer, and I am free to say that, when this position was first tendered me by the President of the United States, I declined it. But when Mr. BUCHANAN, my old friend and associate for ten years in the Senate of the United States, and for four years in the Cabinet, and whose election I deemed vital to the permanency of our free institutions, the sovereignty of the States, and the perpetuation of the Union upon the only basis on which it can be perpetuated, the maintainance of the Constitution—when that gentleman, with whom I had been so long associated, indicated to me that the permanence of the Union itself might depend upon my acceptance of that office, I did not feel that I was at liberty to decline.

I felt, gentlemen, that we were in the midst of a great battle, a battle of the friends of the Constitution and the Union against the great sectional party opposed to us in the late contest, which, if it can succeed, must overthrow the Constitution and the Union. [Cheers.] Under these circumstances, gentlemen, I felt that I was no more at liberty to continue to decline this office than a soldier who, when the battle is raging, is ordered to lead even a forlorn hope, has any right to decline obedience to the command of the constituted authority of his country. [Applause.] Under these circumstances, then, I came to this Territory. I have read to you to-day the principles, fully set forth and distinctly enunciated, from which I do not mean to depart under any circumstances, [cries of "good, good," and cheers,] and by which I shall be controlled in endeavoring to administer the duties of the Executive office of this Territory.

I hope, gentlemen, that those opinions will meet the approbation of the majority of the people of Kansas. They are principles for which I have contended all my life; they are principles presenting no new programme devised for the occasion, but such as at all times and under all circumstances I have maintained, and whether they shall or not meet the approbation of others, they are principles that I never can or will abandon. [Immense cheering.]

Gentlemen, the Territory of Kansas occupies at this period a most important position. All that is done here, or that shall be done, attracts not only the attention of the whole people of the United States, but, I may add, the attention of the whole civilized world. [Applause.] It is upon this question, in looking back at the recent contest through which we have just passed, that the despotic monarchical powers of Europe fully anticipated the overthrow of this Government. In my judgment, upon the success or failure of the principles now being subjected to their final test in Kansas will depend the perpetuity of this Union and the principles of self government throughout the world.

You do, then, gentlemen, occupy a position of momentous importance. For myself, I can only say to you, without detaining you any longer, that the principles which I have enunciated to you to-day, are the principles by which I have always lived, and by which I mean to die. [Loud cheers.] I believe they are the principles which lie at the basis of our free institutions. I believe that they are the principles connected with the great doctrine of the sovereignty of the States and of the rights of the people of a Territory to establish for themselves their own institutions—and which deny the authority of Congress to insert any clause in the Constitution of a rising State, and especially in establishing her social institutions. I believe that that principle lies at the basis of the existence of the Government, and of the perpetuity of the Union. [Cheers.] Consequently, gentlemen, I can only say in returning you to-day my most cordial and sincere thanks for the manner in which you have been pleased to receive me on my arrival in Lecompton, that to the true and steadfast friends of the Constitution and the Union in Kansas, whether they come from the North or the South. [Cheers.]

To such men, who, under the banner of the stars and stripes—the proud emblem of our country's glory—carried us triumphantly through the late most momentous Presidential struggle, coming as they do from the whole Union, I shall look to be sustained in my humble efforts to administer the executive department of the Territory of Kansas, and to carry me, and you, and our beloved country, victoriously through the contest, for her welfare and existence, in which we are now embarked in Kansas.

On a call for "three cheers for GOV. WALKER,"

Mr. STANTON, in a very appropriate and neatly-conceived address, resigned his trust, as acting Governor, into the hands of his political superior, to whose character as a man, and abilities as a statesman, he paid a tribute of the warmest encomium.

Mr. BRINDLE proposed a complimentary toast to the Governor, which was honored with a thundering response of cheers.

Ex-Governor WILSON SHANNON, Colonel YOUNG, Judge ELMORE, Major DEAS, Mr. MARSHALL, Mr. PERRIN, Mr. COE, Gen. MCLEAN, and a number of other gentlemen were called to their feet by toasts in their honor, and made a succession of most admirable speeches.

In the evening, a ball was given at the hotel, which passed off with unprecedented éclat.

To-day, Gen. WILSON, of Massachusetts, passed through Lecompton, on his return from Topeka, where, in obedience to an unexpected requisition of the citizens, he addressed a large assemblage last night. He is now on his way to Iowa and Minnesota.

Governor ROBINSON has also been backwards and forwards here repeatedly of late, being interested to a large extent in a litigation, on which testimony is now being taken in the Land Office, as to the title under which a large amount of real estate (some half million dollars worth, it is said,) is held in the town of Lawrence. One party claims under a pre-emption right, and the other under an Indian float, which was obtained from the Delawares, and, it is alleged, was located subsequent to the settlement of the pre-emptors on the grounds the title to which is now in dispute.

There are many topics connected with the present state of parties in this Territory, and the character and probable results of the election of delegates to the Constitutional Convention to be held here in September next, which I do not see any particular necessity for troubling you with at present, but which, as soon as they assume sufficient importance, I shall probably allude to.

A Letter from Governor Robinson.

Correspondence of the Missouri Democrat.

The following is a copy of a letter in explanation of the proposition to Mr. STANTON by several citizens of Lawrence, and which Mr. BROWN, of the Herald of Freedom has been disposed to misrepresent. It is from the pen of Gov. ROBINSON to a gentleman of Lawrence.

LAWRENCE, K. T., Tuesday, May 19, 1857.

DEAR SIR: Some honest, and others not as honest, citizens of Kansas, apparently misapprehend the purport and intention of a certain letter addressed to Acting-Governor STANTON.

It will be remembered that Mr. BUCHANAN, in his inaugural speech, asserted "that the ballot-box should be sacredly protected," etc. (I have not his exact words.) Also, Mr. STANTON reiterated the same; while many, all over the country, including such men as the editors of the National Era and NEW-YORK TIMES, believed they were sincere, and that the Free-State men of Kansas ought to participate in the election of delegates to a constitutional convention, under the auspices of the territorial officers. The people of Kansas, as I suppose, believe these promises, like the "stump speech in the belly" of the Nebraska bill, to be made simply for effect, and to divert attention while a great fraud should be perpetrated.

The effect of that letter to Governor STANTON, as I understand it, was to show the impossibility of securing a fair election, with the present law and its officers, and to test the sincerity of the professions of the Administration. No humiliating compromises are proposed, and no selling out. The propositions are to set aside the Territorial laws and officers, and let the people select the census takers and judges of election; and this was only to be done should a Convention of the people of Kansas concur. There is no abandonment of the Topeka Constitution; for, had the Governor and the people accepted the propositions, delegates would have been elected who would have readopted that Constitution, and sent it up to Washington with additional claims for admission into the Union.

No persons can be more loyal to the Free-State Party than those who signed the letter to Gov. STANTON, with perhaps one exception; but our institutions are not yet established, and a change of tactics, not of principles, may be occasionally necessary; and the same convention of the people that would recommend one line of policy to-day, might, with propriety, with a change of front on the part of our opponents, recommend a different policy to-morrow.

I notice that some Washington correspondent has reported that "Free-State men, under the leadership of Governor ROBINSON, have resolved to cooperate with the endeavors of the Administration to secure a fair expression of the will of the people in relation to the question of slavery, and will abandon their previous policy of inactivity. This is not a matter of surmise, but is the explicit direction of Governor himself, and it has been communicated not only to the Government, but also to Mr. WALKER, who is still in New-York City.

No person has ever received any intimation from me that I favored any election with reference to the Constitutional Convention, except the same that is proposed in the letter to Governor STANTON, and how far that would "abandon our previous policy," each can judge for himself.

Truly yours,

C. ROBINSON.

NEW SCHOOL GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

DISCUSSION ON THE SLAVERY QUESTION.

STRONG ANTI-SLAVERY ACTION.

Secession of the Southern Delegation.

FINAL ADJOURNMENT.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Wednesday, June 3, 1857.

The long discussion on the vexed question of Slavery—the chief topic of debate in the present General Assembly—terminated this morning, and the vote which settled it resulted in what was so much desired by some and so much feared by others—a virtual separation of the Northern and the Southern Synods. The debate which has occupied the attention of the members for several days past, has been remarkable only in the vote to which it led, and not in the character of the discussion itself. The same question, although not in the same form, has been far more ably discussed in former General Assemblies, which, however, have never taken, as at present, such decided action as to sunder the ecclesiastical link between the North and the South. The last Assembly, in Madison square, New-York, witnessed a discussion which was, if not of more interest, at least of more ability than this. In fact, Slavery, while it has been the direct subject before the house, was called out but comparatively little argument "on its merits." The point at issue has been a question of measures. The "Bible argument" was conducted—so far as it was conducted at all, chiefly by laymen, and not designed to be thorough. The "Constitutional argument," or the argument on the constitutional powers of the General Assembly, in regard to its slaveholding members and churches, was the chief topic of consideration at the New-York Assembly last year—when a majority and a minority report on the subject were presented and discussed—and was this year belabored over again only to a small extent, and chiefly by the South.

The subject of Slavery was first introduced at the call of twenty-seven of the Presbytery represented in the Assembly, by memorials. These memorials were of various character and tone, coming almost entirely from the North, and asking in many different ways for "decided action," or more "unequivocal testimony" on the subject of Slavery, and in several instances recommending "discipline." Several of the memorials mentioned special individuals as proper subjects for the Assembly to try its hand upon, such as Dr. ROSS, of Huntsville, Ala., because of his extreme pro-Slavery doctrines, recently set forth in a series of letters to Rev. ALBERT BARNES; Rev. ROBERT MCLAIN, of Mississippi, for having publicly declared that he "held slaves for purposes of gain;" Rev. Dr. NEWTON, of the same State, for advancing the doctrine of the divinity of American Slavery; and Rev. WILLIAM P. HOLLEY, of Tennessee, for having said on the floor of the Assembly of last year that "he held slaves from principle and of choice." This gentleman, who took a conspicuous part in the debate of last year in New-York, has since died. A memorial from the Presbytery which he then represented, (the Presbytery of Lexington South, Mississippi,) was received by the Assembly, setting forth, first, that as the Synod of Western Reserve, Ohio—a strong Anti-Slavery body—had memorialized the Assembly to "discipline" Mr. HOLLEY for "holding slaves from principle and of choice," and, secondly, that though Mr. HOLLEY had since deceased, yet as many ministers, elders and church-members in that Presbytery held slaves in the same manner and from the same motives, that is, "from principle and of choice,"—therefore, the General Assembly, in considering the memorial from the Western Reserve, were invited by the Presbytery of Lexington South, to "transfer the charge from the dead to the living," and to take action against the entire Presbytery, equally as against Mr. HOLLEY, himself, if he were living. This was the most important memorial of the twenty-seven, and the only one that was mentioned in the report upon memorials which was presented by the Committee on Bills and Overtures.

The Report of this Committee brought the subject of Slavery before the house in its only legitimate manner. This document (which has already been published in the TIMES) took the ground that there are two sets of persons, holding "two sets of opinions" in the South. One of these classes the Report "condemned," while with the other it "tenderly sympathized." But the Southern men denied the existence of the first class of opinions, (to wit, that "Slavery is a desirable system, and ought to be perpetuated,") and so placed themselves under the second class, who regard Slavery as "undesirable," and as an "evil." Even Dr. ROSS said that he could vote for the Report, and that every other Southern man could do the same. It was evident, therefore, to the Northern men, that the Report was not the paper for them. It was, accordingly, rejected by the house—the North and the South uniting against it—while the only man who stood up in its defence was the Rev. BENJAMIN J. WALLACE, of Philadelphia, who was understood to be its author.

The first substitute offered for it was a paper by Hon. WILLIAM P. CUTLER, of Ohio. This substitute was the favorite of the extreme Northern men, who, however, were not sufficiently strong in numbers to carry it through. It consisted simply of two points: first, a declaration that the doctrine which holds the relation of master and slave to be a relation ordained of God, is a "fundamental error," or in other words a heresy;—secondly, an injunction upon the offending Presbytery to call its slaveholding members to trial, and to execute "discipline" upon them if found guilty.

A second substitute was offered by Prof. ALLEN, of Lane Seminary, the chief aim of which was to bring slaveholding under what the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church denominates, in its disciplinary code, "the sin of oppression." [This substitute has been published.]

The substitute was amended some three times after its presentation, by Rev. HENRY KENDALL, of Ontario Presbytery. This amendment was to strike the "specifications" in Dr. ALLEN's paper, and to substitute in its place a historic statement of the past action of the Assembly on the subject of Slavery. This paper, as thus amended, was finally adopted, and is as follows:

PAPER ADOPTED BY THE ASSEMBLY.

The General Assembly, in view of the memorials before them, and of the present relations of the Church to the subject of Slavery, feel called upon to make the following exposition of principle and duty:

The Presbyterian Church in these United States has, from the beginning, maintained an attitude of decided opposition to the institution of Slavery.

The Synods of New York and Philadelphia, in 1787, two years before the organization of the General Assembly, declared that they did "highly approve of the general principles in favor of universal liberty that prevailed in America, and the interest which many of the States had taken in promoting the abolition of Slavery;" and "they recommended it to all their people to use the most prudent measures consistent with the interest and state of civil society in the counties where they lived, to procure eventually the final abolition of Slavery in America."

In 1795, while the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church was in process of formation and publication, the action of the Synod just referred to was approved by the General Assembly, and republished by its order.

The Assembly of 1795 declared "that although in some sections of our country under certain circumstances the transfer of slaves may be unavoidable, yet they consider the buying and selling of slaves by way of traffic, and all undue severity in the management of them, as inconsistent with the spirit of the Gospel. And they recommend it to the Presbyteries and Sessions under their care to make use of all prudent measures to prevent such shameful and unrighteous conduct."

The Assembly of 1816 "expressed their regret that the slavery of the Africans and of their descendants still continued in so many places, and even among those within the pale of the church," and called particular attention to the action of 1795 with respect to the buying and selling of slaves.

In 1818 the Assembly unanimously adopted a report on this subject, prepared by Dr. GREEN, of Philadelphia; Dr. BAXTER, of Virginia, and Mr. BURGESS, of Ohio, of which the following is a part:

"We consider the voluntary enslaving of one portion of the human race by another as a gross violation of the most precious and sacred rights of human nature; as utterly inconsistent with the law of God, which requires us to love our neighbors as ourselves, and as totally irreconcilable with the spirit and principles of the Gospel of Christ, which enjoins that 'all things whatsoever he would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them.' Slavery creates a paradox in the moral system: it exhibits rational, accountable, and immortal beings in such circumstances as scarcely to leave them the power of moral action. It exhibits them as dependent on the will of others whether they shall receive religious instruction; whether they shall know and worship the true God; whether they shall enjoy the ordinances of the Gospel; whether they shall perform the duties or cherish the endearments of husbands, wives, parents and children, neighbors and friends; whether they shall preserve their chastity and purity, or regard the dictates of justice and humanity. Such are some of the consequences of Slavery—consequences not imaginary, but which connect themselves with its very existence. The evils to which the slave is always exposed often take place in fact, and in their very worst degree and form; and when all of them do not take place, as we rejoice to say in many instances, through the influence of the principles of humanity and religion on the minds of masters, they do not—still the slave is deprived of his natural right, degraded as a human being, and exposed to the danger of passing into the hands of a master who may inflict upon him all the hardships and injuries which inhumanity and avarice may suggest.

From this view of the consequences resulting from the practice into which Christian people have most inconsistently fallen, of enslaving a portion of their brethren of mankind—for God hath made of one blood all nations of men to dwell on the face of the earth—it is manifestly the duty of all Christians who enjoy the light of the present day, when the inconsistency of Slavery, both with the dictates of humanity and religion, has been demonstrated and is generally seen and acknowledged, to use their best efforts, and unremitted endeavors to correct the errors of former times, and as speedily as possible to efface this blot on our holy religion, and to obtain the complete abolition of Slavery throughout Christendom, and, if possible, throughout the world.

The Assembly also recommended "to all the members of our religious denomination, not only to permit but also to facilitate the instruction of slaves in the principles and duties of the Christian religion," and added, "We enjoin on all Church Sessions and Presbyteries under the care of this Assembly to discountenance, and as far as possible to prevent all cruelty of whatever kind in the treatment of slaves, especially the cruelty of separating husband and wife, parents and children, and that which consists in selling slaves to those who will either themselves deprive them unhappy people of the blessings of the Gospel, or who will transport them to places where the Gospel is not proclaimed, or where it is forbidden to slaves to attend upon its institutions."

The foregoing testimonials on the subject of Slavery were unanimously acquiesced in by the Presbyterian Church up to the time of the division in 1838.

In the year 1846 the General Assembly made a declaration on this subject, of which the following is the introductory paragraph:

"1. The system of Slavery as it exists in these United States, viewed either in the laws of the several States which sanction it, or in its actual operations and results in society, is intrinsically an unrighteous and oppressive system, and is opposed to the prescriptions of the law of God, to the precepts and spirit of the Gospel, and to the best interests of humanity."

In 1850 the Assembly explicitly reaffirmed the sentiments expressed by the Assemblies of 1845, 1818 and 1846. In the year 1856 the General Assembly made the following declaration: "We exceedingly deplore the working of the whole system of Slavery as it exists in our country and as interwoven with the political institutions of the Slaveholding States, as fraught with many and great evils to the civil, political and moral interests of those regions where it exists.

"In the holding of our fellow-men in the condition of Slavery, except in those cases when it is unavoidable by the laws of the State, the obligations of guardianship or the demands of humanity, is an offence in the proper import of that term as used in the Book of Discipline, chap. 1, sec. 3, and should be regarded and treated in the same manner as other offences."

Occupying the position in relation to this subject, which the framers of our Constitution held at the first, and which our Church has always held, it is with deep grief that we now discover that a portion of the Church at the South has so far departed from the established doctrine of the Church in relation to Slavery, as to maintain "it is an ordinance of God," and that the system of Slavery existing in these United States is Scriptural and right. Against this new doctrine we feel constrained to bear our solemn testimony. It is at war with the whole spirit and tenor of the Gospel of love and good will, as well as inherent in the conscience and the Christian world. We can have no sympathy or fellowship with it; and we exhort all our people to eschew it as serious and pernicious error.

We are especially pained by the fact that the Presbytery of Lexington South have given official notice to us that a number of ministers and ruling elders, as well as many church members in their bounds, hold slaves "from principle" and "of choice," believing it to be according to the Bible right," and have, without any qualifying explanation, assumed the responsibility of sustaining such ministers, elders and church members in their position. We deem it our duty, in the exercise of our constitutional authority, "to bear testimony against error in doctrine or immorality in practice in any church, Presbytery or Synod," to disapprove and earnestly condemn this position which has been taken by the Presbytery of Lexington South, as one which is opposed to the established convictions of the Presbyterian Church, and must operate to mar its pe that she gave was, that "he might not live to let the house or sign the paper."

Q.—Do you remember the color of the Doctor's hair? A.—Yes; it was pretty much like your own (very gray) until he got it dyed, only a little more sandy; his whiskers, until he got them dyed, were sandy and gray together; they were so in the Fall, and he got them dyed then; he was going somewhere; I cannot say how late in the Fall; they did not stay long undyed; he mostly kept them dyed; he was a neat man, and kept his whiskers clipped, and about the chin pretty much like the way Mr. Clinton has his, but not so long; I wish (with energy) I could get at him (Mr. Clinton) some day, and I'd —— (clinching her hand significantly.)

Q.—When you were in the bath room did you hear any declaration or charge from Mrs. Cunningham in regard to marriage? A.—She said, "You have done me wrong, and I am going to enter a law-suit against you;" she came down to me and asked me if I could not testify to what she said; she said she would sue him for breach of promise of marriage.

Q.—Where did Mrs. Cunningham sleep in November and December? A.—I could not say, but believe she slept in the front room, third story; I had occasion to go there for orders about breakfast, and found her there late in the evening; I always knocked at the door, and she would bid me walk in, or let me in; she would sit in her seat and give me orders; I never saw the lady do anything wrong in my life; I went there from ten to eleven o'clock at night for orders; I have knocked at the door in the morning, in Summer time, for money to go to market; she answered me always herself; in November and December I did not want to go to market, and did not trouble the door in the morning; there was a bed in that room; have often seen her in her night clothes sitting in the chair at night.

Q.—At the time of this row, the Saturday before the Doctor's death, you mentioned that Miss Helen called the Doctor up stairs; where was he when she spoke to him? A.—In the hall, at the front door; I heard no remark by her as to her mother signing a paper.

Cross-examined by Mr. Clinton.—I went to live with Mrs. Cunningham six days before May, a year ago; I first went to live in the house with Mrs. Jones, two months before New-Year's; Mrs. Burdell was boarding in the house when I went there; Mr. Hart and his family, and others (naming them) were boarding there then; Mrs. Burdell occupied an attic room inside of ours; sometimes she slept with Miss Hubbard; after New-Year's she went to sleep in Miss Hubbard's room; Mrs. Hubbard and her husband were living in the house when I went there; he soon after went away; Miss Hubbard went away at New-Year's; Mrs. Burdell then occupied her room, a little hall bedroom, off the Doctor's office; she occupied it until May; after May she moved into the front room, third floor.

Q.—Can you tell in what month Mr. Ulmann came to the house? A.—No; I suppose you have that down in your book. (Other questions were put, to test the witness's memory, with no other result than that of making her more impatient, and increasing the "amiable" feelings she evidently entertains for Mr. Clinton.)

Q.—What time of night did you generally get orders for breakfast from Mrs. Cunningham? A.—About 10 o'clock.

Q.—When you discovered the child in the chamber, did you mention it to Mrs. Jones? A.—Yes, I did, and to the chambermaid, and Mrs. Jones' sister; it was kept for two days in the house by them, after I showed it to them. Now (impatiently) what more do you want to make about it? Mrs. Jones called it an "abortion;" I called it a "miscarriage."

Q.—Did the Doctor ever go into the kitchen to examine the bread? A.—No; he told Mrs. Cunningham that there was too much victuals left in the closet; that the mice ran over them, and that she had better go to a hotel, and give up house; he did not cover up the dishes down stairs.

Q.—At the murder trial were you asked "did the Doctor go to the kitchen and cover up the dishes" and did you answer "he did." A.—You asked me "did the Doctor take any interest in the affairs of the kitchen?" and I said "he did."

Q.—What interest did he take? A.—He came down to see if the mice were ketched in the trap; I saw him often fighting about the coal and wood being burned too fast in the kitchen; but the Doctor and Mrs. Cunningham had seperate coal and wood; he thought we burned his coal when we ran out, but I did not.

Q.—On the murder trial were you asked: "what did the Doctor say about the bread (and other matters in the kitchen?" and did you answer that he said "the bread ought not to lie there exposed in this way?" A.—For the victuals to be exposed with the mice running over them; I did answer that and do now; he never covered the dishes; Mrs. Burdell told me not to contradict or dispute the Doctor; she told me to treat the Doctor kindly, and let him have his own way; the object of setting the trap was to prevent the mice getting into the victuals; he came down to examine the trap every day; Mrs. Cunningham took care of the Doctor's clothes, up to the time of his death, but it is was me who did the work; with the exception of the difficulties I have mentioned, the Doctor and Mrs. Cunningham were kind and social; after they would have words the next minute they would be as friendly as ever; there never was a lady came into the house but there would be a dispute, but when you saw them again, you would not think anything had happened: Mrs. Cunningham would always use him kindly when he was kind to her himself; he was a rough kind of a man; when I first saw a difficulty between Mrs. Cunningham and the Doctor was after Miss Hubbard went to the country; he wanted to bring her back, and she was against it; when Mrs. Burdell took the house, Miss Hubbard was brought back by the Doctor; there were difficulties about other ladies; it was not one lady the poor Doctor was accused with; there was no difficulty except about women coming to the house; she always said he had wronged her and her family, and so he had; he ought to have married her and have done with it; she was good enough for him; she charged the Doctor with having improper intercourse with Miss Hubbard.

Q.—Did you ever see Miss Hubbard go into the Doctor's room in her night clothes?

[Mr. Edwards objected to the question, as casting imputations on a lady who had nothing to do with the case. Mr. Dean pressed the question, to show the relations between Mrs. Cunningham and the Doctor, and the cause she had for quarreling with Dr. Burdell on the subject of his intimacy with Miss Hubbard, or Mrs. Vorst.

The Surrogate said he would allow any evidence that might throw light on the relations between the parties, but would admit only what was brought to the attention of Mrs. Cunningham.]

Q.—While Miss Hubbard, [Vourt,] was living at No. 31 Bond-street, did you communicate, at any time, to Mrs. Cunningham, anything about Miss Hubbard going down stairs in her night clothes? A.—Mrs. Cunningham told me to watch; I did watch; did not see her go into the Doctor's room, but saw her go down stairs, and into the bath; I told that to Mrs. Cunningham; this was when they were all going to bed; she had got up and went down; it was between ten and eleven o'clock; Miss Hubbard slept in the attic at that time; I came out of my room and looked over the bannisters; she was in her night clothes; this was before the 4th of July last—I think in the beginning of July; Mrs. Cunningham made me put my shoes to the door of the attic, to see if it would be opened before morning, but it was not; Miss Hubbard had got back to her room before I put my shoes to the door.

Q.—State about the next night. A.—The next night Mrs. Cunningham made me put a large chest to the door, so that, if moved, we would hear it; it was not moved; shortly after that Miss Hubbard went away.

Q.—How long did Miss Hubbard stay in the bath-room? A.—About ten or fifteen minutes; Mrs. Cunningham always had had feelings with regard to Miss Hubbard after the Doctor brought her back to the house to board; Mrs. Cunningham told the Doctor not to bring her back, that she should not come there, that they were connected together, and she was a bad woman and she would not have her there; the Doctor said it was none of her business, and that it was his house and he would fetch her there if he dam'd please; Mrs. Cunningham charged the Doctor with having sexual intercourse with Miss Hubbard, and she said she should not be in the house where she was and her daughters; the Doctor never took Mrs. Cunningham out during the time Miss Hubbard was there, but always took Miss Hubbard out; that was the first cause of quarrel between the Doctor and Mrs. Cunningham; Mrs. Cunningham did not allow the Doctor to bring back Miss Hubbard to the house, but she came to visit the Doctor to the time of his death; she was there the day he was killed.

Q.—Do you recollect of Mr. Eckel coming there? A.—I do; a bookcase bedstead came there then, and went into Mr. Eckel's room; the way I knew it came was I saw it in the room the same day; Dr. Burdell was not there then; about that time I did not see the Doctor go out with Mrs. Cunningham and Miss Angnata; I saw them go out frequently together before the trouble came between them; I was in the kitchen at one time when we thought the boiler would burst; Mrs. Cunningham told the Doctor to stand back, that it would burst and kill us all; he said she was foolish, that all it wanted was air.

Q.—On the murder trial did you not, in answer to a question of the District-Attorney, say you did not go into the bath-room to listen? A.—No, I did not say I did not go.

Q.—Were you asked, on the Coroner's inquest, to state all Mrs. Cunningham said at the time you told her of Mrs. Stansbury's visit? A.—Yes; I told Mrs. Stanabury, at the inquest, that Mrs. Cunningham said the Doctor might not live to sign the lease.

Q.—On the murder trial did you tell the Jury that you did not tell Mrs. Stansbury what Mrs. Cunningham said? A.—I do not know whether I did or not; now make what you can of that; I'll fix some of them when this trial is over, I'll engage, (with animus.)

Q.—Did you swear on the murder trial that the first person you told of this threat by Mrs. Cunningham to was Mrs. Foster, the matron of the prison? A.—I said I first told it to Mrs. Stansbury, and the next person was to Mrs. Foster.

Q.—Did Mrs. Burdell call the Doctor "Harvey," when she spoke to him? A.—Sometimes she did, and sometimes she did not.

Q.—Was the Doctor rather excitable? A.—He was pretty easy excited on a great many things.

Q.—For how long had the Doctor been in the habit of dyeing his hair? A.—I don't know; it was pretty much black always from being dyed; he wore whiskers last Fall; they were a while black, and part white; don't know whether they ever came so around the face; when his hair was not dyed it was partly gray and sandy; did not pay particular attention to the dates; I did not think these things were to come, and did not bother my mind about dates; I once had a gentleman married to me, and then had no bother; since I went to her I had plenty of bother; Mrs. Cunningham owes me wages for four months and a half.

Q.—On the night of the murder did not the Doctor tell you if a tall man came, to make him wait for him, (the Doctor?) A.—Yes, Sir, both nights—on that Friday and on the Saturday before; on Friday, when going to dinner, he told me if a tall man came to see him to tell him to wait, and he would be in between nine o'clock and ten o'clock; he did not mention the name of the tall man; I did not hear of his coming either of the nights.

Re Direct.—There was a water-closet in the bath-room; during the time Miss Hubbard was boarding in the house in May and June, the Doctor took his meals in the house, and until two or three weeks after he return from the country; he did not take his meals in the house after that; Mrs. Cunningham sent for me yesterday, and offered to pay me some of the wages due me, but I would not take some until I got all; she was at Mrs. Willis' house, in Second-avenue, No. 33; Mrs. Cunningham and me had some pretty sharp words together; she said she had paid my wages to John Gilmartin; I told her she had no right.

Q.—Who was John Gilmartin? A.—I believe he was a friend of the parties; he is the "mysterious John;" I might as well say it out.

Further Cross-Examined.—I have been at the house in Bond-street to see Mrs. Cunningham about my wages since the Doctor's death; I went to the house to see Miss Helen; there was a dispute between Mrs. Cunningham and myself yesterday; I think there is four and a half months' wages due to me; she claimed that there was only a few dollars due me; since the murder trial I have been staying at my sister in-law's; none of the other side were to see me; a policeman brought me the subpœna; Mrs. Cunningham never sent for me to the Tombs. "Well, gentleman," said this beautiful and modest creature on retiring, "I hope you have done with me." [Laughter.]

EVIDENCE OF MR. ROBERTS.

Edward L. Roberts, being sworn, testified that he is a dentist by profession, now manufacturing dental materials at No. 55 Bond-street; I knew Harvey Burdell since 1855—some two or three years; have known Mrs. Emma A. Cunningham; I was a partner with Dr. Burdell, in the practice of dentistry, both mechanical and surgical; in the Fall of 1855 I commenced with him; we made a definite agreement in January, 1856, and I remained with him until about the 1st of June following.

Q.—Did you ever receive a message to come to the house No. 31 Bond street? A.—I had a number; I always went; I sometimes saw Dr. Burdell when I went; there was one time when I received a message purporting to come from him, when on going there I saw Mrs. Cunningham and I had a conversation with her; she said that she had sent for me in the name of Dr. Burdell; this was, I think, about six weeks or two months after I heard of the breach of promise suit; it was pretty cold weather if I recollect right; she said she wished to see me to have a talk with me; I think this was the last of November or the first of December; when I was going up the stairs Mrs. Cunningham came to the door and said the Doctor was not in, that she had sent for me; she made some remark as to a conversation the Doctor had had with me, and that some one of the family had overheard it; that conversation was some time previous; I understood her that she had overheard two or three conversations; those conversations were in relation to the breach of promise case; after this I had two interviews with Mrs. Cunningham; one morning while the suit of Warner against Griffen was pending I went into the Doctor's office and he asked me how the patent suit came on; I said that it had patent suit was worse than a good breach of promise case; the Doctor always said to me and so did Mrs. Cunningham that it was not a breach of promise case, but a breach of contract as to renting the house between him and Mrs. Cunningham; shortly afterwards Mrs. Cunningham sent for me, and told me not to say anything more to the Doctor about it for it irritated him; she made no disparaging allusions to the Doctor at this time; I think the last interview I had with her was on the last of November or first of December, when she sent round for me; she said she had understood I had said a good deal about the breach of promise case; I said I had not mentioned it; she spoke of the Doctor; I said I considered she thought a good deal of the Doctor, and wanted to marry him; she said she would not marry him; she said she did not want to marry him—that she had more money than he had, that her family was well educated, went into good society, and that she would not marry a man who loathed her; previous to this she had sent for me, and she said she did not want me to speak to Burdell about the breach of promise case—that it made him mad, and irritated him; that he had got a gun, and she was afraid he would shoot her, or some of the family; I had been informed it was a breach of promise case, and I asked her why she did not renew the breach of promise suit again; she said she had been to her counsel to do so, and he would not have anything to do with it, because she had dropped the first one; the Doctor had often spoken of the breach of promise suit from the time it was instituted up to the 1st of December?

Q. —In any of these conversations was anything said about an attempt to poison? A.—I had a conversation with Mrs. Cunningham on the subject about a paper parcel found in the house; she showed me a paper parcel containing arsenic, and told me about her family being sick, and Demis Hubbard not being sick; she said she found the paper under the matting in Demis Hubbard's room; she said she did not know what it meant, and asked me what I thought of it; I mentioned it to the Doctor, and he said "it is all stuff" and then seemed to meditate over it; the Doctor told me the suits had been discontinued; Mrs. Cunningham also told me in speaking of his business matters that she knew if she went on with the suits it would ruin him; that the Doctor felt very bad; she was afraid he would go crazy; that he cried, and she out of pity discontinued the suits; I never understood from the Doctor that it was anything but a breach of contract for the house; he said he had shut up the parlors and she took proceedings against him; that he pledged himself to be the friend and protector of her and her family, and he was going to do so.

Cross-examination by Mr. Clinton.—Up to a month before the Doctor's death I called often at No. 31 Bond-street; never had any personal feeling against Mrs. Cunningham; the Doctor had stated some little matters that caused me to have some feelings against her and her family; since the death of Dr. Burdell I may have been prejudiced against her a good deal; I generally have expressed as my opinion that she murdered him; I told those things to the District-Attorney before the murder trial; never saw any improper conduct on the part of Mrs. Cunningham and her daughters toward Doctor Burdell; on the contrary I respected them very highly while I was there; in his presence their conduct was kind and attentive; have seen the Doctor and Mrs. Cunningham walking out together; have met them in Bond-street; one time I went with them to call on a friend in Forty second street, a respectable house; have heard them speak of being at Niblo's and other places of public amusement together; did not see any particular attention from him to her; she treated him with more attention than he did her; still he might have considered it a good deal of attention, for he was not very gallant; I have seen them in the street walking arm in arm.

Q.—Have you not told him that he would marry that widow yet? A.—I do not recollect using that language; I think I said "You had better marry her;" the Doctor always said he would not marry any woman; he has said something to the effect that he would rather take the old woman than the young ladies of the family; I heard of the suits within a week after they were commenced; during the trial of Warner vs. Griffin I spoke of it as being as bad as a breach of promise suit; when the Doctor told me of the suits being settled, he said they were settled without paying any money; she represented to me that she had discontinued them out of pity; the Doctor has mentioned to me a number of times about going to Europe; a year ago last Fall he spoke of going to Europe in the Spring; he may have said last Fall that he intended to go this Spring, but I do not recollect; he has told me that Mrs. Cunningham was worth $200,000; before last Fall he spoke of her always in respectable terms—more so than I ever knew him to speak of a lady; never heard him speak against her until after the law suits, and he never said anything very bad then; he was quick in temper, speech and motion; sometimes when you thought he was over a temper he was not; Mrs. Cunningham told me in relation to the arsenic, that one night while Demis Hubbard was there, she and her daughters had taken supper and were sick, and Demis Hubbard had not eaten supper and was not sick; she described the symptoms of arsenic; when speaking to me in relation to the gun she told me it irritated the Doctor to speak of the suits; she told me she had overheard a conversation between me and the Doctor, and the Doctor told her what it was; when the Doctor said Mrs. Cunningham was worth $200,000, he said she told him so; he had seen the deeds of the property; I think he said she showed them to him; when he spoke of the suits being settled he said that it looked well on Mrs. Cunningham's part, that she did not want any money.

TESTIMONY OF REV. DR. COX.

Sworn and examined by Mr. Tilden.—Are you a minister of the Gospel? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Your residence, Doctor? A.—No. 63 East Thirty-eighth-street.

Q.—You are rector of Zion Church? A.—I am.

Q.—Did you know the late Harvey Burdell? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long have you been acquainted with him? A.—Up to the time of his death, between ten and eleven years.

Q.—During how long a period past have you seen him frequently? A.—I had not seen him for months until about within a fortnight of his death.

Q.—Did you have any conversation with him at any time previous to this intermission? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long was this interval during which you did not see much of him? A.—Many months; I had no acquaintance with him excepting professionally; I never met him but twice out, as far as I can remember; he was in the habit of talking familiarly with me when I saw him.

Q.—Did he have any conversation with you as to Mrs. Cunningham, in regard to his affairs in the house previously to these three or four weeks? A.—No.

Q.—About what time was it that you first saw him in this latter period? A.—About the middle of January; I can fix this time positively from the fact that there had been a party at the house the previous evening, as he said, to which he referred, apologizing as I suppose for the confusion in which the parlor in the house were.

Q.—What did he say? A.—He said: "These folks had a party here last night, and I did not attend it."

Q.—How was his manner? A.—He usually spoke in a loud rapid tone, accompanied with nervous twitching.

Q.—When next did you see him after that? A.—I saw him nearly every other day upon an average from that time within the ensuing two weeks; I had a tooth which required careful attention, and which required me to go and see him sometimes with a view of his determining when he should fill it.

Q.—Did he make any suggestions to you in respect to his renting the house in which he lived? A.—He did; he spoke to me freely of his affairs; I will state this more particularly by way of explanation; previous to going to college I was engaged in the business of trading, and he seemed from e knowledge of that fact to be fond of speaking to me about his business; he said he had rented that house to a Mrs. Cunningham, and that he had had trouble with her, and intended to get clear of her, and was making arrangements with Mr. and Mrs. Stansbury (Mr. Stansbury being employed in the office of the New-York Express) to rent his house.

Q.—What did he say about them? A.—He inquired if I knew them; I told him that I was unacquainted with Mrs. Stanshury, but that I knew her husband and thought very highly of him, with which he seemed gratified.

Q.—Did he mention his own impressions of Mrs. Stansbury? A.—I do not think he did, Sir.

Q.—Can you narrate anything that occurred in any of these conversations bearing upon his relations to other persons in the house? A.—No, Sir; the remarks that were made with respect to them were very brief and incidental; (after a pause)—I now call to mind that he considered himself watched, and so remarked to me; on one occasion he arrested the conversation in which we were engaged, and said, "Stop a moment," in his own nervous manner, and stepped out into the hall, and after being absent a short time returned and said: "There that woman is in the back room listening to what we are saying, but she has gone up stairs now," and then added: "it is strange how curious and inquisitive women are;" in this connection I would add that I observed him to be particularly nervous, more especially so during these last visits than I have ever known him before; and when the door-bell would ring, I no hearing it, he would leave me and go into the hall to observe what was transpiring; when he came back he made no explanation of his conduct except he would say, "Please to excuse me, Sir," or some such remark.

Q.—When did you last see him? A.—The day I suppose him to have been killed—the last Friday in January; I left him about 3 o'clock that afternoon; on that day I conversed with him again in reference to his affairs generally—his property, of which he seemed to be always particularly proud and vain, and also we conversed with reference to matrimony. Let me here state that on the previous day at his office he had said to me with a great deal of emphasis, that he had never been married within that fortnight, and meant never to be married, and, assigned as a reason that he had no confidence in the sex; "This," said he, "I say now to you; (I have never mentioned it before to anybody, but that is the reason why I have never been married." On the last day during the time that he was operating on my tooth, which took a considerable time, for the tooth was obliged to have three fillings, he repeated in substance the same remark, and I child him for it; I will here add, as pertinent to the case, that in those conversations Mrs. Cunningham's name did not occur; he once referred to her as a widow of some property; that one of her two daughters was excessively accomplished in music, &c.; that she was a person of attractions; but his more general way of referring to Mrs. Cunningham, when her name occurred incidentally, was as, "This woman," which I thought disrespectful, presuming her to be in every respect a lady.

Q.—When was this that he mentioned her as a woman having some property? A.—In the course of these interviews held during this last fortnight before his death; I had known nothing of Mrs. Cunningham previous to that time at all.

Q.—When you left the room the last time you were there did you observe anything? A.—Yes; being under the impression from his remarks that he was watched, I very naturally looked up stairs as I was leaving the house, and I observed Mrs. Cunningham leaning over the bannisters; it is not just that I should say here that, with the exception of his speaking of having had some trouble with her, and speaking of her as "this woman," as he frequently did, he never said anything to me derogatory of her.

Q.—Did he say anything about getting her out of the house? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did he say about that? A.—He said he was going to get her out of the house and substitute Mrs. Stansbury; he gave me to understand that the present arrangement interfered so much with his comfort that he must do so.

Cross-examined by Mr. Clinton.—Q.—You say that the Doctor spoke to you about Mrs. Stansbury, did he inquire as to her respectability, or anything of that kind? A.—No; the simple remark was: "Do you know them?" referring to her husband and herself.

Q.—Did he speak as though he wanted to find out from you what their standing was? A.—No; there was no particular anxiety manifested.

Q.—Did he mention the fact that he had known Mrs. Stansbury for some twenty years? A.—I think he said he did know her, but he did not specify the time.

Q.—When he said that the claimant here was a woman of some property, did he mention anything as to the amount that he supposed her to possess? A.—The impression I can give you, but not as language; the property seemed not to be considerable.

Q.—What was his language? A.—That she was the widow of George D. Cunningham, who left her perhaps a few thousands of dollars; I cannot give you his precise language.

Q.—Did he say that she was a woman of some property, or did he name any particular amount? A.—No; he no named no particular amount.

Q.—Did he on more than one occasion speak to you as to having difficulties with her? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—When was that? On the day on which he was killed? A.—No; before.

Q.—About how long before? A.—It might have been as much as a week before; I saw Mrs. Stanbury there the day of the murder, but he made no remark to me then respecting her business.

Q.—When he told you that he had had difficulties with Mrs. Cunningham did he state what they were? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did he tell you that he was watched on more than one occasion? A.—Yes; several times he alluded to that fact.

Q.—Did he tell you why he was watched? A.—No.

Q.—Or what object there was in it? A.—No.

Q.—Or what right this lady had to watch him? A.—No.

Q.—And you did not inquire? A.—No.

Q.—Did he tell you at any time what were the relations existing between him and this lady? A.—No, only further than that he had rented the house to her and that he did not board there.

Q.—When was it that he spoke and used the expression that he had no confidence in the sex—how long before his death? A.—The first time he used that was perhaps a week before his death, and in substance the same remark was made on the day of his death.

Q.—Did he say that he intended always to remain a bachelor? A.—He did not use that language; he said he never had married, and never would do so; he spoke of the cunning of the sex; he said it was dangerous for him to trust himself in their way, as he was sure to be circumvented.

Q.—Did you meet Dr. Blaisdell there on the Friday of his death? A.—Yes, about two o'clock, I think; I had no conversation with him, but merely exchanged salutations.

Q.—Did you see Dr. Blaisdell there more than once that day? A.—No.

Q.—Was he in the Doctor's office? A.—No.

Q.—Where was he? A.—I was waiting for the Doctor down stairs in the porlor; he had requested me to wait a little time; while I was in the back parlor Mr. Blaisdell came in, and stopped out again immediately; the Doctor was engaged at this time with Mrs. Stansbury and a lady whom I took to be her mother.

Whether Blaisdell went into the street or up stairs you do not know? A.—I cannot tell when he went.

Q.—Did you go up stairs and see the Doctor after that? A.—No, he came and saw me; I parted with him in the back parlor about three o'clock.

Q.—Where was Dr. Blaisdell while Burdell was talking with you? A.—I don't know; I had supposed he went into the street; I thought I heard him treading towards the front door.

Q.—Won't not immediately after his leaving the parlor? A.—Yes, very shortly after.

Q.—That was the only occasion on which you had seen Dr. Blaisdell there that day? A.—The only occasion, as far as I recollect that I ever saw Dr. Blaisdell there at all.

Q.—What was the subject of conversation which brought out the remark from Dr. Burdell that he had no confidence in the sex? A.—The general subject of woman kind, matrimony and the like.

Q.—Did he say anything in that connection about having procured a divorce for a cousin of his—Miss Dennis Hubbard? A.—I think not in that connection, although I do not know but that it might have been; the thing was two or three times spoken of; he said he had obtained a divorce for Mrs. Verse, or Miss Hubbard, from her husband; he spoke of how much better such cases should go to a reference; that he had found no difficulty in obtaining a divorce for that cousin; that she had been very much injured by the man, her husband, whom he had had in his employ, who had turned out to be a very bad man; it took him only six weeks to get the divorce from the time it was commenced, and that the man was then away from the City, but had since returned.

Q.—When was it he told you that he thought that the man had since returned? A.—Had returned and gone away again subsequently to the divorce; he said that he had procured evidence for the divorce himself.

Q.—Were you acquainted with Dr. Blaisdell before you saw him that day? A.—Yes.

Q.—Had you any business other than dentistry with Dr. Burdell? A.—There was an incidental business that came up between him and myself growing out of my visit; I did not expect to see Dr. Blaisdell there that day at all; my impression is, that I never made no appointment to meet Dr. Blaisdell there; I may possibly know a Mr. Durkee, but not Mr. Moore.

Q.—Had you, during those two weeks, at any of these interviews at which you called upon Dr. Burdell, or at any other time paid him any sums of money for any business other than dentistry?

The Witness.—(Very much excited.)—I am very thankful to Mr. Clinton for having asked me that question, and I now here in the face of God, most solemnly asseverate that I never gave him in any other that what I have paid him for the work he did. Otherwise I never paid him a cent. I am under great obligations to Mr. Clinton for having [brought] this question out before us.

Q.—Either for himself to hold, or to be paid to another person? A.—No, neither; in every way in which it can be properly construed.

Q.—You never paid or agreed to pay any money to him (Burdell) in which Blaisdell was to have an interest? A.—I answer that again in the negative; I must now beg leave to say, in this connection, that Doctor Burdell again and again reiterated that he neither expected or received any remuneration, and that the principal aid he expected to furnish me was Mrs. Cunningham, who knew matters very material to my case; Dr. Burdell told me on the last day that "this woman" (Mrs. Cunningham) knew something more important to my divorce case than any other person, but that she was not willing to talk with me upon the subject, as she declined to betray a woman; further offered to introduce Mrs. Cunningham to me but I refused to comply; Mr. Burdell never told me that Mrs. Cunningham said she would never betray a secret.

Q.—At this time was not Dr. Burdell interesting himself in your case for you? A.—He was.

MRS. ANN BENJAMIN'S TESTIMONY.

This lady swore that she was a daguerreotypist; that Dr. Burdell called on her on the 25th January of the present year, to have four daguerreotypes taken of himself, which were well executed; one of these were produced, which she considered an exact likeness of the deceased Doctor; she had previously met him at Saratoga.

The Court then adjourned to Monday, the 8th June, at 10 o'clock A. M.

IMPORTANT DECISION OF THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT.—An important political decision has been announced by the British government in relation to the allegiance of subjects and the duty of the government to afford protection. The doctrine of "once a subject, always a subject," is abandoned. The case in regard to which the decision is made is that of Mr. LAWLESS, a merchant of Granada, and a non combatant in the late Nicaraguan troubles. He was dragged out of his house and shot by the Guatemalens when they took Granada. He was formerly a British subject, but become a naturalized citizen of the United States. His mother applied to the British government for compensation for the loss of her son's life and property. The reply was that he had renounced his allegiance by becoming a citizen of the United States, and was not entitled to British protection. The decision is stated in a letter from Lord Clarendon.—Wash. Cor. Baltimore Sun.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

We received last night important letters from our special Kansas correspondent, with Governor WALKER's Inaugural Address, delivered at Lecompton, on the 27th ult. It is proper to state—as a cotemporary has amused itself by giving in advance supposed portions of Gov. WALKER's address—that the genuine document is published this morning for the first time in New-York. It is an able and impartial statement of the Kansas issue, and taking the broad practical ground that the question of Slavery in the Territory shall be decided by the people themselves, and that they shall be free from all violence in the exercise of the franchise. We do not doubt but that Gov. WALKER's address will meet with approbation from all parties. It merits the attention of the country.

General WALKER, accompanied by Colonel LOCKRIDGE, reached Memphis, Tenn., yesterday on his way to Washington.

Some important and very singular testimony was elicited yesterday in the Burdell investigation before the Surrogate. Dr. ED. A. L. ROBERTS, a previous partner of Dr. BURDELL, stated that on the occasion of Mrs CUNNINGHAM's sending for him to converse on the subject of the lawsuit that had existed between her and the Doctor, she produced a packet of arsenic, which she said had been found under the matting of Dennis HUBBARD's room; that on one occasion Mrs. CUNNINGHAM and daughter had been suddenly taken sick at supper, of which meal DENNIS did not partake, and that from subsequent indications there was little doubt but that they had been poisoned. The witness further testified that Dr. BURDELL had intimated to him that Mrs CUNNINGHAM was worth some $200,000, and that he himself had seen the title deed, &c, of her estate. Mrs CUNNINGHAM had also informed Dr. ROBERTS that she would never marry BURDELL, as he was a man who loathed her. Dr. COX testified, among other curious things, that he never paid Dr. BLAISDELL any money except for professional services.

A great many appointments were made yesterday, by the old Police Commissioners, WOOD and RUSSELL, to fill the vacancies caused in the Ninth, Fifth, and other Wards, by the headlong rush to the new Commissioners' cause. Recorder SMITH sent in a letter to the General Superintendent, naming a list of Policemen whom he wished detailed at the Court of General Sessions. The officers named were ordered forthwith for duty at that Court. A Metropolitan Police-station was opened, last evening, at Olderdonk' Hall, in Grand-street, and at that place eight men reported themselves for duty, under command of Sergeant STEERS. Five men in the Twentieth Ward have also declared for the new Board.

The force at Seguine's Point had got on peaceably down to last night in the erection of their own temporary shelter. An occasional visitor passes, casting furtive glances at the sturdy policemen, and now and then one stops and argues the matter and predicts trouble. The men are in good spirits and mean to stand their ground. The rumor which circulates on the island that LEWIS BAKER is among the Police force at Seguine's Point is untrue—neither BAKER or any other such man is among the number.

An application was made to Judge INGERSOLL, in the United States Circuit Court, yesterday, for a habeas corpus to inquire into the cause of the detention of PAROT, one of the French fugitives, on allegations that he had been discharged from custody once and taken again without any new warrant. Judge INGERSOLL, however, declined to issue the writ without further cause shown, as it did not appear that the Marshal had any right to discharge him and could therefore retake him on the former warrant.

In the United States District Court yesterday the cases of the brig Ellen and schooner Merchan were called on, and the prosecution not being ready and showing no sufficient excuse for delay, the cases were dismissed, but, by consent, were afterwards restored and set down for trial on Wednesday next.

An interesting decision was rendered by Judge BETTS, as to the powers of notaries public to take depositions to be read in the United States Courts

The trial of CHARLES ROBERTS, a colored waiter at the Lafarge Hotel, for robbing a guest of that house of $5,000 in bank bills on April 5, was commenced yesterday in the Court of General Sessions, and will be continued to-day. Apart from its general interest, it creates quite a furore among the colored population, who crowd the Court to witness it.

The "Wilson Small" General Committee had a meeting last evening at Tammany Hall. Resolutions were adopted condemning the laws regarding the City passed by the Legislature, and sneering at the "Reform" or Savage Committee and all their works. A Committee of one from each Ward was appointed, to arrange upon a plan for the organization of the party in the City, and to report the same at the next meeting, to be held on Thursday next

The Convention appointed some time since to determine upon a plan of reform and union among the City Democracy made their report on Thursday night, and a discussion followed which was not concluded until nearly 2 o'clock next morning. The report, which was adopted, after a determined opposition from the Woodies, empowers the members of the Convention from each Ward—five in number—to select such number of men as they may agree upon in each Ward, who shall at once proceed to organize a Ward Committee.

A cabinet-maker's shop in Mercer, near Broome-street, was destroyed by fire last evening. The loss is estimated at $15,000.

The first race of the season on the Fashion Course took place yesterday, and was witnessed by some two thousand persons. It was a sweepstakes, four-mile heats. Originally there were nine entries, but only three of them—Nicholas I., Sue Washington and Toler—came to the post. The race was won by Nicholas, in two straight heats. There was a second for the Westchester stakes, two-mile heats, which was won by Etiquette, against Margaret Morris, Diocletian, Reveuse and MAILLARD's black colt.

The Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons was engaged yesterday in the discussion of the articles of Union and the election of officers. The old officers were with one or two exceptions re-elected. In the evening quite a large audience assembled in Dr. CHAPIN's Church to listen to an address and other demonstrations in honor of the late Dr. KANE, who was a member of the fraternity The address was delivered by JOHN L. LEWIS, Jr. M. W. G. M.

THE EXPECTED ABOLITION OF THE HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY'S MONOPOLY.—We have for some time lost sight of the important inquiry, now pending before a select Committee of the British House of Commons, with reference to the affairs of the Hudson's Bay Company. The matter, however, is approaching a solution and from all indications it seems probable that the Committee will report against the outrageous monopoly which this Company has so long enjoyed to the detriment of British settlers in the Provinces. In the testimony recently given before the Committee some interesting facts have been elicited. Mr. JAMES COOPER, a resident for the last six years on Vanconver's Island, described the climate of that region as very superior to the climate of Great Britain, and the soil as equally fertile, producing good crops of wheat of the finest quality. A productive coal mine was on the Island, and gold had been found on the mainland. Another witness made strong complaints of the administration of affairs under the Company's rule. He stated that the Chief Judge was wholly ignorant of law, that the Constitution was a dead letter, and that Indians outnumbered the whites—not because the whites were unwilling to settle there, but because the Company would not encourage colonization. These Indians are the most savage of their race, and no effort has been made either to convert or to civilize them. This testimony coincides completely with the representations made upon the subject by all unprejudiced parties. The Parliamentary inquiry, at present is exciting much attention in England, and British as well as Canadian journals, with few exceptions, are loudly denouncing the monopoly enjoyed by the Hudson's Bay Company, and calling for its abolition. We trust and believe that the Parliament of Great Britain will be prepared, at the proper season, to yield to such a singularly unanimous expression of the popular will, and that the great Northwest territory, now but a vast hunting ground for trappers, may be thrown open to emigration.

Americans in China.

Those persons in this country who have persisted in regarding the war now waging in China as a war of conquest, provoked by England, in which we, as Americans, have and can have no possible interest, excepting to keep out of the way of the hard knocks, while hard knocks are passing, and to come in immediately for the profits, as soon as profits are to be had, will do well to read with some attention the important correspondence between the leading American merchants in China and Commodore ARMSTRONG, commanding our fleet, which we publish in another part of to-day's paper.

The houses of RUSSELL & Co., HEARD & Co. and KING represent the most important and the most enlightened body of Americans transacting commerce with the East. The inclinations and the interests alike of the gentlemen who control these houses and who have subscribed their names to the letters which we reproduce, lead them to desire the maintenance of a status of peace between the American Government and the authorities of the Celestial Empire. Nor do they now advocate any measures likely to precipitate this country into a great national war, nor even to commit us overtly and offensively to the aid of the Allied operations against China.

But they do state, in the strongest and plainest terms, that the commerce of the American flag in the China seas, has been carried on for some time past practically and virtually under the protection of the British flag. They do assert, and that again and again, that our ships, our sailors, and our cargoes, have been, and are continually exposed to depredations in those seas, from which the Chinese Government, whatever may be its professions of good-will and good-feeling, has shown neither the ability nor the disposition to defend them.

And they have compelled the American Commodore to admit his positive impotence, with the force now under his command, to do anything more than look on while the cannon of England and Portugal keep the track of our vessels clear of the Chinese pirates, or avenge the murder of peaceful Americans by the semi-barbarians for whom so much has been done to excite a tender sympathy in this country.

It appears that for thirteen years past the American merchants in China have been repeatedly obliged to address themselves to British officers for protection and redress—the forces of the United States having interfered in behalf of their own countrymen on two occasions only out of the many which during those years have arisen to demand their interference. During the same years the British Government has published surveys of the whole coast of China, while not one single service of the sort has ever been rendered by our Navy to our own mercantile marine in these seas. Nor let it be supposed that this anomalous and disgraceful state of things is attributable alone to the indifference or incompetency of the officers in command of our China fleet. Repeated communications detailing the condition of our interests in China, or dwelling upon specific facts which required the attention of the American Government, have been forwarded to Washington from the most respectable sources in China without eliciting any action, and in most cases without receiving the least notice from the successive Administrations to which they have been addressed.

Meanwhile our commerce with China has gone on increasing, until it is now very nearly equal with the commerce between England and that Empire. The damage and danger to which our countrymen are subjected have, of course, increased in an equal ratio; until the actual position of affairs peremptorily calls for the adoption of a specific and efficient policy in regard to our relations with China. It must be regarded as a fortunate circumstance that the correspondence between Commodore ARMSTRONG and the merchants in China should have reached this country before the departure of Mr. REED for his post. For although, as we have said, the merchants recommend no particular course of action on the part of our Government, yet it is impossible that the facts and the arguments which are set forth should not gravely influence the counsels of the President, and greatly instruct the new Minister on the subject of the duties which await him in the remote and honorable station which he is about to fill.

The ground which we have taken, from the first, in respect to the Chinese question, is in many respects, as we are happy to find, identical with that which is indicated by the merchants as the true basis of action.

We have insisted upon it as of the first importance, that our Government should never lose sight of the fact that the temper of the Chinese people, and the tone of the Chinese officials toward our countrymen, has never essentially differed from the tone and temper which they have shown in their dealings and their intercourse with foreigners of other nations. They have steadily pursued a course of studied insolence and duplicity in all their relations with us, and the apprehensions betrayed by the merchants of mischief "from the fleets of armed Chinese vessels cruising between Hong Kong and Macao" are perfectly legitimate, whether the fleets in question be or be not flotillas nominally Imperial. From the immunity of piracy in times of peace to the indulgence of piracy in times of war is but a single step, and a step which it will give the authorities of the maritime provinces small trouble to take.

Not less well founded are the complaints made by the merchants and re-echoed by the evidently unwilling Commodore, of the virtual uselessness of our existing naval force. It really is not a debatable question what sort of vessels we should send to China. The light draught gun boats which we recommended some time ago as the only fitting craft for such service, are imperatively called for. If we mean that the able and accomplished Minister whom we are about to dispatch to China shall do anything whatever for the better assurance of our interests in that quarter of the globe, we must put him in possession of the necessary machinery. The splendid steamer now preparing for his reception will make for him a very suitable locomotive headquarters—but he must have also at his disposal such a squadron as shall enable him to carry the respect, and if need be, the terror of the American ensign at least within sight of the shores of the empire with which he is to treat.

It will be to little purpose that our Minister should be thoroughly alive to the duties of his position, if the naval officers upon whom he may have occasion shall be obliged to respond to his demand as Commodore ARMSTRONG replied to the request for protection of the merchants by an excuse in forma pauperis.

It should not be forgotten that over against the repeated outrages and delinquencies of the Chinese authorities some misconduct of our own Government must be set in the shape of neglect to fulfill those provisions of the treaty of Wang-Hai which relate to the establishment by us of consular jurisdiction in the ports opened by that treaty. Our Minister must go prepared to account for such neglect where it has occurred, and to repair any wrongs which may have ensued therefrom, either to the Chinese Government or to individual Chinese. But he must go so prepared as to make the Celestial functionaries fully understand—what is the hardest thing in the world for them to be made to feel—that he comes to do and to exact justice on terms of equality—not to sue for favors, or render tribute in the attitude of a suppliant.

Slavery Subdividing the Presbyterian Church.

Some twenty years have passed away since the first disruption of the Presbyterian Church in the United States. Recent events have continued to widen the breach, and at last the offshoot itself breaks in twain from the violence of the forces which have struggled within it.

The Old and New School General Assemblies met ten days ago: the former in Kentucky—the latter in Cleveland. The first has gone on with its business in its customary easy manner, not permitting itself to become excited on any subject, and refraining from the introduction of agitating topics. The body in session at Cleveland was early tossed by storms. It has been called to weather a heavy gale, has lost some of its spars, and is beating up against the wind. The moving cause of the troubles which have environed the Assembly of the New School, since the day of its organization for the session of this year, is simply Slavery. Intruded constantly upon the notice of members, presented in appeals from Presbyteries, dwelt upon with virulence by the press, and discussed, in and out of Assembly, by debaters of extreme acumen and no small genius, this unhappy topic finally produces the result in which its free consideration naturally ends. There is an explosion. An explosion, too, in which the number of the wounded is large, and their prominence in the community invests their case with a peculiar interest. The Assembly takes ground distinctly against the system of Slavery. The South becomes intractable and bellicose, and finally secedes. The Presbyterian Church in the United States is again divided. The North and the South draw a strongly marked line of boundary, and henceforth there are three General Assemblies—three separate branches of the Presbyterian Church—three sets of doctrine—a triunity of discord.

The action of the opposing parties has been summary throughout. A Committee, appointed at the meeting of the Assembly in this City last year, was charged with the duty of reporting upon the subject of Slavery, which had been specially committed to its care. The report was eagerly expected. It was not long in coming. Very soon after the preliminary organization at Cleveland, the Committee reported. The report was mild and temporizing, or at least was so intended. It divided the Church into two great classes,—one consisting of those who claim that Slavery is a natural relation, and that, as such, it is a desirable system and ought to be perpetuated; the other, comprising the party which holds that Slavery is undesirable and pernicious, and that it should not be encouraged. This report was accepted by neither North nor South. The Southern men denied the truth of the position assigned to them. Both parties united in the rejection of the report. Sundry substitutes were then offered, and one was finally adopted which makes the following declarations:—that the General Assembly has already declared Slavery intrinsically unrighteous and oppressive: that the Assembly observes with grief that a portion of the Church in the South has so far departed from established doctrine as to maintain that Slavery is an ordinance of God; that the Assembly bears solemn testimony against Slavery, as a system at war with the whole tenor of the Gospel and abhorrent to the conscience of the Christian world; that the Assembly can have no sympathy or fellowship with it; and that Church members are exhorted to eschew it as a serious and pernicious error. This report was strong and earnest—too strong for the Southern members, who at once seceded and prepared a protest, in which the action of the Assembly, in adopting the report, is denounced as "unrighteous, oppressive, uncalled-for, the exercise of usurped power, destructive of the unity of the Church, hurtful to North and South, and adding to the peril of the Union of the States." The Assembly received this protest, which bears the signatures of Dr. Ross and twenty-one others, and responded in a counter-statement which is refreshingly mild and non-combative when compared with the fire-eating manifesto of Dr. Ross and his colleagues. The Assembly disavowed any desire to exscind the South from membership, but held firmly to its ground, and so the proceedings terminated, and with them the existence of the Assembly.

It is said to be the intention of the seceding party, comprising the Synods of the South, to call another General Assembly, to meet at Washington some time this Summer. The outbreak has been so long threatened and is so severe when it comes, that there is hardly a hope of any future union of the elements now discordant. The Old School could not agree with the New on questions connected with points of doctrine, and each went its way. Now, the New cannot agree with all its own members, but quarrels on Slavery, and a new School, to be known, we presume, as the Southern Presbyterian, springs up to take its rank among the theologies of the day.

While it is cause of regret that a disturbance so serious as this should have been permitted to arise in a religious body which represents a very large class in our community, blame cannot rest upon the Assembly for the expression of an opinion which it has honestly believed to be true. In the belief that the institution of Slavery is unchristian and demoralizing, the Assembly has borne testimony against it. If it so believed, the voice of the majority was clearly entitled to a hearing. The Southern Church grew violent and denunciatory, and some of its ministers avowed themselves to be "slaveholders from principle and from choice." Extremes met, the event was unavoidable. The forces were no longer attractive but repellant. The issue is joined, and the South has now the task of severing its connection with the financial and charitable enterprises of the Presbyterian Church, as it has done with the Assembly. This is not the least difficult of the problems it has yet to solve.

The Quarantine Commissioners.

Elsewhere will be found a statement from the Chairman of the Commissioners for the removal of the Quarantine, designed to correct numerous misstatements alleged to have been made in the public prints with regard to the doings of this body. It is to be regretted, in our opinion, that the Commissioners should have kept silence so long. An earlier and fuller statement of their intentions and of the grounds of them might have prevented much of the ill feeling which is said to prevail on Staten Island. It is very rare indeed that public officers will not find their account in giving the earliest and fullest publicity to their doings, especially when they are of at all exciting importance. In this case we have no doubt there are a great many rumors circulating which have not the smallest foundation, which the Commissioners are or easily may become informed of, and which it is in their power to immediately put to rest

It is generally suspected on Staten Island, we are told, for instance, that the Commissioners intend the site at Seguine's Point to be occupied permanently; it has been asserted with confidence in the public prints that this is not the case, that they have never thought of making other than temporary use of it; the Commissioners, however, have not published this in their own name, and in the absence of such assurance from them, the imagination of those who are likely to suffer, is left to suppose the worst. If we are rightly informed, a distinct assurance from the Commissioners that no filth or waste matter would be allowed to be cast overboard from the ships; that the oystermen would not be interrupted in their avocation, and that the residents on the shore would be subjected to the risk of fever but one year, would go far to allay the Anti-Quarantine excitement.

We do not apprehend that this excitement will lead to anything more than a general indisposition of the people to coöperate with the Commission, a reckless and defiant imprudence, and a disregard of, and determined resistance to, the rules which it will be necessary for all to observe to render the Quarantine effective. If violence has been contemplated, we do not doubt better counsels, which have been diligently urged since the incendiary acts occurred, will prevail.

We do not, for a moment, entertain the dishonorable supposition that the Commissioners are engaged in a Chinese warfare to compel New-Jersey to surrender Sandy Hook, in which the weapons are to be yellow fever set afloat to sweep upon her by the tide.

We do not observe in the vindication now offered of their conclusions by the Commissioners, that any statements which have heretofore appeared in the TIMES are corrected; nor do we see any reason to change the opinions we have heretofore expressed on this subject.

The Commissioners say, very truly, that in no place would the Quarantine be welcomed: this being conceded, the question is among which people can it be effectually maintained with the least interference with their usual avocations. One of the chief objections found by the Commissioners to Coney Island is the right the people might claim to cut sedge, gather sea-weed and fish. If the statements with regard to the oyster interests centring at Seguine's Point are not most shamefully exaggerated, there would be no comparison in the degree of difficulty with which the necessary regulations arising from causes of this nature would be there maintained.

Amusements.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—A new serio-comic pantomime, called "Bianco, or the Enchanted Sword," is the latest novelty at this temple of the RAVELS. It is invented and composed by JEROME, and, unlike most works of the same kind, has a clear and intelligible action. The plot has a strong family likeness to "Don Giovanni," but there is an enlargement of the romantic element suitable for ballet purposes. Altogether it is an intensely amusing piece, most beautifully put upon the stage, and admirably acted by the RAVELS. Some of the tricks are new, and all the scenery is in the best style. The only fault that can be found with "Bianco" is that there is a trifle too much broken English made use of by the artists, who as a general thing can speak much better without saying a word.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—This favorite place of amusement was opened for the Summer season on Wednesday evening. The company is the same as last season.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—MARETZEK's benefit at the Academy of Music last night was a bumper. The attendance was excellent, and three pieces were produced, including the whole of "Traviata," with English comedy and French vaudeville. The performance was spirited.

☞ The body of a man, about 20 years of age, was found yesterday in the Atlantic Basin. Deceased had on a dark pilot coat, lined with red flannel, blue overalls, and boots, which had just been half-soled.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Friday, June 5.

It is untrue that Lord NAPIER officially denies the cession of the Island in Panama Bay to Great Britain. The Administration certainly did not originate him nor did he volunteer a statement upon the subject. No one, however, in diplomatic or Government circles believes such cession has been made

The Attorney-General has given an official opinion relative to the proprietary interest of the United States in the recently discovered guano islands. Congress, he says, may terminate the possession of the discoverer when it pleases. Under existing laws the discoverer is the nation's tenant-at-will, and that will is to be expressed by Congress whenever the nation may desire to put an end to the estate granted; and the law forbids the President, before certain conditions are complied with, to declare any island as appertaining to the United States an aftermath act, according to his conviction of public duty.

Condition of the Erie Canal.

ALBANY, Friday, June 5.

The Erie Canal is navigable east of Rochester, but the water is too low for heavily loaded boats.

BUFFALO, Friday, June 5.

State Engineer SEYMOUR, and Canal Commissioner SPRAGUE are here. Having made a careful reconnoissance of the western division of the Canal, they are of the opinion that there will be no further interruption of navigation at present. They report the great break at Mayberry as being repaired. The long level between Rochester and Lockport is being filled as fast as the state of the Canal will admit with safety.

Marine Disasters.

THE STEAMSHIP CANADIAN GOING TO PIECES—LOSS OF THE BRIG MARTHA ROGERS.

BOSTON, Friday, June 5.

A private dispatch from Quebec says the screw steamship Canadian is going to pieces. She was run on the rocks on Tuesday. The passengers have all arrived safely at Quebec.

The brig Martha Rogers, of Belfast, CONNER, from New-York for Pictou, was totally lost on Cape Sable. We have no date or particulars. The crew were saved.

Robbery of a Bank Messenger in Quebec.

QUEBEC, Friday, June 5.

Mr. ROBERTSON, Messenger of the British Bank, had his pocket picked in Peter-street, this morning, of $7,000. There is no clue to the thief.

Departure of the Niagara.

HALIFAX, Friday, June 5.

The R. M. steamship Niagara arrived here at 10¾ o'clock last night, from Boston, and sailed again for Liverpool at 12¾. The weather is calm.

QUARANTINE.

The First Day and Night of the Police at Seguine's Point—Peaceful Progress of the Works—A Letter from Commissioner Hall.

The landing of the Quarantine expedition under Mayor HALL, and the commencement of operations at Seguine's Point without opposition, has already been given. To the close of yesterday's labors the work progressed favorably. The Police being divided into squads, or pickets, relieved each other every two hours through the night; no intruder startled the vigilant sentinels at their post of duty: and, lulled by the chirping of the cricket among the black-thorn hedges, they might have been in danger of falling asleep, had they not been kept busy driving away the myriads of mosquitos which attacked them front, flank and rear. The air, too, was very chilly, requiring overcoats and an occasional cup of hot coffee to keep them comfortable. A large black dog did approach the premises about midnight, attracted no doubt by the odors from the cooking galley, but on being challenged to advance and give the countersign, muttered a deep growl and walked away.

The policemen were provided with mattresses and bedding, and contrived to pass the night in tolerable comfort, notwithstanding their shanty was only partially boarded up. The workmen were not so well provided for, only a few having bedding of any kind, and obliged to dispose themselves upon the floors. The roof of the ice-house, which the incendiaries had left, furnished the warmest quarters for the night. Here, among the hay, nestled the cook pro tem., Policeman HOUSTON, (a distant relative of Gen. SAM. HOUSTON,) who escaped all annoyance from the mosquitoes and awoke refreshed in the morning, with no mishap except the loss of his spectacles among the hay, which it took him some time to find. Here, also, were stowed away hams, codfish, pork, potatoes, hard bread and other edibles, which were found very handy during the cook's wakeful moments.

The early morning betokened rain, which quickened the operations of the carpenters somewhat, but as it soon grew pleasant, that portion of the Police not on guard came out of their quarters and strutted about the ground; some pitched quoits for amusement, while others went clamming and fishing, but these returned with indifferent luck, having caught only two or three tom-cods, instead of a boat-load of bass.

Mr. HOUSTON and his Deputy prepared an excellent dinner of codfish and potatoes, with fried pork, which, with a dessert of boiled rice, disappeared in short order, notwithstanding the latter was a little scorched, and, as the cook in a brief oration to the company regretted, was a little short as to quantity, which he attributed to undue haste on the part of some in filling their plates.

Three or four of the neighbors came on to the ground during the afternoon, only one of whom—a young oysterman—showed any degree of excitement. Two gentlemen from Rossville, intimated, in a quiet way, that there would be trouble, but disclaimed all interest in this controversy. One gentleman, who lives within half a mile to the eastward, and who owns over a hundred acres, though expressing his regret quite strongly at the movement, said he thought they were all more scared than hurt. Captain BRONSON, an old pilot, who also lives near by, says he will lose his boarders who spend every Summer with him, but he had not thought it best to make any active opposition. He would have taken the carpenters to board but for the violent denunciations of some of his neighbors; he could not afford to incur their ill will.

One or two attempts were made to buy milk at the house of a woman living half a mile distant, but they were repulsed at once.

The building, 60x20 feet, and 10 feet high, was completed last evening. Some progress was also made in digging post holes for the fence. Capt. WALLING came up to the City on business, but was to return last night; the men were all in good spirits.

A Letter from Commissioner Hall.

In view of the many misstatements which have been made through the medium of the public prints in relation to the change of the Quarantine Station, and the state of public sentiment which has been occasioned thereby, I deem it proper, as one of the Commissioners appointed under the act of the Legislature, to publish a brief statement, to the end that the public mind may be disabused in respect to its understanding of the facts, and enabled to form a right judgment thereupon.

By the 21st section of the act it is made the duty of the Commissioners, if in their judgment the public health requires it, to provide temporary accommodations upon or near Sandy Hook, on land or water, for persons arriving in the port of New-York sick with the yellow fever or other pestilential disease, until the present Quarantine shall be removed under this act to some other place. The Commissioners, having deemed that the public health did require it, took immediate measures to secure a location for such temporary accommodations, having in view, at the same time, a future selection of the proper position for the location of a permanent site.

It is well known that the Commissioners, immediately after their appointment, endeavored to procure from the authorities of New Jersey permission to locate the Quarantine at Sandy Hook, but their efforts in that line were entirely without success. Having failed in these endeavors, they immediately looked about to ascertain the next best location which could be obtained.

Their attention was directed to the following places:

The Dry Romer.
The West Bank.
The location of a hulk in the lower bay.
The neck of land at the Great Kills.
Coney Island and Seguine's Point, on the Wolfe Farm.

The Dry Romer is a large bar in the lower bay, laying between Sandy Hook and Coney Island, and open to the ocean. At low tide this bar is covered with about ten feet of water. It is very doubtful whether any structure could be erected upon the place which would withstand the action of the ocean and the storms to which it would be necessarily exposed; but assuming such to be the case, it would be the work of several years to complete such a structure, and as a temporary location for present purposes, this position is entirely out of the question.

The West Bank commences near the entrance of the the Narrows, and runs down the southeast side of Staten Island. The place proposed to the Commissioners is about five miles distant from Fort Hamilton, and about three miles distant from the main land and is covered at low tide by about ten feet of water. It is of course subject to the same objections as the Dry Romer, and it is also objected that the erection of any structure thereupon would tend to divert the channels, and thereby effect serious if not irremediable injuries to the harbor.

The location of a hulk in the lower bay was found to be impracticable for the reason that the swell of the ocean, and the motion of the hulk produced thereby would render it entirely unfit for hospital purposes. This is the unanimous opinion of all the physicians who have been consulted by the Commissioners.

The neck of land at the Great Kills extends from Staten Island, and is about one-third of the way between Seguine's Point and the entrance to the Narrows. The water at this point is very deep, and it would require the construction of a pier of at least a mile in length before sufficient depth could be obtained for the purposes required. This, of course, renders this position unavailable for present purposes. Coney Island has ample room to the ocean, and is exposed at times to the beating of a heavy surf which would render it difficult, if not impossible, to land sick persons from a boat, and a wharf could be constructed except in Gravesend Bay. The towns of Gravesend and New Utrecht are near to this position, and the shore from Coney Island to Fort Hamilton, where the fever commenced last year, is thickly settled; besides the distance from Coney Island to the city of Brooklyn is less than five miles, and about nine miles from the City of New-York, and only about three miles further off from New York than the present Quarantine station. It will be remembered that it was found necessary last year to remove some dozen infected vessels which were moored in Gravesend Bay and the vicinity of Coney Island. But another objection to this location is, that it would be impossible to obtain possession of this place. The lease, which was at one time offered to the Commissioners, after they had purchased the Wolfe farm near Seguine's Point, and actually made themselves responsible to pay Mr. LUSH $23,000, contains a provision "that all the inhabitants of Gravesend shall have the privilege of fishing, gathering sea weed and mowing hay, and all other the rights and conditions originally granted, reserved and contained to the said town and its inhabitants, in and by the original grants." These privileges are entirely incompatible with the exclusive possession of the Island for Quarantine purposes.

The Wolfe Farm, near Seguine's Point, the place selected by the Commissioners, is, in a direct line, about seventeen miles from the City of New-York, at the southeast corner of Staten Island, at the termination of the channel which runs from Ward's Point round Seguine's Point. Water for a temporary quarantine can be had by running out a pier about one hundred and fifty feet. It is a fine, healthy location and is so completely isolated, that hospitals can be built without danger to any of the inhabitants. By a steamer the sick can be brought to this place in safety, while no infected vessels may be anchored in the channel near the Kill, where they can have good anchorage, and can ride out their quarantine in safety. A boarding station can be kept at the present Quarantine, and vessels not infected may come up at once, be inspected, and proceed. The Legislature has decided that the Quarantine shall be removed, the State of New-Jersey has refused to allow it to be located upon lands within their jurisdiction, and it therefore became necessary to select a site upon either Long Island or Staten Island. There is no suitable place on Long Island for the purpose, and no other resort was left except to locate on Staten Island, and no position can be found upon that Island which affords the advantages offered by the place selected.

It is at the part of the Island most remote from the dense population of our cities, the lands in the neighborhood are sparsely settled, the depth of the water is sufficient to afford the required accommodations, the structures necessary for temporary accommodations can be speedily erected, and no difficulty in obtaining safe anchorage for infected vessels. It will be of course utterly impossible to find any place at which a Quarantine Station will be welcomed by those in the vicinity, nor where some will not consider their private interests prejudiced. I am firmly of the belief that no place could have been selected out of those which could be obtained more suitable for the purpose required, and none at which local interests could have been less injuriously affected. A reference to the map of the Harbor of New York made to accompany the report of the Harbor Commissioners will, I think, convince any person, who is willing to be convinced, that this place possesses advantages superior to those offered by any other.

The Commissioners were obliged by the law under which they were appointed to select a place, and the one fixed upon by them has been approved by the State officers designated in the Act, whose approval it was necessary to be obtained.

If you will please publish this plain statement of facts, you will much oblige GEO HALL,
Ch'n of Commissioners for removal of Quarantine.

EXCISE COMMISSIONERS.—The Board will meet at 10 o'clock on Monday in the Common Pleas, No. 1, for the purpose of hearing applicants and receiving petitions. It is intended to sit the week through for this purpose, and then to run the fifty days through and close the Commission.

Intimations have been thrown out that they will be shut out from this room by our municipal officials. But Messrs. HASKETT and HOLMES say they will hold on to this place, unless put out by an overwhelming force. They say they will perform their duties in the Hall, and if empowered, they will open the Commission in the Park. A lively time is expected.

HOTEL RATES.—There is an impression out that the leading hotels have raised the price of board for transient boarders. This is a mistake. The same rates are held at the principal houses that have prevailed for the last three years. Nor is it probable that there will be any change for some time to come. The strike "caves" because only three or four of the large houses would consent to come into it.

POLICE PROGRESS.

The New Board Appoints Health Wardens for Brooklyn—Receives Recorder Smith's Application for Officers—Are to try 60 Men.

The Old Board Fills all Vacancies—Great Excitement in the Thirteenth and Twentieth Wards.

MESSRS. WOOD & RUSSELL, the old Police Commissioners, were busy yesterday morning at the Mayor's Office, in dismissing the insubordinates and appointing men to fill the vacancies in the Municipal Station-Houses occasioned by the withdrawal of those in favor of the New Board. Several men were sworn in for duty in the Ninth Ward. To-day appointments will be made for the Fifth and other Wards. The crowd about the Mayor's Office was great, and the number of applicants large. The Mayor is determined to fill every vacancy in every Ward immediately.

The Metropolitan Commissioners met. All but Mr. Cholwell were present. Nine men were detailed in Brooklyn as Health Wardens, as follows:

First District, Chas. Frost; Second District, John McCam; Third District, Chas. W. Lott; Fourth District, Geo. A. Waddy; Fifth District, H. Brown; Sixth District, Henry Bowen; Seventh, District, John Stilwell; Eighth District, Thos. Combs; Ninth District, Joel Miller.

A letter from Recorder SMITH, addressed to Superintendent TALLMADGE, was submitted. The letter from the Recorder is as follows:

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW-YORK, RECORDER'S OFFICE, No. 23 Chambers street, June 4, 1857.

Hon. F. A. Tallmadge, General Superintendent, &c.:

SIR: I inclose you a list of names of officers that I would desire to be detailed at the Court of General Sessions.

Fifteenth Ward—William B. Walsh.
Ninth Ward—Chas. C. Pell.
Fourth Ward—George Dougherty.
Eighteenth Ward—Solomon Birdsall.
Twenty first Ward—Abraham S. Raby.

Abraham V. Davis, Fifth Ward, in place of Michael Flannigan, of the Twenty-first Ward

Thomas McGuire, of the Twenty-first Ward, in place of James Denny of the Fourth Ward.

The Recorder added that he would soon indicate such other changes as he desired to have made in the Police force, which is detailed at the Court of General Sessions.

It was agreed that the wish of the Recorder should be complied with, and late in the day orders were sent to the officers named, in accordance with the decision of the Board.

The Clerk was ordered to notify a large number of insubordinate members of the Department—including officers, detailed men, and patrolmen—to appear for trial, in consequence of their refusal to obey the orders sent them by the Deputy Superintendent. All of these, unless they should appear and exonerate themselves, will be dismissed and their places filled forthwith.

No other business was done.

Thus it appears that in a few days we shall have two separate Police forces and two Station-houses in each Ward.

Sergeant Wm. H. Lefferts, Inspector of Junk Shops, has decided for the New Commissioners, and is now on special duty at the office in White-street.

Aaron W. Wyatt of the Nineteenth, has also reported himself for duty at the office of the Deputy Superintendent.

There was a very exciting time about the Thirteenth Ward Station-house last evening.

The Superintendent of Police, yesterday, issued the following order to Thomas Steers, late first sergeant of Police under the old Board of Police, but more recently decapitated by Mayor Wood, &c., for recognizing the new Board:

OFFICE OF THE DEPUTY SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE, No 88 White-street, NEW YORK, June 5, 1857.

First-Sergeant Thomas Steers:

SIR: By order of the Board of Police you will order the members of your command to report themselves to you for patrol duty this day, at sunset. You will assemble them at such place as the Board of Police has designated. By order,

F. A. TALLMADGE, General Sup't.

DANIEL CARPENTER, Deputy Sup't.

In compliance with this notice, Sergeant Steers proceeded to the Thirteenth Ward Station-House just before the sundown roll-call. Lieut. Seebach was in command. Sergeant Steers having made the object of his visit known, was informed by Lieut. Seebach that he (Seebach) would not permit any orders to be read nor speeches made by Sergeant Steers. A conversation then ensued between the two officers, which was ended by Lieut. Seebach declaring his intention to prevent Steers addressing the men in any manner whatever. Just before the men were called to answer their names, Lieut. Seebach requested all not belonging to the Station to retire. The citizens present then left. Sergeant Steers remained. Lieut. Seebach thereupon addressed him a special order to retire, whereupon he left, saying that he would speak with the men as they came out.

The roll was then called, and the men left the Station-house. Each was spoken to as they passed the door by Sergeant STARRS, who repeated his orders. Many of them replied with foul language, while some expressed their intention to comply.

The Sergeant then proceeded to Onderdonk Hall, corner of Grand and Clinton streets, which has been leased temporarily for a Station-house, where at 8 o'clock he called the roll of the patrol force of the Ward. The following officers answered to their names: Richard Cornell, Thomas Thorne, A. Van Tassell, Daniel Foles, John Nelson, J. Osborn, Daniel Acker. Wm. Jenkins, John C. Abbott, Jas. Parrish.

The men were then addressed by the Sergeant briefly and appropriately, after which they were sent out upon patrol as usual.

In the Twentieth Ward on Monday night, five men declared for the New Commissioners.

Eight men left the Nineteenth Ward Station-house last evening, and accompanied Lieutenant BRYAN to a new Metropolitan Station in the same Ward.

The statement that Sergeant HUTCHINGS, now commanding officer of the Metropolitan Police force in the Fifth Ward, was removed from the Department by Mayor WOOD, for insubordination, is incorrect. No charge of any kind was ever made to the Commissioners against Sergeant HUTCHINGS, and he was removed simply as a political necessity.

BURGLARY IN THE FIFTH WARD—CAPTURE OF THE BURGLARS.—Mikn Men, aged 17 years, a boiler-maker by trade, was arrested in the Fifth-Ward, at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, by Officer S. B. Smith, of the Metropolitan Police. The prisoner effected an entrance into the store of John Ryatt, on the corner of Washington and Reads streets, and stole therefrom $43 50 in pennies. First Sergeant Hutchings, in his report to Deputy Superintendent Carpenter, says: "This burglary was effected by ascending to the roof of the adjoining building. Man then clambered to the roof of the next building and descended through the scuttle and broke open Ryatt's office. When coming out of the front door he was discovered by the policemen, but immediately attempted to escape by the same way he entered. He scaled the fences in the rear yard, but was finally caught by the officers in the yard of Wyckoff's Hotel, in Greenwich-street. The burglary was first discovered by Officer Bulmer, who gave information to the Station, and Officers Eldridge and Smith went immediately to his assistance." The prisoner was committed for trial by Justice Osborne.

TAKING MONEY FROM HIS EMPLOYER.—On Thursday afternoon J. F. Moyses, dry goods merchant at No. 24 Cortlandt street, gave information at Metropolitan Police Office in White-street, that W. B. Adams, a boy in his employ, had defrauded him out of $93, which he had been commissioned to collect, but instead of returning the money appropriated it to his own use, and disappeared, and had not been seen since the 1st inst. The matter was placed in the hands of Sergeant Wm. H. Lefforts, who, with the assistance of Officer Rainor, of Brooklyn, succeeded soon afterwards in arresting the young culprit at the National Theatre. Adams, who is only 14 years of age, was brought yesterday morning before Justice Osborne, at the Lower Police Court. $16 of the appropriated funds were found upon him. He said that he had been on a spree with another boy, and had spent the balance of the money. He was sent to the Juvenile Asylum.

MILITARY APPOINTMENT BY GOVERNOR KING.—A year or two ago the Governor of this State appointed W. W. SCRUGHAM to the command of the Seventh Brigade, New-York State Militia, in place of General M. J. LOCKWOOD, former Agent of Sing Sing Prison, removed. General Lockwood has always repudiated the validity of the appointment, and has issued his orders as though still in command. Thus there were two claimants for the same position. Governor KING has lately directed Col. S. C. PARMENTA of the 19th Regiment, a resident of Newburg, to take command of the Brigade until the question between LOCKWOOD and SCRUGHAM is decided in the Courts. Both of the contesting Generals are Democrats,

THE GREAT WESTERN RAILROAD EXCURSION.

CINCINNATI, Tuesday, June 3, 1857.

The "Queen City of the West" is greatly excited to-day, for it is the gala-day of the event of the week. Ever since Friday and Saturday those who have come on to participate in the opening of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad have been arriving so that since a day or two no accommodations have been obtainable at any of the hotels. Where the thousands who are coming into town to day from Marietta, Parkersburg and from St. Louis, will be quartered, is hard telling. But the citizens are throwing open their houses, and doing everything for the accommodation of their guests.

At 12 o'clock the Marietta train is expected to arrive, bringing the guests from the East, and at 2½ o'clock that from St. Louis, with the Westerners. Both will be received by processions of the military, the Fire Department, etc., and during the afternoon there is to be a trial of skill of the various steam fire-engines of the city. The Public Schools all have a holiday for the occasion, and the hosts of children in the streets add not a little to the gayety of the scene. Most buildings in the business portions of the city and many private houses are decked with flags, streamers and mottoes; the sky is blue and serene, and everything at present promises to make the reception all that could be desired.

Mr. CHARLES GOULD, of New-York, the Treasurer of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad Company, and who has been the leading spirit in the construction of the road, is of course the lion of the day. The citizens of Cincinnati and St. Louis owe him a debt they cannot easily repay, for it has been by his exertions mainly that the road between these two western cities has been completed. Last evening Mr. G. entertained about a hundred of his eastern and western friends at the Burnet House. The style in which the dinner was got up would have done credit to any New-York establishment. And in one thing it surpassed any eastern thing of the kind; the excellent wines were all of native growth, the product of the grapes grown on the hill sides around Cincinnati.

The company was composed about equally of ladies and gentlemen, and every New-Yorker recognized well known faces among the fair ones present, as well as among the gentlemen. Among the ornaments at the dessert was a sugar representation of the Cincinnati car house of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad, balanced at the other end of the table by a similar model of the St. Louis depot. Suddenly, with a shrill whistle, a small locomotive engine, labeled "Locomotive Charles Gould, through in twelve hours," emerged from the Cincinnati depot, rapidly making its way towards St. Louis, to the great delight of the guests. It was quite a happy idea.

Brief speeches were afterwards made by Mr. Gould, Hon. Thomas Corwin, Judge Lee of Baltimore, Chas. Anderson, Esq., of Cincinnati, Ex-Governor Reynolds of Illinois, Judge Storer of the Ohio Supreme Court, and Hon. George Bancroft, who gave the following toast:

Prosperity to the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad—The man who brought it to its successful completion must certainly be pure GOLD.

Among the guests present was S. S. L'HOMMEDIEU, Esq., who 30 years ago established the first daily paper in Cincinnati. It was the old Cincinnati Gazette, previously a weekly journal. In 1827 Mr. L'H. commenced the publication of a daily edition, with a subscription list of 125 names. The paper was the first daily one started west of the Alleghanies, and still exists and flourishes, although Mr. L'H. retired from it about 10 years since. He is now the President of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dalton Railroad Company, a road which he has greatly helped to build.

To-morrow, at 6 and 6½ o'clock, the excursion trains leave for St. Louis. They will be densely crowded, although hundreds of guests have already gone on and hundreds of others will remain here until Friday, Saturday and Monday. I understand that vast preparations are making in St. Louis to receive the numerous guests, but it will be a hard task to provide for the thousands who come.

NEAR MIDNIGHT.

About 2 o'clock the main body of the excursionists arrived from Chillicothe, and were received at the depôt by the Guthrie Grays and the Cincinnati Continentals, besides hosts of citizens. The guests having been welcomed by Mayor THOMAS, a procession was formed, and, arrived at the Burnet House, the assembled crowd was addressed by Gen. CASS, (in a very "Union-saving" speech,) Gov. CHASE of Ohio, and Gov. WILLARD of Indiana.

All the guests, besides a number who arrived in the afternoon train from New-York, have been accommodated somewhere, but Heaven only knows where it is. It is said that COLEMAN, of the Burnet House, has been obliged to turn his laundry into a sleeping apartment, hanging poor unfortunates over the clothes lines until they are asleep, and then packing them into the washtubs. I cannot vouch for the veracity of the rumor, but a prominent citizen assured me that it was a fact.

During the afternoon the seven city steam fire engines displayed their extraordinary power before hosts of the visitors, who afterwards consoled the inner man by relishing native cobblers and native cocktails. Don't think I mean Lynn shoemakers or the caudal extremities of Ohio roosters, but various mysterious drinks, composed of native Catawba wine, which is quite the "institution" of Cincinnati.

During the evening there has been more speech-making from the steps of the Burnet House, among others by Hon. THOMAS MARSHALL, and later the proprietor, Mr. A. B. COLEMAN, gave a very brilliant "hop" to many of his guests and the other distinguished visitors to the city. Among the ladies I must confess New-York carried off the palm. The fair daughter of the originator of the celebration was of course the belle of the evening, and bore her honors charmingly.

It would be invidious to particularize any of the various beauties present, but I must say that some of them seemed to make a deep impression on the Southern and Western gentlemen. The New-Yorkers they had already conquered. Any one who knows who the ladies are who have come out on this excursion will fully bear me out in this assertion.

A funny part of the whole excursion is to see the married gentlemen, who, having left their wives behind them at home, are here playing the gay gallants to the young ladies. I saw several gentlemen figuring in the ball-room to-night who would have been horrified at the idea in New York, and even the clergy was not unrepresented among "the wall-flowers." Altogether it was a gay and pleasant scene, and every one felt happy, not excepting your reporter.

Ceremonies and Festivities Yesterday.

[TELEGRAPHIC.]

CINCINNATI, Friday, June 5.

The Railroad celebration in this city, to-day, was magnificent. The excursionists landed at the levee amid the salutes of artillery, and were escorted to carriages and omnibuses and conveyed through the main streets to the Agricultural Fair Grounds, attended by the military. The procession was two miles long.

The congregation at the Amphitheatre was immense. The building holds 10,000 people, and is the most complete of the kind in the United States. The military, firemen, Turners and others passed in review before a guard of citizens crowding the amphitheatre to its utmost capacity.

An oration was delivered by Judge BATES. Dinner ensued, and the representatives of the different States were toasted and responses made.

Pennsylvania was toasted, but the speakers expected did not answer.

Professor MITCHELL responded in an amusing speech for Ohio

Ex-Gov. REYNOLDS responded for Illinois.

Baltimore, Md., was ably represented by Mr. FRAZIER.

Other guests were loud in praise of the bounteous hospitalities of the citizens, which they said could never be forgotten.

The Forwarders and the Hardware Board of Trade.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, June 4, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The article appearing in your issue of the 4th inst., headed "Swindling in the Forwarding Trade," in which reference is made to a circular of the Hardware-Dealers' Board of Trade, deserves a word of comment from those interested in the business of inland transportation, by whose agency the commerce of the country, to the value of so many millions of dollars, is successfully carried on. No complaint can be made against the Hardware-Dealers for instituting such inquiries, with a view of insuring greater dispatch in forwarding goods to their customers, and as a "Board," for recommending those lines of express which are most prompt and reliable. But it is highly offensive to assail indiscriminately a class of business men, as "swindlers," who are as honorable and worthy of confidence as any other class in this community, the "Hardware-Dealers" not excepted, if there are any such delinquents among them as alleged and rates of freight and time, [illegible] parties cited to appear in their own [illegible] letter, and directly charged with the offence with out recalling the whole class of Forwarders, whose capital, as well as character, is so largely embarked in a business upon the success of which, it is admitted, the success of merchants in the various departments of trade so much depends. If there were even such instances as alleged, is it fair and just that the delinquencies should be laid at the door of all engaged in the forwarding business? Suppose a hardware merchant was detected in selling an inferior article with a fraudulent trade-mark, would you justify the "Board of Forwarders" (if there was one) in issuing circulars, instituting inquiries into the practices of the entire hardware trade, and, by means of the public press, placard the whole class as "swindlers!" And yet this is what has been done in your paper as to forwarders. The truth is, goods are shipped under contract, and a contract to forward merchandise, like any other contract, can be enforced, and if there was any violation of the contract, the merchants of the West are, as a class, as shrewd and keen as any other class of men, and if they have a good cause of action, they "Know their rights, and knowing, dare maintain them;" whenever they have good cause to demand redress they are prompt to do so. There are many instances of complaint made, which cannot be sustained when reference is made to the terms of the contract, and it is only in those cases where the complainants find, on examination of their claims, that they are not entitled to reclamation, that chagrin and disappointment prompt such allegations. If there be any just cause of complaint, it will cure itself, for "free trade" in the forwarding business will regulate this matter, without the intervention of any "Board of Trade."

THE MOST LOVELY SAIL TO BE ENJOYED for a very little money, where the real beauties of nature and art are so displayed, the scenery so picturesque and truly beautiful, is by the fast sailing steamer Enoch Dean, for Flushing and College Point, foot of Fulton Market-slip. See advertisement.

CELESTIAL AND TERRESTRIAL WONDERS.—The remarkable comet of 1770, which was found by Lexell, got entangled among the satellites of Jupiter, and thrown out of its orbit by the attraction of that planet, and has not been heard of since. So says Dr. Herschel. Not so with MACKENZIE'S Manillas. They first present themselves to the naked eye, in the zenith of their glory, at his store, Nos. 15 and 17 Canal-st; but owing to their peculiar attractiveness they suddenly disappear from the windows, and are heard of all over the country.

A STARTLING FACT.
The sensation created in fashionable circles by the announcement that twelve shillings would actually purchase a pair of NEAT, ELEGANT AND DURABLE GAITERS, fit for the articles for a ramble in the green fields or a promenade by the sea side, and, consequently, admirably adapted for the visit to NAHANT, NEWPORT, OR CAPE MAY, or to "a quiet nook by the babbling brook," still continues, and the demand for these TWELVE SHILLING GAITERS is so great that CANTRELL'S
new establishment, No. 512 Broadway, between 11th and 12th sts., is overrun with customers.
We reiterate the advice we have frequently given,
"Do not leave the City without a supply of these Gaiters, for their cheapness is only equaled by the comfort they afford the wearer."
CANTRELL has, besides a full assortment of ladies' foot coverings, a superb stock gentlemen's boots, made under the experienced supervision of M. C. T. Kimball, late of the firm of Kimball & Beasley, and a great variety of boots and shoes
FOR CHILDREN OF BOTH SEXES.
Every article in his store will be sold
CHEAP!
Visit his establishment, and satisfy yourself that this is true.

WILDEE'S PATENT SALAMANDER SAFES.
Renewal of the Wilder Patent.
The public are respectfully informed that, notwithstanding the great efforts made by other safe makers to get at all hazards the renewal of this Patent for making the GREAT FIRE PROOF SAFE OF THE WORLD, the subscribers are happy to say that the necessary documents were this morning received from Hon. Chas. Mason, Commissioner of Patents, granting the extension for the term of seven years from this date. All infringements upon the same will be prosecuted to the utmost extremity of the law. A full assortment of all sizes can be found at the warehouse of Messrs. "TEARSE & LEVIN, No. 40 Murray-st., and at our warehouse, No. 192 Water-st., near Wall, where all our fire doors are manufactured in the United States. B. G. WILDER & CO.,
JUNE 1, 1857. Patentees and Manufacturers.

S. C. HERRING & CO'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES.
The subscribers, grateful for past favors and finding a discriminating public were bestowing their patronage to that extent that more warerooms were necessary to exhibit all their stock, have enlarged their depôt by opening an extensive ware and salesroom on Broadway, at No. 251, corner of Murray-st., opposite the City Hall. The enlargement of warehouse room, with the recent extensive enlargement of their factory, will enable the subscribers to keep on hand at all times a larger stock of fire and burglar-proof safes than any other establishment in the world. Particular attention will be had to constructing safes for private families to match with other furniture. For the security of plate and jewelry, (and housekeepers are invited to call and examine for themselves.) Also will keep on hand and make to order all kinds of monumental, vault, door and bank vaults. Hall's patent powder proof locks for Banks or store doors, Jones' patent permutation Bank lock, and Cryder's patent letter lock without key.

CRISTADORO'S HAIR DYE, WIGS AND TOUPEES, are unquestionably the admiration of the critical and the envy of the crowkers and imitators. The Dye is the very best in present use, and his wigs the greatest counterfeits of the human head ever seen. For sale and the Dye applied at No 6 Astor House.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.—IN BUYING such an article as a sewing machine the truest economy is to buy the best. They who purchase SINGER'S machines always get what they want, and use them with satisfaction and profit; while they who buy any of the cheaper and inferior machines in the market are sure to suffer disappointment, vexation and loss.
I. M. SINGER & CO.,

WHY DAS GRAY'S MAMMOTH STEAM PRINTING, STEREOTYPING and BINDING Establishment become so popular and indispensable a "CITY INSTITUTION?"

BECAUSE its capacity has always been kept equal to the increasing demands of its friends in every department.

BECAUSE it is surrounded by walls and floors IMPENETRABLE TO FIRE AND FLAME, so that there may be no interruption of his customers' supplies.

BECAUSE steam of PUBLISHERS steadily task his energies and those of his compositors, foundry, presses and bindery.

BECAUSE the largest dealers in PATENT MEDICINES, DRUGS and PERFUMERY, in City and country, demand from him editions of hundreds of thousands of PAMPHLETS, CIRCULARS and ALMANACS, with MILLIONS of LABELS constantly.

BECAUSE the heaviest TOBACCONISTS order WRAPPERS from him, and TIN FOIL printed in GOLD, by the ton, and chewing and smoking papers by the car-load, with labels for barrels, boxes, cans, blankets, bottles and pots innumerable and indescribable.

BECAUSE Bottlers, PICKLERS and PRESERVERS of Vegetables, Fruits, Meats and Viands strive there for the mastery in the adornment of their wares, with the variegated and many-hued surroundings of SOAP and FANCY SOAP Chandlers—COFFEE, SPICE and FLOUR Millers—PAPER BOX, YANKEE NOTIONS, HOOK and EYE and PIN and NEEDLE Makers. Nor do they strive in vain.

BECAUSE all orders are promptly answered, for everything in the line of a PRINTER, STEREOTYPER, ENGRAVER and BINDER or kindred arts—from Types, Plates, Wood, Stone or Steel.

BECAUSE both his offices are ON THE STREET, and people find it VERY CONVENIENT to drop their orders at No. 375 B

NEW-YORK CITY.

The Last of the French Extraditionists.

AUGUSTE PEROT was yesterday brought before United States Commissioner BETTS, on an order having in view the taking of further testimony in the Extradition case. Messrs. GALBRAITH and TOWNSEND, counsel for defendant, were quite unprepared for the proceeding, as they supposed the whole subject, as far as the Commissioner was concerned, had been disposed of. Rather a lively conversation took place between them and Mr. JOACHIMSSEN, which had a peaceful issue, however. The only evidence went to establish the fact that the house from which the railway shares were taken was a private dwelling. The case will be continued to-day, at 12 o'clock, and the results of the examination will be embodied in a supplemental report of the Commissioner to the Secretary of State.

GENERAL WALKER COMING TO TOWN.—It is rumored that the hero of Nicaragua is soon to come on to New-York, where he will not only be highly honored by the Fillibusters, but be tendered the freedom of the City by the Common Council, and receive general congratulations in the Governor's room. If this turns out to be true, WALKER will perhaps find it a powerful lever in raising material aid for another exoedition. Col. TITUS, who had been staying at the Howard hotel since his arrival from Nicaragua, left town a day or two ago for the South.

BROADWAY AT LEAST TO BE CARED FOR.—Some of our merchants, hotel-keepers, and others doing business on Broadway have subscribed to a fund not to exceed four hundred and twenty five dollars per week in the aggregate, to be paid to Mr. R. H. SMITH for sweeping and thoroughly cleaning Broadway from Bowling Green to Union Square, once in every twenty-four hours, Sundays excepted, for two weeks, commencing June 4. The money subscribed is to be paid to Mr. E. V. HADDEWORT or his order.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

The Extradition Cases—Application for Habeas Corpus in favor of Perot.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—June 5.

Before Judge Ingersoll.

Just before the adjournment of Court this afternoon, Mr T WHEELAND, counsel for Auguste Perot, one of the French fugitives from justice, applied to the Court, setting out in a petition that Perot had been brought before Commissioner BETTS and the case heard, and the Commissioner had adjudged that there was no cause for detaining him in custody; that he was actually discharged by consent of the prosecution on the 1st instant, but on June 4 was rearrested by the Marshal without any new warrant, but merely a memorandum indorsed on the old one directing the Marshal to take and retain him in custody until further orders; wherefore he prayed that a habeas corpus might issue to the Marshal to bring Perot before the Court to inquire in the cause of his detention, and that a certiorari issue to the Commissioner to bring up the proceedings before him.

Judge INGERSOLL said he was inclined to think though he did not wish to be bound by his opinion without further consideration, that a new warrant or to discharge the accused, except in the President of the United States; that the discharge of the accused by the Marshal was therefore wrongful, and he had a right to re-take him under the original warrant, and he therefore declined to issue the habeas corpus unless further cause was shown therefor.

Slave-Trade—Cases of the Ellen and the Merchant.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge BETTS.

At the call of the calendar yesterday morning the cases of the United States vs. the brig Ellen and the United States vs. the schooner Merchant were called, having been laid over from Thursday on account of the absence of Capt. FAUNCE, one of the witnesses for the prosecution, and because subpœnas had been by mistake made out for the 5th instead of the 4th. Mr DOOLITTLE, for the claimants, announced that he was ready for trial. Mr. JOACHIMSSEN said he was not ready; that certain witnesses for whom subpœnas were issued were found to have gone to sea before they were issued. The Court said that the prosecution must show not only that the witnesses had gone to sea before the subpœnas were issued, but also that the subpœnas were issued in due time.

It appeared that they were issued on the 3d inst. and the Court decided that in these cases which were on the Calendar and called last term and pressed for trial by the claimants and put over till this term with notice that they would be pressed this term, and on the first day of term set down or trial peremptorily on this day, the excuse was not sufficient, and the Court would allow the claimants to call the cases. Mr. JOACHIMSSEN said that would drive him to appeal to the Circuit Court, which would tie the matter up till Fall. The claimants said they would take the risk of that, and accordingly took the default of the prosecution.

By consent of parties, however, after some talk the causes were reinstated and set down for trial on Wednesday next, the District-Attorney stipulating that the libels may be dismissed by consent unless he shall be ready to try on that day.

POWERS OF NOTARIES PUBLIC TO TAKE DEPOSITIONS.

Spencer vs. The schooner Rhode Island.—In this case, which is a suit for wages, the libellants offered to read certain depositions taken before a Notary Public, under the act of Congress of July 29, 1854. The claimant's counsel raised various objections to regularity of the manner in which they were taken.

Judge BETTS said the Court would save counsel the trouble of arguing some of the points raised; that the Court would hold that a Notary Public was not a judicial officer of the United States, though he might exercise certain quasi judicial powers under the act of Congress; that Congress could not confer upon one to exercise such powers as were conferred upon Notaries by that act; that it was no defect in such an act that it was in derogation of the rules of the common law in relation to taking evidence; that it need not appear that the Notary had ever qualified as an officer of the United States, for it was perfectly competent for Congress to give such powers to any one whom soever.

The admission of the depositions was not, however finally passed upon, as the case lay over till Monday

The Robbery of $5,000 at the Lafarge Hotel.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Recorder SMITH.

PASSING COUNTERFEIT NOTES—SINGULAR TESTIMONY.

The first case tried yesterday was that of CHAS MACOMBER, aged 32, a carman in Water and 4 Bear man in Summer, who was charged with passing four $5 bills on the Buffalo City Bank, knowing them to be counterfeit.

The said Charles Macomber was addicted to Kellinger's Liniment. On the evening of March 25, between 7 and 8 o'clock, he purchased two bottles at the drug store of Mr. Erskine, No. 272 Eighth-avenue, tendering one of the said counterfeit bills as payment, and receiving $4 50 in good change. On the same evening, between the same hours, he bought a bottle of the same liniment at No. 194, in the same avenue of Mr. HIGTON, druggist. And on the same evening, between the same hours, he purchased of Mr. MATZIES, No. 172, same avenue, a bottle of the same liniment. And, yet again, of Mr PETERS, No. 91, same avenue, he purchased a bottle of the same liniment, between the same hours, on the same evening. In all these cases he offered in payment a counterfeit bill of the same denomination on the same bank, viz, $5 on the Buffalo City Bank, receiving good change in return.

All these parties swore positively to his identity. But the defence produced four persons who swore that he spent the evening in question in their company, in a tavern called "The Suite" They were hard and fast that it was so, and they were apparently respectable persons. The jury, however, did not believe them, but convicted Mr. MACOMBER, and today the Recorder will sentence him

THE $5,000 ROBBERY.

Charles Roberts, a colored man, who had been waiter at the Lafarge Hotel, was charged with stealing $5,000 from a carpet bag, the property of Mr. Alfred Knoxon, on the 5th of April. Mr. Knoxon, who resides in Saratoga County, out spends much of his time in the City, boarding at the Lafarge when he does so, brought to that hotel, a day or two before the robbery, $4,000 in small bills on the Commercial Bank of Perth Amboy, and $1,000 in bills on banks in this State and Rhode Island. This money was in his carpet bag, and with proper precaution he placed the bag in the safe belonging to the hotel, where it remained securely, till, in an unlucky hour, he was tempted to remove it to his own room and lock it in the bureau drawer. Having left his room for some time, on his return he was told that the chambermaid, on going into it, had found the bureau drawer broken open, the carpet-bag cut to pieces, and a roll of bills, to the amount of $1,000, lying upon the floor. All the money was at once gone, but no one suspected the thief. Mr Knoxon went to the Chief of Police, and, through him, offered $1 000 reward to any Policeman who should find the thief and recover the money. Guide to that effect were printed and distributed among the force. There

Suspicion was first directed towards the prisoner from the circumstances that he left his station at the Lafarge immediately after the robbery, and was subsequently seen with $56 in his possession, corresponding in numbers and private mark to some of the missing notes.

Mr. Knoxon, on his examination, testified to the loss of the bills. On cross-examination, he owned that he had paid $200 in small bills on the Commercial Bank of Perth Amboy to Mr STONE, the proprietor of the Hotel, a day before the robbery, as well as some $800 or $400 of the same money to other persons.

Edward Hallock, an exchange broker in Grand-street, who owned that at the time of the robbery he kept a policy shop, but had since retired from the business, deposed that a few days after the date of the robbery, ROBERTS gave him a $100 in Perth Amboy bills to exchange for Canada money. Prisoner was a speculator in policy shares, sometimes won, sometimes lost. He had paid witness a great deal of money; witness had paid him a great deal. Witness gave him $60 on the day of his arrest, April 16, and previous to the date of the robbery, had paid him $126 for policy gains.

Owen Prime, the head-waiter at the Lafarge, a colored man, stated that the prisoner complained of sickness about the time of the robbery, and left his situation; on the day of the robbery he was at home sick with Chagres fever; witness hired all the waiters employed at the Lafarge, and paid them on the first of every month; he got the money to pay them from Mr. STONE, who often gave him bills on the Commercial Bank of Perth Amboy for that purpose; most of the waiters "invested" in policies; they took their wages for that purpose to the policy dealers.

This witness said, in reply to the Recorder, that he did not know exactly, when the robbery took place, but knew that the accused was at home sick somewhere about that time.

Mr. Stone, the son of the proprietor of the Lafarge deposed that he paid $80 in small bills on the Commercial Bank of Perth Amboy, which he had received from Mr. KNOXON, in the house, on the day before the robbery.

The Court here adjourned to this morning at 10 o'clock. There are twenty-seven witnesses for the defence.

MARINE COURT.

Before Judge McCarthy and a Jury.

MALICIOUS PROSECUTION—A POLICEMAN IN TROUBLE.—The defendant, a Policeman in the Sixth Ward, on the 25th of last February, arrested the plaintiff on a charge of assault and battery and interfering with him in the discharge of his duty, while he was making an arrest at No. 47 Baxter-st, and took him to the Tombs, where he was imprisoned. He was tried on this charge in the Special Sessions, and acquitted, and thereupon brought a suit for malicious prosecution against the defendant. The plaintiff claimed that he had been damaged to the tune of $500. The testimony was very conflicting, and the Jury, after long deliberation, gave the plaintiff $25 damages, which does not carry cost with it.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM.

Before Judge Ingraham.

Lucien Etcheberry vs. Joseph Lecelle.—The Jury brought in a verdict of $5 600 for plaintiff in this action.

PARTIAL DEAFNESS AND DISCHARGES FROM THE EAR.—Dr. HASTLEY, Principal and Proprietor of the Philadelphia Ear Institution is now in New York, and generously offers to attend all persons suffering from affections of the ear, without charge until cured, thereby proving his success unequaled, and protecting the deaf from being swindled by paying well-styled aurists exorbitant fees in advance, and the infliction of still more serious evils, by committing the application of dangerous remedies by inexperienced and unskilful hands. Dr. H may be seen but he has no connection whatever with any person advertising to cure deafness. Neither has he given permission for the publication of a certificate, unpledging to exonerate from blame, and can only be responsible for any alarming consequences resulting from rashness and deception. Thousands of money may not be deserved in some persons, but the alleviation of one of the most important of the senses can but be regarded and treated with more than ordinary solicitude. Deafness, come in the night, and all disagreeable discharges from the ear, speedily permanently removed, without causing the least pain or inconvenience. A cure in all cases guaranteed. Immediate attendance at 416 Broadway.

APPEAL OF AN ARCTIC EXPLORER,

WM. C. GODFREY,

TO THE AMERICAN PUBLIC.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: I am the man whom Dr. KANE, in his published volume, has stigmatized as a mutineer and deserter, and whose moral character he has blackened with many reproachful epithets and insinuations, without giving the least proof that I ever committed any offence against the laws of my country, or ever was guilty of one dishonorable action. These unfounded and libelous charges against an unoffending citizen of the United States have been circulated all over the civilized world; and (strange to say) the only man who has raised a voice in my defence is an Englishman, the editor of the North British Review, who has shown, by Dr. KANE's own statements, that he has done me grievous and undeserved wrong. I have prepared a faithful account of my adventures in the Polar Regions, showing to what injurious treatment I was subjected while on board the exploring brig Advance. In this forthcoming volume, I have related facts which I defy Dr. KANE's friends and flatterers to disprove. I have shown that I placed my life in the greatest peril by traveling on foot, 95 miles, in the darkest and coldest part of the Arctic Winter, to procure food for my dying companions. I have shown that I saved Dr. KANE's life at the risk of my own, and that he afterwards attempted to shoot me, without any just cause or provocation. This book contains, on account of my toils, hardships, sufferings, and wrongs in the Arctic regions, will be published, within a few days, by Mr. J. T. LLOYD, of Philadelphia. Such has been the influence of the stigma cast upon my character by Dr. KANE's publications, that I have found it almost impossible to obtain employment in the United States. The reader, therefore, will not be surprised when I say that I have been compelled to arise an omnibus in Philadelphia, the past year, for a living.

This vindication would have appeared sooner, but I was unable to meet the expense of publication, until Mr. LLOYD agreed to publish my book at his own risk. That gentleman has enabled a poor and unfortunate man to bring his cause before the American public, from whom he asks no more than a fair and impartial hearing, and a just decision, according to the true and obvious merits of the case.

LONG ISLAND.

THE FIRE IN BAXTER'S BONDED WAREHOUSE.—We have received from the Brooklyn Fire Marshal the following statement, made under oath, of the exact quantity of property in BAXTER'S warehouse, Furman-street, Brooklyn, destroyed by fire on Thursday last:

		Moore, Movarn & Co...	44
Vessent & Bro.....	137.
Total.....			1,399

valued at about $140,000. There was also 200 hides and 70 bales of straw in the building.

The fire was caused by spontaneous combustion, and was first discovered about 12½ o'clock, in the centre of the bundles of straw. At this time there were only three persons in the building—a Custom-House officer, a workman employed about the premises, and the captain of a vessel. The straw was at the end of the building, near Furman street, piled up to within a few feet of the roof, and the Custom-House officer was engaged in taking off numbers from the casks of sugar when the captain came in, and was the first to discover smoke rising from the straw. He asked what it was, and immediately several pails of water were turned on, but it appeared as though the straw was all on fire in the centre. A moment after a sheet of flame burst up, without smoke, and followed the roof to the entrance at the water front of the building, leaving a space below sufficient to walk under it. This lasted for several minutes, when the whole premises were on fire.

Increase in receipts of Foreign Gold..... 5,206,000

The Money Market continues quiet as to demand and easy in supply. Some of the Brokers are having deposits left with them at 6 ₱ cent. Discounts are generally easy at Bank to regular dealers, and where first-class paper is put on the Street, the terms range from 7 to 8 ₱ cent. 60 days to 4 months. The classification is strict, however, and what are called fair or second-choice names, go at from 9 to 12 ₱ cent. There was a small business in Sterling bills for the Columbia at 109¾@109¾ ₱ cent. The Specie engagements for this opportunity are $200,000. The letters from the other side represent a comfortable supply of money for trade purposes, but the terms continue dear, owing to the continued demand for Silver for China, and Gold for the Continent. There were some large overdue shipments of Gold from Australia daily expected in London. The Bank of France is said to have contracted for the further sum of £6,250,000 or £1,250,000 sterling through the ROTHSCHILDS. The well-advised London correspondent of the Commercial writes:—

"The money market remains without alteration, but the tendency is toward increased ease, notwithstanding a heavy renewal of silver shipments to China, consequent upon the rates of exchange quoted by the last mail. The Bank of England are not losing specie, and as soon as any of the long-delayed Australian arrivals take place, a portion will go to swell the existing amount, although a considerable sum will be bought by ROTHSCHILD for the Bank of France.

The stock of gold in the Bank of France is said to be increasing. The accounts of the silk crop are on the whole satisfactory, while the growing corn promises exceedingly well. The Bourse, nevertheless, shows continued weakness, and a conception may therefore be formed of what would have been its position if, instead of these comparatively favorable intimations, there had been threatenings in either case, of another year of great adversity."

The Sub-Treasury received to-day $40,000, disbursed $77,339, and held at the close $12,572,084.

In the Stock Market to-day, the operators for the fall had prices pretty much their own way on the Western Railroad list, and also established a decline of 1½ ₱ cent. in New-York and Erie, 1 ₱ cent. on New-York Central, and a fraction off on Reading, though about 80 ₱ cent. was the cash

FRIDAY June 5—P. M.

The Foreign Trade returns for the port of New-York, for the calendar month of May, were completed at the Custom-House this afternoon, and present the following comparative results. The imports of the month were:

In Dutiable Goods, consumption direct....	$5,451,191
Dutiable Goods Warehoused.....	10,506,491
Free Goods.....	1,674,810
Total entries.....	$17,634,492
Against May, 1856.....	19,282 824
Decrease in May this year.....	$648,406

The amount of goods withdrawn from public warehouse was $2,262,173, or $8,246,248 less than went into warehouse, so that the total amount actually marketed during the month, dutiable and free, was only $9,388,174, against $16,097,817 marketed in May, 1856. There was also entered during the month Foreign Specie to the value of $1,070,833, against $134,284 same month last year.

The Exports of the month were:

In Domestic Produce.....	$8,044,643
Foreign Goods re-exported.....	461,297
Specie.....	5,793,207
Total Clearances.....	$12,300,199
Against May, 1856—
In Domestic Produce.....	$5,563,305
Foreign re-exported.....	315,273
Specie.....	3 812,606—$9,691,243
Increase in May, this season.....	$2,608,956

We subjoin our usual monthly comparative tables for eleven months of the Treasury year, beginning with July, 1856:

VOL. VI.....NO. 1784. NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JUNE 8, 1857. PRICE TWO CENTS.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

HOW TO AVERT A PLAGUE.

268 Deaths by Small-Pox in the City Since Jan. 1, '57.

Nuisances to be Abated—Infected Clothing to be Burnt—Board of Health, &c.

How is the health of the City? What are the prospects for an epidemic? Is anything being done to avert the yellow fever which was so near last year to breeding a panic, at least in the Metropolis? These questions are on everybody's lips, for the discussion of Quarantine matters, the perpetual recurrence of the difficulty of getting the streets cleaned, the reorganization of Boards of Health, and the overhauling of nuisances by them, naturally suggest the topic in its most practical bearings. As to its public Health, the City was seldom in better condition. Only 372 deaths were reported last week, a decrease of 53 from the mortality of the week preceding. In the list of diseases which caused these deaths, those which are apt to be swelled into epidemics in Summer time, as yet keep in the background. Thus of diarrhœa there were only four, and of dysentery only three, while the principal causes of death were those sturdy agents of mortality which never flag—never cease gathering full lists of victims. Of consumption, however, only 37 died, (an unusually small number;) by infantile convulsions, only 18; by scarlet fever, 30; by marasmus of infants, 22; of measles, 10; by croup, 6.

There is no more emphatic testimony however as to our inexcusable carelessness of life and health than is seen in the fact that 14 persons died last week of small-pox. Looking back to the first of January, we see that since that time 268 of our population have died of this loathsome disease,—while if we took only such precautions as every Christian people ought to take it would be a rare thing to report a single case of it. The following table shows the deaths by small-pox for each week since the year opened:

Or between eleven and twelve every week! Yet no intelligent person is ignorant of JENNER'S perfect preventives and vaccination—which, properly done and often enough repeated, is an unfailing preventive, is gratuitously performed in all the Dispensaries, and for some months of every year all the dead walls are flaming with posters urging people to go up and be vaccinated without charge.

The Brooklyn Board of Health has been in daily session for some days, not because the presence of disease demands their sessions, but because the season is suggestive to prudent people. Less fearful of losing votes than metropolitans, they have already allowed their noses to lead them straight into the presence of some outrageous nuisances, and to-day, doubtless, they will take prompt action for their abatement.

It was suggested in the City Inspector's Office on Saturday, that the Board of Health of this City ought to organize and take the street cleaning into its hands. There seems to be no other way of getting the streets clean while the present stupid Common Council continues its present suicidal and murderous course—refusing to take the slightest action even in reference to the contracts—without which action no parties can undertake the necessary work. It will not be long at the furthest before very hot weather will be upon us. In a very few weeks, if the streets remain unswept, it will become impossible to disturb them without the danger of uncovering in every filthy alley a source of infection and poison. The streets must be cleaned soon or we will be under the necessity of living the Summer through on a dung-hill, which it would be death to disturb. If there is a decent appearance of humanity in the Common Council, they will take definite action to-night in this matter.

Meanwhile private citizens, owners of property on Broadway, have agreed to give Mr. R. A. SMITH $50 a week to have that world's thoroughfare swept from Union-square to the Bowling-green every twenty-four hours for the next fortnight, by the machine-sweepers. Operations commenced last night. The City Inspector has ordered his assistants to help Mr. SMITH all they can.

No yellow fever has yet appeared in the bay. The buoys are to be anchored to-day in the lower bay to point out the riding ground of infected vessels. We are happy to learn that, following our suggestions, the Health Officer is having constructed a great scow, lined with iron, and fire-proof, on which hereafter all infected bedding and other combustibles, which a perfect overhauling of infected vessels will require them to be rid of, will be burned up with fire, instead as heretofore, of being thrown overboard to be drifted into some cove or fon some beach, to prove, under favorable circumstances, a point of departure for fatal fevers.

Meeting of Citizens at the City Inspector's Office—About Street Cleaning.

Several leading citizens, pursuant to an invitation of the City Inspector, met Saturday at 3 P. M. at the office of the City Inspector, No. 1 Centre-street, to talk over the best means for cleaning the streets of the City, and preventing a visitation of pestilence. Among those present were Prof. RENWICK, G. W. BLUNT, Esq., Ex-Alderman FOX, Mr. RICHARD FRENCH, JOHN GENIN, Esq., D. W. FIELD, Esq., C. H MARSHALL, Esq., IZVI PEARSON, Esq. and Hon. J. M. REID.

Mr. MORTON gave a detailed account of the present state of affairs and the difficulties with which he had to contend. On the 19th of last March proposals were opened for cleaning all the wards of the City. These proposals had been duly advertised for by Mr. EBLING, at that time at the head of the bureau for street cleaning. In conformity with the charter the contracts were awarded to the lowest bidder and the names of the contractors sent to the Common Council for confirmation. The Alderman referred the matter to a Committee, but the Committee took no action till last Tuesday night, when they reported, stating that several of the sureties for the contractors desired to be released from their liabilities. The result was that some of the awards had been confirmed up to the present time. There were seven contractors in all. Mr. REYNOLDS took the contract for cleaning thirteen wards, the remaining wards being divided about equally among the other six contractors. A few days after the opening of the proposals, the contractors entered upon their work, and continued it, or rather continued to draw pay, until the 9th of last May. The total amount of money paid to the contractors is $20,458 93. Since he assumed the charge of the street cleaning, he had refused his consent to any further payments to most of the contractors. He had served notices upon them to clean their districts in accordance with the stipulations, but they had failed to do so. With the exception of four or five Wards, the contractors had suspended work entirely. He had used all his influence to get the Board of Aldermen to act in the matter, either to legalize the contracts or declare them annulled. If they would legalize the contracts he could compel the defaulting contractors to fulfill their agreements—if they would annul them he could go to work and clean the City himself from the appropriation made for paying the contractors. As the case stood he was perfectly crippled; the old contractors had a claim upon the City; from the failure of the Common Council to ratify their contracts he had no power over them; the Comptroller would pay no bills of doubtful legality; the prospect, therefore, was that, unless he was speedily released from his dilemma, and clothed with decisive power to act in the premises, a estilence would soon visit the City, with, perhaps, sweeping and overwhelming force.

Mr. GENIN asked if the subject of the contracts referred to was not still to be acted upon finally by the Common Council.

Mr. MORTON stated that the matter was the special order in the Board of Aldermen for Monday night, (to night.)

Mr. FIELD suggested that it would be better to await the decisive action of the Common Council in the case, before taking any action themselves.

Mr. FRENCH wished to know if new proposals for cleaning the streets could not be advertised for, seeing that the old contractors had failed to fulfill their contracts.

Mr. MORTON replied that the Common Council was the body to decide this. He did not wish to say anything reflecting upon the Common Council—but it was certain that it would take two weeks at least before new contracts could be made. While awaiting the completion of the contracts, the City would be growing still more filthy, and the risks of an epidemic still enlarged.

Councilman OTTERSON urged that the most effectual way to get over the whole difficulty was to have the Board of Health convened at once, as they had the power to clean the streets against all obstacles.

Mr. FIELD inquired if the Comptroller would pay the bills for street cleaning created by the Board of Health beyond $10,000.

Mr. OTTERSON replied that the Comptroller could not help himself.

A gentleman stated that the Comptroller would not pay the bill, and instanced the course he pursued last Summer in proof of the statement.

Mr. BLUNT said if this was the case he saw no other course than for each gentleman to clean in front of his own premises. It was very certain that the present state of the streets and the danger threatened to the public would not admit of delay.

Mr. FIELD suggested that cleaning before each one's premises might be more practical and efficient in Fifth-avenue, but it would never work around the Five Points and all the really filthy pestilential sections of the City.

Mr. FRENCH thought a Park Meeting had better be called and let the citizens take the subject of street-cleaning in their own hands.

Mr. BLUNT said that meetings never amounted to anything.

Mr. FRENCH said he had known them to effect something, and suggested that it might be judicious to get Judge Lynch to preside to ensure a determined result. He would not mind seeing a man or two hung if it would result in getting the streets cleaned.

Mr. OTTERSON renewed his point as to the power of the Board of Health. He contended that they had ample power to direct the immediate cleaning of all the streets, and to authorize Mr. MORTON to do the work.

A person present stated that Mayor WOOD would not call a meeting of the Board of Health.

Mr. MORTON said that if the Board of Health would authorize him to clean the streets he would go to work and clean them directly. He would guarantee to get 600 men and carts at work in three hours' time, and in eight hours as many men and carts employed as would be needed in every Ward of this City.

After further remarks it was agreed to adjourn till to-morrow afternoon, in order to wait the action of the Board of Aldermen as to the confirmation or annulling of the present contracts for cleaning the streets.

Brooklyn Board of Health After Nuisances.

At the meeting of the Brooklyn Board, on Saturday, a communication was received from the Metropolitan Police Commissioners confirming the appointment of Health Officers. The document was read, when Alderman PIERSON moved to place it on file. Mayor POWELL said that he would not put such a motion, but would leave the chair, so that the Alderman could put it. The Mayor then left the chair, and Alderman PIERSON put the motion, which was carried unanimously, whereupon the Mayor again resumed his seat.

DR BURG's Super Phosphate of Lime factory, at the foot of Broadway, was declared a nuisance, and a Committee, consisting of Aldermen PRESTON, SCHOLES and WALSH, was directed to abate the same. The Committee, accompanied by several Health Wardens, visited the place Saturday afternoon, and stopped the work going on, and summoned Mr. DE BURG to appear before the Board this morning.

As the Committee found the establishment it was one of the greatest nuisances ever tolerated. Several hundred barrels of the flesh of dead animals was discovered in various stages of decomposition. It had been stripped from dead animals at Barren Island and brought by the cargo, in barrels, to this establishment, where it is "worked up." As the Committee could not stand the stench arising from this material on a cool day like Saturday, they guessed it might be moderately offensive, at least, on a warm day in August. The smell is said to be so offensive at times that the workmen, long familiar with it, are often compelled to suspend operations. It has been the horror of people in that vicinity for years. The Board of Health have full power to abate the nuisance, and we look to see the whole establishment routed out—unless the proprietors can carry it on in some way that is not detrimental to health and decency.

The Great Sanitary Question.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The statements of Dr. WYNNE, made a few days since to the Committee on Cleaning Streets of the Board of Councilmen, respecting the influence of street filth upon the health and morals of large cities, are eminently worthy of consideration, and present strong arguments for the immediate and continued action of both magistrates and citizens. But the learned Doctor has told less than the whole truth in some of his figures, and, moreover, failed to give that comprehensive view of the subject which is warranted by the facts. He gave the proportion of deaths to the living at entirely too good a figure for this City, as any one may discover who will work out the ratio for himself. He stated the proportion to be one death for every 34 inhabitants. Now, in this City the number of deaths in

1850.....was 15,377—population 515,394 = one in 33.52

The increased proportion of the last mentioned year resulted in part from 2,509 deaths by cholera; but even if we subtract these from the whole number of deaths, we have left 26,059, giving a proportion of one in 24.21 of the population—thus placing New-York the lowest on the list of large cities for sanitary character, as far as is known.

The mortality of Philadelphia in 1856 was one in 46, and in London one in 45. These figures are from official returns. What the relative mortality of New-York was last year we do not yet know, as the month of June finds us yet unsupplied with the report of deaths which we should have had in January.

But there is a view of this sanitary question which lies far deeper than the pavements, and to which public attention should be earnestly given. There are causes of disease and death among us far more active than dirty streets—causes which would not be removed with the filth of the surface, which are yet equally within reach of sanitary measures, but to which little or no official attention is ever given, which the general public are not aware of, because not seen by street passengers, and which are known only to the medical practitioners who visit the sick and sign the death certificates. For example: we have a disease prevailing among us which is destroying annually from 600 to 700 lives, which is as easily prevented as the toothache, and yet is unchecked by any official interference. This is that most loathsome of all diseases—Small-Pox.

Five thousand more are annually destroyed by another disease, the direct result of the foul air, filth, bad diet, and impurity in which a large proportion of our population dwell. This is Scrofula, in its various forms of marasmus, hydrocephalus, inanition, consumption, &c., a large number of whose victims might be saved by proper sanitary applications. Again, another five thousand are destroyed by fevers of various kinds, diarrhœa, dysentery, scurvy, erysipelas, cutaneous diseases, teething, &c.—the remote causes of all which are more or less within the control of enlightened health measures, which nevertheless run on undisturbed by any public check. Of the 1,500 others who died in 1855, by scarlet fever, measles, and other eruptive fevers, a large proportion might undoubtedly have been saved, under proper hygienic circumstances.

These disorders and deaths, with others that might be named, are the results of the interior circumstances of New-York life. They are in a great measure independent of the condition of the streets; for though the foul state of the highways, which seems to be peculiar to this City, tends greatly to aggravate directly and indirectly, the causes of disease alluded to; yet, if we would reduce the mortality, we must not, in the huo and cry against street filth, and the neglect of the authorities, overlook the interior condition of the crowded tenements, the cellars, the blind courts, and the miserable attics, which abound in almost every quarter. Street filth is undoubtedly a serious evil, whether evolving miasmata under the influence of heat and moisture, or whirled aloft in cloude of choking dust, penetrating into every house and into the eyes and lungs of every inhabitant. But as a disease-producing agency, it is far less potential than the damp, filthy, unventilated, unsewered tenements into which at least 300,000 of our people are crowded, and where they exist as best they may, under the pressure of landlords' rapacity, unable themselves to improve the character of their abodes, and neglected by the official power which should enforce a better condition.

Now, there is but one thing needed to arrest and rectify this great and growing evil. It has been pointed out so often and fruitlessly, that it seems a hopeless work to repeat it; nevertheless, unless the dictates of common sense, and the precepts and example of others are speedily followed, the present downward tendency of our society cannot but evitably increase in rapidity until this magnificent City will be precipitated into an abyss of disease and death, from which nothing but an earthquake or a conflagration, such as London experienced in 1666, can possibly rescue it.

Our great want is, a well-organized Medical Health Police, composed of men of scientific training, who can see and appreciate the needs of the people in this respect, who possess the energy, and are backed by the law necessary to compel and maintain the requisite improvements. Men of the proper acquirement and energy are to be had in abundance, who would take a pride in executing so philanthropic and glorious a work. The money now wasted upon inefficient, because ignorant, officials, if directed into the right channel, would suffice to secure the services of the most desirable of that class of citizens. Will not the public whose interests alone are involved in this great question, and who must increasedly suffer from the continuance of this state of things, take warning from the voices of experience, and ere it is too late set about its correction?

The only sanitary police New-York has ever had has always been composed of laymen, unacquainted with the A. B. C. of Sanitary Science; a most surprising fact when we remember that the very first duty of an officer of health should be the discovery of the actual existence of disease, and his first qualification, a knowledge of the requisite means for its suppression.

It will not suffice to confine attention to the destruction of bone-boiling establishments, the confiscation of decayed fruits, and premature calves, and the removal of dirt from the streets. These must not be neglected; but the internal domiciliary condition of the people, especially of the laboring population, are weightier matters of sanitary law, to which the others are but as tithes. To remove them is indeed to whiten the outside of the sepulchre, while to neglect the other is literally to leave the inside full of dead men's bones and all uncleanness.

But this communication is already longer than was intended. My objects are chiefly to demonstrate that, according to official returns, this is the most unhealthy city of Christendom; that its extra mortality is due more to defective household circumstances than to mere superficial outside dirt; that these defects are remediable, the mortality reducible, and the sanitary reputation susceptible of great improvement; that all we need for these purposes, is a properly officered and empowered sanitary police; that this we have never had, though a vast deal of money has been paid for it; and that we possess an abundance of the best possible material for such a service in the ranks of the medical profession. G.

City Mortality.

QUARANTINE.

Disease and Arrests at Quarantine.

The ship Belle Wood, Captain TUCKER, arrived at Quarantine from Liverpool on Saturday evening, 6th inst., bringing nearly 700 emigrant passengers. During her passage there occurred on board six deaths, and on her arrival at Quarantine one corpse and fifteen cases of contagious disease were sent from her into the Marine Hospital. The vessel and the remaining passengers were detained at Quarantine for cleansing, purification, &c.

Yesterday, WILLIAM GALVIN and MARY, his wife, who had relations on board the Belle Wood, secured a small boat and put off to the sickly vessel for the purpose of having an interview with some of her passengers. As this was a violation of the Quarantine laws, the Metropolitan Policemen, stationed at Quarantine, were called in requisition to arrest the offenders. The officers promptly responded to the call, and before many minutes had elapsed, they brought WILLIAM GALVIN and MARY, his wife, prisoners to the wharf of the Health Officer. WILLIAM and MARY'S exposure to the contagion of the sickly vessel was such as to render their detention for a time necessary within the Quarantine inclosure. DOMINIC RAGANS, too, was arrested on Sunday by the Metropolitan Policemen at Quarantine for carrying out sundry persons in a small boat to vessels under and subject to Quarantine, and for having intercourse and communication with their passengers. RAGANS is an old offender. He is well acquainted with the lawe of the State in regard to Quarantine; and now that the season of yellow fever is at hand, when infractions of the Health laws may become a serious matter, it is to be hoped that Mr. RAGANS will be promptly tried, and so give others the benefit of his experience. He made many threats and much resistance to the officers who arrested him.

The Health laws of our port are very stringent. They do not permit persons in small boats to invade the Quarantine anchorage, much less to have intercourse and communication there with vessels and passengers; and now that the authorities at Quarantine have the aid of a sufficient number of Metropolitan Policemen, they have no excuse if they fail to deal summarily with offenders, who recklessly and willfully jeopardize their own lives and the public health.

If the Metropolitan Police law had been in force last Summer, the officers at Quarantine would have had the power to maintain a far more perfect isolation of persons from infected vessels and cargoes, and to save thousands of dollars worth of cargo which was stolen by river thieves.

THE ANCHORAGE BUOYS.—To-day the buoys to mark the bounds of the Quarantine anchorage in the lower bay will be laid down. Two among the most experienced pilots have been detailed by the Pilot Commissioners for this duty. Mr. GEO. W. BLUNT, one of these Commissioners, though opposed to the location at Seguine's Point, since the law has been passed, deems it his duty to render the Quarantine Commissioners every facility in the performance of their duties. Mr. EDMUND BLUNT, of the Harbor Commission, at their request, has drawn all the legal lines on the chart of the U. S. Coast Survey.

The boundaries of the anchorage ground extend from the Knoll in a S. S. W. direction; the southern boundary being the line of State jurisdiction already described, three to four miles in length by three quarters of a mile in width. This space, they presume, will accommodate more vessels than will ever have occasion to anchor there.

SEGUINE'S POINT.—The news from Seguine's Point last night, at 10 o'clock, was, that an attack was expected every hour from the "Insurgents," and that the "Regulars" were well prepared to receive them. Inasmuch as no subsequent news has come from the "infected district" the probability is, that all is quiet.

POLICE PROGRESS.

THE NEW ORDER FORGING ALONG.

Large Accessions from the First, Third, Tenth, Twentieth and Twenty-Second Wards.

Seventy New Men Appointed by the Dead Board.

THE NEW COMMISSIONERS

The Police War is still raging. The Metropolitan Commissioners had a long secret session Saturday forenoon, at which Gov. King was present. The business done was understood to be purely private and related only to the adoption of the means deemed necessary to the success of the new law.

Reports were received at this office in White-street from the Third, Fifth, Eighth, Ninth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fifteenth, Nineteenth, Twenty-first, and Twenty-second Wards.

Capt. Squires, of the Eleventh Ward, reported that two other men, Dyckman and Van Ardel, in his precinct, had declared for the new Commissioners.

Lieut. Bryan, of the Nineteenth Ward, announced some farther accessions.

In a great many Wards on Saturday accessions were made to the new Board. In some cases the test was put to the men by the old and others by the new officers.

IN THE FIRST WARD.

Capt. Murray of the First Ward took the initiative on Saturday evening to ascertain the position of his men in reference to the question that agitates the Department. He caused the entire force in his district to be summoned together at the Station House at the sun-set roll call. All were present except one. Each man was then requested to define his position. The result was that 58 men declared for the old Commissioners and five for the new. Three refused to answer, and one was absent. The result, considering the material of which the First Ward is composed is deemed unexpectedly favorable to the new Board. Capt. Murray gives the following account of the affairs, in his return, made yesterday to Chief Matsell:

"At the sun-set roll call on Saturday evening, Capt. Murray, of this District, had all the men belonging to his District, detailed and otherwise, except one, present, and addressed them in the following language:

GENTLEMEN: The purpose of calling you together this evening, is to ascertain how you are disposed in reference to the so-called Metropolitan Police Commissioners, and the present Board under which I act, viz.; the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge. I want each men, as his name is called, to state which of the Boards of Police Commissioners he recognizes, and answer old or new as his name is called. As for myself I recognize the old Commissioners and none other."

The roll was then called, with the following result:

For the Old Board—Capt. Murray, First Lieut. Dalton, Second Lieut. Burns, Sergeants Ryan, Donovan, Kennedy, Smith, Roche, and 48 men.

Refused to Answer—Gilfeather, Cherry, Ahrens—3.

IN THE THIRD WARD.

The men of the Third Ward defined their position on Saturday evening also. The result was that 25 expressed a preference for the old, and 18 for the new Board. Among those favoring the new Board is Capt. Hopkins and his acting Lieutenants. As Capt. Hopkins still retains his position in the Station, the men did not split, but went out on their beats by his direction, as usual.

IN THE TENTH WARD.

A vote was likewise had in the Tenth Ward on Saturday evening. The result was as follows:

For the old Board.....36
Refused to answer.....9
Absent.....4

Those refusing to answer are understood to be for the new Commissioners, as are also a majority of those who were absent.

During the day a paper pledging the signers to support the old Commissioners was presented to the Tenth Ward men for signature.

Meantime a paper favoring the new Commissioners was also drawn up by those opposing old, and both parties worked vigorously. An understanding was had by some of the men that they should decline to answer if asked at the roll call to express their preferences. And this understanding was carried out.

All the force being assembled, they were addressed briefly by Captain Norris. He said that they must all be aware by this time that there were two Boards claiming jurisdiction of the police. As their orders conflicted he deemed it necessary that the men of his district should declare which Board they would serve, and with this view had called the entire force together. He then requested the roll to be called, desiring each man to express his preference by the answer old or new,—for himself he did not recognize the new Commissioners, but would continue to act as heretofore under the orders of the old Board, composed of his Honor the Mayor, Recorder Smith and City Judge Russell. As before stated nine men refused to answer. When the name of officer Slowey was called he said, "I decline to answer such a question."

Captain Norris said, "But you must answer Old or New."

SLOWEY—Have you any orders to that effect, Captain?

Capt. NORRIS—That makes no odds.

Officer SLOWEY—Then I won't answer.

Josiah McCord was then called. Mr. McCord not answering directly, was asked by the Captain "Old or New, Mr. McCord?"

Mr. MCCORD—Is that a constitutional question, Captain?

Captain NORRIS—Answer the question Old or New. It's a proper question.

Mr. MCCORD—If this is constitutional we now lay an injunction on it. We came here, Captain, to go on duty, and not to answer questions of a political nature.

Capt. NORRIS—Are you spokesman?

MCCORD—Yes, Sir, so far as our party is concerned.

Capt. NORRIS—That will do.

The other names of this, the second platoon, were then called, as were also those of the first or incoming platoon, with the result already given.

A Station-House for the reception of the Metropolitan Police force will be in readiness to-day. Thaddeus C. Davis, now Lieutenant, will have command as Sergeant for the present.

IN THE FOURTEENTH WARD.

Capt. KISSNER too called his men together in the Fourteenth-Ward Station-House on Saturday evening, and after an address desired their opinion on the police question at issue. Every man present (six were absent) declared for the Old Board. The news of the six who were absent were had yesterday, and they, too, went in for the Mayor.

IN THE TWENTIETH WARD.

The force in the Twentieth Ward have defined their position also, by request of Capt. Joyce. Six men declared their preference for the new Commission, but one of them—M. S. Ryer—afterwards "changed his mind," and continued to remain in the old Station-house. The names of the other five are as follows: Robert Castle, Henry Masdine, Jacob Moore, Andrew Clough, and Chas. Roth.

IN THE TWENTY-SECOND WARD.

Capt. Witter, of the Twenty-second Ward, requested his men, on Saturday evening, to declare themselves, and they did so. Capt. Witter, in his report of the affair, made to the Chief, says:

On last evening, at roll-call, an unusual scene took place in consequence of Lieutenant Van Orden assuming to take charge of the Twenty second Ward Station-house. Both platoons were present. Captain Witter was in command. Lieutenant Van Orden stated that he was directed by the Old my Commissioners to take possession of the Station-house. The right of the Lieutenant to take possession was promptly denied by the Captain, who stated that he was Captain of the station in charge and command from the municipal authorities from whom he was commissioned, and he would not recognize nor tolerate any other authority. Captain Witter then proceeded to address the men in relation to the course they felt disposed to pursue. He reminded them that his and their commissions had been made out to them by the municipal authorities, and that they had never been appointed to this charge by State officials. Captain Witter remarked to the men that, as their names were read, each could manifest his disposition by adding to his response "Mayor" or "new Commissioners," as indicating which authority he acknowledged. Those who should manifest their disposition to follow the Lieutenant and transfer their allegiance to the State authority, would then step forward, and depart from the Station-house forthwith.

The roll was then called by Capt. Witter with the following result:

For the Metropolitan Commissioners.—Lieut. Van Orden and five men.

Capt. Witter said he now had merely to say to those men who had expressed their determination to transfer their service to the State, that in leaving the Station House they must remember that they had in their possession property belonging to the city which they ought as far as possible to surrender to him. Their caps, their stars and books should not be removed, at least without leaving acknowledgment thereof in his hands. The stars, especially, he wished should not be removed from the Station House, as they were the emblems of an office and duty which they had now repudiated. The State authorities, too, had adopted altogether a different emblem. Capt. Witter then directed them to deliver up their stars, which they did with a good deal of feeling, and then left the Station House.

Captain Witter adds to his report; "An immense number of the satelites of the Albany Junta were present, and immediately took the above defunct Policemen to their warm embrace, and adjourned with them to the nearest lager bier saloon."

To-morrow it is expected the men in other Wards will give their views.

THE OLD BOARD.

Mayor Wood and City Judge Russell "swore in" about fifty new Policemen on Saturday, to fill the places of those gone over to the new Commissioners. Further appointments will be made to-day. The Mayor is determined to fill every vacancy that may occur, and keep up the strength of his force, regardless of the action of the new Board.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Difficulty of Finding a Governor for Utah—Cause of the Mormon Troubles—Central American Affairs—United States Treasurer's Statement, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, June 7.

The Governorship of Utah is still in doubt. It is believed that Ex-Gov. PHILIP FRANK THOMAS, of Maryland, will be commissioned, but the President has not yet acted upon it. There seems to be great difficulty in the obtaining of a proper man to meet the exigencies of the case. The matter could be settled at once by investing General HARNEY with civil powers to act, and then, if persuasion did not answer, he could be as uncivil as he pleased. There is hardly a doubt but that a rupture must take place before "law and order" can be restored in Utah. As soon as the military forces shall arrive, it will be hard to keep the soldiers from creating jealousies with the Mormons, and the first good cause which the Mormons shall give in retaliation must lead to open hostilities.

It seems that the dismissal of JOSEPH L. HAYWOOD, formerly United Stetes Marshal in Utah, and now editor of the Mormon paper in New-York, first gave rise to the present difficulties with our Government. All the courts in the Territories, except that of the Probate Court, are presided over by the Federal Judges. These Judges sit in all cases, whether arising under the laws of the United States, or under the Territorial Statutes. In the latter case, however, the Sheriff presides instead of the United States Marshal, and the fees and expenses are borne by the Territory. In the settlement of the accounts of HAYWOOD, the Mormon Marshal, last Summer, Mr. WHITTLESEY very justly refused to allow fees to him, in which the courts tried cases under the Territorial Statutes, on the ground that the United States were no parties. HAYWOOD, it seems, in trying to effect a settlement of his accounts, offered Mr. STURGES, of Georgia, a clerk in the First Auditor's office, the sum of twenty dollars, to assist him in getting his accounts through. This was construed into an attempt to bribe by Mr. STURGES, who seized the uncircumcised Mormon by his long red beard, and thrust him from the office. On the charge being preferred, HAYWOOD was arrested in Washington for trial, but President PIERCE dismissing the Mormon Marshal at once, the case was dismissed by the United States Attorney. On the strength of this action violent and exaggerated statements were prepared and sent to BRIGHAM YOUNG. At the last session of the Courts in Utah, after the United States cases were disposed of, the High Sheriff, or Marshal of Utah, claimed to act instead of the United States Marshal, who was ousted by force. In this it is clear the United States Marshal was wrong, and he should have given way to the Sheriff in the trial of cases coming under the statute laws. But still this did not warrant the burning of the records nor the violent scenes which afterwards took place. I give these particulars in order your readers may understand the causes of the war. All the United States officers who were appointed to Utah have arrived in Missouri, and BRIGHAM YOUNG has now full swing until the new régime arrives.

There is no truth in the dispatch sent you on the 3d inst., that W. R. G. WEBSTER, on behalf of Costa Rica and Nicaragua, and C. K. GARRISON, on the part of GARAISON & MORGAN, had proposed to this Government and to Lord NAPIER some plan of arrangement touching the conflicting interests of the Nicaragua Transit Company, and indirectly invoking the settlement of the Central American question.

It is said that this joint plan of arrangement existed only in the imagination of Mr. W. R. C. WEBSTER. Certain it is that Mr. GARRISON has no connection with him, and that no such proposition as inferred has been made. This Government could not enter into any such arrangement, under existing circumstances, with the British Government through Lord NAPIER as indicated, and no action will be taken whatever by the Administration until the meeting of Congress.

The Union, yesterday, in a dispatch, announces Gen. WALKER'S arrival in Philadelphia. It should have been Memphis, Tenn.

The Secretary of War, and the Chiefs of the Bureaus, attended, yesterday, a very interesting and successful experiment, made at the War Department, by Mons. J. B. RICHER, formerly of the French Army. Mons. RICHER is the inventor of a process to restore putrid meats or fish to a perfectly sound and healthy state. The experiment yesterday was tried on a putrid beef-steak and a shad, which were at first so offensive that one could hardly stay in the room. By a hocus-pocus preparation and sousing the beef and fish in a bucket of water, they came out perfectly fresh; Mons. RICHER, who made this discovery in New-York, proposes to sell his invention to our Government, and to France and England. For our ships of war, and our army, it might be of great service when provisions become spoiled, and some other was to be had. At Sebastopol, it is said 17,000 men died of cholera from eating spoiled meat.

The news brought by the last steamer from Europe that a deputation from Liverpool had waited on the "Cotton Supply Association" at Manchester, and that a national meeting on the subject was proposed to be held in Liverpool, is attracting attention in the South, among the cotton planters. It is well known that, notwithstanding the large supply of cotton which England receives from India, Egypt and Brazil, she is still dependent on the Southern States for the staple, and it has been her aim for years to rid herself of this dependence, so as to free her from the only tie which links her to us. Her war with India was gotten up for this purpose. Her battles with the Afghans had this policy for her only cause. The Southern States once pretended to aid her some 15 or 17 years ago by sending off to India some of its most talented and experienced cotton growers to teach the Coolies how to grow the cotton plant. It would flower most beautifully, but the soil would not admit of a single full boll. And after spending millions of dollars in the experiment, England gave it up, and sent our young men home.

THE ARCTIC SEARCH.

Some particulars in relation to the new expedition for Arctic search were stated by HENRY GRINNELL, V. P., at a recent meeting of the Council of the Geographical Society. It appears that the vessel selected for this duty, intended to sail about the last of June, will be commanded by Capt. MCCLINTOCK, of the Royal Navy, who has already condncted one expedition in search of Sir JOHN FRANKLIN'S party. This expedition is nndertaken at the instance of Lady FRANKLIN, who has devoted the whole of the remains of her fortune to the enterprise, having conveyed it to trustees for the purpose. She has purchased for the purpose a screw steam yacht, the Fox, schooner rigged, diagonally planked, built for the late Sir RICHARD SUTTON, and now lying at Aberdeen. This vessel is to be strengthened for the service she is to enter npon, and at once got ready for sea.

To aid the work, a subscription has been started in England, headed by the most distinguished geographers in that country, Sir Roderick Murchison, President of the Royal Geographical Society, subscribes £100; Admiral Beaufort, £50; Lord Wrottesly, President of the Royal Society, £50; Sir Thomas Acland, £100; Hon. Mrs. Fairholme, £150; Ashnrst Majendie and Mrs. Majendie, £100; M. de La Roquette, Vice-President of the Geographical Society at Paris, 1,000f., and various other distinguished persons other sums. The subscriptions are to be paid to COUTTS & Co., bankers, to "Lady Franklin's Final Search Fnnd."

It was hoped that the ship Resolute, the vessel picked up by some of our mariners, purchased by this Government, and lately returned to the English Government, would be permitted to be used for this expedition, and once more visit those regions where she was abandoned by her officers and crew. The Admiralty, however, would not permit her to be sent upon this service, and have had her dismantled and laid np in ordinary. The utmost the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have consented to in behalf of the expedition, is to promise leave of absence to such officers of the Navy as might volunteer to serve upon it. Capt. MCCLINTOCK has had granted to him leave of absence for eighteen months. This officer understands perfectly well the enterprise which he has offered to conduct, and has already won a high place in the annals of Arctic adventure. He served with distinguished ability in the expedition under command of Sir JOHN ROSS in 1848-9, again under the orders of Capt. AUSTIN in 1850-1, and, thirdly, in command of the screw-steamer Intrepid, in company with the Resolute, commanded by Capt. KELLETT, in 1852-3. Capt. MCCLINTOCK has demonstrated in his Arctic career an extraordinary skill in organizing sledge-traveling, having brought it to a degree of perfection which has wrought an entire revolntion in Arctic operations. His personal success in conducting sledge-parties, has been such that no name in the list of Northern voyagers stands higher than his.

It was stated at a meeting of the Royal Irish Academy, held on the 27th of April, that it was generally understood that Lord PALMERSTON was personally favorable to granting Government aid to Lady FRANKLIN'S expedition. It was further stated that several "influential New-York people" had preferred a request to the Admiralty that the Resolute might be placed at the disposal of Lady FRANKLIN.

The Board, however, quite decisively declined to allow that vessel to be sent npon the service, and accompanied their refusal to lend any aid to the expedition by the statement, that they "have arrived at the conclnsion that they shonld not be justified, for any objects which in their opinion can be attained by an expedition to the Arctic Seas, in exposing the lives of officers and men to the risk inseparable from any snch enterprise." It appears, however, by investigations, the results of which were made public at the meeting of the learned Society last named, that the rate of mortality for all Arctic Expeditions since 1818, (exclusive of the missing expedition,) is under 1½ per cent. per annum; for which, and other reasons, Arctic service is extremely popular both with officers and men. From which we may conclnde that the reason assigned by the Lords' Commissioners for their refusal to Lady FRANKLIN was one of these convenient generalizations with which official persons, much pressed, put aside persevering applicants.

The locality in which Sir JOHN FRANKLIN'S vessels, the Erebus and Terror, lie, is not so vague and inexplorable as the nninformed reader would imagine. It is easily reached, is circumscribed within narrow limits, and, what is attractive to the scientific world, is in the immediate neighborhood of the magnetic North Pole. The extent of coast line which has been already traversed by the Searching expeditions of the British Government, is 6,500 miles. There remain to be explored only 370 miles. Professor HAUGHTON (of the Royal Irish Academy) says that an expedition consisting of 100 persons, might be expected to traverse from 7,000 to 10,000 miles, with sledges, in a single year.

It is asserted, and we think with perfect truth, that it is by no means necessary for the complete exploration of the area described, (bounded by 370 miles of coast,) that the exploring vessel should penetrate so far as to risk detention by the ice. In the event of involnntary detention, or accident to the ship, the crew could readily escape over the ice, with sledges and boats, either to the whalers, or to one of the three great dépôts of provisions stored np at Port Leopold, Beechey Island and Melville Island. In this manner, it will be remembered, the crews of Sir EDWARD BELCHER'S ships were withdrawn from the vessels, not of neccsity, but in compliance with Admiralty orders, their crews at the time being in good health, and another year's provisions remaining.

In regard to the ships being crushed, the danger, such as exists, is annually met by whalers who encounter it from mere motives of gain. Ont of the thirty British Government vessels employed in the late expeditions, only one—the Breadalbane—was lost by ice-crushing. She was a merchant ship employed to carry provisions; she had not been strengthened like the searching vessels, and had been kept in a most exposed and perilous position for fourteen days previous to the accident. It occurred near Beechey Island, where, had she been docked in the ice, in conformity to the usnal practice, she would have been saved.

It has been asked by many, what is the good of these Arctic exploring expeditions? In reply, some of the results in the extension of commerce and trade which have flowed from them, may be stated as follows:

1. Sir H. GILBERT'S discovery of the Cod-fisheries of Newfoundland.

2. From DAVIS' discoveries—the great Whale-fishery of West Greenland.

3. From the discoveries of HUDSON, (by the way, he discovered and sailed into our North River, which now bears his name, while on an Arctic voyage)—Hudson's Bay and the operations of the great Fur Companies.

4. Sir JOHN ROSS—Whale-fishery of the north and northwest of Baffin's Bay.

5. Capt. PARRY—Whale-fishery of Lancaster Sound, Barrow Strait and Prince Regent's Inlet.

6. Admiral BEECHEY—Whale-fishery of Behring's Straits, in which, in the space of two years, the whalers of Nantucket and New-Bedford obtained cargoes from which, it is said, they have realized eight millions of dollars.

It is proposed by Capt. MCCLINTOCK to make his way down Prince Regent's Inlet, and thence through Bellot's Strait, into the field of search; or [illegible], if he deems the state of the ice to justify the step, by going down Peel Sound, which he has good reason to believe to be a strait. If the ice will permit him to pass through Bellot's Strait, or go down Peel's Sound, he will abandon the idea of taking his ship through the conjectured Northwest Passage, and, leaving her in safety in Prince Regent's Inlet, will proceed to make the search for the missing ships, Erebus and Terror, by sledging parties, in the management of which, as we have stated above, he is exceedingly skillful.

Those who have given the most time and consideration to the matter have most confidence that survivors of Sir JOHN FRANKLIN'S crews will be found, domesticated among the Esquimanx, adopting their manners and habits of life. In the trying times of Dr. KANE'S Expedition, his men turned from the rigor of their service to the comparative comfort of the savages they fell in with. "We regarded," he says, "the coarse life of these people with eyes of envy, and did not donbt that we could have lived in comfort upon their resources." He mentions that "it required all his powers, moral and physical," to restrain his men from resorting to a life in which they could immediately, if ingloriously, escape the privations to which they were exposed. Dr. KANE, himself, more than once felt the attractions of this Esquimaux life come over him, in his hours of donbt and suffering, like the fatal sleep that precedes death from freezing, and his fiery and ambitious spirit at times, so he confessed, almost succumbed to the temptation. It is more than probable that men of Sir JOHN FRANKLIN'S party still live.

To explore the 370 miles remaining unexplored, ont of almost 7,000 miles of Arctic coast, is the apex and crown of Arctic adventure. Survivors of Sir JOHN FRANKLIN'S party still may be found. The vessels may yet exist. These three are the chief points in the resumé of the conditions and objects of this new expedition. The Admiralty and the London Times newspaper profess a want of faith in any good results from it. On the other hand, able men in Her Majesty's navy, men who have added to the meed of well approved service in their profession the honors of science, together with the leading geographers of London, and divers London journals, as the Sun, the Standard, &c., approve of it and warmly encourage it. As we have seen above, they have backed their opinion by contribution from their purse, publishing their confidence with that most emphatic guaranty which comes from the pocket. How signal would be the triumph of faith and of affection, if, after all years of suspense, and after suspense had ceased and despair had set in, in every bosom but one, tidings of FRANKLIN and his men, his ships and their fate, should be brought to our ears!

THE MORMONS.

The Murder of the Mormon Prophet, Joseph Smith.

Life Illustrated, a sprightly weekly published in this City by FOWLER & WELLS, is publishing a series of articles on the Mormons, and in last week's number narrates the facts of the death of the Mormon prophet, Jo. SMITH, to contradict certain statements published in the Mormon:

"It is substantially true that the SMITHS were murdered after their voluntary surrender, and that the deed was done by a mob of lawless men, but the Mormon is quite wrong in denouncing Governor FORD as the instigator of that act. The facts, as we derive them from the files of papers of 1844, are these: On the 26th of June, 1844, JOSEPH and HYRUM SMITH gave themselves up for trial, and recognized in $500 bail for each, but, for greatnr security from the passions of the mob, were confined in the Hancock County Jail of Illinois. The Governor stationed over them a guard of seven men, drawn from the ranks of the Carthage Greys. On the afternoon of the following day (June 27) the guard were overcome and the doors were broken by a militia force of two hundred men. JOSEPH SMITH fired at the first man, one WILLIS, who entered the room in which he was confined, and broke his wrist. The crowd then poured in, JOSEPH attempted to escape by the window, but received six shots before he reached the ground, and five afterward. His brother, HYRUM, was killed in the prison. It was clearly an act of violence, and cannot be excused; but it is utterly false to say that the work was aided or abetted by Governor FOAN. It was simply the effect of a popular outbreak, and while it is to be deplored, is by no means a singular occurrence. So much for the Prophet and the manner of his death."

Important from Utah.

MORMONS DETERMINED TO RESIST.

From the Leavenworth Herald, May 30.

Mr. WILLIAMS and Mr. MORRELL arrived here on the 29th from Salt Lake. Left Salt Lake 15th April, grass six weeks later than was ever known, snow on the mountains averages 20 feet—everything quiet on the plains—saw but few Indians; met Col. SUMNER with two companies United States troops at Vermillion, one hundred miles out. Met first emigrant trains 20 miles this side Fort Kearny, getting along very well and generally healthy. Met more or less every day in large numbers coming from the Southwestern part of Missouri, with large numbers of stock; estimated that 10,000 wagons and 30,000 cattle would cross the plains for California.

The entire company consisted of MCGRAW'S Mail Train, under direction of JESSE JONES, D. BURR, U. S. Surveyor General of Utah, JUDGE STILES, Associate Justice of Utah, and family; U. S. Marshal DODSON and family; H. F. HORRELL, Post Master at Salt Lake; THOMAS S. WILLIAMS and family, late firm of HOOPER & WILLIAMS. Composed of sixty—30 males and 30 females. Salt Lake mail passed down yesterday—259 wagons, with 1,000 emigrant secedera from Utah, will comn to the States, and about 1,000 will go to California.

Mr. WILLIAMS' life has been threatened. It was prophesied by BRIGHAM YOUNG and other Mormons, that he would never get away from Salt Lake alive. A secret organized band, ever ready to do the order of the Prophet and twelve Apostles, were threatening his life. He defied their vengeance. It was a miracle that WILLIAMS got away.

We learn that BRIGHAM YOUNG has not left Salt Lake, and the rumor that he was compelled to flee the country is untrue.

The half of the outreges of the Mormons, that Mr. WILLIAMS knows of, cannot be told in the limits and space we have.

Correspondence of the Missouri Democrat.

STEAMER DAVID TATUM,
Missouri River, May 30, 1857.

I left Leavenworth this afternoon for Quindaro, on the fast sailing steamer David Tatum, and am now steaming it down the river. Before leaving I had a very interesting interview with Gen. BURR and Judge STILES, both of whom have just arrived from Utah.

Their accounts of affairs in that territory are very exciting. The Mormons during the past winter have been perpetrating many outrages upon the Gentiles and the United States authorities. Those gentlemen confirm the accounts furnished the press by Judge DRUMMOND, and say that it is worse now in Salt Lake City than it was at the time DRUMMOND left. Several have been murdered and many robberies committed during the last winter. The laws and courts of the United States are repudiated by order of Gov. YOUNG, whose will is supreme in that section of the country, and the authorities of the General Government treated very indignantly. Judge STILES' court had been compelled to adjourn in consequence of the mobocratic spirit manifested in opposition to it by the devoted followers of YOUNG, rendering it impossible to issue a process in Utah emanating from the district courts established there by act of Congress. The Mormons claimed exclusive jurisdiction, and repudiated the idea that government has any authority in that Territory in any manner whatever.

The Surveyor General had been threatened with violence several times, and at last forced to leave for safety. Judge STILES could not execute the functions of his office, and concluded to visit Washington to see what could be done.

Mrs. FARNHAM, of Salt Lake City, had been threatened and compelled to leave, and she came on in the company which arrived yesterday.

The crime alleged against her was "Boarding Gentiles," which was contrary to the wish of the Governor.

The Mormons express themselves determined to resist to the death every attempt of the General Government to establish any authority in Utah. "That was their country, and no power on earth shall interfere with them." They had a code of laws made by themselves and they should inforce them, establish and maintain their own courts in spite of all opposition. This is illustrating the principle of "squatter sovereignty" with a vengeance, and I wonder if it is in accordance with the ideas of DOUGLAS on that subject. A Mormon by the name of APPLEBY, Clerk of the Supreme Court, was the author of several letters sent on to the States and published, which pretended to give a correct account of affairs in Utah, during the many charges made against YOUNG and his followers, and signed "A Gentile."

His communications are not reliable, as he is one of the principal men in Salt Lake City devoted to the Mormon Church, and all of his pretensions of being a "Gentile" were humbug.

Judge STILES and Gen. BURR consider it absolutely necessary for the Government to take the most stringent measures for the restoration of "law and order" in that Territory, the inhabitants of which were in open rebellion against the laws and authorities of the United States, and unless something was done, no one could foretell the evils that would result from delay. Life and property was not safe, and injured parties have no means of obtaining redress. YOUNG was Governor and supreme dictator—one of the greatest tyrants that ever lived. His will is law, from which there is no appeal.

FILLIBUSTERISM.

SPEECH OF GEN. WILLIAM WALKER,
Delivered at New-Orleans, May 30.

Walker Still Confident—And Twenty Thousand People to Hear Him.

From the New-Orleans Sunday Times, 31st.

Canal-street—the ancient neutral ground—has seldom groaned beneath the weight of so patriotic a crowd as last evening took position upon her heaving bosom. Long before the hour for meeting, the people—and when we say the people, we mean the real representatives of New Orleans sympathy—began to assemble around the platform which had been erected for the hero to make an explanation from. The meeting was called to order by General JOHN L. LEWIS, who, after the preliminary organization, introduced General WILLIAM WALKER, President of Nicaragua. He was received with a shout that waked the far-off echoes, and as he cast his eyes over the sea of heads in front and rear, he must have thought that he never met so many men, even in the ranks of the Costa Rican army. The General spoke in substance as follows:

FELLOW CITIZENS: I stand before you, not to vindicate a cause, for it needs none; what is just needs no vindication. This concourse of citizens and the sympathy here manifested, attest the interest you feel. But I stand to vindicate Americans, and the acts by which the American cause has been upheld by American citizens.

In examining the motives of these acts, I ask you to discard all prejudices; to stand here as if you were posterity, to judge of history—to judge without fear and without favor. Many and unscrupulous have been the means resorted to for the purpose of placing me in a false light before my countrymen. These reports it is necessary to explain; and I challenge my enemies to stand and point to a single act of mine which has been in violation of either civil, national or international rights (cheers;) I challenge any one present to assert any act of mine in Nicaragua which has not been stamped with the seal of justice.

There are those who have charged upon me such motives as to attempt to vindicate would be a sheer mockery. There are those who have charged upon me avarice and mere personal gain; from such I scorn to exonerate myself. The men who were with me in Nicaragua—my fellow-countrymen in arms will exculpate me from the charge of ever having entertained such motives. But there are other insinuations not so degrading at the first blush—that I was a mere soldier of fortune, attempting to carry out an ambitious scheme, and endeavoring to make for myself a name and a fame. This imputation I reject as equally unfounded, and I hope to convince you that such were not my motives—that I was not a mere soldier of fortune and adventure—risking the lives of my countrymen for selfish purposes—the actions of my hand prove a more noble purpose. If I have exerted myself for any thing and for any purpose, it has been to extend American influences and Americanize Nicaragua.

For thirty five years a struggle for liberty had been going on among the Central American Republics. Civil wars showed that that people were incapable of self government. Nicaragua was in a State of anarchy when I received the offer of CASTILLON; but, after my arrival there, I refused to act in open violation of the laws of the United States; but I replied to the Cabinet that there would be no violation of the laws of our country in their asking me to fight in behalf of the Democratic Party. I sent an agent to CASTILLON to inform him that the contract between us must be made accordingly; that I had an invitation to assist the Hondurians from General CABANAS, and would go there if CASTILLON apprehended any danger from the presence of Americans in Nicaragua. On bended knees, and in the most suppliant terms, the Provisional President of the Republic insisted that I should remain—he wished the Americans to be on his side, for he knew they were loyal, brave and true. [Applause.]

After my success on the Transit route, I made a treaty, by which the presence of Americans was approved by CORRAL and his party. I did this to secure the good will of all, and there was not a Nicaraguan who, in the face of this treaty, could say he did not approve the presence of Americans on their soil. Seven days after, in the awful presence of the priests, before whom General CORRAL and myself had sworn to the treaty, and ere the ink was scarcely dry upon the paper, he penned encouraging letters to the people of Honduras against the Americans; these fell into my hands, and I felt that I might have brought him to the block, and by the provisions of the treaty could not evade his execution. This traitor proved to be guilty, and proved nothing in his extenuation, but begged for mercy; but I felt then as I do now, that a Court of Justice was a thing of wisdom, and mercy the part of folly. [Applause.]

I felt that justice and mercy would still be meted out, and that in six months after CORRAL'S death, his party would be vanquished. After the execution of CORRAL, the Rivas party went over to the Democratic side, and Gen. CABANAS assisted the Hondurans. I went, by invitation, to the assistance of the Nicaraguans. Gen. HERRZ joined in the application that was made to me. Every exertion was made to influence me to take the Americans to Honduras. I replied that the Americans were there as friends to all parties. By my suggestions, Commissioners were sent to Honduras and all the States, stating that we desired peace, and that our policy was pacific, and that, under the circumstances, to take sides was illiberal. HERRZ acknowledged the truth of my suggestion. He was not a Democrat, and was not in favor of aiding CABANAS.

Deputies were sent by my advice, stating that the Nicaraguans desired peace. We shall see how far it was granted. In the meantime, an important event transpired—at the suggestion of DON PATRICIO RIVAS, an American was sent to represent the republic at Washington. I opposed this as bad policy, but I was not in authority, and my opposition was unavailable. They wanted an American to speak the American language. You all know, fellow-citizens, how he was received, and now can paint the surprise of the Nicaraguans, because, on the plea of PIERCE and MARCY, he was rejected on account of his being born in the United States. I well knew the result, and told them of the relations that existed between this country and Nicaragua, but I assured them that my countrymen knew a power higher than that of Cabinets and Presidents, and that I had infinite confidence in that higher power, which the people held in their own hands—the true American sovereignty. [Applause.]

The alliance which followed, between the four States of Central America—the combination against American citizens in Nicaragua, due to PIERCE and MARCY, under their rejection of the Nicaraguan Minister—brought the matter to maturity, for immediately the Costa Ricans—the supposed weakest party of the combination—commenced hostilities by an open declaration of war. Then followed the almost anomalous decree, by which the Costa Ricans made war, not against a State, but the Americans in Nicaragua. Thus commenced the war of the races—the great battle of the mongrels and the white men.

This war, then, was not started by Americans in Nicaragua, and I challenge the mention of a single act in which they did anything but uphold the pledges made by the whole people of Nicaragua. After this it appears that Don PATRICIO RIVAS plotted with the Northern States for effecting the desertion of such Americans as he could not expel by force. American rights were ignored in Nicaragua; bribes of money, and even lands, were freely offered, in the face of our having braved war in its worst forms, and suffered the loss of life by the rage of famine and pestilence.

They pretended to be convinced as to my assurances, and were willing that the merits of an election should go before the people. This I desired, for I well knew that the mass of the people detested, with an implacable hatred, the forced military service of the Costa Ricans.

The election was decreed, but only think! the result was scarcely declared before RIVAS was found plotting a revolution, under the pretence that the people were overawed by my presence. But "the wicked flee when no man pursueth;" I was not there—they were running from their own consciences. Notwithstanding this conduct of RIVAS, an election was had, and I was declared President of the Republic. [Great applause.]

By this election I stood forth as the only protector and lawful representative of the Nicaraguans. RIVAS was previously but the provisional President. I was Commander-in chief of one portion of the army, and it was through me that RIVAS was named for the provisional. I was joint sponsor of his choice, and after the death of Corral was the sole cause of his elevation. I was bound by oath to put RIVAS out when I was sworn in, but I was justified by the unmistakable voice of the Nicaraguans, who knew the facts under which I had been elected.

I need not recount the events that followed: but to vindicate the Americans in Nicaragua, you all know how long and successfully I strived with, and I forced back the enemy—braved that worst of foes, the lurking pestilence, then raging with violence in Granada. But for a new influence—an influence which, I regret to say, comes little less from my own than a foreign country—we might still be in arms in Nicaragua. It is probable we had no right to expect sympathy of the British, even if determined at the sacrifice of the honor and rights of British officers. But I need not tell you that officers of the British service encouraged desertion from our army, themselves forgetting their swords, and pretending to have honor in their hearts, they were but bound to obey the dictum from a superior authority. But, whatever the position of these officers, I could not but think that, unless governed by some strange collusion, they would not thus have interfered with American citizens. It is impossible to explain it but by supposing that Americans were on the British side.

Our worst enemies were Americans. Oh! that they had been born in some other country. It is to our shame that they should have drawn the same breath with honest Americans. It was not until the last exigency—that of reverse and danger—an American, bearing the name and arms of an American officer, consummated what British ingenuity had, begun. It is a duty to myself to explain why we are no longer in arms,—and that however insignificant might be the representative of our Government, I would respect the American flag as much in him as in the highest officer, and that on surrendering I reserved the right of appeal, not to the Government, but to the people themselves.

Capt. DAVIS made representations which I could hardly believe were true, an American as he was, [illegible] an act which was really an act of war in Nicaragua. Just consider, fellow-citizens, that little vessel, the Granada, was covered with glory, at American hands, and was manned by Americans; had met the vessel of the enemy: came off victorious in an engagement unequaled in the annals of warfare, ever since the days of PAUL JONES. Yes, fellow-citizens, that event, in which the little Nicaragua schooner was successful, will be recurred to with pride by the historian, and the eleventh of April will long be remembered by the American people. Who of you cannot feel proud of the spirit of manhood manifested by an American, one born within your midst? Yes, gentlemen, you can but feel that that little vessel was a fact in the history of American enterprise, surrounded with glorious memories that cannot be erased; yet, despite the glories which she attached to our fame, there was not wanting an American to commit an act of which every lover of his country will be ashamed. Yes, it was reserved for Capt. DAVIS to make himself a party to an alliance between the British and the mongrels of Central America, in order to drive his own race from the Isthmus.

He expressed his determination to seize the Granada and we were bound to yield to him; yes, fellow-citizens, we were forced to make terms, to surrender to an officer of the American Navy. Great was our indignation when we learned that the Americans had thus interfered with the American cause in Nicaragua. Why this action of DAVIS? because he had received instructions from Washington; but, why were these instructions given! It was because, here was presented the real issue between the Marcy Treaty as it was, and the Americans in Nicaragua. Here was the starting point. The American Minister in Great Britain, and the Abolitionists at the North determined, that Slavery should be excluded from a place over which Americans had no control. I care not what may be the ideas of those present, or what they may say in justification, it was but a combination to exclude an action of a sovereignty of Honduras from the Bay Islands. Between the States of New Granada and Costa Rica, there existed a question of boundary, originated mainly through men at New-York, the agents of the Steamship Company. There was also a question of territory between New Granada and Costa Rica, and Costa Rica and Nicaragua, in relation to Buenacosta and the Muequito country.

The idea of this question was to have New-Granada to enter into an agreement with Nicaragua that Slavery should be excluded. Here commenced British intrigue, in the desire to confound the relation of this Government with our domestic institutions. Here let me say that I do not wish to excite political feeling on this subject. It is perhaps fortunate that I was born on Southern soil; it may be unfortunate that I cannot consider Slavery a moral or political wrong. My teachings may not have been altogether of WILBERFORCE. I may have touched a too sensitive point, but I feel that I have not struck upon the pivot of British interference.

Look back to the origin of Slavery in American history; who introduced it into this country? Was he a man without honor? Certainly few have stood higher in moral worth than LA CASAS, the Spanish priest, who was the head and front of this offending. He introduced it in the Sixteenth Century for the relief of the Indians from the Spanish subjection. It were better that he had fixed it permanently not only in Cuba, but other regions than Central America. Certainly, he was wise and far more liberal for his day than the present followers of Clarkson and Wilberforce.

Central America was in a worse condition than under the Spanish rule. The government was going to ruin. Mongrelism was the secret of its waning fortune. What was to be done? It was left for us to Americanize Central America; on whom rests the right of regenerating the amalgamated race, and no other than the people of the United States, and especially of the Southern States. I call upon you, therefore, to execute this mission. You cannot, in justice to yourselves shrink from your duty. You cannot but continue your energies in carrying out the great principle of American influence. As for myself, forced here as I am, I can but appeal to you to assist in retaining the American ascendancy. My duty has been paid, and I would turn back on the path I have traversed. No, gentlemen, forced here against my will, I feel that my duty calls upon me to return. (Applause.)

All who are nearest and dearest to me are there. There sleep the mon, soldiers and officers, whose rights I cannot fail to see respected; here, too, the heirs of those who have perished claim that I should return; nor, while I draw one breath, shall I leave a single stone unturned in securing them in their inheritance. I call upon you, then, fellow-citizens, male and female, whose friends and relatives have perished, to lend your aid—upon the men to assist with their fortunes and purses; upon the mothers, to belt the swords about their sons; upon the maiden, as she listens to the lover at her feet, until he shall vow to go forth on the mission of his duty. Aye, fellow-citizens, I call upon you all, by the glorious recollections of the past, and the bright anticipations for the future, to assist in carrying out and perfecting the Americanization of Central America. [Tremendous applause.]

The General closed, and the band struck up "Yankee Doodle," and the loud plandits of an admiring audience, who accompanied him en masse to the St. Charles Hotel, his present place of abode. Such a gathering has seldom been seen in New Orleans; and never, upon any previous occasion, have we witnessed so much enthusiasm among the people.

Tehuantepec.

LETTER FROM A. G. SLOO RELATIVE TO THE TEHUANTEPEC TRANSIT.

To the Editors of the New-Orleans Picayune:

GENTLEMEN: In connection with the official statement and report lately published, of the gentleman who styles himself the President of the Tehuantepec Company since June, 1856—and as my name and reputed acts figure conspicuously therein—I deem it due to myself and the public to give a brief exposition of some of the material facts relating to this enterprise.

A sectional aspect of this question has been forced upon me since my arrival in New-Orleans, and for a proper understanding of its true merits, it will be necessary to enter into a somewhat narrative account of the whole subject.

In the year 1853 I came to your city, alone and unaided, to confer with those who claimed the right of transit across the Isthmus. My sole object was to effect the opening of that great avenue to the commerce of the world, but, failing to make an impression upon any of the gentlemen connected with the enterprise at that time, I determined to proceed to Mexico, to investigate the subject for myself. This I did, and upon the strength of the cause I succeeded. And in connection with this, as showing the great exertions previously made to secure this transit way to the commerce of the world, let it be borne in mind, as a part of the history of the country, that President POLK had offered $15,000,000, and failed to secure it. President FILLMORE gave to his Minister in Mexico a carte blanche to have the Garay grant confirmed. It was my good fortune, then, to present to the citizens of New-Orleans a good and valid grant, emanating from a constitutional Government of Mexico. To the people of the South, and especially to New-Orleans, that grant was offered. What followed? The very day after the organization of the Company the undersigned was sued for $600,000, on behalf of Mr. FALCONET, by Mr. J. P. BENJAMIN, his counsel, who was then, as he is now, the legal adviser and agent of Mr. P. A. HARGOUS, of New-York. Yet, in the very face of such a fact, it is affirmed that I have always desired to carry this enterprise to New-York!

Among many gentlemen of this city, whom I could enumerate, there is one especially who had it more in his power, perhaps, than any other, even without the expenditure of a dollar in credit or money, to have secured the completion of this great work. The support of his counsel and sympathy was all that was asked; and this simple and reasonable contribution was, for reasons best known to himself, refused by a Southern man, and one who is identified with some of the great enterprises of the State and country.

In 1854 a contract was made by the undersigned with the house of SYKES & Co., of Sheffield, England; a house well known, and ranking second in the world for railroad enterprise. This house took the bonds of the Company at par for the completion of the wheel road, and for the payment of the amount advanced by the Mexican bankers.

It is well known that, soon after, a succession of events, and among others the great wars then occurring, seriously disturbed the momentary affairs of Europe. These causes prostrated for a time the credit of SYKES & Co. The brother of Mr. SYKES, of the above firm, was on his way to this continent in the ill-fated Arctic, with, to carry out and complete the works undertaken by them, both in Canada and upon the Isthmus of Tehuantepec. When no one in the city of New-Orleans would contribute one dollar, or give the aid of his countenance to the enterprise, the gentlemen above mentioned, with the very means in his pocket for this object, found his grave in the deep. Thus, by a singular fatality, and the severe visitation of Providence, were the bright prospects of this great work clouded, and events beyond my control, or the control of man, suspended all operations of the company.

In the report signed by W. NICOL, a charge is made in reference to myself in the following language: "Every effort to compromise the difficulty between him (SLOO) and the Company, was frustrated by a course, which while endeavoring to impose arbitrary and exorbitant terms, professed a willingness to come to a settlement, but on conditions utterly incompatible with the interests of the Company."

What these conditions were I leave the community to judge, when I quote from the record, being a part of my bill of complaint filed in the United States Court, and which Mr. NICOL and the members of the Directorate, in their answer, under oath, have neither questioned nor denied. It is in the following words:

"And your orator further avers, that notwithstanding the usurpation by the directorate of said Company, and the illegal use of his hypothecated stock, and the assumption of the exclusive navigation of the Coatzacoalcos River, unwilling to commence litigation, or do anything to prejudice or embarrass the work, entered into negotiations with the Company, and at their suggestion, offered to waive for the present, and until the success of the enterprise was secure, all matters of dispute, and to make arrangements for the connection of said road with the lines of steamers provided by your orator, so that the business could proceed with promptitude; and in addition, being told that the Company was in great want of funds for immediate exigences, offered to supply them at once with $200,000 in cash, and take their bonds therefor. And yet this proposition which they could not reject, was not adopted, but referred to their agents at the North, HARRIS, LEE & DICKINSON, although the said Board had always insisted on having the direction of said road in New-Orleans—thus transferring the most important and vital interests of said Company to three parties not owning one-fifth of the stock, and not identified with the interests of the Company."

Upon the action of this last Board, and of those who now claim the right to control that enterprise, I will say nothing further, as the matter has been, and will be in the course of judicial investigation. Suffice it that my protests against their acts and doings are on record in the office of the Notary, and will be filed in Court.

Tehuantepec is the place for which CORTES sought, that CORTES found, that obtained, and PRATT made—the last left almost a pauper upon your City, after spending the last dollar of his means and credit in supporting the men who have saved this invaluable transit to the country and to the whole civilized world.

This gentleman is now on his way to the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, with money and provisions to pay and feed his neglected and starving laborers, which the late directorate of the Tehuantepec Company had failed to supply. I myself have furnished the necessary means, and I only ask the privilege of using our picks and spades to complete entirely the work, and will be most thankful for all the aid that can be rendered in the way of men and funds. A. G. SLOO.

NEW-ORLEANS, Wednesday, May 20, 1857.

A RECORD OF CRIME.

Jails Broken into by Mobs—Murderers Hung by Lynch Law—A Reverend Scoundrel Committing a Murder—A Noted Forger Caught—Mob Law in Kentucky—And a Double Murder.

A VIGILANCE COMMITTEE AND OTHER THINGS IN IOWA.

The recent manifesto of the Vigilance Committee of Jackson County, Ohio, was, it seems, deadly in earnest, and they have extended their operations into the adjoining County of Clinton. On the 28th ult. some forty or fifty of the Jackson County law-defiers proceeded to Dewitt, the County-seat of Clinton County, armed at all points, and demanded the prisoners confined in jail there, who had been removed from Jackson County on a change of venue. The Sheriff resisted their demand and summoned the bystanders to his assistance, who refused to aid him. After knocking the Sheriff over the head with their guns, they succeeded in getting possession of the keys and entered the jail, and took out BARGER, confined for murdering his wife. The mob took BARGER over near Maquoketa, where they hung him about 9 o'clock on Friday morning. The mob was composed of the men who lately hung GIFFORD in that County. They are thoroughly organized, and are said to number from 400 to 500.

An Irishman named CARROLL, who was in jail for the murder of a German last Fall, and has not yet had a legal hearing, was informed that he was to be hung at the same time with BARGER, but on further consideration by the mob it was deemed proper that he should have a fair trial.

Another person who was arrested in that vicinity for stealing a watch, and was confined in the Clinton Jail, was taken to the place of execution and severely whipped, and admonished to leave the State, and never appear in that part again, as he valued his life.

On Friday morning, May 29, the steamer Saracen, Capt. STRAN, bound for St. Louis and St. Paul, landed at Fort Madison. While she was lying there, a shooting affair occurred between some of the citizens of that place and the officers, passengers and crew of the Saracen. The boat had purchased some stores at Fort Madison, which had been brought from the landing and were waiting to be carried aboard. The boat having no other business at the place, was ready to leave, and the second mate went into the cabin, where he met a negro who was employed on board, and asked him for the steward. The mate received a saucy answer from the negro; whereupon he told him—the negro—to go and carry the stores aboard, which he refused to do.

Some words ensued on both sides, and at length the negro attacked the mate and knocked him down with a chair. He then ran to the pantry and seized a large bread knife which was at hand. The mate procured pistols and started after the negro, who ran and jumped overboard.

By this time the passengers and all the officers of the Saracen had become interested in the affair, and armed themselves.

The negro reached the shore, ran up into the town and secreted himself in a stable whither he was pursued by three or four of the boat's crew who discovered his hiding place, caught him and beat him severely. He was then taken aboard the boat, stripped and tied to a stanchion, and the crew were about to inflict a still more severe punishment, when the citizens of Fort Madison, having become excited, interfered, and then occurred a regular fight between the people on shore and the officers and passengers of the boat.

The citizens commenced throwing stones and other missiles at Capt. STRAN, and others who were on the main deck. Capt. STRAN was struck two or three times, and the little finger of his right hand was broken in the melee. Others on the boat were slightly injured. By this time many of the citizens had armed themselves with muskets, shot-guns and pistols.

The officers and passengers of the Saracen were also armed, and firing commenced on both sides. The citizens say that the boat commenced firing, and the passengers on the boat declare that the first shot was fired from shore. Which side fired the first shot is an undecided question. The mate of the Saracen was wounded by a shot. Capt. STRAN received two or three wounds, and others on board were slightly injured. One man on shore, whose name we did not learn, was killed by a shot from the boat.

At length the party on shore became too strong for the boat, and seemed determined to rescue the negro. Capt. STRAN, acting on the principle that "discretion is the better part of valor," ordered the boat's lines to be cut, which was done, and she floated out into the stream, and went on up the river with the negro on board.

THE MASSACHUSETTS MURDER—THE MURDERER A BREADFUL SCOUNDREL.

The body of ISAAC JACKSON, murdered by CHARLES S. JONES, at Russell, was taken to Hartford on Wednesday evening, and buried according to the Hebrew rites on Tuesday. JONES, the murderer, has been committed to jail at Springfield, to await the investigation of the Grand Jury.

The Hartford Times says:

JONES, the murderer, was the coolest scoundrel that ever infested this city. He professed great concern for the souls of sinners, and was constantly reading the Bible and exhorting at evening meetings.

Whilst in the confidence of Mr. DEAN, he stole about $2,000 worth of goods from his store, together with considerable sums of money. He stole the silk to make him a surplice to preach in—started a church in Glastonbury; stole the trimmings for his pulpit, and velvet for his chair, and also stole goods to pay the cabinet-maker for the chair; broke into the Catholic Church and stole the priest's robe for a sample for one for himself, and also stole the silver chalices, &c., from the altar; called at Mr. DEAN'S one afternoon to have "a little season of prayer," remained till evening, bade the family good-bye, but, instead of going out of the door, he stole up stairs, and secreted himself under the bed occupied by Mr. DEAN'S son; remained there till about midnight, when he crept out and robbed young DEAN'S pocket of $100, which he had ascertained the day previous he had just procured from the bank; then went up to St. John's Hotel, called for lodgings, got up before daylight, stole a suit of clothes from a boarder, and cleared for a neighboring town. But this is not half of his villanies. He was constantly stealing, praying and exhorting, till brought up by a four years' term in prison. A greater nor cooler scoundrel probably never went unhung.

At the moment of the locomotive's whistling, on the train which took JONES from Russell to Springfield, the prisoner displayed almost his first sign of emotion, becoming so violently agitated as to rattle his handcuffs very audibly, and after the cars were under way he employed himself in singing and gazing uneasily out of the window, until the stoppage of the train at Westfield, where a crowd of three or four hundred surrounded the cars with cries of "Take him out!" "Hang him!" "Let's have him!" &c., and a crowd of vindictive and excited men poured in at the forward end of the car. These passed him with cries of execration and hatred, but manifested no signs of an att

Old School General Assembly at Lexington—Adjournment.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Tuesday, June 2, 1857.

Yesterday afternoon, an overture was adopted authorizing the reception of the Independent Presbyterian Church through the Bethel Presbytery of South Carolina, on its cordial reception of our standard of faith.

Letters were read from Sir CULLING EARDLEY and Rev. Mr. DUNCAN, of the Independent Presbyterian Church of England, urging the Assembly to appoint a delegation to attend the Conference in Berlin, Prussia, in September. The letters were referred to the Committee on Foreign Correspondence.

The Committee on Foreign Correspondence reported on the business that had been referred to its care. The most important paper was the following:

The Committee recommend that no delegate be sent, for the present, to any of the Congregational bodies of New-England. One of them has expressly informed us that the correspondence is discontinued by its own act. Others have so far entertained the same design as to refer the question of discontinuance to their District Associations for ultimate decision: and none of them is in fact represented at this Assembly, except the Evangelical Consociation of Vermont; and although it is due to Rev. F. BUTLER, to record our great satisfaction with the eminent courtesy and fraternal spirit with which he has represented his brethren here, yet the Committee have been grieved to find in the published minutes of that Consociation at their last meeting a very offensive resolution, as well as proceedings of a secular and political bearing which the sense of our Ecclesiastical Assemblies seeks to avoid.

Two overtures were presented asking the Assembly to consider the expediency of altering the Constitution so as to reduce the number of members of the Assembly by making a synodical instead of a Presbyterical representation, and establishing a commission to sit in intermission of the Assembly.

Dr. BRECKINRIDGE supported the measure, showing that it was almost impossible to conduct judicial cases in an assembly of this size, and continually enlarging with the growth of the Church. The discussion resulted in the "Book of Discipline" being referred to a large and able committee to report to the next assembly any changes that may in their judgment be expedient.

The thanks of the Assembly were presented to the citizens of Lexington and its vicinity for their splendid hospitality to its members, and then the Assembly adjourned to meet in New-Orleans on the first Thursday of May next.

THE ULTIMATUM OF THE SOUTHERN CHURCH—A THIRD GENERAL ASSEMBLY TO MEET AT WASHINGTON.

The seceding members of the New School General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, have issued the following important document:

ADDRESS.

To the Ministers and Churches in connection with the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church.

DEAR BRETHREN—The undersigned, members of the General Assembly now in session in Cleveland, Ohio, are constrained to address you with reference to the state of our beloved Church, and to indicate the course which should be pursued by all who adhere to the principles of our Constitution, as interpreted by its framers, and as practically acknowledged during the almost entire period of our history as a church.

The action of the present Assembly on the subject of slavery, especially when considered in connection with the spirit and manifest purpose of several of the Western Synods, has impressed us with the belief that peace and harmony can no longer prevail amongst us—that the Assembly, as at present constituted, instead of being a bond of union between different sections of the church, will continue to be the theatre of strife and discord; and that the glory of God, the welfare of our churches, and the good of the country demand a separation of the discordant elements, and the existence of another Assembly, in which the agitation of the Slavery question will be unknown.

We had hoped that our brethren who have been disposed to introduce this subject into the General Assembly would are this have been convinced that no good could result to the church from this agitation—that it was alienating brethren of a common Christian faith, and was calculated to render the condition of the slave more undesirable, and to sunder the ties that bind our union together. In this regard we have been sadly disappointed. In consequence of the political agitation of the subject, and of the pressure brought to bear upon them by Congregational Churches holding the most ultra abolition sentiments, many of our western Presbyteries have become more urgent in demanding progressive action of the Assembly. They have not been satisfied with the past declarations of the Assembly. They have desired the Assembly to express its views of the sin of slaveholding so clearly that they can be made the basis of discipline by the courts of the Church. This action has now been virtually taken by the Assembly. It has avowed that the relation of master and servant—which necessarily involves the idea of property in the services of the latter—is a sin in the sight of God, and an offence in the sense in which the term is used in the Constitution of the Church. This declaration has been made, although confessedly there is not the most remote allusion to slaveholding in our standards, and also with the knowledge of the fact that when our Constitution was adopted, twelve out of the thirteen States were slaveholding States, and many of those who composed the Assembly of 1789, if not slaveholders themselves, were the representatives of Presbyteries in which were churches whose members were slaveholders. We regard this action of the General Assembly as a palpable violation of the spirit and letter of the Constitution of the Church. The principle involved in it, if carried into practice, would convert the highest judicatory of the church into an ecclesiastical despotism as tyrannical as that which has distinguished the Church of Rome. It makes the Assembly not only the interpreter of law in an irregular way, but also the supreme legislature of the church—a position which has been always repudiated by the Presbyterian Church.

Apart, therefore, from the disastrous consequence resulting from the agitation of the subject of Slavery in the General Assembly—destroying, as it does, our peace, keeping us in a state of excitement unfavorable to spiritual growth, and paralyzing our efforts to advance the cause of the Redeemer through the channel of our admirable system of Government—we consider that the Assembly has so far departed from the Constitution of the Church as to render our adherence to it undesirable and impossible. Having protested repeatedly against this agitation, and finding that our brethren are determined to continue it, we have deliberately and prayerfully come to the conclusion that, however painful it may be to us, the good of the Church and of the country required a separation from them. We shall hold our brethren who have disturbed our peace, by the introduction of this vexed question into our judicatories, as alone responsible for the consequences of this division.

With these convictions as to the necessity of a separation from our once united and beloved Zion, the only question that remains for us now to settle, pertains to the mode of separation. The undersigned are satisfied that but one course is left to us—and that is, to invite all Constitutional Presbyterians in the land who are opposed to the agitation of Slavery in the General Assembly to unite in the organization in which this subject shall be utterly eschewed. We do not restrict our invitation to the Southern churches. We wish to have a National church—that is, a Church, the constituent parts of which will come from every section of the Union. Holding to the same confession of Faith, we shall have a common basis as to doctrine and government—and an understanding that, however, we may differ in our views respecting Slavery, the subject is never to be introduced into the Assembly either by Northern or Southern men, unless, indeed, judicial cases are brought up regularly from the lower courts. In the judgment of the undersigned, this course is our only alternative. There is so much of the same Abolition spirit pervading other Churches that adhere to the same standards of Faith, that we could not expect peace on this subject by uniting with them. We are persuaded that, although this question may be suppressed in their judicatories for awhile, the Abolition spirit exists to such an extent as to threaten their dismemberment. The result may be that the disturbing elements of the different branches of the Presbyterian Church may be united in one body, and that the conservative portion of the same may ultimately be brought together, and thus prove more efficient in promoting the cause of the Redeemer, and in diffusing through the land a truly national spirit. At present, however, the union of these Churches would not afford relief to those who are wearied of this Slavery agitation. We are desirous of forming an organization where we shall not be liable to another division from this exciting subject.

The undersigned, therefore, would invite all Presbyterians, from all sections of the country, to meet in Convention in the city of Washington, on the 27th day of August, 1857, for the purpose of consultation, and of organizing a General Assembly in which, it will be distinctly understood, the subject of Slavery will not be introduced. We propose this course, instead of organizing an Assembly at once, as being due to the Presbyteries we represent. We would suggest that the Presbyteries be called together as soon as possible; and that, whilst the Presbyteries appoint their delegates to the Assembly in the usual proportion, it is desirable that as many ministers and elders should attend the Convention as can do so. We suggest, also, that in case any of the Presbyteries desiring to be connected with this new Assembly, should find it impossible to be represented in the Convention, it would be important that the Convention should be informed of their action.

Praying that God may overrule the distractions of Zion for His own glory, and that we may be guided in this crisis of our history by His unerring counsel, we subscribe ourselves your brethren in Christ:

FREDERICK A. ROSS, D.D.,	MICHAEL S. SHRICK,
GEORGE PAINTER,	ISAAC W. K. HANDY,
WILLIAM E. CALDWELL,	JAS. G. HAMNER, D.D.,
JOHN B. LOGAN,	HENRY MATTHEWS,
ROBERT P. REA,	PEACHY R. GRATTAN,
ARCHER C. DICKERSON,	GEORGE W. HUTCHINS,
THOMAS H. CLELAND,	ELIJAH A. CAESON,
FINCKLUS R. GRAY.

The undersigned, though not members of the General Assembly now in session in Cleveland have been present during its discussion of Slavery. Being fully convinced that there is no prospect of the cessation of this agitation in the Assembly, and that the action taken is a violation of the Constitution of the Church, we cordially unite in the above invitation.

United States Court of Claims.

CLAIM FOR DAMAGES PER MERCHANDIZE, &C., DESTROYED BY THE MEXICAN ARMY IN TEXAS, IN 1836—BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS UNDER THE TREATY OF GUADALOUPE.

Alexander H. Cook vs. The United States.—(On demurrer.)—The claimant alleges that in 1832, being a citizen of the United States, he was a merchant at Matamoras, under a passport as a United States citizen, from the Mexican Consul at New-Orleans; that from September, 1835, to March, 1836, he was a trader at Demilt's Landing, on the Lavaca River, west side, near its mouth: that in March, 1836, the Mexican troops entered Texas; that the claimant was in no way connected with the revolutionary movement, but maintained a strict neutrality; that the claimant fled on the approach of the Mexicans: that Gen. Urrea carried off and appropriated his whole stock of goods, of the value of $10,000.

The fourteenth article of the treaty of Guadaloupe Hidalgo is as follows: "The United States do furthermore discharge the Mexican Republic from all claims of citizens of the United States, not heretofore decided against the Mexican Government, which may have arisen previously to the date of the signature of this treaty; which discharge shall be perpetual and final, whether the said claims be rejected or be allowed by the Board of Commissioners, provided for in the following article, and whatever shall be the total amount of those allowed."

ART. 15 of the same treaty provides for a board of Commissioners, to ascertain the "validity and amount" of such claims, which was instituted by the Act of March 3, 1849.

The claimant filed his memorial with that board, praying compensation for the loss of his goods and damages for having his business broken up. His claim was disallowed by the Commissioners, on the ground that he was not a United States citizen at the time of the injury.

By the Court, GILCHRIST, C. J. Held: It was necessary for the claimant, at the hearing before the board of Commissioners, to establish two positions, by proof, in order to entitle himself to a favorable decision. He was bound to prove, first, that he was a citizen of the United States at the time of his alleged losses; and, secondly, that his property was destroyed by the Mexican troops.

(2.) The merits of his case depended on both these points, and one was as necessary to be proved as the other.

(3.) The claimant alleges that the Commissioners erred in deciding that he was not a citizen of the United States; That fact they were competent to determine, and their decision was conclusive.

(5.) The claimant has no legal cause of action against the United States.—Abstract of opinion. Adverse report.

CLAIM FOR $30,000. ASSESSMENTS UPON LAND AT THE NAVY-YARD, BROOKLYN, PURCHASED FOR THE UNITED STATES.

Griffing vs. the United States, (on demurrer.†) The following facts were alleged: On Sept. 19, 1846, the claimant, in a letter to the Secretary of the Navy, stated, "Having for some time been in treaty with owners for the purchase of the property lying between the Navy Hospital and Navy Yard in the city of Brooklyn, with a view of selling it to the Government, and not wishing to incur so heavy a responsibility without having some guarantee that they would take it at a given sum," &c. Again, on Nov. 16, 1847, he wrote: "Referring to my former letter to you on the same subject, I have entered into written contracts for the purchase of all the ground between the Navy Yard and Navy Hospital, lying north of Flatbush-avenue, and the rights of the riparian owners of the ground covered by water (or mud flats) in said bay; and am now prepared to realise a sale of the same to the Government should they desire to purchase," &c. The Secretary, in his answer thereto of Dec. 11, 1847, stated that he was "willing to recommend to Congress the appropriation of $285,000 for the purchase of the land," and desired, in order that no time might be lost in bringing the subject to the attention of the proper committees, that the petitioner would inform him, without delay, whether he would accede to this proposal. With the correspondence between Mr. G. and the Secretary, and the latter's recommendation before them, Congress, by the act of August 3, 1846, (9 Stat., 268,) made an appropriation of $285,000 for the purchase by the Secretary of the lands in question—"Provided that no part of said sum shall be applied to the payment of the purchase money until a good and perfect title is secured to the United States for the said lands and its appurtenances."

On June 26, 1848, the Common Council of Brooklyn adopted an ordinance to grade a portion of Flushing avenue, &c. An assessment was made, and the assessment roll reported to the Common Council, and finally confirmed July 12, 1848. It did not appear when "the grade line" was adopted, or when the grading was done. On Aug. 9, 1848, the Secretary informed Mr. GRIFFING that the appropriation was made, and that he (the Secretary) was "preparing to consummate the purchase," &c.; also that since the passage and approval of the act of Congress he had received information of assessments by the City on the property to $28,200; that he had submitted to the Attorney-General "the question, whether on the facts stated, the United States are bound to pay the assessments over and above the purchase money." The Secretary adds, "I will enclose you a copy of his opinion, which you will perceive will devolve on you as vendor the burden of making said payments, unless you can successfully resist the payment. I propose, therefore, to retain of the purchase money a sum sufficient, say $30,000, out of which on your account this department will cause the said assessments to be paid as they may fall due, unless you shall have previously procured, by judicial decision or otherwise, the annulment of the said assessments."

On Aug. 14, 1848, the claimant and wife conveyed, by warranty deed, with the usual full covenants, to the government the premises in question. Between Aug. 15 and Oct. 10, he received all the purchase money but $30,000, retained for the assessments. On March 12, 1849, he gave a bond with surety in $5,000, to indemnify the Government against all expenses, &c., of litigation as to the assessments. In an action between the City of Brooklyn and claimant it was determined that the latter was liable for the assessment, (4 Comst. R. 419.) The Secretary of the Navy thereupon paid the City the $30,000 reserved.

No information in respect to the grading, or the assessments, was given either to the Secretary, or to Congress, until after the appropriation was made.

The petitioner claims that the United States were bound to pay the assessments, or to exonerate him from his liability therefor, and that they still owe him the $30,000. He insists that the Secretary's letter of Dec. 11, 1847, and his reply thereto, constituted a contract for the purchase of the land by the United States, which, though unauthorized when it was made, was yet ratified and confirmed by the act of Aug. 3, 1848.

The act of May 1, 1820, section 6, (3 stat., 508,) declares that no contract shall be made by the Secretaries of the Navy, &c., "except under a law authorizing the same, or under an appropriation adequate to its fulfillment." And section 7 of the same act provides that "no land shall be purchased on account of the United States, except under a law authorizing such purchase."

By the Court,—SCARBURGH J., Held: The Secretary's object, in his letter of Dec. 11, 1847, was to obtain the authority of the petitioner to say to Congress that the purchase could be made at the price specified, if Congress should desire it. Neither the Secretary, nor the petitioner, understood that the Secretary had the power to make a contract for the purchase. (2.) The Secretary proposed to recommend to Congress to make an appropriation for the purchase of the land on certain specific terms, and the petitioner acceded to his proposal. This was not a contract for the purchase of the land. (3.) It was, at most, an undertaking on the part of the Secretary that he would advise Congress to make the purchase on the terms which had been arranged between him and the petitioner. To ratify that act of the Secretary, therefore, would amount to no more than an approval of his advice. It would not be the adoption of his contract, for he made none. (4.) Subsequent assent is only equivalent to a previous command, and if such previous command had been given by Congress in the present instance, the acts of the Secretary would have been no more than what they were without it. (5) The Secretary recommended the purchase under the impression, that for the purchase money suggested by him, a good and perfect title to the land was to be given to the United States: and Congress, acting upon this recommendation, and strictly conforming to it, made the appropriation upon the express condition that "a good and perfect title" should be secured to the United States. (6) The act of Congress contemplates a purchase to be made, not the ratification of one which had already been made.

(7) When the appropriation was made, the petitioner had already become indebted to the city of Brooklyn for the amount of the assessments, and the land in question was subject to a lien therefor. A good and perfect title, therefore, could not be given until this lien was removed. In requiring its removal, the Secretary of the Navy but complied with the plain requirements of the said act of Congress under which he acted.—Abstract of opinion.

The petitioner is not entitled to relief.

CLAIM UPON "LOAN-OFFICE CERTIFICATES."

Nahum Ward vs. The United States.—(On Trial.) The petitioner holds 43 loan-office certificates of the United States, for $400 each, dated Dec. 23, 1777, payable to bearer on Dec. 1, 1781, with interest annually at 6 per cent, and purporting to be for value received. At the bottom of each is the following: "Countersigned by order of J. A. TREUTLEN, Governor of Georgia. E. DAVIES, Jr."—on 29 of them was indorsed: "Four years interest to Dec. 23, 1781. Paid in bills of exchange. JNO. HILLEGAS, Cont. Treas."

On Feb. 22, 1777, Congress resolved that thirteen millions of dollars be borrowed on loan office certificates. A resolution of Congress of Oct. 3, 1776, provided that this class of certificates should be countersigned by the Commissioners of one of the loan offices, which for convenience of the lender were established in each of the States, Commissioners to superintend such office being appointed by the States respectively, which were responsible for such their appointees.

On March 29, 1782, the Secretary of the Treasury (HAMILTON) reported against these certificates; and again in 1795 the Treasury reported to the same effect, because, among other reasons, there was no evidence as to the appointment of DAVIES as Commissioner of Loans. In 1816, and again in 1852, there were adverse reports.

On August 3, 1780, Congress resolved, that, on account of the then invaded condition of Georgia, the papers of the loan-office there should be removed for safety, and that until re-established, the Treasurer of the United States be empowered to pay the interest on certificates issued from that office.

It was contended, on the hearing, that the claimant was bound to show, in addition to producing the certificates themselves, that the United States received a consideration for them, and also that E. Davies was not a Loan-Office Commissioner for Georgia.

Mr. Peter Force testified that in 1846, he procured from a box of refuse papers at an auction room in Washington, two sheets of Loan-office certificates, which had been cancelled at the Treasury. They were of the same emission with those now in dispute, signed by Hillegas and countersigned by E. Davies, and on each of them the interest was indorsed to the 23d December, 1781. The certificates were produced in court by witness. It appeared also that the claimant was bona fide holder of the 43 certificates.

By the Court.—GILCHRIST, C. J.—Held: The position that the claimant is bound to show, in addition to the evidence furnished by the certificate themselves, that the United States received a consideration for them, is "entirely untenable."

2. Each certificate acknowledges that the United States have received $400, and until that admission is shown to be the result of fraud or mistake, it is conclusive evidence of a consideration.

3. These certificates, from the Loan-Office in Georgia, supposing them to be valid, were properly presented at the Treasury for payment of the interest.

4. There is no evidence that any objection was ever made to the account of the Treasurer, on the ground that he had no authority to pay the interest. The strong presumption then is, that in paying the interest he did no more than his duty required.

5. The resolution of October 3, 1776, does not require that the Commissioner of the Loan-Office shall describe himself as such Commissioner. It is requisite only that the person who is actually Commissioner shall countersign the certificates.

6. These certificates were signed by order of the Governor of Georgia, and if any additional proof were required that DAVIES was a Loan-Office Commissioner for Georgia, it would be found in the fact that they went from the hands of the Governor to those of DAVIES, there being nothing to show that they came fraudulently into his possession.

7. The Loan-Offices in the several States were established for the convenience of the lenders. The Commissioner was not an officer of the United States, but a State officer. The ordinance is silent as to the mode of his appointment, except that he was to be appointed by the State.

8. When the interest was paid, and when the transaction was fresh in the memories of all, no objection was taken that the certificates were not properly countersigned. It was not until 1792, eleven years afterwards, that this alledged defect was discovered. Those considerations go very far to prove that DAVIES was the actual Commissioner.

9. If, subsequently to the payment of the interest on these, certificates of the same emission, and countersigned in the same manner, [these discovered by Mr. FORCE,] were received at the Treasury and cancelled, the presumption is that they were paid at the Treasury.

10. The circumstances admit of no other explanation than that these certificates were recognized by the various officers of the United States as countersigned by the proper officer.

11. "We cannot accede to the force of the reasoning of the various executive officers in their opinions rejecting this claim, as their arguments seem to us to be fallacious, and not to meet the true point of the case."

12. The United States are justly indebted in the amount due on the forty-three certificates, with the interest thereon; estimating the certificates at $282 44 each.—Abstract of Opinion.

Bill reported accordingly in favor of Nahum Word, for 60,876 99.

BLACKFORD J. dissented.

Before Hon. Justices Blackford and Scarburgh.

INSPECTORS OF CUSTOMS—"TRAVELING EXPENSES" UNDER SECTION 7 OF ACT OF JUNE 17, 1844.

Nicholas Sinnot, Jr., vs. The United States.—(On argument.) The claimant was one of the Inspectors of Customs for the port of New-Orleans, for some years prior to 1848. In November, 1843, the subject of employing inspectors to go down from that port to the Balize and the Southwest pass of the Mississippi, there to take charge of vessels arriving from foreign ports, bound to New-Orleans, for the prevention of smuggling, was presented to the Treasury Department, and the plan having met with approval, was at once carried into effect, and has since continued with great advantage to the revenue. The duty was styled "river-duty." The regular Inspectors at New-Orleans, of whom the petitioner was one, were employed in it. Each trip made in the performance of such duty, including the distance from New-Orleans to the boarding station at the mouth of the river, and the return, amounted to 220 miles. The Inspectors engaged in "river-duty" were necessarily subjected to extra expenses, including the outlay for fare per steamer, board of the passee, &c.

The petitioner was so employed in "river-duty." By the act of June 17, 1844, 5, (5 Stat. at Large, 676,) "Inspectors" became entitled to 10 cents per mile for traveling expenses, when actually engaged in the performance of their duties at any other place than the port or Custom-House from the Collector of which they received their appointments. The Inspectors at New-Orleans so engaged in "river-duty" in 1845, memorialized the Department on the subject of an allowance for each duty in accordance with said act, claiming at the rate of 10 cents per mile. The Collector had allowed and paid only $2 50 a trip, which the Department would not consent to increase.

The claimant received the $2 50 per trip, but without consenting to or contracting for that inadequate rate of compensation. He now claims the balance due him for the amount of his travel in performing "river duty," at the rate of 10 cents a mile, after deducting the $2 50 per trip by him received.

The solicitor, after the statement of claimant's case, withdrew objections, and an order to take proofs of the claim was thereupon granted by the Court.

For the claimant, Mr. J. C. Devereux; for the Government, Mr. Blair.

Mr. Devereux, of New-York, opened the argument in the case of Robert H. Gray, administrator.

This was a case of officers' half-pay. The argument for the claimant was directed specially to the points: (1) That resolutions and acts of Congress, under the Confederation and Constitution, called "Acts of Limitation," cannot bar suitors in the Court; (2) That claims for half-pay do not fall within the operation of those Acts.

The argument was continued and concluded on the 3d June.

Practice in the Courts.—The Court orders testimony to be taken in any case on the application of the claimant.

The trial docket consists of cases in which the claimant has taken and filed all the testimony he desires, and has notified the clerk thereof.

The law docket consists of cases set down for argument on law questions presented by the petition which the petitioner desires to be acted on before taking testimony.

The Solicitor looks over the cases as they are filed, and selects such as present questions of law not previously acted on by the Court in the law docket, and testimony is ordered pro forma in all the other cases; but the claimants may, on making known that wish, have testimony ordered in the cases so selected, as in any others, before the argument on the law questions, or they may, on application, have the pro forma order for testimony set aside, and have the case set on the law docket and the questions arising on the petition argued before taking testimony, if he prefers that course.

The Court takes up these dockets on alternate months during its sessions.

The Judge Advocate of Naval Court of Inquiry No. 3.

It is, perhaps, a common practice (now-a-days) to "pitch into" people through some column or other of a newspaper. I do not indulge in it myself; but I can scarcely quietly pass over, unnoticed, the remarks of "the Washington correspondent of the South" in your paper of yesterday.

The unjust fling at the Judge Advocate of Court No. 3, and "the unfortunate selection" of him, by Mr. TOUCEY, in the case referred to, is singularly untrue; and yet, perhaps, it had the appearance of the fact charged.

The W. C. "of the South" says: "At one passage in the trial the Judge Advocate took a witness from the stand when a question had been put to him by the Court, to ascertain by a private consultation how he would answer." This was not so, but for the better reasons that it might not occur that a plurality of witnesses might be occupying the time of the Court, each going over the same grounds of evidence. It was not what such witness was going to say, but whether he knew anything pro or con on any particular points—the Judge Advocate being in the double capacity of counsel for the Government as well as the appellant.

Mr. LITTLE, the Judge Advocate, in my opinion, has not his superior in any Court, in or out of the Navy; and had he been less, neither would Hon. Mr. TOUCEY nor his Excellency the President have appointed him on a trial so important.

Very respectfully yours, L. KEARNEY,
Late President of Court No. 3.

Forest Fires.

DESTRUCTION OF WOODS, HOUSES AND CROPS IN NORTHERN NEW-YORK.

From the Malone (N. Y.) Palladium.

On Monday, in consequence of the dry weather of a few days previous, and the high winds of that day, there were fires raging in the woods north and south of us. In the south part of the town a Mr. SPICER lost a new log house, which he had just completed and was about to move into—the fire being communicated from the woods by reason of the winds. In Duane a farmer, by the name of SHEFFIELD, lost his house, barn and other outbuildings from the same cause, the fire being driven from a fallow that had been set on fire that day. The house was well furnished, and nearly everything was consumed. He was not insured, his policy having expired a short time since. His loss is considerable. On the plains, at the north, we learn that some damage has also been done by the fire. A Frenchman lost his barn, and fences have been destroyed.

The wind on Monday was very violent, filling the air with dust, and rendering it exceedingly unpleasant to be out. At nightfall the wind subsided, and the air was full of smoke, indicating the presence of large fires in that vicinity—mostly, no doubt, in the woods, and on fallow land.

On the pine plains, at the north, the house of the Frenchman, whose barn was destroyed, was considerably injured by the fire. Several cords of wood have been burned up, and the fire has completely swept over a territory of three or four miles in length.

At the Summit, in Clinton County, the fire was raging in the woods, and so near the railroad track as to set the ties on fire.

In the destruction which has thus suddenly swept over large portions of the country, much serious damage has been sustained, mostly by our farmers. Large quantities of grain of all kinds, potatoes and other provisions, have been destroyed, and many upon whom the loss falls are ill able to bear it.

BRASHER FALLS, May 26, 1857.—The wind and fire on Monday night last, wrought ruin in this region. At a settlement called the "Lost Nation," some six or eight miles from here, the dwelling of a Mr. WAIT was burned, and his daughter, aged some twelve years, was so much injured by the fire that she died this (Tuesday) morning. The barn of a Mr. HURLY, near this, was burned, and Mrs. HURLY considerably injured by the fire. For a few hours this village was in peril.

The Brasher Iron Works are in utter ruins. The foundry, furnace, machine shop, coal houses, sawmill, store, boarding-house, barns, sheds, taverns, school-house, post-office and several dwellings, with their contents, were all consumed.

IMPALED ON THE HANDLE OF A PITCHFORK.—Mr. PETER KOONS, a respectable farmer, of Richmondville, aged about 40 years, went into his barn a few days since to feed his stock, and, having thrown some hay from the mow, dropped his hay fork, the tines fastening in the floor. Mr. KOONS, in descending, lost his hold, and fell a distance of fifteen feet, striking upon the handle of the fork, which entered his body, and passed up through the bowels, diaphragm and lungs, and was stopped finally by the shoulder-blade. He lingered about forty-eight hours, and died in great agony.

NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JUNE 8, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The expected address of Gen. WILLIAM WALKER was delivered in New-Orleans on the 30th ult. in presence of a multitude of people, who appeared to sympathize deeply with the General's filibustering tendencies. WALKER's speech is not long, but sharp—what there is of it. He reviews briefly the course of events in Nicaragua, from the period when he set foot on its shores; declares that he was elected President by the unanimous voice of the people, and but for American influence, would have carried the day and remained in power. He regrets that any one bearing the name of an American should have conducted himself as Capt. DAVIS did, and speaks of that officer in terms of unmeasured condemnation. The prospects of the coming campaign,—for the General promises to return, feeling it his duty to do so,—are looked upon as peculiarly promising, and all patriots who love their country are affectionately desired to buckle on their armor, join his standard, and renew the struggle for what the General terms the "Americanization of Central America."

The seceding Southern members of the New-General Presbyterian Church have issued an address to the conservative portion of that body, inviting them to unite in the formation of a New School Assembly, to be held in Washington, on the 27th of August next. In the new organization, the subject of Slavery is to be excluded utterly, except in judicial cases. The address records a solemn protest against the growing spirit of Abolitionism in the Northern Churches, regrets that such heresies should find place, and takes a long farewell of the present organization of the New-School branch. The name of Dr. ROSS again heads the list of signatures.

We have further and very important intelligence from the Mormon country. The reports from previous sources of the growing tyranny of BRIGHAM YOUNG, and his settled hostility to the Gentiles and determination to resist the Government, are fully confirmed by this arrival. The company of five hundred Mormons from Denmark, who arrived at Philadelphia last week, are reported on their way to Utah.

Governor KING arrived in town on Saturday, and was closeted during the day with the Metropolitan Police Commissioners. The policemen of the First, Third, Tenth, Fourteenth, Twentieth and Twenty-second Wards, were called upon on Saturday to declare which Police Board they recognized. In the Third, Twentieth and Twenty-second Wards, several expressed a preference for the New Board; in the Tenth a few refused to give their views at all; and in the Fourteenth all decided for the Old Board. Messrs. WOOD and RUSSELL were busy on Saturday in appointing and swearing in policemen to fill the places of those who had declared themselves for the Metropolitan Commissioners.

The Metropolitan Police are acting nobly at (old) Quarantine, under order of the Health Officer, arresting several vagabonds who, in spite of law and orders, will board ships that are loaded with small-pox and other infection. One man whom they captured yesterday was particularly desirous of splitting open their heads.

The shanty of the Quarantine Commissioners was standing last night at early candle-light, and the water of the well of Seguine's Point was as sweet as if there were no such thing as poison in all this poisoned world. We should have heard it if anything serious had happened down to 10 o'clock last night. The fair presumption is that the oystermen lie on their oars yet. Dr. THOMPSON's iron scow to burn all infected bedding on, and his promise to enforce the law, preventing the throwing overboard of all such stuff, should comfort them.

City Inspector MORTON had a family party on Saturday, of people anxious to see something done for our dirty City. The most sensible suggestion was to reorganize the Board of Health, who can—as the City Inspector whose business it is, and the contractors who have drawn no little money can't, and the Common Council stupidly, stubbornly, and wickedly won't—go to work, clean the streets, and take the proper pay for it.

At the foot of Division-avenue, Williamsburg, there has been, if everybody's nose is a judge, one of the worst nuisances ever borne by a long-suffering and stupidly-patient people. On Saturday the Brooklyn Board of Health, by its Committee, visited it, and found scores of barrels full of dead flesh—to be ground up on the premises into superphosphate of lime. Its early abatement is calculated on.

This is the last day that the Common Council have an opportunity to authorize the issue of Bonds to the amount of $275,000 to purchase the State Arsenal Grounds with. If they fail to start to-day, there is a fine speculation for somebody.

The case of PAROT, the French railroad defaulter, was brought up on Saturday before Judge MITCHELL, but nothing of importance was done. The case was adjourned until Friday.

CHARLES ROBERTS, the waiter at the Lafarge Hotel, charged with robbing a guest of that house of $5,000, was acquitted on Saturday in the Court of Sessions. The trial of the noted THOMAS DENNY, for arson, will be called on to-day, for the fourth time.

Dr. CHEEVER delivered a sermon in the Church of the Puritans, last evening, on the duties of the Church and the Ministry, in which he held that it was eminently proper and necessary that, when any great national evil existed, the Church and the Ministry should do earnest battle against it.

There were 372 deaths in the City last week, 51 less than the previous week.

THE ELECTIONS IN MEXICO.—By the last news from Mexico we learn that the Presidential election—though not determined—was progressing favorably for General COMONFORT. This is an encouraging omen for the future peace and prosperity of the Republic. It was a matter of extreme doubt whether the people of Mexico were sufficiently enlightened and sufficiently independent of the priesthood to reelect to the Presidency a man whose chief aim has been to establish the supremacy of the State over the Church, and to break down that exorbitant and unwholesome power which the latter has nowhere more arrogantly exercised than in the Mexican Republic. The contest between President COMONFORT and the Mexican Church has been long and severe. The labor to be performed by the Federal Government was great and the obstacles in the way of success were enormous; for the masses, for the most part ignorant and superstitious, were as blindly submissive to the decrees as they were terrified at the anathemas of Ecclesiastical authority. The church hotly defended its so-called rights, and left no stone unturned, first in resistance to the innovations, and when that was overborne, in attempts to avenge the abolition of so many of its perquisites and prerogatives. So great was the commotion created, but a few weeks ago, that revolution and President COMONFORT's overthrow seemed inevitable. Under penalty of excommunication, the people were forbidden to swear obedience to the new constitution—the first real charter of liberty, by the way, which Mexico has yet had. Throughout the whole country, the pulpit was converted with a political arena, and the doctrines of Christianity were made subservient to the doctrine of opposition to President COMONFORT' reforms. Priests, under special directions from the Archbishop, would not administer the sacraments to those who acknowledged the constitutionality of the new fundamental law of the land. They refused to marry, baptize, or even bury, and Mexico, like some European State under the ban of Papal displeasure in the Dark Ages, was virtually excommunicated. The Republic, strange to say, did not crumble to pieces or wither away. It survived this outburst of ecclesiastical wrath. It seemed, before that crisis, to have sunk as low as any nation possibly could sink, but the tornado has shaken it into life and roused its dormant energies. President COMONFORT persevered steadily in the policy he had marked out for himself. He acted throughout with prompt decision and energy, and in the great struggle between the State and the Church, the latter was eventually forced to succumb. Its submission, after such fierce attempts to instigate rebellion and plunge the country into civil war, smacks of insincerity, but that is scarcely of any consequence. The fact of its submission alone—forced or otherwise—establishes, what many feared could never be established, the supremacy of the State in the Republic. If our expectations should be realized and the present election should terminate in favor of Gen. COMONFORT, it will prove—what now alone is wanting—that his wise and enlightened administration receives the cordial support of the people. The friends of Mexico are therefore justified in hoping that she will yet lift up her head among independent nations.

Governor Walker's Inaugural.

The new Governor of Kansas appears in his Inaugural Address, which we published on Saturday, under a two-fold character,—as the Executive of the Territory, and as a lecturer on political matters and things in general.

However interesting his observations made in the latter quality may be, the really important part of his address is that which develops the course of policy which he intends to pursue, and the line of action which he recommends to the people of Kansas, in his strictly gubernatorial capacity. It will be found that our anticipations of the Governor's probable conduct have received a fresh confirmation from these practical passages of his address.

He urges it upon the inhabitants of the Territory that they should take part in the election of delegates to the Constitutional Convention He states, with considerable force, the many arguments in favor of such a course, which is indeed the only course that, as an Executive officer, appointed by the same authority which has recognized the validity of the call for the proposed Convention, Gov. WALKER could be expected to recommend. He expresses his confident hope that the Convention, however elected, will be governed, in any event, by a proper regard for the known public opinion of the Territory—and his earnest intention to do all that in him lies towards securing a submission of the Constitution, when it shall have been framed by the Convention, to an act of ratification by the bona fide population of the Territory of Kansas. He very ingeniously endeavors to divert the attention of the people from the maddening questions which have bred so much ill-blood among them, to the large and expanding material interests, and to the great educational concerns of the Territory. In a word he manifests the most sincere disposition to administer the Government of Kansas pacifically, practically, impartially and sensibly—and he appeals to the inhabitants for their cordial sympathy and assistance in the prosecution of his purposes.

If these purposes shall be prosecuted—if the words of the Inaugural Address shall be followed up by corresponding deeds—if Governor WALKER shall proceed to exercise his personal and official influence with the leaders of both parties in Kansas in favor of moderate counsels, and just legislation, there can be no doubt that he will secure for himself the sympathy and assistance, not merely of the people of that Territory but of the whole nation.

The difficulties of his position are difficulties not of policy but of diplomacy. Gov. WALKER is too shrewd a man not to see what all observing men, both at the North and South, have for some time admitted, that the dictates alike of political prudence and of sound statesmanship require the admission of Kansas into the Union as a Free State. It will be his task then, so to instruct, influence, and control the obstinate, ignorant or exasperated members of either party, as to bring about this result without a renewal of the atrocious hostilities which have disgraced the past history of the Territory.

Upon his intentions in regard to the performance of this task (which if successfully performed will undoubtedly secure for him the warmest gratitude of the nation) his Inaugural Address throws the most satisfactory light.

Very deeply, therefore, do we regret that he should have hazarded a portion of the influence which he was to command, if he would carry out these good intentions of his, by the nature of the observations which he felt called upon to make, as a kind of "Concio ad Populum." Governor WALKER may himself believe that Providence regulates the political advances of mankind by what he very oddly calls an "isothermal line"—he may himself consider the facilities and unequal development of our Southern States to be a condition of "prosperity," and he may, therefore, regard the question of the extension or the restriction of Slavery as a purely indifferent matter, to be decided upon without any considerations of the vital principles of political economy. But he perpetuates a grievous wrong, and a very serious blunder to boot, when he permits himself in a public harangue to impugn the sincerity and to attack the convictions of the hundreds of thousands of American citizens who look upon the institution of Slavery as intrinsically absurd and unjust, and consider the projected extension of it over the new territories, to be an outrage upon common sense and Republican principles. It has been already inferred from the tone of these passages of the Inaugural to which we now refer, and from a paragraph relating to the south-western Indian Territory, that Governor WALKER proposes to go beyond the immediate duties of his post, so far as to prepare the way for the erection of that Territory into a Slave State, which shall balance the new Free State created in Kansas. We do not believe these inferences to be just—but we must condemn in the most unqualified terms the unseemly, and altogether rhapsodic digression of the gubernatorial speech from which they have been deduced, and we look to the practical result of Governor WALKER's administration for the excuse of the blunder, and the atonement of the wrong into which he was doubtless betrayed by the dulcet allurements of theory or the dangerous indulgences of discourse.

The Final Arctic Search.

We publish in another column some particulars relating to the Final Search, as it is called, for the missing expedition commanded by Sir JOHN FRANKLIN. The facts which we have stated have been derived from the best sources. Many of them are well understood by such of our readers as have given attention to the matter of discoveries in the Arctic seas. For such as are not generally known we have the guaranty of parties who are accustomed to state only "those things which they do know."

It may seem strange to our readers that another expedition should be fitted out for the dismal seas around the Northern Pole, and that again the warm blood of living men should be chilled sailing for weary miles beneath the beetling fronts of the impending icebergs. But, aside from all the motives of humanity, of woman's affection or of professional emulation, which have united in the undertaking of this enterprise, there is a charm in the very desolation of that far and silent zone, and daring men, like the Astrologers of old, are eager to invade those regions of Nature where few of their kind have trod before them.

The woman who has thrown into this last effort the remains of her fortune, and given all she has for the hope of being assured even of the worst in regard to him whom she loved, wins the more upon our admiration the more desperate to appearance her cause becomes. The perseverance, or, as those annoyed by it have doubtless thought it, the pertinacity with which Lady FRANKLIN has instigated the search in regard to her husband's fate has had, we are glad to say, a better basis than the craving void of a bereaved woman's heart, or the selfishness of sorrow. It has been grounded upon the fact, which, in the consideration of this matter, must always be kept in sight, that of the entire circuit of Arctic coast, nearly seven thousand miles in extent, which has been explored by the various expeditions of search, that section of four hundred miles in which traces of FRANKLIN's vessels are likely to be found is precisely that which has not been examined. This consideration has carried a convincing weight in the investigations out of which this new expedition has sprung. Brave sailors, who have confronted more than once the dangers of berg and floe, have been enthusiastic in their assent to this view of the case, and their opinion has been indorsed most emphatically by the eminent men, of whom the President of the Royal Geographical Society is the representative, who have, as became them, applied their valuable knowledge and their calm insight to examination of the problem of the value of another expedition of search.

The Board in England which direct the employment of Her Majesty's ships have determined that the Resolute—Lady FRANKLIN's application for which was supported by a strong memorial from this side of the water—shall not be sent upon this service. We can well understand why that vessel, whose history has been so remarkable, should be denied for this expedition. Fitted out with care, placed under the command of an officer of high rank and reputation, it happened that the expedition of which the Resolute made a part shed no honor on the British name. In the written orders to the commander of that expedition, prepared at the Admiralty Board, the contingency upon which the crews were to abandon their vessels and resort to the ice was clearly defined. It occurred in the case of the Resolute. Her crew, abandoning her, safely escaped. Two years afterwards the vessel, safe and sound, was picked up by an American whaler, brought into a New-England port, purchased by our Government, refitted at its expense, and then by formal act of Congress presented to the British Government. The sending back of this vessel, which perhaps our Government could not well avoid, was one of those courtesies which lie perilously near the bounds between impertinent concern and attentive kindness. The British Government, however, received the attention as it was meant, in kindness. But to ask the same Board which commanded this vessel to be deserted at a point when, as the event has proved, to remain with her was safe—to ask the Board of Admiralty to recall this vessel from the silence of the ordinary to which they had consigned her, dismantled and disgraced, and again to send her into that field from which, by rules which they had laid down, she ought not to have escaped, is asking too much from human nature. No surer way to prejudice the contemplated expedition in the eyes of the Admiralty Board could have been devised than to petition for the Resolute. The name of that vessel was an unpleasant word in the ears of the Lords Commissioners. They did not hear it without wincing.

The refusal at the Admiralty of a vessel for this expedition is put upon the ground of humanity—a ground which is no new resort for British officials. They often escape to that when much pressed to do anything which for other reasons they were unwilling to do. It seems, however, to be entirely taken away from them by the statement, which we have no reason to dispute, that the Arctic service is desired by officers and men in the navy, and that the average mortality in it—one-and-a-half per centum per annum.—is less than that in the other services in which the navy is employed.

It seems to us that the British Government, having done so much in Arctic adventure, should complete its achievements by an exploration of the coast yet remaining unexplored. That crown to its labors should not be left wanting. But it sometimes happens to nations as to individuals, that they weary at the very dawn of triumph, and succumb in the night that appears to them endless, when a few minutes of endurance would have brought them to the coveted day.

The London Times is opposed to this new expedition, and "entirely" approves "the determination at which the Admiralty recently arrived, not to send out any more Arctic Expeditions at the public expense. Year after year they were dispatched, and, save the barren honor of having achieved the Northwest Passage, we know not what we have gained by these hazardous struggles among the eternal ice." Some of the results which these struggles, hazardous as we admit they have been, have won from the seemingly barren domain of nature in the North, we have set down in the article we have compiled, which may be found in another column. All the voyages of discovery which have been the pioneers and precursors in fields of adventure, whither thriving commerce has followed, have been enterprises of hazard and of suffering. Nil sine labore. We have won, won much, in commerce and in science from the contest with ice around the pole. Let us keep to the work, now so near its completion, and faint not till all the field be won.

General Walker at the South.

The terms in which the New Orleans press speaks of WALKER and his advent in that city create some doubt in our minds whether the editors have gone "demented," or English words and phrases bear the same meaning on the shores of the Gulf of Mexico as further North. Any one who has read the article extracted from the Delta, in our impression of Friday, and is aware that New-Orleans is the first city in the South, must feel some pardonable hesitation in deciding whether the piece of fustian was a bad caricature, or he had been grossly imposed upon in the recent accounts of WALKER's doings in Nicaragua. When one hears of enthusiastic crowds waiting on the quays of a great city to welcome a small man with "blue-gray eyes," and proclaimed by the local newspapers "the champion of Isthmian Republicanism," the hero," "the brave warrior," "the unassuming, mild-looking, light-complexioned man," "the impersonation of as glorious and daring a chivalry as these latter days of ours have seen," "the man of destiny," "he of the blue-gray eyes," "a man destined to face the boldest dangers unappalled," "he whose name has become a household word in the South, and whose deeds have been the subject of American and European conversation, comparatively speaking, as much as any of the great captains of modern times," one naturally expects to hear, if not of a good man, at least of a great one. If we don't expect to hear of the gospel preached, of the naked clothed, of the hungry filled, of hospitals endowed, churches built, aqueducts made, laws codified, and cookery improved, we at least expect to hear of great battles fought, of rapid and successful campaigns, of large armies overthrown, powerful fortresses captured, of kingdoms subdued, and dynasties extinguished. If you do not look for a Colbert or a De L'Hopital, you look for a Turenne or a Napoleon. With such an intolerable deal of sack you can never be content with a half-penny worth of bread. If you compare a man, as the New Orleans Delta compares Walker, to Napoleon on his return from Elba, the comparison is worth little, if you cannot tell of his Lodi, his Arcola, his Marengo, his Wagram and Austerlitz, his convention of Campo Formio, his treaty of Tilsit; if you cannot tell of a genius which baffled all men, and overcame all things, which was proof against the cowardice of some, the apathy of others, and the treachery of others, and which wrung victory from the most adverse fate with the most unpromising materials, your encomiums only bring ridicule on yourself and contempt on those who accept you as their organ. To say that a man is as much talked of in Europe and America, comparatively speaking, as any captain of modern times, is to say very little for either his abilities or his reputation. The phrase "comparatively speaking" plays fearful havoc with the compliment, bad as it is at best. Comparatively speaking, Barnum has been as much talked of in Europe as Wellington, and we venture to say Busteed has been as familiar in the mouths of those Frenchmen who know anything of America as any warrior we have produced since Washington. A man need neither be brave, nor wise, nor good to be talked about. Fame follows on the heels of the swindler, or murderer, or burglar, with as much impartiality as on those of the hero or philanthropist. The place she awards them is, in history, doubtless not the same, but the amount of public notoriety she deals out to each is tolerably fairly balanced.

To call General WALKER's doings in Nicaragua "a war," is about as absurd as the conduct of the Brahmin whose sad mishap MACAULAY relates so feelingly, who being in search of a sheep for sacrifice, was persuaded by the united testimony of some scoundrels, into taking a deceased dog for the animal of which he was in search. The people of New-Orleans are very much in the position of the unhappy Brahmin. For the benefit of those who may be disposed to deduce from the follies of the New-Orleans zealots the conclusion that the people of this country are afflicted with such obliquity of moral vision as to take WALKER for a great hero, and his fillibusters for soldiers, we have only to say that the disease, like the yellow fever, is local.

STEAM FIRE-ENGINES.—The subject of steam fire-engines will come up before the Board of Aldermen this evening on special order; the question for consideration being the confirmation of the contract ordered by the Common Council last December, for two engines. This important measure, which was recommended by the late Chief Engineer of the Department, and petitioned for by a very large number of our citizens, seems to be opposed by Mr. HOWARD, the present Chief, who is bent upon defeating it. The Board of Foremen of the Fire Department, have passed a series of resolutions against the steam fire-engines, in which they assert that it has been "clearly demonstrated" to them that the steam fire-engines have utterly failed in other cities where they have been tried. But we believe that the only city in which the steam fire-engines have been thoroughly tried is Cincinnati, and there they have been eminently successful, and have entirely superseded the old-fashioned Fire Companies. We presume that the Board of Aldermen are in possession of all the facts in connection with this important subject, and that they will decide the question without any reference to the wishes of the members o the Department. The experiment of steam fire-engines is certainly worth trying, and the cost should not for a moment be considered in the matter. The losses of a single fire might more than defray the expense of the new machines. At all events, it will be in the highest degree reprehensible for our Common Council to neglect any opportunity for effecting an improvement in so important a part of the City Government as that of the Fire Department. If steam fire-engines have been successful in Cincinnati, of which there is no question, we can conceive of no reason why they may not be equally successful here.

The Newfoundland Fishery Question.

Very contradictory reports have been received by the late steamers from Europe in relation to the probability of a confirmation, by the Newfoundland Legislature, of the Convention recently entered into between France and England, concerning the fishery privileges to be enjoyed by the former power, after the 1st of January, 1858. Both the London Shipping Gazette and the Globe represent the treaty as abandoned by the Colonial Office, in consequence of the virulent opposition to the measure in Newfoundland. The Paris Pays, on the contrary, declares that the Convention has not been rejected by the Colony, and intimates that it will be carried into effect. The Governor of Newfoundland was recently here, and is said to consider the Treaty disadvantageous to the Colonial interests, but to give it a passive support on the ground of international considerations. How the matter will terminate cannot as yet be certainly foreseen; but it is not probable that the Legislature of Newfoundland will sanction a measure apparently fraught with disastrous consequences to the citizens of the island.

The strenuous efforts which have been made by France, to provide a nursery for seamen through the fisheries, and generally to advance her commerce and navigation, form the principal motive for pushing through the Treaty. It is advocated in England, on the general ground of free trade and as an advance in the direction of removing all unnecessary restrictions on trade. How decidedly the opinion of Lord CLARENDON upon the subject was, less than four years ago, may be gathered from an official communication of Mr. ADDINGTON, in which he says: "It would be desirable, in Lord CLARENDON's opinion, to intimate to the Colonial Government that if obstacles were thrown in the way of a fair settlement, by mutual compromise, of this difficult and hazardous question, Her Majesty's Government might find themselves compelled, in justice to the interests of the mother country, either to leave to the Colony the future expense of the protection of the Colonial fisheries, or to negotiate with France, without further reference to the Colony, for the adjustment of differences, the continuance of which is fraught with serious danger to the amicable relations now subsisting between Great Britain and France." This menace is explicit and decided, that if the Colony will not sacrifice its local interests, the mother-country will abandon the care of its Government or execute the Treaty, irrespectively of their wishes.

It seems, from this distance, most probable that the Colonists will persist in their view of the case, even if the Government of Lord PALMERSTON has not, as the semi-official Globe intimates, himself abandoned the policy of a Convention. The fact alone that France gives a large bounty (nearly two dollars a metric quintal, and ten dollars a man to her fishermen) while England gives nothing, has impressed a conviction upon the minds of thinking men in Newfoundland that a concurrent right with England, in the hands of the Imperial Government, would be, in reality, an exclusive one, and cause the flag of England to disappear in a few years from the northeastern coast of this continent. The evil is already so great that Gov. HAMILTON, reviewing Mr. ADDINGTON's letter, said it was "the close proximity of the French islands, St. Pierre and Miquelon, to the southern coast of Newfoundland that had led to the very serious injury of the British fisheries in that quarter," and he demonstrates with much force that the possession, by the French, of Belleisle, would tend to extend similar embarrassments and encroachments on the Labrador coast. He says that not only the people of Newfoundland, but also of the United States, would have great and just cause of complaint by any damage to the Labrador fisheries.

An earnest remonstrance against the proposed Treaty is contained in a dispatch of last July, written by Governor DARLING. He goes so far as to express a fear that the cession to a foreign power of half of the Newfoundland coast may seriously interfere, in certain contingencies, with the electric communication which is in prospect between the eastern and western coasts of the Atlantic. The geographical position of Newfoundland is particularly important, distant as it is but four days' steaming from the nearest point in the British Islands, and the power of interference with it might, under given circumstances, be dangerous. In reply to questions addressed to them, in February last, by the Select Committee of the Colonial Legislature, the Roman Catholic and Protestant Episcopal Bishops of Newfoundland made very strong representations against the policy of the Convention. The former said:

"The Treaty is drawn up solely and entirely in favor of France; we receive no equivalent of any sort. It is a cession of almost the whole Island to a foreign power. If put into execution, Newfoundland must cease to be a British colony; it will become a desert, a fishery-station for France, or be united to the States; for if the French are allowed to monopolize the Northern, Western and Labrador Fishery, and the Southern Fishery by taking bait, which is but another name for a fishery, the people cannot live; they may struggle for a few years in the Bays of Placentia, St. Mary's and Fortune, but as sure as the French are allowed to fish there, they must leave it, and ship under the flag of the United States."

Indeed, the excitement upon the subject of the Convention, in the colony of Newfoundland, is not to be considered trifling. The desire to please the French Government will scarcely, therefore, be sufficient to cause the Palmerston Government to persevere in urging forward so obnoxious a measure, and the opinion of the English papers on the subject, that it will be dropped, at least for the present, is to be received as the more probable.

INTERESTING VISITORS.—The Crédit Mobilier is sending over to us some of the most dashing speculators of the French capital, though they are prevented from bursting upon us with all their brilliancy in consequence of our awkward Extradition Treaty. Last year, M. PLACE, one of the most elegant and distingué of the speculators of the Bourse, and a director of the Crédit Mobilier, absquatulated from Paris, after giving a splendid entertainment to his friends, and has not since been heard of. It is highly probable that he is now in this country, and he may be either Bearing stocks in Wall street, or speculating in lands "out West." M. THURNEYSSEN, the other absquatulating director, whose operations were even more extensive than those of M. PLACE, is supposed to have arrived here in the Arabia last week, and there are already plenty of lynx-eyed inquirers anxiously looking after him. M. THURNEYSSEN's defalcations are to an enormous extent, and it is not at all likely that a gentleman who understands so well the value of money should have left France empty-handed. He has probably brought enough with him to secure himself from arrest, and, like his predecessor, M. PLACE, he will be able to remain among the vast number of foreign incogs who honor us with their personal presence. Messrs. PLACE and THURNEYSSEN are but the avant couriers of a whole flock of crippled financiers who may be expected here before long.

THE SEASON.—From all parts of the country we hear of the extraordinary backwardness and coldness of the season, and in some parts there are serious fears that the budding fruit-trees are seriously injured. Another such a year of scarcity of fruit as we had last year would be a great calamity to the country. The season is backward in this latitude, and the weather most ungenial; roses have hardly begun to show themselves, and the cry of strawberries is not yet heard in our streets, but we are not aware of any serious damage having been rendered to the tender crops by the unseasonable weather.

HOPE FOR IMPRISONED WITNESSES.—We observe by the police reports, that witnesses are daily committed to prison; and whilst the outrage upon humanity, in the case of EUGENE GERLEY, is fresh in the public mind, let the Board of Police forthwith proceed to carry out the following most excellent section of the new act. It is the conclusion of section 14:

"The Board of Police shall provide suitable accommodation within the said Metropolitan Police District, for the detention of witnesses who are unable to furnish security for their appearance in criminal proceedings, and such accommodations shall be in premises other than those employed for the confinement of persons charged with crime, fraud, or disorderly conduct, and it shall be the duty of the magistrates in committing witnesses, to have regard to the rules and regulations of the Board of Police in respect to their detention."

The Commissioners have the power thus to lease premises which may at once serve for Brooklyn and New-York, and to pass rules and regulations for detentions which the magistrate must obey. No doubt they could make a joint arrangement with the Sheriff and United States Marshal. If the public good and safety demand custody of witnesses, then let the public purse pay well for it, and the accommodations be such that those confined may have some limited liberty under competent surveillance.

VERY PROBABLE INDEED.—Harper's Weekly indulges in an elaborately-illustrated and very learned essay on "Comets," including the one that is to use up the world next week; nor does Harper think it at all impossible that we may wake up and find ourselves asphyxiated. To bring about a cometary collision, however, two conditions are necessary: "1. The path of the comet must at some point intersect that of the earth. 2. The two bodies must arrive at the point of intersection at the same time." Harper, like Captain Bunsby, gives an "opinion as is an opinion." If so, why so; if not so, so also. The lights of Science in these days are very extraordinary.

The Duties of the Church and Ministry—A Sermon by Dr. Cheever.

In consequence of the action of some of the male members of Dr. CHEEVER's Church, in relation to the late troubles there, the sermon last evening was expected to disclose the opinions of the Pastor on the past, and perhaps furnish an indication of his intended course for the future in the pulpit. The attendance was large, although the edifice was not crowded. After prayer and singing, the Doctor read for his text the 29th verse of the 17th chapter of the first book of Samuel, as follows:

"And Eliab, his eldest brother, heard when he spake unto the men: and Eliab's anger was kindled against David, and he said: Why camest thou down hither? And with whom hast thou left those few sheep in the wilderness? I know thy pride, and the naughtiness of thy heart; for thou art come down that thou mightst see the battle."

David, the Dr. said, had heard of the challenge sent by Goliath, and had gone down to fight the Philistine, when he was accosted by his eldest brother, who said, "Why comest thou hither? and with whom hast thou left those few sheep in the wilderness? I know thy pride and the naughtiness of thy heart." Why was he thus accused? Suppose he had gone down? Was it not a battle for the right—for the Lord? And could not David fight as well as attend upon sheep? But the envious creature, his eldest brother, knew how valiant David was. When the lion and the bear came to take a lamb from the flock, David had slain them both, and he was filled with envy. What had he, a sheppard, to do among warriors? And yet he was the chosen one of God to do the work. The Lord had placed the weapons there—the five smooth stones were in the brook awaiting him. Who could then have supposed that the Lord was preparing in him the greatest warrior and poet of the age? When David had been preparing his sling—adjusting it nicely, improving it, trying various sized stones, and, arriving at the most suitable size and form, he had no idea of what a great blustering mountain of flesh would threaten him and his people, nor the envy that would greet his approach to the scene. But so it was, and so came these troubles everywhere. Sometimes on the field, sometimes in politics, sometimes in churches, and sometimes in congregations. Sometimes ministers were charged with having left a few sheep in the wilderness, and turned warriors; and sometimes they would compromise with evil, through fear of giving offence to men. Sometimes the minister would call upon his hearers to come out from great national evils, and then for so doing he would be blamed by them. They would say to him, Why art thou here, leaving these few sheep in the wilderness—become so few that they would hardly pay for shearing. Now, it was a notable fact, that when the Israelites were in their sorest distress, God chose a shepherd to deliver them, and with a shepherd's weapons too. And when fighting, he was still a shepherd, for he was protecting the sheep of the Lord. But why a shepherd and a shepherd's sling, instead of a warrior and martial arms? Why? Because God had said not by might but by his spirit, should they conquer. He would have his omnipotent word brought into the battle. He had chosen the weak things of this world wherewith to confound the things that were mighty; and why? Why, that man should not glory in himself. When fighting against Goliath of Gath, David was still a shepherd, and was a glorious example for the ministry. As David stirred the minds of his people against their enemies, so was it the duty of the ministry, to lead on against a great national sin. They should go out against it, with their loins girded with truth and a breastplate of righteousness. The Word of God was a fire—a weapon—not a pillow, against sin. It was to stir up the people of the Lord against it, not to act as an opiate. David, who was a shepherd of the Lord's sheep, sang, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want," when there was tranquillity; but when evil came, he met it with his smooth-stoned sling. And so should all good shepherds do when evil came among their flocks. They should preach God's Word on God's Sabbath. The Sabbath was God's sling, and the pulpit the place from which to launch the smooth stones of his truths. The Sabbath was the appropriate time, and the Church the appropriate place to battle against evil. And when ministers did so, they were doing the right work in the right place. The prayer was, that they might be strong and resolute against evil. The Church and the Ministry were not for themselves, but for the world; and when such they should be considered and consider themselves, the right would prevail against the wrong, for there were Ministers enough, Churches enough, and wealth enough, for that, when they should be disposed. Every effort should be made to break away the ministry from conventionalisms, in their manner of announcing the word of God. The ministry should be open and free to battle for the truth. The Church was destroying itself, in just so far as it made itself subordinate to the wills of men. The fear of men and of consequences should not belong to the Church, when warring against sin. It was the duty of the ministry to preach to please God: not to think what part should be spoken, and what not. Not to please men, but God. To be bold in God, with much contention, was the spirit of the Church. The fear of men must not be permitted to interfere in the Church. God worked only by his truth, and, therefore, it were better the world were turned over many times, than it should remain in sin. The word was, fear ye not men, their reproaches and their revilings. If the law of God is in your hearts, for the moths shall eat them up. When sin is growing, the ministry should be more earnest in battling against it, even if they had to fight against whole churches, or only against Barnabas and Peter, who were carried away with deliberate dissimulation and hypocrisy. Any who persisted in those would be accursed. His hearers had heard of those who, in endeavoring to convert the heathen, left their idols in their temples, simply changing their names to those of saints. So was it with some in the church, who would have sin remain in it, contented with simply changing its name. But such was not the true course. The church must call things by their right names, and battle earnestly against those that are wrong, even though some should complain. Put the sin of Slavery upon the anvil of the church, and bring the great hammer of God's truth to bear upon it, and the anger of some would be excited, but they must not fear them.

Assuredly there will a time come when our churches will not confine their attention merely to local evils, —when there will be firmness in them to sustain their ministers in matters other than local. For the duties of the ministry are for the world. The pebble must be cast at iniquities that overshadow nations. Would to God there were ten thousand ministers of churches who would hurl each his pebble at the giant iniquity in our nation that defies the armies of the living God. If they had slung the pebble years ago that giant would have been long ago dead. It is an odious form of selfishness for any church to say, when its pastor undertakes to apply the Word of God to the common enemy, "You are using time and expending energies which belong to us you must cut and carve for our appetites. If you preach to outsiders, you are taking the children's bread and casting it to the dogs." Or, it is an atrocious form of meanness and selfishness. Rather should they say, "Whatever concerns humanity, concerns us." But, alas, we find that under the Gospel ministry, the congregation of our Churches can become as mean and narrow minded as were the Jews of old, who stoned Prophets and Apostles, who would have stoned Paul because he preached words which were offensive to them, which they did not like to hear. "Away with him," they cried, "away with him. It is not fit that he should live." But in our day the punishment of speaking God's Word, in denouncing sin, is dealt in another way. Only preach it faithfully, and those who are offended withdraw their countenance, and the pew rents must suffer. But the Word of God is not a tax-gatherer, and the largeness of the pew revenues is no proof that it is faithfully preached. Faithful ministration of that Word, in condemning, exposing, denouncing, overthrowing the great vices of society, is not what is now required of a preacher. The minister must do otherwise if he would please the congregation, giving offence to none. Only make your Church fashionable, popular, genteel, conservative—get the right man to draw full houses, and no railroad to the celestial regions would pay better. The disease of this generation is a sacrifice of principle to expediency. Self-indulgence is our rule, and compromise with sin, not eradication of it, our practice. There is not a church in the City that is not fettered by this abominable trucking to expediency. We come to Church, not to hear what God would say to us, but to be soothed and smoothed, and patted and comforted. Like people, like priest. He has to retain his popularity. He dares not incur the displeasure of his congregation. He strives to please, never driving against sin. So that the class of men who ought to be too most fearless, plain-spoken, and independent, are rendered the most feeble and time-serving, and truckling. It is the fault of the congregation; it is their doing. You, you have made them so. You are guilty of their sin. Oh, how disastrous is such a practice to the safety and freedom of a nation, is this regarding of the opinions of men, rather than God's law of righteousness. If the minister dare be independent, if he presume to offend by preaching the Word of God, and applying it to the iniquities of his time, they seek to bring him to terms by threatening him with empty pews and a deficiency of revenue. They pass resolutions in disapproval of his conduct. In Paul's time it was otherwise. Paul preached the Gospel faithfully, but the Christians of those days did not hand the minister over to a convocation, where resolutions were passed. There need have been no excitement about Diana of the Ephesians, if those straight-minded brethren had assembled together in an upper room and passed resolutions, simply censuring idolatry. But the Apostles did not pass resolutions. In God's Word writing comes after preaching, and never takes the place of it. "Cry aloud and spare not." "Show the house of Israel their iniquities, and the house of Jacob their sins." Resolutions against an evil! Why, resolutions were but dry bones. They can startle nobody—convince nobody. The juggernaut of any great iniquity might be driven clean over them. Resolutions are not God's way of denouncing and correcting an evil, and what can resolutions do now with that evil, Slavery? They are high sounding on paper, but they come too late. They remind one of the tale told by some traveler, who journeyed in a country where the cold was so severe that it froze up the music in the trumpets of the stage coachmen, as they drove their coaches over the road, so that they could not give signals to each other that they were coming, and could not warn the townspeople, when they entered a town. But after they had finished the journey, and had hung the trumpets up in a warm room, the music was thawed out, and it seemed that all the coachmen in the place were blowing their trumpets at once. Only it came too late: it was of no use. So the road, at an earlier period, it would have been of service, and so resolutions about Slavery were as ill-timed now as were the notes of that thawed out music. It is the real trumpet of God's Word that we want a blast from that trumpet blown so long, so loud, so clear, that men everywhere shall be startled as if the great day of doom were coming.

God hath a controversy with this nation, and he appoints his ministers to blow his trumpets. If they refuse, the peril be upon them. And the Word of God is now our last resort, and to keep it back, to forbear to use it in wrestling with this giant ill, is a greater crime than at any former time. Dare you, brethren, listen to God's Word and yet forbid your minister to preach it? It is our only salvation from sin, and he who keeps back that word maintains that sin. You who would keep your minister from speaking out in his pulpit, are accessories after the fact in fastening that sin on this generation.

The reverend gentleman closed his discourse with an appropriate prayer, and after a hymn and benediction, the audience dispersed.

Amusements.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—Mr. WALLACK closed his engagement at this Theatre on Saturday night. It was by no means a successful engagement, having been played to smaller houses than we have seen in this theatre since the commencement of the season. Mr. STUART has had to share the unpleasant fortunes of the other places of amusement, all of which have been doing badly. But there is, we think, something in the fact of Mr. WALLACK having played characters for which he is not at the present day physically fitted, which may account for the diminished audiences. In referring to this matter we have no desire to wound the feelings of an accomplished and esteemed gentleman, and still less to injure him in a professional point of view. Mr. WALLACK's reputation is an established fact, about which there can be no doubt. All that he need strive for is how to preserve it. It is natural that a man who has won distinction in a certain department of art, should endeavor to confine himself as much as possible to that department, and it is, therefore, pardonable that Mr. WALLACK still essays those characterizations which gave him a reputation twenty years ago. But, in literature and in art, it is well not to try to repeat the triumphs of our youth, when the hand and brain, however willing, fail to move to its quick impulses. Genius is always youthful in feeling, and there is something beautiful in the ambition which lives with it to the end. On the stage however, the body as much as the mind becomes an object of scrutiny; and it is a melancholy fact that the body of a man of genius tumbles into decrepitude with as much haste as the body of any other man. Playing as Mr. WALLACK does a line of characters in which youth and vivacity are the first requisites, he is capable now of exciting our wonder, but not of winning our admiration. We are surprised that a man of his age, and infirmities, can do so well: can simulate with such abundant skill the buoyancy of a youth long since passed. But when the surprise is over the stark reality thrusts itself upon our notice. Unless we are dolts we must acknowledge to ourselves that Mr. WALLACK's son would in nine cases out of ten better please us than Mr. WALLACK pere. We think the fact as long as we can out of pure regard to a very worthy artist. It is, however, a fact which an owl may see. We have no reluctance in saying this, because we are certain that we do an act of kindness to Mr. WALLACK; unwelcome, perhaps, but none the less kind. Surrounded by friends who have grown up with him, and who look upon him with a species of reverential awe, he has but few opportunities of learning the real feeling of "the front of the house." We interpret this feeling correctly when we give expression to the hope that he will at once and forever abandon the juvenile business, (if that is the right expression,) and bring his unimpaired intellect to bear on a class of personations more consonant with his years and physical appearance. The few specimens we have had of his powers in this line, give ample assurance of distinguished success. Some author once said that no one could write a man down—except himself. The same is true of an actor. Mr. WALLACK has nothing to fear from any one—except MR. WALLACK.

To-night, Mrs. J. W. WALLACK, Jr., commences a short engagement here, playing Mrs. Beverley, in the tragic play of the "Gamester." The farce of "John Dobbs" will also be played.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—Miss LAURA KEENE brings out another new piece to-night, called "Life's Tronbled Tides." The fair manageress and Mr. CHAS. WHEATLEIGH sustain the principal characters. The burlesque of "Variety" is the afterpiece.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—JEROME'S new piece of "Bianco, or the Magic Sword"—one of the most deservedly successful pantomimes ever produced by the RAVELS, will be played to night, preceded by the ballet d'action of the "Contrabandist."

BURTON'S THEATRE.—This establishment commences a Summer Season to-night, with Mr. and Mrs. W. J. FLORENCE as the bright particular stars. These artists appear in three characteristic pieces, called "The Irish Emigrant," "Lesson for Husbands," and the "Yankee Housekeeper."

NATIONAL THEATRE.—Three pieces are "up" for to-night—"The Ups and Downs of New-York Life," "Magic Pills," and the "Maniac Lover."

BARNUM'S MUSEUM.—The domestic drama called "Fraud and Its Victims," having achieved an undoubted success, will be repeated every evening this week. It is one of the best domestic dramas ever produced in this country. In the afternoon a variety of entertainments, dramatic and otherwise.

BUCKLEY'S SERENADERS.—The successful burlesque of "Aladdin, or the Wonderful Lamp" will be repeated to-night, together with a selection of the best Minstrelsy.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. BROUGHAM.—It is intended to give a grand Testimonial Benefit to Mr. BROUGHAM, at the Academy of Music. Every one will be glad to hear it. Mr. BROUGHAM is one of the best of actors and men, and deserves all the geniality that can be shown to him. A meeting of the Committee takes place to-night, at the Astor House.

Musical.

As the Théâtre Française is embellished with the statue of RACHEL; the Scala of Milan with that of MALIBRAN; the D'Angennes of Turin with that of MADDONNI; so, says the Eco d'Italia, is the Academy of Music of Philadelphia to be adorned with a marble effigy of Madame GAZZANIGA. The five hundred stockholders of the Academy have entered into the matter with enthusiasm, and the work is rapidly progressing in the atelier of a distinguished German sculptor. This is the first instance in America of such an honor being paid to an artist, although JENNY LIND, SONTAG, GRISI, ALBONI, BOSIO, PARODI, LAGRANGE and others have presented some true artclaims to our regard and remembrance. Madame GAZZANIGA is a remarkable artist and a beautiful woman, but, as an exponent of the particular art for which the Academy of Philadelphia was established, she is, we think, more than liberally honored by the action of the stockholders

Comptroller Flagg Turned Out of His Official Chair.

There was a terrible time about the Hall of Records on Saturday afternoon. It was caused by a levy being made upon the goods, furniture, and fixtures in the office of Comptroller FLAGG, by Constable WILLIAM THOMPSON, of the Second Ward. The Constable acted by virtue of a writ of judgment issued by Judge ANDERSON, of the First District Court, (who is acting in the temporary absence of Judge GREENE,) against the Mayor and Commonalty of the City of New-York, arising out of an action brought by JAMES SHERIDAN, to recover money due. Mr. SHERIDAN was an Assessor of the Second Ward, an office abolished by the late Legislature. On the 1st of April last his salary was raised by the Board of Supervisors, from $415 to $700, making it uniform with that of all the other Assessors. This additional pay was refused Mr SHERIDAN by the Comptroller, on the ground that there was no appropriation in the Treasury for such a purpose. A like refusal was given to all the other Assessors whose pay had been increased more or less by the Supervisors. Mr. SHERIDAN sued. The case was brought before the First District Court, which on Saturday morning gave its decision for SHERIDAN in the amount $225 (the increase rated by the Supervisors) and costs, and also the "extra allowance" of $12, granted to the winning parties in all such cases. A writ of judgment was therefore issued and placed in the hands of Constable THOMPSON, who with his posse proceeded to the offices of the Comptroller to duly execute it. Mr. THOMPSON made known his business to Mr. FLAGG, and demanded that the amount of judgment should be paid him. Mr. FLAGG replied that he had no money. Mr. THOMPSON remarked that he could not help that, and must do his duty, whereupon he unceremoniously laid hold of the desks, pictures, books, &c., in the office, first insisting that Mr. FLAGG should rise from his official chair, that it might be carted away to auction. Mr. FLAGG reluctantly rose, and his chair was removed from the office by the Constable's posse, who in a very few minutes had nearly all the furniture of the place transferred to an entry-way adjoining. The constable halted in his labor several times, hoping that Mr. FLAGG would come to terms, but Mr. FLAGG evinced no such disposition, but quite the reverse. "Why act so hastily? this is entirely unnecessary, my friend—you are going too far; be careful, Sir, I warn you, the amount will be paid; my auditor is not here; I can't pay you now."

"But I will take your individual check, Mr. FLAGG," replied the Constable.

"I cannot give it to you, Sir; I will not give it to you, Sir," answered the Comptroller.

"Then," said Mr. THOMPSON, addressing his men, "go on, boys," and on the boys went, struggling hard to get a huge desk or table out between the narrow doors.

In a few moments the office was a complete wreck, and in the entry outside was soon collected an immense pile of chairs and ledgers, books and tables, ink bottles and estimates, blanks and maps, &c.

The Comptroller, who seemed of the opinion that the things would not be taken from the building, grew quite wroth when he beheld several carts drive up to his door, ready for the reception of his office furniture. He again remonstrated, but in vain, and finally dispatched one of his clerks to Captain LEONARD, of the Second Ward, for a policeman. In a few moments after, officer MALONEY, of that Ward, made his appearance in full uniform.

"I want you to take this man away," said Mr. FLAGG to the officer, pointing to Constable THOMPSON.

Mr. THOMPSON stated his business to the officer, and showed him the writ by virtue of which he was acting. The officer said he was satisfied Mr. THOMPSON was acting properly. "And," continued Officer MALONEY, looking at Mr. FLAGG, "I shall arrest any man who interferes with him in the discharge of his duty."

Here Mr. FLAGG, seeing the case was against him, made a proposition for a suspension of hostilities. He promised on his word as a gentleman that, if the fixtures were not further removed, he would on Monday morning pay the judgment.

Marshal KYNDERS, who formed one of the large number of spectators who had by this time assembled, here interposed as agent between the belligerents, and at his solicitation Constable THOMPSON accepted Comptroller FLAGG's proposition, suspended hostilities, dismissed his posse and cartmen, and retired, conscious in his might and the powers which he wielded.

OUR STATE ARSENAL.—In compliance with a provision of the act passed by the last Legislature of this State, in relation to State Arsenals, the Central Park Commissioners have duly notified the Commissioners of the Land Office of their intention to purchase the Arsenal grounds at Sixty-third-street, for the purposes of the Central Park, at the minimum price of $275,000. The Mayor has also by message called the attention of the Common Council to the fact that the Municipal Government is authorized to issue bonds for the above amount, and at the same time urged them to take the necessary action towards that object. Nothing has yet been done by either Board, though to-morrow is the last day allowed the City to close the bargain, and secure the ground for the benefit of the great park. From the fact that several persons are known to be anxious to get this property into their hands, with a view to resell it to the City as a portion of the park, at a high figure, the suspicion is out that a collusion exists between these parties and members of the Common Council, by virtue of which the latter will neglect to furnish the funds, and thereby compel the Commissioners of the Land Office to sell at auction. Should neither Board of the Common Council act on the subject this evening, the suspicion will receive additional plausibility.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT AT THE PIKE-STREET BALANCE DOCK.—An accident occurred at the balance dock, foot of Pike-street, about 11½ o'clock Saturday forenoon. A staging rigged upon the ship White Swallow, which was in the dock, gave way, precipitating fourteen men to the dock, and injuring the following named parties badly:

MARTIN CROAN—back hurt badly.

JOHN POTOSHEEN—back hurt badly.

WILLIAM THOMAS—jaw broken in two places.

EDWARD KEARNS, CHRISTOPHER MCKASSEL, PATRICK WELSH and MICHAEL MCCARTY were all badly injured about the body.

All the wounded were caulkers, and were at work on the White Swallow when the accident took place. The wounded men were conveyed to their residences.

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY COMMENCEMENT.—The New York University will celebrate its commencement exercises at Niblo's on the first of July this year. During the last two years the Chancellor and Faculty have insisted that it was wicked to hold Commencements in a theatre, and the students, very much to their chagrin, have been compelled to put up with a church on these occasions; but this year, the wind (expended in class-meeting debates) blew such a gale in favor of a theatre, that the arguments of the Faculty were overthrown by it, and the Class of '57 will graduate at Niblo's.

On the 25th of June the Alumni and Undergraduates will dine together at the Clinton Hotel, Broadway, corner of Eighth street.

On the 29th inst., the Anniversaries of the Eneleian and Philomathean Societies will be conjointly celebrated in the large chapel of the University. Orator, Rev. Dr. MORGAN; Poet, PARK BENJAMIN, Esq.

The Hall of PETER COOPER'S Institute, which is not yet completed, will be the stepping-off place for the graduating classes of the University after this year. A vacation of two months and a half will intervene between Commencement day and the beginning of the Fall term.

☞ Several prominent subscribers to the New-York Corn Exchange are making an effort to induce the Board of Trustees to have posted on the Bulletin of the Corn Exchange, daily, telegraphic reports of the markets for Breadstuffs and Provisions, in Oswego, Buffalo, Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, New-Orleans and other points. They believe that arrangements could be made with the Associated Press so as to render the expense of procuring such reports inconsiderable, and they urge that such a system of publishing domestic commercial news would elevate the character of the Corn Exchange,—conduce to the welfare of the business community and greatly enlarge the list of subscribers to the Exchange Association.

DEATH OF A WELL KNOWN CITIZEN.—ALEXANDER WELSH, Esq., familiary known to the public as "Sandy Welsh," former proprietor of a celebrated refectory at the corner of Park-place and Broadway, was buried on Saturday last in New Jersey, his native State. He died in this City on Thursday. His age was 64 years. Mr. WELSH resided in this City for more than 40 years, and was father of JAMES H. WELSH, the Police Justice.

REFORMED DUTCH GENERAL SYNOD.—The General Synod of the Reformed Dutch Church convened in Ithaca on Wednesday last. Ten following officers were chosen: Rev. C. VAN SANTVOORD, President; Rev. W. W. SCUDDER, of Arcot, India, Assessor; Rev. J. MCNAIR and Rev. JOHN STEELE, Clerks. The Synod is occupied in hearing reports from the various boards and institutions of the Church.

The Kansas Convention.

LETTER FROM ACTING GOVERNOR STANTON.

LECOMPTON, K. T., Saturday, May 23, 1857.

SIR: I have been solicited by citizens of your county to provide some means of electing delegates to represent it in the Constitutional Convention. It is much to be regretted that no legal steps have been taken in order to procure a proper representation for the county. I must say explicitly that there is no provision of law by which I can do anything to remedy the omission.

As the Convention will represent the inchoate sovereignty of the intended State of Kansas, I think it will have full authority to admit delegates fairly elected from those counties not included in the legal apportionment, but the question of admission will be for the Convention itself to determine; and I can give you no assurance of any kind as to what will be the decision of the Convention. If you think proper to hold an election you will learn from the inclosed proclamation issued the 20th instant, that the representative number is 154; that is, one delegate will be chosen for each 154 legal voters. Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

FREDERICK P STANTON, Acting Governor.

WM. WOOLMAN, Esq., Probate Judge, Coffee County, K. T.

OUTRAGE ON A CHILD.—LOUIS MILLER, a German boy 10 years of age, was arrested in the Nineteenth-ward, on Saturday afternoon, charged with committing a rape upon the person of a child of six years. Capt. TWOMEY in his report of the arrest to the Chief, MATSELL, says: This prisoner was arrested by Officer MALONE, on complaint of Mr. DUTZING, residing in Forty-first-st., near Third-avenue, who states that MILLER, (who is an apprentice in a bakery in the neighborhood, enticed his (DUTZING'S) little daughter (a child 6 years of age) to enter the shop on Friday afternoon, and there violated her person. The child told a plain, simple story of the affair and substantiates the complaint made by the father." The accused was committed yesterday morning for examination

☞ The body of MICHAEL WELSH, a laboring man, who on Friday last fell into the East River and was drowned, has not been recovered.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM—June 6.

Before Judges Mitchell, Roosevelt and Peabody.

THE EIGHTH-AVENUE BANK.

Edward P. Cowles, Receiver of the Eighth-avenue Bank vs. John V. Gridley.—ROOSEVELT, J.—The making and indorsement of the note sued on are admitted, but it is said that no value wse received; that by an arrangement among the directors of the Bank, of whom the defendant was one, the instrument was never intended to be considered as a "valid promissory note, "in the hands of any person, or for any purpose whatever."

On this statement of the defence, an inquiry naturally arises, for what purpose was the note given, if, in every event, the promise or obligation was to be of no validity? The case shows that the defendant was one of the original twelve subscribers to the Eighth-avenue Bank, of which the capital was $100,000, and his proportion, as expressed in the articles of association, $10,000. He, too, with his eleven associates, were the first Directors. As soon as $44,000 was paid up, the Bank organized and commenced business. Their purchase of securities to deposit with the Banking Department, to the amount of $100,000, must, to a great extent, therefore, have been directly or indirectly on credit, and of course on the credit of supposed bona fide paid-up or secured capital. Instead, however, of paying up, the original associates and directors gave their notes for the deficiency, each for $3,650 dated Jan. 1, 1854, payable in 6 months, with interest, to some other director, and "interchangeably indorsed by the payees." At the same time, also, a certificate of the corresponding number of shares of stock was filled up and signed by the President and Cashier in favor of each director, although not actually cut out from the certificate book. The notes were not only delivered to the Cashier, but formally discounted on the books of the Bank, and the proceeds carried to the respective credit of the makers, who thereupon drew their checks, which were received as cash in payment of the stock and carried into the stock ledger and transfer book, "showing that each of the Directors held such shares." When those notes fell due, which was, of course, six months afterward, they were renewed for another six months by the Directors as a Board for themselves individually, "omitting the indorsers," but paying the first six months' interest. In three months the Bank exploded, a Receiver was appointed, and suits were brought by him, of which the present is one, on the several notes so given. And the defence now is, not as against other stockholders merely, but as against bona fide creditors, for the receiver represents both,) that, by an understanding among the Directors themselves, all this was to be mere form—more properly speaking, more sham—"that no rights should be acquired by the Bank in the notes, unless the Directors should elect to pay their notes and take certificates of the stock"—and that the stock having become worthless, probably by the very acts of the directors themselves, they have a right to reject, or rather to return it, and with it to repudiate the written engagement of which it is said to have formed the consideration.

Can such a defence, either in law or morals, be listened to? Can a director, in other words, be permitted to say that he agreed with a Board of Trustees (himself being one) that if there should be a gain on the stock he and his colleagues should receive it, and if a loss the creditors and general stockholders should have it? It will be said, perhaps, that such was not the agreement. In words it was not; but what, I would ask, was the distinction in substance? The whole Board gave to each of its component members the right of "election" for six months, and then again for six months more, to take or not to take the stock, and to pay or not to pay the notes. What moneyed man with such an option would choose a loss, or refuse a gain?

To illustrate the position more strongly, take the case of two guardians of the estate of a minor. They agree, each on his own account, with both trustees to speculate in cotton with the funds of their ward, giving notice for the respective amounts, after the fashion of the arrangement alleged to have been made in this instance, purporting on their face to be for value received, but with a verbal understanding that if the speculation turned out a bad one they were to be allowed to "elect" not to pay. Would it be any answer in a suit by the substituted successor of these faithless guardians to say that they had "elected" to nullify their written obligation?

Whatever may be the force of these analogies, one thing is clear, that there was a consideration for the note which the defendant gave. It affected a compliance with the law, and enabled the defendant and his eleven associates officially to report, under oath, that the whole amount of their "certified stock was paid in or invested," (section 8 of act of 1840,) and take the chance of a profit on their shares without the risk of loss. But this was not all—the printed case states that when the defendant Gridley paid the interest on the original note at its maturity, he did so on the assurance of the cashier "that it would come back to him on the making of a dividend to the stockholders." Here, then, when the second note was given, was a determination by that very act of the defendant's election to take the stock, and become absolutely bound for the amount.

The Directors, it is further contended, had no right to discount their own notes in payment of their subscriptions. The answer is that the provision referred to (1 R. S., 589) had no reference to the free banks which were expressly authorized to commence a business on securities instead of cash, and unlike the old chartered institutions, were required, before issuing or even obtaining any circulation to protect the involuntary holders of their bills by a proper deposit with the Bank Department of the State of public stocks or private mortgages. And even if the taking of the note had been prohibited, would it be a legitimate satisfaction of the law to deny a recovery upon it, and thus instead of punishing, to reward the wrong-doer, and that at the expense of the innocent and injured creditor? The true principle on this subject is expressed in that section of the statute of moneyed "corporation" which, while prohibiting discounts to creditors beyond a certain amount, very properly adds the provision, that "no securities taken for any such loan or discount shall be held invalid." (1 R. S., 596.)

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

The trial of Charles Roberts, the waiter at the Lafarge Hotel, charged with robbing Mr. Knoxon, a guest of that house, of $5,000, on the 5th April last, was continued on Saturday in this Court.

Herman Kretzlar, the keeper of an exchange office at No. 22 Sullivan street, deposed that the accused, on April 16th, paid him $36, in ones, of the Commercial Bank of Perth Amboy. There was a figure 7 in red ink, and the letter R in blue ink, on each bill, corresponding with the marks on the bills lost by Mr. KNOXON.

Counsel for the prisoner, in cross-examination, drew forth the fact that Roberts was very lucky at policy-playing. He once "hit" witness for $75 at one time, and on many occasions won $30, $40, and $50. He was an adept in "hosses" and "gigs," and "whips" and "saddles."

Samuel Potter, clothes merchant, stated that on April 11th prisoner paid him $32 in Commercial Bank money.

For the defence, counsel called John Douglas, bell tender at the Lafarge, who deposed that he carried $300 in one's and two's, of the Commercial Bank of Perth Amboy, from Mr. KNOXON to Mr. TAOBROCK; and that the servants of the Lafarge were paid off continually in that money. On the day preceding the robbery, they were all paid off in that money. The prisoner was home sick on the day of the robbery.

ELIZA DYER, a white woman, deposed that she saw the prisoner at home on the 5th April. She remembered the date because it was Palm Sunday. He was lying down wrapped up in blankets, sick of Chagres fever.

WM. WHITE, white man and straw-hat manufacturer, said that accused had been a tenant of his. He had known him four years, and knew him to be a man of strict integrity.

Several other witnesses, white and colored, gave ROBERTS a very good character.

Counsel for prisoner made a forcible address to the Jury. The Recorder's charge was able and strictly impartial. After being absent little more than half an hour, the Jury returned into Court, with a verdict of "Not Guilty."

Roberts was immediately surrounded by half a hundred of his colored brethren, waiters at the Lafarge and Metropolitan, and was borne up the street to Broadway in triumph.

Catharine Russell, a girl of 16, who pleaded guilty to stealing a breast-pin, worth $150, from her mistress, was sent to the House of Refuge.

The Court adjourned to this morning at 11 o'clock.

Deeihy, whose name has become famous, will be placed on trial for the fourth time to-nay.

COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS—June 6.

Before Justices Osborne and Connolly.

There were not many prison cases to be disposed of, but the ball calendar was quite large.

A mild looking and middle-aged man named Tibbets, pleaded guilty to beating his wife, and said he was very sorry and would never do so again. Mrs. Tibbets seemed not very willing to prosecute. The Judge, after a reprimand, suspended sentence.

Ann Mack was placed at the bar for stealing something of minor value from a storekeeper in Canal-street. The offence was proven against her. The Judge inquired what she had to say for herself, and she answered, "Nothing at all;" but cried hard and begged to be let off. "You have been on the Island frequently," said Justice CONNOLLY: "I recognize you as a bad one." Ann continued crying. "Six months in the Penitentiary," said Justice OSBORNE. Ann cried louder, and was taken away.

William Hanley, a young man with a stubborn look, was then placed at the bar on two charges of assault and battery on Frank Dalton and on Thomas Pierson. He was convicted and sentenced on each charge to one month's imprisonment on Blackwell's Island.

A middle-aged and poorly dressed woman named Margaret Dowling, was placed on trial for stealing a bonnet valued at $2 50. The prosecutor, a German storekeeper in the Canal-extension, said he was standing behind his counter when he saw the prisoner come up to the door and take the bonnet in her hands, whereupon he ran out, took it away from her and gave her in charge of a policeman. "I only took it in my hands, Sir," said the prisoner. "Oh yes," observed the Court, "you only took it, you didn't steal it. We will give you four months."

Ann Bryan and Ann Burns were put to the bar for doing something to somebody, but no one appearing to prosecute them they were told to go, and they went.

A young woman, named Susan McKenna was placed at the bar for stealing from a lady a purse containing gold and silver to the amount of $10. The prisoner wore a hood, looked dejected and cried bitterly.

"What do you say to this charge?" asked the Clerk, "guilty or not guilty?" "I did it," said the prisoner, but I am very sorry for it, I am very sorry, indeed I am." "We shall send you to the Island for two months, Susan," said the Court. "Oh, Judge, don't, don't do that," implored the prisoner. "It will be good for you," replied the Judge. "It will take two months to get the liquor out of you."

A burly fellow, in his shirt sleeves, was arraigned, charged with stealing children's clothes from a line in the yard of a German woman. The stolen property was found in McKenna's possession. "How do you know I stole them? Can you swear to it?" inquired the prisoner of the witness. "They were got with you," replied the female. "Well, your Honor," said the prisoner, "the things were given me to sell by a man named Williams." "Yes, yes, the old story," remarked Justice OSBORNE. "Rather small business for a big fellow like you, to be stealing baby-clothes from a line. Four months—take him away!"

A verdant-looking young man named Michael Mullin was brought from the prisoner's pen to answer a charge of assault and battery upon a man named Fane. Fane swore that he was walking quietly along the street, when the prisoner and two other men who were approaching in an opposite direction, ran against, jostled him about, and finally set upon him and knocked him down. He cried for help, when a policeman approached. The assailants then tried to escape, but were pursued by the policeman, who arrested the prisoner. Witnesses were examined to show that the prisoner was not a bad fellow, that he was led away on the occasion by others who were worse, &c. "We will give him two months in the Penitentiary," said Justice OSBORNE, "which may teach him better behavior. Take him away."

Mary Carroll, a seamstress, was put at the bar for an assault and battery on Mary Kally, a young married woman. A crowd of witnesses gave testimony in the case, which was conducted with warmth by two lawyers. The parties to the suit resided in Pearl street (Sixth ward), and, as was shown, had been at enmity for a long time. They had had frequent quarrels and exchanged blows before, and had had a lawsuit, too, which resulted in the holding of the prisoner to keep the peace. The defence produced a witness to show that the defendant was a hard-working woman, and that she had been beset by the complainant at divers times and in divers places, who defied her, spat at her, called her ugly names, and made use towards her of language disgusting and profane, which finally so aggravated her that in a moment of passion she (the prisoner) gave the blow, upon which the prosecution was based. The Court consulted, adjudged the accused guilty, and dismissed both parties, after censuring them for unlady-like conduct.

Anthony Forty, a daguerreotypist, was fined $20 for an assault upon a German female, who gave a name that sounded like Brooker Brahooth. Brooker Brahooth, it appeared, went into the saloon of the prisoner, and wanted a twenty-five-cent daguerreotype taken. Her likeness was taken, but she objected to the picture: whereupon another was taken, to which she also objected. Some words thereupon took place between her and the indignant artist, which resulted in his shoving her the way down stairs, in a manner more forcible than polite.

William Laughlin and John Corrigan, carmen, were fined $15 each for an assault and battery upon a brother carman. The offence was committed in Eighth-avenue, and grew out of a dispute as to the right of way. A large number of persons who witnessed the disturbance were sworn. The prisoners paid their fine.

James Morrissey was adjudged guilty of stealing a case of liniment. Sentence, four months in the Penitentiary.

Several other cases were postponed to Tuesday.

A PROFITABLE AND SAFE INVESTMENT.—The Pittsburg and Steubenville Railroad is now so near completed as to give the bonds of that Company a firm and positive value. The line of the road is graded, the tunnels all driven through, the piers of the bridges over the Ohio and Monongahela in rapid progress; the iron is purchased and being delivered, and it is estimated that the Road will be in running order and connect the Pennsylvania Central Road with roads through Ohio to Cincinnati and St. Louis by the 1st November.

The Pittsburg and Steubenville Road is therefore the connecting link between the great Eastern and Western lines, and must be the means of transit between them of the through Western and Eastern business, while its location through one of the most populous districts, and having at each terminus a large manufacturing city, will give to it an unusually heavy local trade, which alone would pay a dividend upon its cost.

The Pennsylvania Central Railroad Company have leased this road for twenty years, with the privilege of renewal for a like period. By the terms of the lease they are bound to keep the road and bridges in perfect preservation during its term, and reserve forty per cent. of the gross earnings of the road, from which is to be paid the interest on the bonds of the Company; and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company are to deposit the amount of interest as the semi-annual coupons mature at their place of payment on or before the date of their maturity. This is a reliable guarantee for the prompt and permanent payment of its interest which few, if any other companies, can offer for their bonds.

The local importance of the road may be estimated by the amount of stock subscriptions:

The Corporation of the city of Pittsburg subscribed to	$550,000
The County of Allegheny to	500,000
Individuals to	450,000
Making of paid stock subscriptions	$1,500,000

The first Mortgage bonds amount to $1,000,000. The bonds are in sums of $1,000 each, and bear coupons at the rate of 7 per cent., payable first days of August and February, at the Nassau Bank in the City of New-York.

Thomas McElrath, Esq., President of said Bank, is Trustee for the mortgage and bonds.

The following statement, by the President of the Pennsylvania Central Railroad Company, evidences the value of these securities:

OFFICE OF THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD CO.,
PHILADELPHIA, May 19, 1857.

That provision of the lease which binds the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to reserve forty per cent. of the receipts of the road and deposit the same at the maturity of the coupons for their payment, gives a guarantee to the holders that their demands will be promptly met.

(Signed) J. EDGAR THOMSON, President.

Possessing as these bonds do an absolute intrinsic value derived from the local importance and business of the road, and having this value so largely increased under the guarantee which is secured by the conditions of the lease to the Pennsylvania Central Railroad Company, they offer unusual inducements to capitalists, as well as to those who wish smaller investments of a permanent and fixed value. $200,000 of the bonds have been disposed of at par. Offers will be received for $500,000 of the remainder by R. W. LATHAM, President, at No. 14 Wall-st., New-York.

EIGHT PER CENT. LAND GRANT FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.—The Chicago, St. Paul and Fon du Lac Railroad Company propose to sell to Stockholders their Eight per Cent. 25 year Construction (Land Grant) Mortgage Bonds, of $1,000 each, of date May 1, 1857, and secured upon their entire Road and line of Road from Chicago to Lake Superior, and upon a million of acres of the grants of Public Lands from Congress, as made to this Company by the States of Wisconsin and Michigan.

Accompanying each Bond will be a Scrip Certificate, entitling the purchaser or his assigns, at his or their option, to ten shares, of $100 each, of Privilege Land Grant Stock, on electing, at any time within two years from June 1, 1857, to subscribe and pay ten per cent. of the par value thereof, the same never to be subject to any further assessments, but to be credited with proceeds of sales of lands until full paid, to share dividends and be entitled to vote pro rata, as provided by said Company, and set forth in said Stock Privilege Certificate, and in their Circular to Stockholders of May 26, 1857.

The subscription price for said Bonds to be 80 per cent. their par value and accrued interest, payable 10 per cent. in hand, on 1st July next, and 10 per cent. on each of the first days of August, September and October next, or as much sooner as parties may elect, at the office of the Company in New-York.

The subscription list will be opened at the office of the Company, No. 12 Wall-st., on MONDAY, the 8th inst., and will remain open till the 20th June inst.—Dated New-York, June 1, 1857.

CHARLES BUTLER, Treasurer, &c.

CONTINENTAL BANK, NEW-YORK, April 4, 1857.

CAPITAL STOCK $1,500,000, TO BE INCREASED TO $2,000,000.—The Board of Directors of the Continental Bank, in view of its increasing business, and in pursuance of the authority conferred on them by the articles of Association, have unanimously decided to increase the capital stock by an issue of 5,000 additional shares, of $100 each, which shall be subject in all respects to the stipulations, conditions, and limitations in said articles contained and declared with respect to the shares now existing.

The officers of the Bank having been duly authorized by the Board, hereby give notice that in accordance with such decision, and with the said articles, they will open books of subscription, and receive subscriptions, on the 15th day of June next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M., at the said Bank in the City of New-York, from all persons who shall appear to be registered on that day on the books of the Bank as shareholders in the said Continental Bank, in the proportion of one new share of the increased capital stock at par, to every three shares then held by them respectively.

The amount subscribed, and not paid at the time of subscription, will be payable on the 1st day of July next, when certificates will be issued.

Such portion of the additional 5,000 shares as shall not be taken by the shareholders within ten days after the said 15th day of June, will be disposed of for the benefit of the Association.

The transfer books will be closed from the 15th day of June to the (8th) sixth day of July, both inclusive.

Grand Lodge F. and A. M.

The fourth day's proceedings were devoted to the discussion of the articles of union. The following Grand Officers were elected:

Grand Master—M. W. JOHN M. LEWIS, Jr., Pennsylvania.

Deputy Grand Master—R. W. ROBERT MACOY, New-York.

Senior Grand Warden—R. W. BENJ. H. AUSTIN, Buffalo.

Grand Secretary—R. W. JAMES M. AUSTIN, New-York.

Grand Treasurer—R. W. CHARLES L. CHURCH, New-York.

Grand Lecturer—R. W. WM. H. DREW, Buffalo.

Grand Pursuivant—W. D. H. VAN SICK, New-York.

Grand Tyler—W. SEWELL PIKE, New-York.

The officers were, with one or two exceptions, re-elected.

At 7 o'clock the Grand Lodge reassembled and proceeded to Dr. CHAPIN'S Church, in Broadway, to do honor to the memory of the late Dr. KANE.

MASONIC EXERCISES IN MEMORY OF DR. KANE.—Quite a large audience assembled Friday evening in Dr. CHAPIN'S Church, to listen to an address and other demonstrations in honor of the late Dr. KANE, who was a member of the Masonic fraternity. The members of the Grand Lodge in regalia, were seated on the platform beneath the pulpit, and in front of them was a bust of Dr. KANE placed on a table. After a voluntary on the organ, a funeral dirge by the band present, prayer, and the singing of an appropriate ode by several ladies and gentlemen, an address was delivered by JOHN L. LEWIS, Jr., M. W. Grand Master, who also read letters from a number of eminent members invited to be present, among whom were Commodores PERRY and STEWART, Lieut. MAURY and N. P. WILLIS. A funeral hymn written for the occasion by Gen. P. MORRIS, was then sung by the choir. The eulogium on Dr. KANE was then pronounced by Hon. R. W. ANDREWS, who reviewed the history of his subject from early life to the close of his career, and concluded with an eloquent tribute to his personal worth and valuable contributions to science.

☞ "Ups and Downs of New-York Life, or City Revelations," is the title of a new local drama, by G. L. AIKEN, which is to be produced at Purdy's National Theatre to-night. Those who have witnessed the rehearsals speak highly of it. The glorious pantomime of the "Magic Pills" is also to be revived and performed with it, and to this will be added the startling drama of the "Maniac Lover." Such an immense bill will of course attract a large audience. Wednesday, also, is to be a grand gala day—two performances, afternoon and evening, as a complimentary testimonial to Manager A. H. PURDY, on which occasion the Ledger story dramatised, "The Wild Knight," and a pantomime, are to be performed in the afternoon, for the accommodation of ladies.

LONG ISLAND.

EXCISE LAW IN BROOKLYN — DISCHARGE OF PRISONERS.—The Excise Law, if not openly violated in Brooklyn, is certainly not fully enforced. To give one case out of many, on the 2d inst. THOS. JUNOR was convicted of drunkenness before a Magistrate, and refusing to pay a fine of $10, he was sentenced to imprisonment for one day in the County Jail. But Judge did not even have to suffer this short imprisonment. He was discharged by the County Judge on the day of imprisonment. The Judge was equally kind in the following matter: On the 1st inst. JOHN BAHEN, was convicted before Justice CORNELL on two charges preferred against him for assault and battery. In one case he was sentenced to $5 fine and five days' imprisonment, and in the other, to $5 fine and 10 days' imprisonment. The prisoner was also discharged the day of his conviction, by the County Judge.

FIRE IN BROOKLYN.—A fire broke out in building No. 158 Union-avenue, owned and occupied by HARDY & BROWN, about 2 o'clock Saturday morning last, which was quickly destroyed. The fire spread to the following property: No. 156, same owners, partially consumed; No. 154, dwelling of WALTER CHILDS, partially consumed; No. 160, JOHN BAYLIS' blacksmith shop, entirely destroyed; dwelling No. 5 Devoe-street, owned by JOHN BAYLIS, partially destroyed; No. 7 same street, occupied by SARAH DICKINSON, slightly damaged.

☞ By the new L. I. Railroad arrangements, persons can take the 9 o'clock A. M. train, at South Ferry depôt, and go east 60 miles, and return the same day. The morning and evening trains to Riverhead give the people of the Island an opportunity of visiting the city and returning daily. Besides, communication is opened by the steamboat Catiline between Greenport, New-London, Stonington, and Norwich, to connect with the railroad at Greenport.

Hay in Bonded Warehouses.

NEW YORK, Saturday, June 6, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

A few weeks since, through the instrumentality of the Insurance companies, it was discovered that about thirty thousand dollars worth of sugar in bond had been placed on storage in FOAD'S store, No. 8 Brooklyn, which is not a Bonded Warehouse.

Since the fire of day before yesterday, the fact has been developed that hay is allowed on storage in bonded stores—some fifty or more bales being in this store of BAXTER'S

A survey of THOMPSON'S stores in Brooklyn made by one of the Insurance Surveyors this morning brings to light the fact that there are on storage in two of his bonded warehouses some fifteen hundred bundles of hay. By the United States Revenue laws a [illegible] such a construction that this is right? If not, what officer in the Custom House is responsible for it, and upon what terms did he assume the responsibility?

These are questions which many interested parties would be pleased to see answered.

FATAL FLUID ACCIDENT—SUICIDE.—On Thursday last, a girl 12 years of age, daughter of GEORGE HALL, (no relation to Ex-Mayor HALL,) residing at No. 36 Gold-street, in filling a fluid lamp while the wick was on fire, was so badly burned that she died on Saturday evening in the Brooklyn City Hospital, to which place she was conveyed immediately after the accident. The mother upon hearing of the death of her child took an over-dose of laudanum and died early yesterday morning from its effects.

NEW-JERSEY.

UNFORTUNATE LOCOMOTIVE.—The locomotive Governor Southard of the New-Jersey Railroad and Transportation Company, which ran into the drawbridge at the Hackensack and was sunk, had just been repaired on Wednesday, and was fired up, ran out upon the turn table and back again. The water was then blown out of her and the fires extinguished in the furnace, but they rekindled and burnt her entirely out.

THE DOG LAW.—Mayor WESTCOTT, of Jersey City, has issued his proclamation prohibiting the running at large of unmuzzled dogs from Saturday, (June 6) until the first day of November next, in Jersey City.

OUT-DOOR RELIEF.—The Overseer of the Poor of Jersey City has suspended all out-door relief for the poor since June 4th inst.

MONDAY, June 8—A. M.

The Foreign Trade at this port, the past week, amounted, in the Import entries of Foreign Merchandise, including the Dry-Goods table in our last paper, to $4,284,107, against $4,063,233 the corresponding week, ending 7th June, last year. The Export clearances of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods amounted to $1,139,714, against $2,206,677 the corresponding week last year. The direct Export of Specie from New-York, during the week, including $300,746 by the Columbia, for Liverpool, on Saturday, amounted to $489,668. The Cunard steamer from Boston, on Wednesday last, took out $1,220,000, of which about $920,000 went from this City by express. The shipments, the first week in June last year, were $162,407 from New-York, and $512,000 from Boston. The Specie balances in the Sub-Treasury, on Saturday afternoon, stood $12,431,008, against $13,041,360 at the close of the previous week. This decrease of $610,352, which mainly went into Bank, is the only registered set-off to the export demand of $1,409,668, leaving the apparent difference against the Bank reserve $799,316. The average return on the last statement stood $12,815,515. On the average therefore to be made up this afternoon, the amount should be about twelve millions of dollars. The export demand for Specie the present week on the one hand and the exported receipts by the California packet of the 20th May, and the further gain to the Bonds from the Sub-Treasury on the other, will probably equalize in amount, though the heaviest outward shipment—by the Arabia on Wednesday—will again be due on Thursday in advance of the California arrival, not fully due before Friday next. These heavy movements of Bullion have, as yet, no advers influence on the Money Market. On the contrary, the entire ease with which the export demand is met, week after week, tends rather to strengthen confidence in the financial strength of the country, while the present tendency of its general trade is to diminished money engagements. A temporary change to activity for a few weeks in July is anticipated, owing to the extra accumulation of Foreign Goods now in the Public Warehouse awaiting the new Tariff; but the principal effect of this will only be to change to the reverse, to the extent of a few millions of dollars, the relative division of the stock of Bullion in the city as between the Banks and the Sub-Treasury. Even this change, if it should seem to threaten serious inconvenience to the market, will be guarded against as far as practicable by the Secretary of the Treasury, who is expected to visit New York before the close of the present month. The supply of Money for the past week was abundant and cheap. Some deposits were left with the Stock people as low as 6 per cent. and the Discount or Brokers passed prime short paper at from 7 to 8 per cent. The interior exchanges are generally in favor of the city, and more Specie could be drawn from the neighboring cities and the West, if the necessities of the Banks here required it. It is not unlikely that the South will also remit us Gold after the 1st July, if not earlier.

The official Custom-House returns of the Foreign Trade at the port of New-York, by months, of which we presented summary tables a few days ago, make the Import Entries from the beginning of the current Treasury year, July 1, 1856, to the 1st June inst., exclusive of Foreign Specie and Bullion.....$204,740,000

* These items were included in miscellaneous goods, in our export statement every week of last year. Hence, we cannot furnish comparative figures, in detail, this year. Next year we shall be enabled to do so regularly, by keeping up the record as now arranged through the current year.

The notable feature in the general Export list of the week is the comparative decrease of a foreign demand for Flour, which about this time last season was quite active on an advance in prices in Europe. Against this immediate drawback we have to record the most cheering accounts of the progress of the western grain crops, the uncertainty of which during the early part of May retarded the receipts on the seaboard of Flour and Grain from the old stocks, and thus kept the demand for domestic consumption at rates above the shipping limits. There could scarcely be a more important gain for the steadiness of money affairs than this assurance of an abundant (though from particular sections it may prove a late) harvest. The fact, too, is highly important to the Railway interest, the wholesale abuse of which appears to be just now fashionable with several of our morning cotemporaries.

On the Stock Exchange the week was one of feverish irregularity in prices, alternating in several stocks as much as 6 or 8 per cent., and resulting, at the close on Saturday, in leaving the whole market, to all appearances, in the control of the well known combination of Bear speculators inaugurated last Winter, and whose peculiar tactics are not inaptly termed by our cotemporary of the United States Economist as "thimble-rigging." They were not permitted, to be sure, to have everything their own way the entire week, as the scarcity of several prominent stocks for transfer caused a sudden recovery, for a day or two, on the cash sales; but this momentary obstruction to their career of success was soon met by the preconcerted application of a combined power to overawe outside speculation and break down prices by enormous gambling sales, at startling differences, on time. That such a result should take place in the midst of a quiet and easy market for money, in a season full of promise for the crops of the country, and at the instant that hundreds of our prominent merchants and railway people are absent in the West to witness the inauguration of two important lines of new road of six hundred miles, ought, perhaps, to create surprise. But custom has made such scenes familiar, and it only remains to be seen whether these operators are to produce the utter ruin of the values with which they daily sport, and against which, if Street rumor is to be believed, they nightly plot, or by tempting the gamester's fortune too far, provoke a practical retaliation to their own ruin from the outside public whom they have for months past aimed wholly to intimidate.

The new feature in the dealings of the week was the contract sales of three of the established and favorite lines—the Michigan Central, Rock Island, and Galena and Chicago. The scarcity of these stocks in the Street had hitherto saved them from the general depreciation, but this is no longer a bar to time sales, nor to the unusual efforts made to get command, by loan, of the few parcels on the Street. The Herald of yesterday, as part of its duty "to the Bear speculators," thus makes proclamation against the stock of the leading New-York line, about three ₰ cent. only of whose capital is now available for what is elegantly termed the kicking sport:

"New-York Central Railroad closed very weak this morning, at 83¾ ₰ cent. This stock is coming upon the market in large lots. In a short time the bulk of the whole twenty-five millions of stock will be afloat, and then we shall have it kicked about the street among the brokers like Erie, Harlem and others."

From the Miners' Journal, June 6.

The heavy rain on Monday last has again filled the mines with water, which, together with the scarcity of boats, caused in a measure by high water, will cause a falling off again next week.

We again call on the consumers abroad who have the means, to commence laying in their winter's supply of coal, if they desire to save money. Dealers will not lay in supplies so long as the consumers hold back. Everything tends towards high prices for coal next Fall and Winter.

We learn that several of the operators, who cannot supply all their orders, owing to the great quantity of water in the mines, have advanced the price of their coal from 5 to 10 cents per ton.

Freight to Boston and the East is unusually low just now. It is quoted to Boston at $1 55—last year at the same period it was $1 60 per ton.

The press in the New England States will greatly benefit consumers of coal by advising them to commence laying in their stocks early, in order to insure a supply in the market at the present low freights. The tightness in the Money Market prevents dealers from laying in stocks so long as the consumer: hold back in making their purchases.

Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, June 5, 1857.

Under existing circumstances, the Directors of this Company, who are now in the City, deem it proper to make the following statements:

Attempts have been made to create the impression that serious divisions exist among the Directors, of a nature to prevent their cordial cooperation in carrying forward the business of the Company. All such allegations are groundless, and we think it our duty to give them this formal and unqualified denial. Up to the present moment no division of sentiment has been manifested in the Board upon any question of principle or policy affecting the interests of the Company, and no change has occurred in any way, in relation to the Company or its affairs since the date of our recent report and circular, to induce us to alter our opinions as therein expressed. We believe now, as then, in the capacity of the road to earn liberal dividends upon the entire amount of its outstanding stock; and we strongly recommend the stockholders not to sacrifice their stock under the influence of a temporary panic, which is attempted to be created, as we think, for the express purpose of alarming holders, and inducing them to throw their stock upon the market.

It appears from an examination of the transfer book lists that the aggregate of the sales of the stock on the Stock Exchange, from [illegible]

The banks show that the number of shares transferred to regular stockholders during that time was 6,168 shares, and the number of shares transferred by regular stockholders was 6,168; in other words, more stock has been withdrawn from the market than has been thrown upon it during the last seventeen days.

When it is recollected that within the time specified two payments have been made upon the guaranteed stock, and that some of the stockholders have sold a portion of their old stock in order to meet the payments upon the new, it will be seen that the stock is very firmly held.

It is deemed proper to make these statements in order that bona fide stockholders may not be misled by the large sales and low prices which are now quoted at the Stock Exchange.

Stock Speculations.

From the United States Economist.

The extraordinary panic which has been continued in the Stock Market continues to attract attention, chiefly in consequence of the animosity with which the "bear" party attack and run down different securities. Erie Railroad Stock has been depreciated from 63 to 33 ₰ cent., under the combination of a clique of brokers whose operations are by no means a credit to the Board. The stock has reached so low a point that many draw off and are afraid to sell it any further, more particularly that as the price fell the stock was gradually bought up by those who have confidence in its value, until it has become very scarce. Michigan Southern has suffered the same depression; it has been worked down from 88 to 50, time sales, although it has always paid 10 ₰ cent. dividends. This fact has had more weight with those who know the property than all the anonymous attacks made on the Company. The alleged squandering of money and mismanagement is answered by the fact that 536 miles of road have been put in operation for $17,000,000—less than half for the same length of any other line. If the managers have been able to build the road so cheaply and still swindle large sums besides, they have been very skillful. Hence the stock is gradually absorbed at the low rates for which bears who have not got it offer to sell it, and the stock is getting very scarce. It is obvious that the bear operation cannot be continued in these stocks; hence attacks are levied at those which have not yet fallen. Accordingly, a morning paper [Herald] announced that a certain Western Railroad [Michigan Central] "showed signs of weakness" and the attackers commenced by selling lots on time 1½ per cent under the cash price, and then by selling lots of five shares at comparatively falling prices, 94½@94 @93¾, constantly offering little lots at lower rates. These operations, followed up by newspaper attacks, will frighten some timid holder and he will sell. This supply will be seized upon for a fresh depression and the public credit of the company shaken, even although its intrinsic value may have improved. These are the transactions with which the Board of Brokers are now occupied. The respectable and honorable portion are impressed with the disgrace of such "thimble rigging," and recently made an effort to stay it by prohibiting sales beyond a short time, but without effect. It is evident that no person can enter the Stock market with any degree of safety, and the operations must be confined entirely to the conspirators. Recent transactions show that no person can borrow on stock in any way connected with the market without the immediate sale of the securities by the lender in open market; not even when that lender has signed a contract binding himself to hold the identical certificate until redeemed. The taking of interest and commission for lending money on a security which the owner does not wish sold, signing a contract to hold it, and then immediately selling it to reimburse yourself the money for which you have charged interest, is a stock operation more immediately profitable than honorable or permanently advantageous. It is, however, one of the means by which the "bear" party operate. It is one of the modes by which that philanthropic class of individuals prevent the public from being imposed upon by holding stocks.

The reduced values of the leading stocks have attracted buyers, and although they are yet pursued with the utmost blind animosity by a portion of the late "bear" party, the intelligent members of the Board have strengthened the opposite party. The general prosperity of the whole country, the immense crops known to be on the eve of harvest, the absence of all speculations that absorb capital, the abundance of it now offering, its cheapening rates and the lessening demand, all point to greatly improved values. In railroads, particularly those of the West, the crops are the basis of a good business, and these promise well. The Cincinnati Record, from gathered data, estimates the crops of the six Western States at 57,000,000 bush. of Wheat, against 44,000,000 bush. last year, that is, an increase of 30 ₰ cent. in those States alone, a fact which alone will add $2,000,000 to the receipts of the railroads of that section, more particularly on those lines which have opened new sections. There probably never was a time when values have a larger margin for a rise than the present, and accumulating capital is setting towards the securities that have been so unwarrantably depressed by fictitious causes.

The Great Railroad Opening.

From the Cincinnati Gazette, June 4.

To-day the train goes over the entire road, from Cincinnati to St. Louis—not, indeed, for the first time, but for the first time commemorative of its completion. It is the principal link in the great Ohio Valley Line, from Baltimore to St. Louis, and which, again, is the main part of a complete, direct, central line of railway, from the waters of Penobscot River to Western Missouri. The whole line passes through all the first-class cities of the United States, except New-Orleans, and might very properly be called the city line of railroad. Leaving out some of the extreme portions, we find the following as the main part of the great city line.

Portland, Me., to Boston	107 miles.
Boston, Mass., to New-Haven	160 miles.
New-Haven, Conn., to New-York	76 miles.
New-York, N.Y., to Philadelphia, viâ New-Jersey	87 miles.
Philadelphia, Penn., to Baltimore	96 miles.
Baltimore, Md., to Parkersburg	379 miles.
Parkersburg, viâ Marietta, to Cincinnati	196 miles.
Cincinnati, Ohio, to Vincennes	198 miles.
Aggregate	1,446 miles.

It will be seen that this City Line traverses thirteen States. But the entire distance, of near fifteen hundred miles, may be traversed in three days.

The cities and towns on this route have now about the following populations, viz:

Portland, Me.	20,000	Baltimore, Md.	200,000
Boston, Mass.	160,000	Cumberland, Md.	10,000
Hartford, Conn.	20,000	Parkersburg, Va.	2,000
New-Haven, Conn.	20,000	Marietta, Ohio	6,000
New-York	650,000	Chilicothe, Ohio	10,003
Newark, N. J.	40,000	Cincinnati, Ohio	175,000
Philadelphia, Pa.	500,000	Vincennes, Ind.	4,000
Wilmington, Del.	15,000	St. Louis, Mo.	130,000
Aggregate			1,972,000

Just about two millions of our city and town population are on the great city line.

Turning now to the Ohio Valley, we may refer, at once, to the map for distinct proof,—that the great line of Railroad, whose completion we now celebrate is in fact the Ohio Valley line. The North Western Road lies in the valley of the Little Kanawha, one of the branches of the Ohio. At Marietta it crosses the Ohio. At Athens it crosses the Hockhocking branch of the Ohio. At Chilicothe the Scioto, another branch. At Cincinnati it touches the Ohio, and from Cincinnati to St. Louis it has lateral course to the Ohio at Lawrenceburg, Madison, New-Albany, Jeffersonville, Evansville and Cairo, thus radiating to and from the Ohio, when it is not on it. Then this is our Ohio Valley line, and thus it must, by all the laws of commerce, draw to itself the trade and produce of the immense area of two hundred thousand square miles which the Ohio and its tributaries traverse.

Trade at Chicago.

From the Chicago Journal, June 4.

During the week which has just transpired, business of all kinds has been very active, in spite of the rainy and disagreeable weather which has prevailed. Out-door operations have been large, and the grocery and dry goods jobbing business have shared in the general activity. On Thursday the Arabia arrived at New-York with news of a decline in breadstuffs; on Monday the Canadian, with breadstuffs steady, and yesterday the steamers America and New-York, with a slight improvement. The America brings the significant news, that the growing crops in both Great Britain and France promise to be unusually large, and the weather is very favorable. This news, together with the large receipts at present coming, is a heavy blow to the Bulls, and consequently many of the heavy ones are turning Bears, with a view of getting the control of the market preparatory to getting back into their old quarters again in July.

Receipts of grain show a decided improvement, and large quantities of corn are yet due by canal and rail. Receipts for the week are as follows:

Flour, bbls	3,426	Oats, bush	51,220
Wheat, bush	106,427	Barley, bush	363
Corn, bush	270,861
Total equivalent			446,000

The exports for the week are:

Flour, bbls	11,952	Corn, bush	142,466
Wheat, bush	140,958
Total equivalent			343,134

Cincinnati Money and Stocks.

From Hewson & Holmes' Circular, June 3.

In consequence of the extensive preparations in progress during the past week for the opening celebration of the three great roads—Ohio and Mississippi, Marietta and Cincinnati, and Northwestern—very little business has been transacted; but more, perhaps, in Stocks than in any other department of trade, as our list will show. The sales will average very nearly the usual amount, and will not vary in price enough to particularize, except in one or two instances. We notice an advance in Ohio and Mississippi shares of ½@1 ₰ cent., and in Covington and Lexington Second Mortgage Bonds of 1 ₰ cent. on the previous week.

The sales of the week are: $2,000 Frankfort, Ky., 6s, 1874, mid int., 50; $3,000 Frankfort, Ky., 6s, 1874, and int., 87; $1,000 Frankfort, Ky., 6s, 1874, and int., 98; $3,000 [illegible] M. R. QUARANTINE.

Unsuccessful Attempt to Release the Person Arrested for Violating Quarantine by Writ of Habeas Corpus--Warrants Against the M.Ps.

Seguine's Point Quiet and Peace in the Offing.

THE BUOYS ANCHORED.

Old Quarantine Troubles—A Habeas Corpus applied for in case of Ragans—Warrants against the Metropolitan Policemen.

The man RAGANS, who was arrested on Sunday by the Metropolitan Policemen, as we published yesterday, for violation of the Quarantine laws, in conveying persons from shore to the ship Belle Wood, detained at Quarantine for cleansing, purifying, &c.—said vessel having arrived in port with fifteen cases of contagious disease on board—was yesterday brought before a magistrate on a writ of habeas corpus, issued by Judge METCALF, the plea of his counsel being that he was illegally detained in custody, his arrest having been effected by policemen from New-York, whose jurisdiction did not extend beyond the limits of the City. The Magistrate, having listened attentively to the argument, decided against the plea, and dismissed the writ. RAGANS is therefore still held in custody. His friends, however, are stirring themselves in his behalf, and as retributive steps of annoyance, they have procured warrants for the arrest of Captain BOWYER, and officers MCKELVEY and SHERWOOD, who assisted in the capture of RAGANS, on the ground that their proceedings were illegal, and that in making the arrest they were guilty of assault and battery. They were taken on these warrants, but their examination was postponed till Wednesday.

RAGANS' conduct, when he was pursued by the officers on Sunday, was even more violent than we stated yesterday. He not only refused to obey the officers and return in his boat to the shore, without communicating with the ship, but threatened their lives if they attempted to interfere with him. So violent was his demeanor that the officers had to draw their pistols before he yielded. On their reaching shore, nearly a hundred of his friends, consisting of the disorderly characters always congregating about Quarantine, attempted to rescue him, and their numbers were so much superior to those of the police, that it seemed probable that these turbulent law-breakers would accomplish their object. However, the officers again drew their pistols and stood nobly on the defensive, never once loosing their hold on their prisoner, whom they succeeded in lodging in a place of safety. The mob, baffled in their design, followed the officers, hooting and throwing stones at them, and threatening to burn the Quarantine buildings.

The Quarantine Buoys Down.

The four buoys were yesterday dropped into their places by the Quarantine Commissioners, aided by experienced pilots. The buoys, with the rock attached to each by its chain, were put on board a lighter which was taken in tow by the John Birkbeck. Following the direction of the Harbor Commissioners, the spot for the first or S. E. buoy was found by steering from the Red Channel buoy No. 12, due West one nautical mile; thence W. by S. ½ S., three miles they located the second, or S. W. buoy; thence due North ¾ of a mile was dropped the N. W. buoy; thence E. by N. ½ N. three miles, was placed the N. E. buoy; the four describing an oblong square three miles long by ¾ mile wide. At low water there is at the S. E. buoy a depth of 33 feet; at the S. W. buoy 23 feet; at the N. W. buoy 18 feet and at the N. E. buoy 21 feet. The east point of Great Kills bears N. 1¾ miles from the N. W. buoy and Seguine's Point bears W. by N. three miles. This is the nearest quarantine buoy; from the centre of the anchorage it is 4¼ miles. From Point Comfort, N. J.—the nearest land—the S. W. buoy bears S. by W. 2¼ miles.

All infected bedding is to be burned—not thrown overboard.

Affairs at Seguine's Point.

GETTING OVER THE LINES AND TO THE CAMP.

Rumors of wars prevailed at Seguine's Point throughout the day on Saturday, and various circumstances tended to confirm the belief that a descent would be made at night upon the board shanty, and its twenty-five Spartan defenders; each one of whom seemed to snuff trouble in the breeze, and see mischief lurking in the side-long, inquisitive glance of the stragglers that came upon the ground.

The carpenter, who needed a few boards to finish out the shanty, went to the lumber-yard at Fresh Kills to buy them, but when the dealer in pine and hackmatack ascertained the uses they were to be put to, he started back with amazement at the idea of furnishing pine boards for such unhallowed purposes, and told the contractor he could not have one board, if he paid him the price of all the lumber in his yard for it. Startled by the earnestness of the man, he beat a retreat without a board, and astonished at the storm he had raised. On his return he spied a meat cart in the distance, and remembering how long his men had been eating salt pork, at the hazard of the scurvy, he hailed the dealer in beef, and by carefully concealing his identity and the purposes for which the meat was wanted, succeeded in buying a dozen pounds. Pleased with his success he then proposed to the butcher that he deliver a given quantity of fresh meet daily for his men. "Where is your place?" asked the meat man. "Down at Seguine's Point, where I am putting up buildings for the quarantine location," answered the carpenter. The butcher started back as if a snake had bit him; he looked first at the carpenter, then at the beef he had just sold him, turning in his mind apparently how he might get the beef back again. Taking breath he at length said, "My dear sir, if I had known where you were from, and what you wanted this beef for, I shouldn't a'dared a'sold it to you. I've been ordered not to do it. 'Tis true I would like to sell you, and have your money, but 'tis jest as I tell ye—they've given me my orders, and I can't." The carpenter froze to his beef and started for the Point, ruminating upon the strange adventures that had befallen him in a land where no war openly existed. Returning to his home in the evening, he met our reporter on the road, and whom, after relating these matters, he advised tenderly not to go nearer than the half-way house that night, as there was certainly trouble brewing. This advice the reporter scrupulously followed, from a prudent regard to the opinions of mankind, the soundness of his own scalp, and a fatherly concern for a dependent family, and a suspicion that he could get a better bed off than on the Point. At the Patten House he heard there had been an excited meeting at Richmond that afternoon, which was to be continued in the evening; that couriers had been flying to and fro during the day, to rally the clans, busiest among whom was a mysterious dark-complexioned Jehu, who drove a span of black ponies ahead of a farm wagon, traveling like winged horses. There were dark hints, too, of something desperate about to happen; they "didn't know, but shouldn't wonder if something should turn up between that time and sunrise." Another doubted if 'twould be before 'tween that time and Monday morning—and another, while he quaffed his lager-bier, "didn't think anything would be done until the buildings were all up." Thus enlightened, our reporter went to bed with a raging tooth-ache, one eye and a window open, determined to catch the first sound of battle from without, having previously charged the landlord to be sure to call him if anything unusual occurred.

THERE IN CAMP.

Pushing on early Sunday morning for Seguine's Point, he found, somewhat to his surprise, the board shanty still standing, and about one-half of the policemen snoozing in their hunks, apparently unconscious of danger.

Not a man had been off guard during the night, out-posts were stationed at long distances from the camp, the piquets walked back and forth, each man with his hand upon his weapon, in momentary expectation of the attack. In a word, as Captain WALLING expressed it, "They were all wide awake and full of fleas."

Thus the night passed away and morning came, but the enemy did not. They were disappointed, for they had been confidently told that a large force would be down upon them. They did not court a conflict, and hoped there wouldn't be any; but as in duty bound, they had been ready for the emergency. The dry skin of a sturgeon decorated one end of the building, and underneath, in large letters, was chalked, "Metropolitan Police Station, Richmond County 4th Precinct; Beware of the Dogs."

The air was fresher and the flowers sweeter for the showers that had fallen in the morning. There was not a breath of air to ruffle the bosom of the broad bay, though shoals of porpoises did,—breaking the silence with their snorts and the Sabbath with their sports. The scene was one of quiet beauty, suggesting far other thoughts and feelings than those which called this Company to the spot. The papers were accepted and read with great gusto, and seemed more than anything else to rouse the men from their snoozing.

Mr. SOLOMON SPRATT having succeeded to the cooking galley, soon served up, with the aid of his Deputy, "Senator PETTY," a dinner which consisted of broiled pork steak, asparagus and spinnach, with lettuce fresh from the kitchen garden; potatoes, onions, with a sieve dish of small clams, bread and butter, tea and coffee, with fresh milk; and for a desert—pound-cake and custard pies. It is needless to say that full justice was done to these viands, and many compliments given to the cook.

VOX POPULI OVER IN JERSEY.

One of the visiters who came down from Perth Amboy, on being questioned as to the feeling in that place, said that his folks would take no part in the matter, that it did not concern them; they should leave Staten Island to fight her own battles; that upon the whole they were rather glad of the trouble their neighbors were having, for they had been often forbidden in Perth Amboy to plant any oysters East of Ward's Point—they had been told by the Princes' Bay oystermen if they did so, they would not be allowed to take up one of them. This had not disposed them to sympathize any more strongly in their quarrels. Of course as to the large force that was to come from that place to attack the Quarantine establishment, it was all a mistake.

A person from Keyport stated that the people on that side of the Bay has been misrepresented. They had had no hand in burning the buildings, and did not mean to; there were not ten men in that place who cared a cent about the matter.

STATEN ISLAND SENTIMENT CHANGING.

Several persons who had been active in raising money, and inciting the opposition, visited Seguine's Point, stated that $1,000 had been subscribed, and it was all gone. They intimated that it had done no good; no more would be spent in trying the law, they said. If the Commissioners would pay for the oysters that would be disturbed by their operations, they thought most reasonable men would be satisfied.

The milk embargo was raised on Saturday, and the policemen and workmen have now no troubles in obtaining that luxury in any quantity; the butcher and baker also make morning calls, and seem glad to sell them all they require. A gentleman at Rossville, who keeps a grocery store, has also given out that he shall sell them groceries if they come there with the money to buy; the argument is "if we don't sell them—somebody else will."

HOW UNCLE JAMES GOT ALONG WITH HIS NEIGHBORS.

Not many years since a person from the land of steady habits strayed into the region of Princes Bay, and purchased a fine residence near the water; he was characteristically austere, pennrious and unneighborly; his lands were so situated that the oystermen had to pass across them to reach their boats, for which he exacted toll of each man; he had control over the waters of the creek, where it was necessary they should plant them to fat and freshen; for this privilege each man was made to pay so much per bushel, or forego the privilege. This exacting spirit of the man soon excited the hatred of the oystermen—they turned the tables on him, and annoyed him in every way their ingenuity could invent. On returning at night from town, he would often find the draw of the bridge swung aside, or something the matter with the gate so that he could not get in. In a word, Mr. TITE BARNACLE was finally compelled to sell out and leave to get rid of his uncomfortable neighbors, whom his own pettishness and illiberality had incited to retaliation. This place was purchased by a kindly old gentleman whom we shall call, as everybody else did, Uncle James; he had been long familiar with a sea faring life, and knew the character of the men with whom he had to deal. He was not long settled in the place before a delegation of oystermen waited upon him; he received them as one neighbor should another, in a friendly manner. They had called to say that they wished to lay their oysters in his creek, and wished to know how much he would charge them for the privilege. "I wish to be neighborly, and to have good neighbors around me," said Uncle James, "and I shall not disagree with you; plant your oysters there and welcome, and give me what you think it is worth." "But," say they, "we would like to pass across your land, from our house to the shore, it is nearer, what shall we pay you?" "Put the bars up as you go along, and when you see the cuttle in, drive 'em out," said Uncle James, "that is all I ask." They took a drink of apple-jack and parted. From time to time a bushel of the finest oysters would be set down at Uncle James' door, and he would hardly know who had committed the depredation. The year passed away, and there was no complaint to make of any unneighborly conduct on either side. They met for a settlement at Uncle James' house, the apple-jack was brought out, and all took a smile; after which the question was again put by the oystermen: "How much shall we pay you, Uncle James, for the use of the creek?" "If it has been of any benefit to you," replied the old man, "you can each give me what you can afford." One put down ten dollars, another twenty; some more, some less, until nearly five hundred dollars were voluntarily paid: which was more than double the sum which Tite Barnacle extorted by menace and meanness from the same men.

The person who related these facts to us, closes the story by saying: "If you wish to get along with the Prince's Bay oyster men, you must say—'Poor pussey,' but never say 'Scat y' bitch!' If you do, their fire will be up at once."

A Black Republican on Commissioner Hall's Letter.

When men have consciously committed an error which they are unwilling to acknowledge, they are generally led into prevarication, random assertion, misstatements and reckless denunciation of those their folly is likely to injure.

No one having any knowledge of the important facts bearing on the question of a Quarantine site can read the document just published by the Quarantine Commission, for the purpose of vindicating their determination to establish a lazaretto at Seguine's Point, without a sad realization of the weakness of human nature.

Here are three honorable gentlemen, with reputations hitherto unblemished, whose duty requires of them the most careful study of facts, calmness, deliberation and manliness, avowedly undertake, through their Chairman, to "correct the many misstetements which have been made through the public prints." I have looked in vain to find a single correction of an important statement with regard to the unfitness of Seguine's Point for the purpose for which they have selected it. The Commissioners make certain assertions, it is true, which are opposed to those which have been made by respectable physicians and pilots; but these are all upon matters of opinion and not of fact. Let us examine a few of the statements by which the Commissioners attempt to show the disadvantages of other sites which they pretend to have considered. I use the unpleasant word pretend, with regret,—but the reader will be obliged to acknowledge that the Commissioners have given no independent consideration from the outset to any other place than that which involved the purchase of Seguine's Point.

The first location examined by the Commissioners was the Dry Romer, with regard to which they observe in their defence: "At low tide this bar is covered with about ten feet of water." If Mr. HALL had looked with a glass towards the beacon on the Dry Romer, as he passed down the Bay with the police force, the other day, he might perhaps have seen the sand uncovered by the water at its base. If when writing his defence he had taken the pains to consult the chart which hangs in the office of the Commission, he would have been saved from this important misstatement; he would have seen upon it that, for a mile and a half, the depth of water on the Dry Romer measures only from two to three feet. It is remarkable that the name of the shoal should not have suggested such an examination to Mr. HALL before he undertook "to correct the misstatements of the press."

The second position examined by the Commission was the West Bank. "The place proposed to the Commissioners," says Mr. HALL, "is about five miles distant from Fort Hamilton, and about three miles distant from the main land." An examination of Blunt's chart, or any other chart, will show that no part of the West Bank comes within half a mile of the position indicated by these measurements. The position examined by the Commissioners was, Mr. HALL says, "covered at low-tide by about ten feet of water." A reference to the chart again will show a part of the West Bank, to be marked, within quarter of a mile of the channel buoy, "Dry at very low tide." For a distance of a mile and a half below and above this point, the soundings vary from one to five feet. "It is objected," say the Commissioners, "that the erection of any buildings thereupon would tend to divert the channels, and thereby effect serious, if not irremediable, injuries to the harbor." The absurdity of this statement must be evident to any one in the least acquainted with the action of the currents in this vicinity. The construction of a bulk-head at the side of the channel could have no possible effect but to deepen and so improve it by increasing the volume and force of the current by which alone the channel exists at all.

The plan of temporary hospital ships is dismissed with one word: the physicians consulted by the Commissioners gave their opinion that the motion to which they would be subject "would render them entirely unfit for hospital purposes." Let the reader consider that the patients proposed to be received in such hospitals are nearly all seamen by profession, that all will have just arrived from the open ocean, and that the hulk having nothing above deck for the wind to act upon, would be under the lee of shoals, anchored, always facing what little sea there might be in a bay which is daily crossed by light open boats, such as never venture even in fine weather to encounter the swell of the ocean, and that the Quarantine season is the quietest of the year. Every sailor has seen hundreds of hulks moored for hospitals in far more open and turbulent roadsteads.

Thirdly, the Commissioners glance at Great Kills Point, which stretches out from the Staten Island shore at about one-third the distance from the ship-channel of the position they have bought. The fault here is, not that the water is too deep, but that it is too shallow; "it would require the construction of a pier at least a mile in length for the purposes required." What are the purposes required? Nothing but a boat landing near a site otherwise suitable for a hospital. It is true that if one only looked and examined outwardly from the extreme West end of the point, it might be thought that a dock would require to be built very long to be used as a safe landing in storms; but a few hundred yards back of this on the inside of the point is a place where a dock twenty feet in length would be amply convenient for the purpose. There is at this point now, and has been for ten years, a marine railway, much used for the repair of vessels engaged in the Southern trade and by the Seguine's Point oyster-craft. I have seen a dozen schooners anchored here within a shorter distance of the shore than the Commissioners propose to dock ont at the point they have chosen. The Commissioners in no case propose, let the reader remember, to bring large vessels nearer than a mile and a half of Seguine's Point.

Last of all, the Commissioners speak of Coney Island, as follows:

"Coney Island lies broad open to the ocean, and is exposed at times to the beating of a heavy surf, which would render it difficult, if not impossible, to land sick persons from a boat, and no wharf could be constructed except in Gravesend Bay."

At the Great Kills the Commissioners saw nothing, but the extreme west point; at Coney Island they strike an average by seeing everything but the extreme west point. If they had extended their labors so far, they would have been surprised to find that neither of the objections above stated could be for a moment sustained; and singularly enough, this end of the Island, nearest sunset, also, abuts so closely upon the ship-channel that the nearest soundings are not less than twenty feet, and this water, so far from being "broad open to the ocean," is land-locked, and at this point it is not only possible to construct a wharf, but a wharf has already been constructed, and is constantly made use of by the harbor tugs, and by excursion steamboats, which draw from six to ten feet of water. At less expense than would be necessary to construct the pier which has been contracted for at Seguine's Point, this wharf could be extended so far that, if desirable, the largest class of vessels which are ordinarily subject to Quarantine, could lay alongside, to land passengers or cargo.

The Commissioners continue:

"The towns of Gravesend and New-Utrecht are near to this position."

Neither of these towns are so near by half a mile to this position as the villages of Bloomingview and Pleasant Plains are to the ground bought by the Commissioners on Staten Island.

"Besides, the distance from Coney Island to the city of Brooklyn is less than five miles." So says Mr. HALL, formerly Mayor of Brooklyn, and no doubt he knows that this is so. Nevertheless, in a line as the crow flies, it will be found on the chart that the distance from Coney Island to the head of Gowanus Bay, in South Brooklyn, is a good deal nearer seven than five miles.

Again, the Commissioners say that "the shore from Coney Island to Fort Hamilton is thickly settled." There is not one house within a mile of the position most suitable for a hospital, while within quarter of a mile of the position selected by the Commissioners on Staten Island there are a dozen, besides a great candle-factory, employing a large number of laborers.

But the final and conclusive objection by the Commissioners is that it "would be impossible to obtain possession of the place." A lease of the whole island for eleven years was offered to the Commissioners, and is still open to them.

But the Commissioners say that the lease which they examined contained the provision "that all the inhabitants of Gravesend shall have the privilege of fishing, gathering sea-weed and mowing hay, and all other the rights and conditions originally granted, reserved and contained to the said town and its inhabitants in and by the original grants." These privileges are entirely incompatible, say the Commissioners, with the exclusive possession of the island for Quarantine purposes.

The gentlemen who offered to lease the island to the Commissioners could have informed them, and if the Commissioners, at the time they refused the lease, made this objection, I venture to say they were informed, that not a fork full of hay or grass was ever cut upon the Island, nor ever can be; that in the vicinity of the position indicated, no one was ever seen to cast a line or hook, dig a clam, or gather a lock of sea-weed. It is more than three miles from the west part of the Island to the town of Gravesend, across a deep sandy road, and all the grass on the Island is not worth the price of a day's work.

But, again, at Seguine's Point, in front of the land purchased by the Commissioners for a Quarantine, is a beach, on which the whole people of Staten Island have from time immemorial enjoyed the same privileges with those which constitute a fatal objection to Coney Island. At Seguine's Point they are of some value, and are much made use of by the farmers who live within quarter of a mile of the site.

The Commissioners at last proceed to Seguine's Point and endeavor to find excuses for having purchased the ground they did in preference to the positions they have previously given such reasons as I have quoted, for rejecting. These excuses are, if possible, more weak, blundering, inconsequent and based on greater mistakes of fact than those reasons. Most of them have been heretofore exposed by the observations made by the TIMES reporter on the spot, and I will, therefore, conclude by congratulating the TIMES, that its position as an independent Newspaper permits the truth, at all times, to be spoken in its columns, and allows a hearing even to poor and uninfluential men when the talented and powerful of whatever party undertake to deal with them unjustly and cruel.

I am, Sir, very truly yours,

Rose won the race in two straight heats, performing the first mile in 2:30. The betting was in favor of O'Blenis, at $100 to $70. The knowing ones were heavy losers on this trot. There was a large attendance present.

NEW-YORK RACES, FASHION COURSE.—The regular meeting over the above Course will commence to-day, Tuesday, June 9, and continue three days. Several purses are to come off, which have caused considerable interest, and which will no doubt equal in themselves some of the best we have had in this part of the country for many years.

THE STREETS.

Broadway Not Cleaned Yet--The Brooms and Hoes Afraid.

THE OLD CONTRACTS ABROGATED.

The Councilmen Disposed to Give the Streets to Inspector Morton.

BONDS FOR THE STATE ARSENAL PURCHASE

OTHER MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

NO BROOMS FOR BROADWAY YET.

Difficulties thicken in the cleansing of this filthy City. We anticipated, when we heard that the Broadway merchants had at their own expense, engaged Mr. R. A. SMITH to set to work, that that great thoroughfare would at least be cleaned, but there is no such good news yet. Mr. SMITH and his foreman called in last evening to say, that at 8 o'clock Monday night, the foreman met his 25 men at their place of rendezvous, corner of Broome and Mariou streets. Each man had his hoe or his broom, and to all appearances was ready to go to work. "Come, boys," said the fore man, "we will show them how Broadway looks when it is clean."

But not a man among them stirred, or rather but one man—an honest German—who said: "Vell den come on." The rest all refused; they were afraid to go they said; they would have their heads split if they went on to the street; all their neighbors were down on them; they would never get another day's work if they went on; the machines were to be set upon and smashed; they had families at home, they would work for no man under such terrible risks."

The foreman urged, entreated, threatened, but it was of no use. The carmen came with their eighteen carts, but as there was nobody to fill them they were sent home again empty.

Mr. SMITH went streightway to the Five Points, and stipulated with twenty Italian organ grinders to be on hand with brooms and hoes to-night; the machines will also be out. Mr. SMITH promises, and will work in spite of the mob. Deputy Superintendent CARPENTER will this morning be invited to lend men to defend Mr. SMITH'S property.

Action was taken in both Boards of the Common Council last night with reference to the streets, as is shown in the reports annexed.

Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen met last evening—Alderman CLANCY, the President, in the Chair.

Alderman GRIFFITHS offered a preamble and resolutions proposing to refer to the Ferry Committee for their consideration, to report on the Gouverneur-street Ferry, with a view to have the same reëstablished. The resolutions were adopted.

TRANSFER OF JUSTICE DAVISON.

Alderman BANTA offered a resolution to the effect that Police Justice Davison be assigned to the Fourth District Court, at Eighty-sixth-street, Yorkville, and that J. Sherman Brownell, Police Justice, be assigned to the Jefferson Market Court.

Alderman TUCKER opposed the resolution.

Alderman BANTA said he wanted a Democratic justice in that District. Justice Davison being a Black Republican, and, in his opinion, incapable of impartiality.

Alderman FULMER opposed the transfer, and claimed Justice Davison as an "American." He moved a reference to the Committee.

Alderman MCCONKEY moved a reference. He had known Justice Davison for more than twenty years, and knew he would act justly, independent of politics.

Alderman TUCKER pooh-poohed the idea of transferring Justice DAVISON merely because he was a Black Republican. He was a Republican himself, and the Board might as well transfer him somewhere—to Albany, for instance—if they wished. The charge made against Justice DAVISON should be proved, and he hoped Alderman BANTA would be made to prove it.

Alderman ADAMS believed Justice DAVISON was partial. He was sure he had recognized the Metropolitan Police, and should be transferred to the "one horse" Court at Yorkville.

The motion to refer was lost, and the resolution was adopted, by a party vote.

STEAM FIRE ENGINES.

The report of the Committee recommending the purchase of two steam fire engines for the lower wards was then called up as special order, and referred to the Fire Department Committee.

STREET CLEANING.

The Committee on Cleaning Streets, who had under consideration the estimates and awards for cleaning the City, opened and awarded by the late Commissioner of Streets and Lamps, on March 19, presented their report.

It commences with a reference to the refusal of important witnesses to appear and testify, and reviews the history of the contracts, as it has been published heretofore. It then states that since the contracts for the entire City amounted to about $174,000, it would appear that the sum of $20,496, thus paid, fell short of the total amount due within the period stated about $6,300, and the City Inspector confirms this view by the statement that he has refused to pay the claim of Mr. W. R. Reynolds for the two weeks ending May 3. From the notorious filthy condition of the City, and the utter disregard of the terms of the specification by every contractor, it is extraordinary that any certificates could have been given by the heads of Departments, or that the Comptroller, who has frequently refused to acknowledge certificates under valid contracts, faithfully performed, should have been induced to acknowledge such flagrant frauds upon the Treasury. No Court of law could have enforced the payment of such claims. In the streets embraced in most of the contract districts no labor whatever had been employed. The Committee regret these payments from the conviction that the securities cannot be held responsible, as the contracts were not confirmed. From testimony received by the Committee, it appeared that with the exception of the contractors for the Thirteenth and Sixteenth Wards, the contracts were abandoned and the securities declined to qualify. One of the securities remarked that when he became responsible the work was under the superintendence of the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps, and that he should like to know who was going to have control now, as a change of men sometimes made a change of work a significant commentary on the contract system. The Committee have received no statement from the City Inspector showing the cost of cleaning the streets under his management, but they have no doubt that where conducted by the Department the annual expense would be greatly increased. Indeed, by the provisions of the charter, new contracts must be made unless the Common Council by a vote of three-fourths should otherwise direct, and since the appropriation for street cleaning is wholly insufficient to meet the present outlays, unless contracts are properly entered into, a great deficiency will exist before the end of the year to be met by taxation. Although a great deal depends on the prudent manner in which documents are prepared, the responsibility rests chiefly on the Department overseeing the work. Collusion between the contractor, and the officer often occurs, and the streets are permitted to continue in a condition seriously affecting the health, comfort and character of our City.

Another fact deserves attention. The Comptroller without any authority from the Common Council, is now collecting and paying off the claims of the employés of the contractors, and since he is not possessed of the facts by which he can determine the aggregate of such claims, they may and probably will amount to a very large sum. On Saturday the workmen of the Fourteenth and Seventeenth Wards were paid off to the amount of $2,516, and if each Ward should present a similar claim, the total would exceed by $20,000 the sum actually due under the terms of the contracts. The Comptroller has no authority to discharge all the claims for labor existing against the contractors. The only legal claim of the workmen is against the contractors, and if the amounts now being paid by the Comptroller exceed the legal claims under the contracts, the Charter is clearly violated. That the sums due to laborers will in the aggregate exceed this legal claim is obvious, and no probability exists of the contractors and their securities being held for the difference. The Committee cannot see that the confirmation of the contracts can cure the existing defects, or render the contractors or securities liable for the past. The only course is to direct the City Inspector to advertise for proposals, and allow him to continue under proper restrictions, to clean the streets in the interim. Contracts for a longer period than a single year, within the opinion of the Committee, command more responsible contractors.

The Committee, after stating that they propose to submit it at an early day an ordinance regulating the duties of the City Inspector in relation to street cleaning, offer for adoption the following resolutions, viz:

Resolved, That the contracts for cleaning the streets opened by the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps on the 19th of March, never having been confirmed by the Common Council, or the duties proposed by the specification performed by the contractors, the Comptroller be and he is hereby directed to pay no more money on account or by reason of such contracts, until the further direction of the Common Council.

Resolved, That the City Inspector be directed immediately to advertise for proposals, prepared in accordance with the charter, an ordinance of the Corporation for cleaning the City for the period of three years, and that the City be divided for that purpose into two contract districts.

Resolved, That the City Inspector be directed, until such proposed contracts are opened, awarded, and confirmed, to cause to be cleaned the several Wards of this City, and to have the ashes, garbage, dirt, and manure removed therefrom. That the City Inspector cause an accurate account to be kept of the number of loads of the above removed from each Ward, and the place of subsequent deposit, and that such information, together with the pay rolls in detail, properly authenticated, be furnished every two weeks to the Comptroller, and to the Boards of the Common Council.

Resolved, That the sale of any manure, ashes, rubbish or dirt by the City Inspector, or his agents, shall in all cases be in writing, to be entered into by said City Inspector and the purchaser, and a copy thereof filed with the Comptroller, and a detailed statement of such sales to be presented to both Boards of the Common Council every two weeks.

The report was signed by the Committee, Aldermen ADAMS, COULTER and GRIFFITHS.

On motion of Alderman CLANCY the term of contracts was changed from three years to one.

The number of districts was subsequently changed from two to nineteen.

Alderman MCCONNEL moved to strike out the Seventeenth Ward and the name of the contractor from the report.

Alderman ADAMS remarked that as the report had been so extensively picked to pieces, he wished it to be referred back to the Committee.

Alderman BLUNT moved that the Board confirm the contracts.

The motion to recommit was renewed and carried.

THE UNION FERRY.

The Committee on Ferries reported that the Union Ferry Company had not fulfilled their contract in relation to the Roosevelt street Ferry; and proposed that they be compelled to fulfill it, by process of law; also, authorizing the Comptroller to advertise for proposals for running the Ferry from Gouverneur-street, E. R., to the foot of Roosevelt-street, Brooklyn. The report was laid on the table to be printed.

THE LATE RECEIVER OF TAXES ENDORSED BY OPPOSITE PARTIES.

The Special Committee appointed to examine the accounts of HENRY H. HOWARD, late Receiver of Taxes, respectfully

Report, that agreeable to the request of Mr. HOWARD, as contained in his communication of the 6th of April last, and in compliance with the action of the Board therein, your Committee have carefully examined the accounts of the office of the Receiver of Taxes, during the period Mr. HOWARD was Receiver, and that the vouchers and statements of the receipts and disposition of moneys for Taxes, arrears, &c., appear to be all properly filed, and present, upon an examination the requisite accuracy and strict attention to duty that should characterize any and every official in this discharge of a public trust.

Your Committee, therefore, offer for adoption the following resolution:

Resolved, That the prayer of the petitioner be granted, and the Committee be discharged from the further consideration of the subject.

WILLIAM TUCKER,
ORISON BLUNT,
PETER FULMER,
Special Committee.

After transacting some routine business, the Board adjourned until this evening, after resolving to meet every night until the matter of cleaning the streets is disposed of.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met on Monday, (as was supposed, at 5 P. M., the clock on the chamber having stood for sometime, the Corporation squabbles interfering with the willingness of the clockmaker to keep it any longer in proper order,)—the President, J. N. PHILLIPS, Esq., in the Chair.

THE ARSENAL.

The report of the Committee on Finance in favor of issuing bonds for the purchase of the State Arsenal property, was referred to the Committee of the Whole, and made a special order for the same evening. That document thus terminates:

His Honor, the Mayor, in his message, earnestly urges the Common Council to consummate this purchase before it is too late. This cannot be done unless the said purchase be completed at once. To permit speculators to possess this land in the Central Park, should not be thought of for a moment. Your Committe, therefore, submit the following resolution:

Resolved, That the ordinance (annexed) be adopted.

T. JONES, Jr.,
PETER CRAWFORD,
T. L. A. BOOLE,
Committee on Finance.

ORDINANCE.

SECTION 1. The Comptroller is hereby authorized and directed to issue 6 per cent. bonds to the amount of $275,000, to be applied for the purchase of the New-York Arsenal property, situated within the bounds of the Central Park, said bonds to be redeemable in the year 1865, and to be called "City Arsenal Bonds."

SEC. 2. This ordinance shall take effect immediately.

A long discussion again took place upon a motion affecting the change of the name of Amos-street to West Tenth-street. On vote the motion was adopted.

STATE OF THE STREETS.

The report of the Special Committee on cleaning streets was moved to be taken from the table.

Councilman WARNER moved the adoption of the two resolutions therein contained, with directions to the Committee to proceed and report further on Thursday next.

These resolutions are worded as follows:

Resolved. That the Common Council hereby direct and authorize the City Inspector to thoroughly clean the streets of the City forthwith.

Resolved, That the City Inspector be and hereby is directed to advertise for proposals for cleaning the streets of the City, the same to be done by contract, in such districts and under such specifications as may be directed by the Common Council, the bids to be for one year, and also in separate bids for five years, subject to the required legal approval; all bids to be submitted to the Common Council for approval.

T. JONES,
F. J. OTTARSON,
W. H. CRANE,
Committee on Cleaning Streets.

Councilman FRANKLIN seconded the motion.

Councilman BRADY said the Board of Councilmen was not blamable. Why not pass both the resolutions and specifications together? Why make two bites at a cherry? You authorize (said he) the Inspector to proceed. How was he to advertise for contracts while specifications were not yet made?

The Chairman of the Committee, Councilman JONES, explained that the specifications would be considered on Thursday night with a further report.

On vote, the motion of Councilman WARNER was carried unanimously.

COMMISSIONERS OF DEEDS.

A variety of counter resolutions and amendments were offered upon the proposition that Charles A. Gray, a clerk in the office of the Chief Engineer, be appointed a Commissioner of Deeds. On vote, the motion was adopted.

THE SEWERS.

It was moved to discharge the Committee on Sewers. Their report was accepted, and the resolution was adopted.

THE SPECIAL ORDER.

The Board then went into Committee of the Whole, Councilman WARNER in the Chair, on the special order respecting the purchase of the State Arsenal.

The report of the Committee on Finance was read with its appended ordinance, as above recited. Adopted unanimously, without debate.

A number of resolutions were also adopted in reference to flagging sidewalks, chiefly in relation to streets already curbed and guttered above Sixty-ninth-street.

HOW MATTERS ARE MANAGED.

There was a hitch in the passage of one resolution awarding the contract for the pavement of Lexington-avenue to John B. Monell, at $2 09 per yard.

Councilman BULTEEL, after half an hour's discussion of the matter, said it appeared to him there had been a grand speculation in this case. A number of contractors were doing what had been done in this instance. Men forward contracts which they know they cannot complete, say at $1 45 per yard, and then sell out their contracts to the next parties, dividing with them the advantage, and withdrawing their objections as the lowest bidder. He approved of what the Committee had done.

The amendment to refer back was lost. Councilman BRADY recommended the adoption of a motion to advertise for fresh contracts, which was also lost. The original motion prevailed by 22 to 15.

After affirming the removal of the curbstones five feet back in Vesey-street, for the accommodation of Eighth avenue Railway Company, which was done after strong opposition from Councilman BRADY, the committee rose and reported. The various papers were ordered to a third reading. After which the Board adjourned to Thursday at 5.

Board of Supervisors.

The Board of Sopervisors met yesterday afternoon, Supervisor STEERS, President, in the chair. The application of Coroner CONNERY, for the amount of expenses incurred in defending himself against the charges of misbecoming conduct, while in the discharge of his duties as Coroner, came up as special order. The application was read, together with the letter from the Governor, deciding in his favor, as heretofore published. The bill, which is for $650, was audited and allowed by a vote of 10 to 9. The President declared the vote sufficient.

Supervisor TUCKER objected, claiming that under the new law, 13 votes were necessary.

Supervisor CLANCY held that that clause did not take effect until after the next charter election.

Supervisor TUCKER, in reply, claimed that all the provisions of the law were in force.

The Chair decided the bill carried.

The Board then adjourned to Monday next.

Meeting of the Commissioners of Excise.

The Board of Excise Commissioners met yesterday morning in the Common Pleas Court room. Commissioner WM. J. HASKETT called them to order, with the statement that the Board was now open for the receipt of applications for licenses. Mr. J. W. AULD was appointed Clerk, pro tem. A communication was received from P. DICKEY, of No. 144 Chambers-street, relative to applications from No. 279 Canal street, and Nos. 418½ and 420 Broadway, and was laid upon the table. Mr. C. J. WARREN then, on behalf of the New-York City Temperance Alliance, presented the following PROTEST.

To the Commissioners of Excise:

GENTLEMEN: The New-York City Temperance Alliance respectfully represent—That "Act to prevent intemperance and to regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors," provides that the petitions for a license to sell such liquors shall be duly signed by twenty freeholders, and verified by the oath of a witness.

We submit, then, that it is the subject matter of the petition that is to be thus verified under oath, and not the mere fact that it was signed. If the witness cannot swear that the petitioners are freeholders, he can swear that he knows they are the persons they represent themselves to be, and knows that each one of them is an actual resident of that election district. But in the form of an affidavit prepared by your honorable Board, nothing appears to show that said witness has any knowledge whatever that the names appended to the petition are the real names of the signers, or that the petition is signed by a single individual who is a resident of that election district, or of the City or the State of New-York.

We submit, also, that this form of affidavit contains no such verification of the declarations made in the petition as the law requires, and that such deficiency effectually defeats the sole object and purpose of this provision of the law.

We further represent that the form of license prepared by your Honorable body for an Inn or Tavern, authorizes the recipient of such license "to sell liquors, &c., to be drunk in his house and on his premises." We submit that this last quoted clause is a liberty not given in the provision of the law. The storekeeper is by law forbidden to allow any liquor to be drank on his premises, but the permission to the innkeeper is confined to his house and we cannot tell how great may be the extent of his premises.

We therefore respectfully request that the words "and on his premises" be stricken from the printed forms of license, and we protest against any license being granted on any petition unless the matters of fact declared in such petition are verified or declared.

In behalf of the New-York City Temperance Al

THE BURDELL ESTATE.

Scandal Sworn to concerning Mrs. Cunningham.

Testimony of Deputy Sheriff Crombie, Mary Donohue and Hannah Conley.

NEW, INTERESTING AND PERTINENT EVIDENCE.

Mary Donohue talks of her Visit to the Times Office

SURROGATE'S COURT—June 8.
Before Hon. A. W. Bradford.

The Court met pursuant to adjournment at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. The room was as densely packed as on any of the preceding days. Mrs. Cunningham, accompanied by a lady friend, was in attendance.

ADDITIONAL TESTIMONY FOR THE CLAIMANTS.

Hugh Crombie, sworn—Examined by the counsel: I reside at No. 8 Seventh-street; am Deputy Sheriff; knew Burdell; served papers last Fall on him in two different suits, summons, complaint, affidavit and order; I did so on the 15th day of October, 1856; the order was to arrest and hold to bail in the amount of $6,000 in each suit; I arrested the Doctor at his house in Bond-street; I had a great deal of conversation with him at that time and subsequently; the suits were discontinued on the 23d of the same month; I looked at the entry in our books this morning; I presume the writs were returned on the 23d; he stated to me what the suits were; he was very much excited, and said on several occasions that they were to extort money from him; he did not describe the technical character of the actions; I told him that one of the suits was for breach of promise of marriage, and the other was for seduction or slander, I believe; he distinctly repudiated the idea of making a promise to marry; he said that she did steal a note from him in relation to the other suit; there was a good deal of settlement at the time they came to have the writs discharged; Mr. Thayer came with the plaintiff; the Doctor said a settlement was made, that they were glad to let him go, and he was satisfied that the matter had been settled; the Doctor frequently said he would never marry; this was said jokingly between us and the counsel.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cinton—The discontinuances were dated on the 23d, which the Sheriff has; I don't remember how many conversations I had with the Doctor about this; he was afraid that the suits, if continued, would injure his business reputation if published; the matter seemed to trouble him greatly; from the time I arrested the Doctor until the suits were discontinued I saw him five or six times; he was not in actual custody, but let on merely nominal bail; Mr. Alexander Fraser signed the bail bonds in both suits; Burdell took them away to hand to Fraser; Burdell told me the day previous to the settlement, that propositions were made to settle them; he never had counsel, or manifested any intention of procuring legal assistance; we had only one surety for him instead of two; he used to come in almost every day; he told me when I arrested him that he has never promised to marry her, and spoke derogatory as to her character as a lady; from the commencement of the suits down to their discontinuance he often told me that he would never marry any one; he never told me exactly how the suits were settled; when I asked him if he had to pay much, he evaded it.

To the Surrogate.—He was present on the 23d when the suit was discontinued, I think about 2 o'clock; he did not appear in a hurry as though he was going anywhere—nothing more than his general habits; on the 23d the last day he decied ever intending to marry Mrs. Cunningham; he said he had taken her to houses of assignation, and that he had paid her the same as he would other women; this occurred on the day of the settlement; I presume Mr. Thayer heard him, for he was present.

Q.—Do you recollect distinctly that those expressions were made use of that day? A.—Yes.

Q.—In the presence of Mr. Thayer, so that he might have heard them? A.—I presume he heard them, for the Doctor spoke loud enough; the Doctor paid the bond fees and all the Sheriff's fees; the Doctor never gave me an idea as to what the basis of settlement was; Mr. Thayer joined in the conversation at the time of the settlement; he did not say a great deal; I don't think to said much, only professionally.

To Mr. Clinton—The Doctor used those expressions almost every day in regard to Mrs. Cunningham; I am not certain whether he made use of these expressions in the presence of Mr. Fraser, but I think he did; he told me she was a tenant of his; he did not tell me how long he had had improper intercourse with Mrs. Cunningham; I remarked to him: "Why did you let your house to such a woman?" I don't remember his response; he was talking to me about going to the police office to have her arrested for stealing a note; all the conversations I had with Burdell, excepting the first and the last one, are mixed up in my mind; at the last conversation he said that the lawyer, Mr. Thayer, ought to be arrested more than him—that he (the counsel) slept up stairs nearer to Mrs. Cunningham than himself.

Q.—Have you just stated to me on my cross examination the substance of that last conversation as far as you can recollect it? A.—I have stated all that I remember of that last conversation, just now, and previously; Mr. Thayer and the Doctor came in and said that they had settled—produced the discharges; his tongue was going all the time to the effect that they had tried to extort money from him; that he would not marry any woman; that he had taken her to houses of assignation, and paid her as he had done other women; that is all I am sure was said at that time; this conversation was addressed generally to me on the last occasion; I asked the Doctor how much it cost him; I remember nothing of what Mr. Thayer said, only that the matter was settled; when the Doctor made the remark about assignation houses, I don't think any reply was made to him; Burdell asked me not to mention that these suits existed, several times, and not to let it get into the papers; Burdell never told me that he had had illicit connection with Mrs. Cunningham in her house.

TESTIMONY OF MARY DONOHUE.

This witness was sworn and examined by Mr. Tilden, as follows: I have just come out of the hospital at Bellevue; No. 31 Bond street was the last place I lived at; I went to No. 31 Bond-street to live on the 26th of last November; I left there on the Wednesday before Dr. Burdell's murder; I was employed there by Mrs. Cunningham; I was chambermaid and waitress; I made all the beds in the house; I never made a bed up in the small entry bedstead on the second floor; there was a press bedstead there; I never was in that room until I was taken there to carry the bed off; I found it down and the bed was in it; I think it was a fortnight before Christmas; during the time I was there I never knew of any lady sleeping in that room; with the exception of once or twice I always made the doctor's bed; it had one pillow; from the appearance of the bed I think but one person slept in it; I can tell from the appearance of a bed whether one or two persons slept in it; I made the bed in the third story large room; it was a mattress bed until I carried up the feather bed and put it on the mattress; I always considered she slept there, for I knocked at her door to call her down to breakfast; she always answered me; I always made her bed; Mr. Eckel slept in the little room adjoining Mrs. Cunningham; I knocked at his door after I had knocked at Mrs. Cunningham's; I sometimes got an answer from Mr. Eckel and sometimes not, and I would go away.

Q.—When you got an answer was that answer immediate, or after a little delay? (Objected to and ruled out.) A.—Mr. Eckel's bed frequently had the appearance as if no one had slept in it; the pillows only were tossed down and the sheet turned up, but not as if any one had slept in it; the body of the bed appeared as if no person had slept in it; it was a handsome bedstead; it could be closed up like a bookcase; I usually found the quilt where I had tucked it in, just as I had left it; it was troublesome to make the bed; when I found it in this undisturbed state I did not have to put the quilt in at the sides; there was a door between Eckel's and Mrs. Cunningham's room, situate by the window; I saw the key to that door—it was iron; I saw it once in the door, on the side of Mrs. Cunningham's room; I also saw it several times between the two mattresses of Mrs. Cunningham's bed when I was making it; on the night before I went away the key was missing; Mrs. Cunningham asked me if I had seen an iron key,—I told her that I had sometimes seen it about the bed, but not on that day, and she told me to go to bed, that she would find it herself; Mrs. Cunningham's I should call a large double bed.

Q.—How did that bed look? A.—It looked sometimes as though two persons had slept in it, instead of one; there were two large pillows and a bolster on his bed; the young ladies always slept when I was there on the fourth story; I slept in the next room to them; I called the young ladies in the morning, and Miss Helen always answered me; she was first up; Augusta laid longer; I would sometimes call her again; I have heard them talking in their room of a night; I stopped at Mrs. Cunningham's room as I went to bed of a night; she was always in her room when I came; Mr. Eckel, George Snodgrass and the young ladies would be there; I never saw Dr. Burdell there but once, when he was giving some man directions about a grate, just before New Year's, and Miss Augusta was angry, for she was dressing at the time; never saw the Doctor sit in the parlor except with his patients; I have seen Mrs. Cunningham go into the Doctor's room on business; the Doctor would not lock his office door of an evening when at home, but he always locked it when he went out; the door of his bedroom was always locked inside; she always locked the door of her own room when Augusta, Helen and Snodgrass had left; there were only two beds on the Doctor's floor; I know of Miss Helen's sickness and Miss Augusta's; they both slept with their mother only one night; the young ladies generally spent their evening in the parlor; they generally were all there until bedtime; I remember a disturbance in the house on the Saturday before the murder; I was washing the front oilcloth and I heard a great noise in the Doctor's room, and it attracted the attention of the people outside; the Doctor rushed past me and called out: "My God what am I to do with these people, they will at last have my life;" he then went out and returned in about ten minutes and went up to his office; there was a little more noise, but not so very loud; shortly after some man came inquiring for Dr. Burdell, saying he wished to see him immediately; I told the Doctor, and he went down to the front door to him; while he was there Augusta came down stairs and went into the parlor where Helen was, and said something to her; Helen came out and said, "Oh, Doctor, for God's sake come in and come up stairs, and I will get my mother to give you up those papers;" the Doctor went up direct, and I heard no more noise; the Doctor did not mention the affair to me; I was never present when he spoke to Hannah; this was at half-past four o'clock on Saturday; I went to bed that night earlier than usual, for they were all late and there was some confusion; Mrs. Cunningham came and told us to go to bed at twenty minutes to nine o'clock; I told her I wanted to do my work, but she told me I could do it in the morning; she went away and came back and begged us to go to bed, remarking; "I don't want no muss here;" I said I did not know what you mean; Mrs. Cunningham said she had reference to the Doctor, and that Hannah knew all about it; we then went to bed, and the time was exactly quarter-past nine; never had gone to bed in that house so early before.

The witness then narrated the circumstance of George Snodgrass letting the Doctor in late at night, when high words took place between them; she next morning heard some conversation at the breakfast table in reference to the disturbance of the preceding evening; Mrs. Cunningham said that George Snodgrass could have the Doctor arrested for the language he used to him last night; Miss Helen and the children said he was a "cross old devil;" Eckel said he deserved a good knock-down; they had a further conversation on Tuesday morning; Eckel laid down his knife and fork, and rubbing his hands, said, "By jingo, would not I like to be at the stringing up of that old fellow, if I had not to pull too hard at the cord;" on the Wednesday I left, Mrs. Cunningham came into the bath-room where I was, and she says: "Mary, I wish you to come here and be a witness as to what I am going to give the Doctor;" she told me it was for some money she was going to pay him, and that he was such a cheat he might deny it; she then knocked at the Doctor's office door and he came out, and she handed him a paper which she said was a $20 bill, and he said "very well," and he shut the door, and that was the last I ever saw of him; I have seen Mrs. Cunningham go in and out of his room; she had a key that fitted it; he said he was going into the country; when I went in Augusta and Mrs. Cunningham were at the safe reading papers, and Mrs. C said "never mind, you can dust another time;" after I had been about a week there, I was in the Doctor's bed room, and I heard some women call him a vagabond of a man, and I heard another voice say, "You infamous bad woman;" I then heard a scuffle, and he turned her out of the door; Mrs. Cunningham then came into the bed-room much flushed, and asked me if I had seen the Doctor take a gun out of that closet, and I said "No;" she said he was a dangerous bad man; I said if he kept guns I should be afraid of him, and I asked her what it was about; she said "he wants to bring a woman of bad character here, and I don't like her to associate with my daughters;" she said, "he is a desperate, passionate man, but I am the woman who can manage him;" refreshments have been sent up to the Doctor, which he refused, as he had had his dinner; she talked little to me about the Doctor; she always said no one could manage him but herself; I said to her, "Perhaps if he was married, and had a wife to guide him, he would not behave so;" she replied, "Tant she would pity the woman who got him, as he was so cross;" this was about a month before I left; I saw no one pull the Doctor's hair, but heard that it was done; I saw Mrs. Cunningham last Tuesday at Bellevue Hospital; she spoke very kindly to me—asked me if she had not been kind to me, and I said "Yes;" I told her, in reply to a question from her, that I had lighted a fire in the attic the Saturday before the murder; I never saw any impropriety in the family; Helen and Mrs. Cunningham came up, and asked me where Hannah Conlan lived, and I gave the address; I never saw the Doctor and Mrs. Cunningham go out together; Eckel and she went often out together by themselves; never heard her called anything but Mrs. Cunningham.

To the Surrogate—Mrs. Cunningham rose in the morning before Augusta

Cross-examined by Judge Dean—Mrs. Cunningham did not tell me that she came to see me because she had heard I had something on my mind; I have said so to others; I went to the NEW-YORK TIMES office, and told them that George Snodgrass knew who committed the murder, from his expressions; never heard that they had offered a reward of $5,000; I went there to tell them that George Snodgrass said he expected to swing along with them.

Q.—How did you come to go to the TIMES? A.—Because it was not asked me on the stand before, and it was on my mind what Snodgrass said; I told it to Mr. Edwards in the District-Attorney's office, and he wrote it down; I went to the Herald office, but did not know that they had offered a reward; George Snodgrass must tell with whom he expected to swing; I told the editor of the TIMES George Snodgrass' expressions.

Q.—Did you tell the editor of TIMES that George Snodgrass committed the murder and admitted it to you? A.—No.

Q.—Did you say anything about the reward? A.—No, Sir; I said that from his expressions he must have known about it; I left the Wednesday evening before the murder a little before seven; I promised to come back at ten o'clock if I possibly could; I could not do so; I went to do my shopping; I stopped at Mrs. Montgomery's, that night; she lives in Spring-st., between Varick and Hudson; it was a respectable house, but she kept too many boarders; I stopped there until Sunday morning; I never left the house but once, and that was on an errand for her; no man ever came to see me; Mrs. Cunningham had not discharged me, and had paid me my wages all but a few shillings; I was sick, and, therefore, did not send her word; I expected Mrs. Burdell to get a girl in my place; I never threatened to break the Doctor's head. (To Judge Dean—You ought to be ashamed of yourself.) [Laughter.] I was the chambermaid; Mrs. Burdell occupied the front room, third story, all the time I was there; her daughters did not sleep there; her bedroom was used as a sitting room for the whole family; I never lit a fire in Eckel's bedroom except on Sunday; there was no grate in Snodgrass' room; there was no fire made but once in the young ladies' room, and it would not go right; they kept a large number of birds in Mrs. Cunningham's room; Mr. Eckel used to take care of them when they were in the basement, and also when they were up stairs, assisted by Mrs. Cunningham; they were Eckel's property; I guess Hannah went to bed the first, and then the little boys; the Doctor occupied a double bed, which had two mattresses; slats were under the straw mattress; he had his pillows middling high; he had a bolster and a pillow; I have observed his pillows to be as high up in the bed; Eckel's was a handsome bed, with two pillows and a hard mattress; Mrs. Cunningham's bed was a mattress until I carried up the feather bed from the little room down stairs; Mrs. Snodgrass and her husband had not been there visiting before I moved the feather bed up stairs, but afterwards; they slept in Mrs. Cunningham's room; during all the time that I was there Mr. Ullmann occupied the back room of the third story; some of his trunks were kept in the little room between his own and Mrs. Cunningham's; I think there was no window looking from that closet into Mrs. Cunningham's room; I never since God made me have looked through that window to see what was going on into Mrs. Cunningham's or Ullman's room; there is a passage between Mr. Ullman's and Mrs. Cunningham's room containing closets which they divided between them; I never saw a key between Mr. Ullman's mattresses; I remarked to Hannah about Eckel's bed being undisturbed; they were all iron keys on the floor occupied by Mrs. Cunningham; Dr. Roberts was at No. 31 Bond-street on the Sunday before the murder, but he was not in company with Burdell, who had been away at Brooklyn all that day; I never saw Dr. Burdell in the parlor except when he went in with his patients; he might come in, in office hours, to tell me something about having no fire in the front parlor; Dr. Burdell and Mrs. Burdell would sometimes be sitting in the parlor with ladies; she would be talking to the Doctor, but I never noticed what they said; they were talking pleasantly; gentlemen and ladies sometimes came in the evening, but I never saw the Doctor in two parlor; a very tall gentlemen would come sometimes after dark to see the Doctor; I think he was there twice and missed him; Mrs. Cunningham, I know, went into the Doctor's room very often, and once he fixed a tooth for her; his bedroom door was always locked, and the key on the inside; Mrs. Cunningham took charge of the Doctor's clothes; the Doctor was a good deal in the kitchen to see after the frozen pipes and the mice; he came to see about me when I fainted; when he came down to see about Hannah's closet he complained of its disorder; he would look all round when he came down, and find fault about things; Hannah and he had a difficulty and very hard words about the pipes; I complained of the Doctor being cross in not allowing me to get water; I had no worse with him, but sometimes he would get angry, and Mrs. Cunningham would tell me not to mind him; I had not been well and went down for a scuttle of coal, and a fainting fit came over me; I had had one glass of bad brandy that day and made it into punch; the Doctor picked me up; he asked me if I had been drinking, and I told him I was ill, and that I had taken one glass of bad brandy, and made it into punch; Hannah had to help the Doctor to raise me, for I was fainting dead over; I heard him ask in the cellar, "had I been drinking?" I don't know whether the soup that the Doctor refused was eaten; it was the same soup that was used that day by the rest of the family; the Doctor had been complaining of cold, and Mrs. Cunningham sent him some soup, as she thought he would not go out; but the Doctor said he had dined; Eckel said, in relation to the Doctor's quarrel with Snodgrass, that he deserved a good knock-down, if it could be done handy; they were all there on Tuesday but Snodgrass, and Miss Augusta said "That cross old fellow," and Eckel made the remark "Bejabus, &c.;" I thought it was in play, rather than earnest; all seemed to join in the laugh; the first person I told this to was the Coroner; this was after I was sworn; I know the Coroner to my cost; I lived at Captain Dilks'; he made no charge against me; I was charged with stealing when I was there.

Q.—Where did you go after you were discharged A.—To Mr. John McGill's, in Washington-street, and stopped there two nights; I then went to a German lady in Leonard-street; I stopped there one night; I then went to Mrs. Montgomery, and stopped there six nights; from there I went to Bellevue; Mrs. Burdell never discharged me for intoxication, but for stopping out one night; she brought another girl in; I never went down on my knees to her, to ask her to let me stay; I asked her to let me stay; I am not in the habit of drinking; now and again I use it, but never in my places.

Q.—Are you not in the habit of getting intoxicated? A.—No; I may have been intoxicated, but am not in the habit of getting drunk.

Q.—When Mr. Eckel said "By jingo," &c., what answer did Mrs. Cunningham give? A. No, she only laughed; Miss Helen called him a "cross old devil" before that; they were all present; perhaps it was Miss Augusta who said that; I rather think it was Miss Augusta; I think he was called a "cross old devil" on Tuesday; I told the Coroner that Miss Helen used the expression to the Doctor when he went out for a policeman and returned, "For God's sake."

Judge Dean, (reading from report of the DAILY TIMES)—"Q.—What did she say? A.—If you come up stairs along with me I will get my mother to give you them papers." Did you swear so before the Coroner? A.—I am not responsible that the reporters don't take it down right; Miss Helen said, I know, "for God's sake;" I never heard that the Doctor and Mrs. Cunningham were going to be married when I was there; he never asked me to watch Mrs. Cunningham and Mr. Eckel.

The Court here adjourned till to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Deniny again on Trial—No Jury yet Obtained—New Panel Summoned.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.
Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

The case of Thomas Deniny was brought before the Court yesterday for the fourth time. The readers of the TIMES need scarcely be informed that Deniny is charged with arson—that he was tried in January last, and that eleven Jurors decided to convict him, while one, a Freemason, with whom, as it was alleged, Deniny exchanged the Masonic sign, held out for thirty-six hours for his acquittal, the result being that the Jury was discharged, and the prisoner was sent back to prison; also that Deniny was afterwards said to be the ringleader of a party of prisoners in the Tombs, who had conspired to murder the Keepers and break jail,—that he tried to tamper with the Jurors of the March and April terms,—that in the May term he was searched in Court for concealed weapons, as he had threatened to kill the District-Attorney and the Fire Marshal, and that after two panels of Jurors were exhausted, twelve men could not be found who had not formed an opinion of his guilt—all these things must be fresh in the recollection of our readers.

Mr. Richard Busteed, senior counsel for Deniny, commenced proceedings, yesterday, by addressing the Court on the subject of the trial. At the last term of the Court he said Deniny was placed at that bar for trial, a previous trial having resulted in the disagreement of the Jury. Some difficulty—he used the word in its general sense—some difficulty occurred in impannelling the Jury. On the first day the panel was exhausted and a Jury was not obtained. A fresh panel of fifty was called, of whom some twenty only answered. There were eleven jurors sworn, after the forms of challenging had been gone through with, some seven or eight peremptory challenges, out of the twenty that were his right, having been resorted to by the prisoner. The District Attorney then moved the Court for leave to discharge the Jurors so sworn and impanneled in the cause, and, against the earnest protest of the prisoner's counsel, this extraordinary and unprecedented course was carried into execution. The prisoner's counsel offered to the Court to withdraw the peremptory challenge to the last juror, so that the panel might be completed. This offer was refused by the District Attorney. We then offered that any jury should be selected from the court room and sworn, but this was also refused. Notwithstanding all their offers, the jury was dismissed. He (Mr. Busteed) now rose to state these facts to the Court. The minutes of the Clerk of the Court would show that eleven jurors were impanneled and sworn, and yet, against the prisoner's consent, those eleven were dismissed. These were grave facts. If he was not greatly mistaken in his conception of the law, he was quite satisfied that his brethren of the legal profession would agree with him, that there was no right resident in the Court to impannel a jury up to a certain point, and then dismiss them. Feeling the vast importance and responsibility of his position, he was compelled to present the facts to his Honor. He moved to have the case postponed for the term, until he could have an opportunity to see what remedy the prisoner had for the unparalleled conduct of the District Attorney. He was not ready to proceed with the trial.

The Recorder replied, that where a jury was not actually impannelled, it was in the discretion of the Court to discharge them; and in the instance in question, he thought that discretion had been very judiciously exercised. There was no jury, in fact, until twelve men were sworn. The case must go on.

Mr. Busteed rejoined, that Judge Morris in the Supreme Court had held that no power to discharge a jury, under such circumstances, was lodged in any Court.

The Recordor remarked, that if the Court erred in its ruling, the prisoner had his remedy.

Mr. Busteed desired the Court to note his exceptions, and the ground on which he had taken them.

The work of calling and challenging Jurors then commenced. When a Juror thus called stated that he had not read the newspaper accounts of the previous trial, and of the alleged attempt to break jail, tamper with Jurors, and threaten the life of the District-Attorney, Mr. Busteed said to him: "Suppose you had read this, would it have influenced you against the prisoner?" This mode of challenge proceeded for some time, until, at length, the District-Attorney arose to object. The Court required Mr. Busteed to reduce his question to writing, which he did, as follows:

Q.—Assuming that it had been published in the newspapers of the day, and alleged against the prisoner that he was a man of most dangerous character, and had endeavored to corrupt a former jury by means of Masonic communications with them, and had headed a revolt of prisoners in the jail, with the intention to escape and murder the keepers, and that upon his being brought ironed into court he had to be searched to see if he had weapons upon him, he having threatened to murder the District-Attorney, would such allegations and statements made in influential and respectable newspapers circulated in the county, create in your mind any bias or prejudices against the prisoner?

The Recorder sustained the District Attorney's objection to Mr. Busteed's right to put such a question to a juror as a ground of challenge. Mr. Busteed excepted to His Honor's ruling.

The challenging for Jurors went on, the above question being omitted. Altogether 61 jurors were called. Of those 18 were absent, and were fined $25 each; 32 were challenged for principal cause and to the favor; and 13 were peremptorily challenged. When the panel was exhausted, only 8 had been obtained, whose names are as follows:

John B. Wetterau, Tenth Ward.
Francis Colsey, Twenty-Second Ward.
Thomas J. Curtis, Ninth Ward.
Lawrence P. Mott, Seventh Ward.
James P. Travers, Eighth Ward.
Simon Cohn, First Ward.
John V. Luff, Twenty-First Ward.
George Blakeley, Ninth Ward.

The panel being exhausted, the Court was asked for an order for an additional panel of 100 Jurors for Wednesday morning. The order was given, and the case went over to Wednesday. The Court adjourned to 11 o'clock this morning.

The Police war, we may remark, has reached the Court of Sessions. What shape it has assumed will be seen under the proper head.

RE

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, TUESDAY, JUNE 9, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

We receive dates from Utah to the last of April. BRIGHAM YOUNG had set out on his promised expedition to the North, accompanied by Presidents KIMBALL and WELLS. The tour will extend into Oregon. A scientific corps is attached to the expedition, to observe the mountain ranges and the physical geography of the region to be traversed. On the 22d of April, there was a grand departure of Mormon missionaries from Salt Lake City. They are assigned to fields of proselyting labor in the United States, the British Provinces, Europe and Africa. They eschew mules and horses and adopt BRIGHAM'S suggestions for a hand-cart journey over the Plains. The Mormon militia had been carefully reorganized. Great rejoicings were expressed that Mormonism was rapidly progressing.

It is stated, on the authority of a private letter, received in Washington from a source in Kansas entitled to the most implicit confidence, that at least three fourths of the present settlers in the Territory are in favor of making it a Free State, the number including nearly one half of the emigrants from the slaveholding States.

Capt. DAVIS' official account of the recent proceedings in Nicaragua, with particulars of the surrender of WALKER, is published. The Captain expresses indignation at WALKER's imputations upon his honor and that of his officers.

Gen. WALKER and suite arrived at Louisville yesterday. There was no public demonstration on the occasion, and none was anticipated during his stay.

In the Board of Aldermen last evening, a resolution was passed transferring Justice DAVISON from Jefferson Market to Yorkville, on the ground that he is a Republican, and has recognized the Metropolitan Police Commissioners. The Committee on Streets presented a report, declaring all the late contracts for cleaning streets void, with the exception of the Sixteenth and Nineteenth Wards; recommending immediate advertising for proposals, and that the City Inspector clean the streets, under proper restriction, until the new proposals can be opened. The report was recommitted. The accounts of Mr. H. H. HOWARD were examined by Messrs. TUCKER, BLUNT and FULMER, gentlemen attached to opposing political parties, and declared strictly correct. The manner in which he conducted the business office was recommended as an example to office holders. The Board meets again to-night, and will continue to meet every evening until the matter of cleaning the streets is disposed of. The report in favor of purchasing two steam fire engines for the Lower Wards was referred to the Fire Department Committee.

The Board of Councilmen, last evening, authorized the issue of bonds for the purchase of the State Arsenal property in the Central Park, for the sum of $275,000. The report of the Committee on cleaning streets was taken from the table, and on Thursday the Committee will report further, and the necessary specifications will be presented for approval. A full amount of routine business was transacted. Some curious developments came out as to the way in which contractors systematically and artfully combine for divided shares of the plunder of the public.

The Supervisors, last evening, passed Coroner CONNERY's bill for expenses incurred in defending himself against the charge of improper conduct while in the discharge of his duties. It was claimed that the vote was not constitutional, and that the Comptroller would refuse to pay the bill.

Recorder SMITH has again opposed himself to the Mayor's violation of law in good earnest. There are ten Policemen detailed for duty in the Court of General Sessions, and he has ranked such of the old force as stood by the Mayor and the City Judge. His application to the new Commissioners for a squad of men who recognized the Albany law, and were no longer willing to be creatures of His Honor the Mayor, was promptly complied with, and yesterday they appeared in Court, some in the new uniform and some in citizens' costume. It is expected that the City Judge will interfere in the matter.

The buildings at Seguina's Point progress slowly, the materials being but partly delivered. No difficulty has occurred, and the Policemen though on their guard against a surprise, are cultivating friendly relations with the Islanders, and are all in excellent spirits. The four buoys describing the bounds of the Quarantine anchorage, were put down yesterday; the nearest buoy is three miles from any oyster bed, and nearly two miles from the nearest land of Staten Island.

Thirty-one men of the Twenty-first and ten men of the Seventeenth Ward Police forces declared last evening for the Metropolitan Police Commissioners. The old Board removed Capt. SPEIGHT, of the Twenty-first, yesterday, and appointed WM. ROBINSON, hitherto detailed as a Clerk at the Chief's office, in his place. Capt. SPEIGHT has opened new quarters in Broadway, near Thirty-third-street. Inspector HART called the roll of the Metropolitan Police of the Seventeenth Ward, at the corner of Bowery and Third-street, last evening. Eleven men answered to their names.

The Committee on tunneling Broadway met yesterday, but did nothing except adjourning to Wednesday.

The BRADELL investigation was resumed yesterday before the Surrogate. HUGH CROMBIE, a Deputy Sheriff, who had apprehended Dr. BURDELL at the suit of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM, stated that while in company with the Doctor he had informed him that Mrs. CUNNINGHAM and himself had often visited houses of assignation together, and he had remunerated her as it was his custom to do other women. MARY DONOHUE was then called and corroborated the testimony of HANNAH, the cook, in some particulars. She most emphatically denied that she was in the habit of using intoxicating liquors, and that she was not discharged from Mrs. CUNNINGHAM's employ on that account. She distinctly states that Mrs. CUNNINGHAM and the Doctor never occupied the same chamber, and that she never knew they were engaged, or about to be married. A large portion of her evidence had relation to the violent and ungovernable temper of the Doctor, Mrs. CUNNINGHAM stating that she alone could manage him.

The trial of THOMAS DENINY, for the third time, for arson, commenced yesterday in the Court of General Sessions. On his first trial, in January, eleven of the Jury stood for conviction and one for acquittal, that one, it was alleged, being a Mason, to whom DENINY had given the Masonic sign. In April he was to have been tried, but it was discovered that he had tried to tamper with the Jury. In May, he was put on trial, but after exhausting two panels of Jurors, twelve men who had not formed an opinion in his case could not be found. Yesterday, out of a panel of 61 Jurors, eight were obtained. A fresh panel of 100 Jurors was ordered for Wednesday, to make up the other four.

JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, Esq., was late last night lying very low, and not expected to live till morning.

A married woman, named ELIZA SHAW, was found dead, with her throat cut, in the yard of her residence in First-avenue, yesterday morning. A Coroner's Jury is sitting upon the body. The husband of deceased is in custody on suspicion of committing the murder.

The five assistant storekeepers who had in charge the Bonded Warehouse in Brooklyn that was burned last week, were dismissed yesterday. The Collector has sent on a report to Washington of the whole matter. Congress will probably be asked to relieve the sufferers by this fire, as Uncle Sam insists that he is not in fault, though his agents were.

A Jury in the Brooklyn City Court, yesterday, awarded a verdict of $10,000 against ANDREW J. CONSELYEA for the seduction of ELIZA P. SMITH. The suit was brought by the father, AL SMITH. TIMOTHY O'MEARA, a witness for the defence, was held in $2,500, to answer a charge of perjury.

The Good and Evil of an Impartial Position.

For many years past the London Examiner, whose first Editor (now enjoying a pension from the Government of Queen VICTORIA) was sent to prison for a disagreeable criticism upon the abdominal proportions of the Prince Regent, has fought all manner of abuses, and all kinds of unsound opinions, under a banner inscribed with the following motto, from the works of DANIEL DEFOE: "If I might give a short hint to an impartial writer, it would be, to tell him his fate. If he resolved to venture upon the dangerous precipice of telling unbiased truth, let him proclaim war with mankind, neither to give nor to take quarter. If he tells the crimes of great men, they fall upon him with the iron hands of the law; if he tells them of virtues, when they have any, then the mob attacks him with slander. But if he regards truth, let him expect martyrdom on both sides, and then he may go on fearless; and this is the course I take myself."

Poverty and the pillory rewarded the honest and high-minded perseverance of the brave and single-hearted DEFOE. The Examiner, fallen upon more fortunate days, has won its way to prestige and to favor, treading in his footsteps.

Elevating the same standard of even-handed impartiality, the TIMES, naturally enough, has undergone an experience of mingled good and ill. We are not surprised that some of our Southern contemporaries should interpret (as does, for instance, the New-Orleans Bee) an assumption of an absolutely independent position in the world of journalism into a tacit admission of the actual decline and approaching downfall of the "Republican" cause in the Northern States. Nor are we seriously amazed that some of our Northern colleagues (whose names it is hardly worth while for us to specify) should infer from the approbation bestowed by us upon those acts of the existing Administration which have seemed to us to be dictated by a proper perception of the needs of the public service and a sound national policy, that the TIMES has been bought with gold to be the organ of President BUCHANAN and the Democratic Party.

When we find it necessary to condemn in the sharpest terms the extravagant and insolent conduct of a petty official of the United States Courts in connection with an affair growing out of the Law for the arrest of Fugitive Slaves, we are prepared to hear ourselves denounced as the most fanatical of Abolitionists—and when we feel compelled to support the National Executive in what we believe to be his sincere attempts to pacify the excited population of Kansas, and to do justice to the injured settlers of that Territory, we should be surprised indeed if we were not placarded as flat traitors to the cause of freedom, and as insidious foes to the principles which we hold and shall forever hold to be the substantial basis of our national greatness, prosperity and honor. But we are so well satisfied of the imperative nature of the duty imposed upon us as public journalists—that we shall not be deterred from perseverance in the course upon which we have entered by any extravagant concern about the opinions of friends or foes. We have already begun to reap the practical advantages of that course, in the liberty of action and of comment which it has secured to us upon many questions of passing but pressing importance.

With regard to the Quarantine difficulty, for instance, the policy of the TIMES may challenge, we are sure, the closest investigation. When the report of the Commissioners was first published we accepted the action of those officers as likely, in the main, to have been governed by a careful regard to the public interests. When that action was arraigned by competent and respectable persons as hasty and unsatisfactory, we were restrained by no party ties from an immediate investigation of the matter; and on arriving at a conclusion unfavorable to the selection which had been made of a site for the new Lazaretto, we were the first to state that conclusion, and to call upon the Commissioners for a revision of their proceedings.

We hold that such a course as this is the only course proper to be pursued by a Metropolitan journal which aims at educating, and at guiding the public opinion of a great and intelligent community, and weighing against the temporary evils of misconstruction and misrepresentation the permanent good of usefulness and of influence. We find better reason in this case than we have ever found in any other for doubting that the inspirations of sound principle are identical with dictates of intelligent policy.

The Temporary Quarantine.

We have heretofore called attention to the manifest unsuitableness of the site chosen by the Quarantine Commission for the temporary fever hospital. The apologists for the Commissioners have heretofore refused to argue the question, on the ground that, however unsuitable, all other points had been found much more so. A correspondent shows, from the letter of the Chairman of the Commission, which we published on Saturday, that no other point can ever have been really considered by them at all, and that the objections they allege to other positions are equally imaginary with the advantages they supposed, from their first hasty glance at the locality, that they had found at Seguine's Point. After the rejection of their proposals by the New-Jersey Legislature, they were called upon to make an almost immediate decision, and we presume that they were not a little influenced in their choice by the supposition, confidently expressed in Mr. HALL's letter, that local interests would be less injuriously affected at Seguine's Point than elsewhere. Before their error was discovered their secret purchase had been made, and they had gone too far to change their plans in the expenditure of the fund appropriated to their use.

It turns out not to be true, however, as we have been heretofore assured, that the Commissioners have not thought of making use of Seguine's Point for other than a temporary fever hospital. A certified copy of the original report of the Commissioners, from the office of the Secretary of State, in which it recommends the purchase of the Wolfe Farm, has been placed in our hands, from which it appears that while they proposed to build only temporary hospitals this Summer, they also contemplated the possibility of using the locality permanently, and that they had conceived rather extensive plans under that head. "Warehouses for infectious cargoes," observed the Commissioners, "can be built upon the sand-flats running far out into the bay, and extending from the Great Kills to Seguine's Point," (a distance of nearly four miles.) In conclusion, however, the Commissioners report to the Governor that should experience demonstrate that it would be inexpedient to locate the Quarantine establishment permanently at the Point, the property can, in their opinion, be sold without loss.

Such an experiment, as an experiment merely, must be either useless or cruel. Danger from yellow fever infection is not annual and certain. Some years the Quarantine establishment might be located, without much danger, at Castle Garden. Would the success of such an experiment prove the expediency of using that salubrious and convenient site as a permanent Quarantine ground? It is precisely this uncertainty which makes the retention of the Quarantine at its present position most dangerous. From the building of the hospitals until 1848, if we recollect rightly, the neighborhood had suffered but little from their vicinity. In consequence of this our citizens naturally were led to regard the Quarantine as presenting but very slight objection to a residence on that beautiful and convenient part of Staten Island. A dense population consequently had gradually grown up about the Station, and when in 1848, the fever came in a malignant form, notwithstanding a general dispersion was soon effected of all those who could afford to fly, nearly two hundred deaths occurred in the vicinity in a single month.

It is obviously dangerous to place the Quarantine in any position which has in its immediate vicinity attractions for increasing population, either for purposes of business or residence. The vicinity of Seguine's Point possesses both in a remarkable and peculiar manner, while a perusal of our correspondent's comments upon Mr. HALL's letter will lead to the opinion that such is not the case at either of the other sites supposed to have been examined by the Commission.

With the knowledge the Commission must by this time have gained of the unsuitableness of the site they have taken, we do not doubt that, should yellow fever make its appearance in a malignant form, they would at once abandon it. The letter of Mr. HALL while it shows how hastily the determination of the Commission was formed, also proves the necessity the Commission is under to respect the judgment of public opinion.

Let the Staten Islanders then be reassured. Threats and lawless acts can only damage their cause. The chance that malignant yellow fever will spread beyond the hospital is less than one in ten, in any particular year. If the danger should occur this year, the Commission is composed of men who certainly are mortal, and are liable to hasty errors of judgment, but who have also proved themselves, by lives of honor and usefulness, not without humanity and prudence, and who certainly will not be deaf to the demands of a respectable public opinion.

An American Jenkins.

We regret to say that an American variety of the unlovely species Jenkins has been discovered in Paris. The British Jenkins, indigenous to the Morning Post, is not an edifying animal, certainly, but he is at least inoffensive. His imbecilities are not dashed with insolence and imposture. He is a strictly anonymous absurdity. He asserts for himself no personal value, and he takes nobody's name in vain, to swell the pomp of his own parade. He is Jenkins et præterea nihil.

But the American Jenkins, upon whom our eye has just now fortunately fallen, is an obtrusive and aggressive Jenkins. He meddles with matters too mighty for him. He is not content with admiring the decencies and glories of his life. He undertakes to vilify respectable men who refuse to do reverence to the idols whom he worships. He blasphemes and abuses. He is uproarious and annoying. And to all these evil qualities he adds the baser traits of forgery and false pretence.

For consider his conduct. There lives in Paris a decent, well-conducted citizen of the State of Virginia, FRANCIS P. CORBIN by name—a person conspicuous neither by family, fortune nor personal character, who has resided for some time in the French capital as so many other foreigners there reside, quietly, unostentatiously, comfortably—occasionally indulging himself in the innocent recreation of figuring as one of the managers at an "American ball"—and sometimes entering a horse at one of the races of the Chantilly or the Champ de Mars. A more unpretending career than that of this gentleman cannot easily be imagined. With no connections and no relations in America binding him to the movement of public affairs at home, and no qualities commanding for him an influential station abroad, Mr. FRANCIS P CORBIN has led a placid and amusing life in Paris. American visitors to that city have met him, perhaps, at a financial dinner, or a fête champêtre; they have heard of him as of so many more whose names it would be invidious here to mention since the wicked "Jenkins" has as yet forborne to intrude on their privacy; but it never occurred to any one to accuse him of thrusting himself unduly forward, or of putting himself into a position to which he had no claim, until a few years since when the atrocious Jenkins villainously assumed his name and signature for the purpose of attracting public attention to a ridiculous correspondence between himself and the celebrated Lord HOWDEN, of Spanish notoriety.

Mr. CORBIN, being a modest and placable person, forgave this escapade of "Jenkins," and shrank from the publicity of a contradiction. He made a great mistake. The Jenkinses are ungrateful by constitution.

Encouraged by his previous impunity, Jenkins has seized the occasion of the visit of Senator SUMNER to Paris, for another display of his inherent qualities. Fancying that the party to which Senator SUMNER belongs is in the decline on our side of the Atlantic, Jenkins has attempted to gratify the powers that be, by a preposterous and impertinent protest against the invitation extended to the Massachusetts Senator by the American merchants in Paris. Jenkins does not pretend to be a merchant—not he! Once more he steals the good name of the inoffensive Mr. CORBIN, and over his signature addresses a letter to Galignani's Messenger, in which he speaks of a Senator of the United States as "a Mr. Charles Sumner of Massachusetts," and insinuates a charge of "pecuniary objects" against that distinguished gentleman. He takes it upon himself, also, to speak slightingly of the "Northern and Eastern States of the Union," generally exults, exuberates and programizes after the manner of his tribe.

Bitterly do we lament that Mr. CORBIN's previous good nature should have emboldened this hapless flunky to such a renewal of his disgraceful feats. We have the honor of the American name too dearly at heart not to feel ourselves outraged by such a display, in the capital of European civilization, of the worst and most contemptible traits of the American Jenkins. We have our Jenkinses. The fact is melancholy, but undeniable. But we have always done our best to hush them up "in the family." And we do most sincerely trust that the injured Virginian, who has been made the stalking-horse of this particular and most pernicious Jenkins, will take immediate steps to unmask the impostor and to bring him to condign punishment.

Plug-Uglies and Foreigners.

The American Party have been deploring the increased contempt for law manifested in various parts of the Union, as something resulting, inevitably resulting, from the growth of the foreign element of the population. "Foreign crime and pauperism" are also placed in the same category with sectional agitation, squatter sovereignty, &c., and distinctly set down as amongst the things which all good citizens should set to work, might and main, to abolish. We have had here in New-York so many injuries wrought us by the foreign element in our population that we can hardly be suspected of any undue or unjustifiable partiality for it. We have a foreign yoke upon us, and we know to our cost how heavily it sits upon us, and we have more than once given utterance in these columns, to the best of our ability, to the grosns of the public under its affliction. We have in this country heard a great deal about the wrongs of Ireland, and we have taken various opportunities of expressing our opinion that Irish political agitators were the fittest persons to govern that country, and that England was unjust as well mistaken in meddling in the matter. We commend to the lovers of "special providences" the change which has come over the spirit of our own dream since the first outburst of our pro-Irish enthusiasm. Old and Young Ireland finding the Parliament in College-green not to be had, have transferred their great administrative abilities to the latitude of New-York, and have now for a few years been holding up this City to the world as an example of what Ireland might be if the blood-thirsty Saxons had no hand in its management.

Nevertheless, strange as it may appear, with our backs smarting under the rods of our Celtic tyrants, we are prepared to take exception to the doctrines of a sect which can ascribe the prevailing lawlessness to foreign immigration, and finds incentives to crime in the naturalization laws. To assert that the law-breaking and law-defying spirit which has of late years so frequently manifested itself, and is daily inspiring greater fear amongst all sincere lovers of the Union, is the work of foreigners, or bears any necessary connection with the facility with which persons of foreign birth are admitted to the rights of citizens, is to set at nought all that is known and observed of crime and its manifestations. Habitual, direct and daring violations of the law, are, as is well known, nowhere so common as in that portion of the Union most purely American. Baltimore itself is the head-quarters of Americanism—the city in which foreigners exert least political influence, and are most thoroughly kept in subjection—and yet it is a notorious fact that that city has now been for years in the hands of the most brutal and disorderly mob by which any civilized community, since the days of the Terrorists, has ever been disgraced. That particular portion of America, at least, is ruled by Americans, but what a rule, and what Americans! The constituted authorities—the creatures of the Constitution and the ballot-box—there hold a feeble and decrepid sway only when the "Plug-Uglies" happen to be too busy, or too hungry, or too lazy to perform the work of government themselves. The law creeps out and speaks in feeble and deprecatory accents when its deadliest enemies have nothing particular to say, but at no other time. The police are in the streets on sufferance. When the "Plug-Uglies" sleep, the baton makes itself respected, but when the rowdies carve out work for themselves society is at their mercy.

Having effectually mastered the great stronghold of Americanism itself, the apostles of native government seem to have time and energy enough left to act as propagandists of the new creed in the surrounding districts. It must be confessed, there is about native crime, and ruffianism, a boldness and audacity of which the wretched foreigners who so seriously menace our institutions are utterly incapable. Foreigners are at least content with waging war against society in the immediate neighborhood of their own domiciles. If they assault or intimidate voters, it is when the polls are in the neighborhood of their own dens. If their presence be a nuisance, it is a nuisance which spreads slowly, and is local in its operation. It causes little trouble to keep out of its range. They are to our American rowdies what the mock auctioneers or ticket swindlers are to the Highlander or Mahratta. A little prudence can preserve one's purse from the darts of the one, but who can save himself from the raids of the other? If one wants to keep clear of the Irish or Germans, he need only avoid New-York; but to escape the "Plug Uglies" it will not do to absent one's self from Baltimore. These pillars of the State, these props of society for whose special benefit this country is asked to make itself a sort of private pleasure-ground, or close borough, march in armed bodies over the railroads, desolate the metropolis with fire and sword, prove the incapacity of foreigners to handle our institutions by the indiscriminate massacre of legal voters, and vindicate American respect for the law by firing volleys into the United States troops acting under orders of the Mayor of the Federal capital. We can only say that if "Know-Nothingism" mean an extension of such organizations as "Plug-Uglyism," if it mean the assimilation of other cities to Baltimore, and the diffusion through the Union of such notions regarding the proper mode of redressing grievances as seem to prevail in Maryland, we know of no form of party which we do not consider vastly preferable. This disposition on the part of every knot of conspirators who find they cannot peaceably fashion the world after their own notions of fitness, to rise in armed insurrection, and to set law and Government at defiance, lately become so prevalent, is unhappily not confined to men of any particular race. It is a wise fact, spreading through all classes, and spreading fastest in that portion of the Union in which the beauties or miseries of Slavery have kept the Anglo-American race freest from all foreign taint. The American party, or any other party, which makes it its business to denounce mob law and local rebellion by whomsoever created or abetted, shall have our heartiest support; but if there be anything against which the people of this country need at this crisis to be warned, it is against attempts to turn public scandals and abuses, for which the whole nation is responsible, into weapons of party warfare, and to use honest prejudices and patriotic devotion not for purposes of reform, but for the fostering of faction and the spread of dissension.

ANOTHER BREAK-DOWN IN STREET-CLEANING.—Broadway was to have been cleaned last night by private contract, a certain number of the merchants of that great thoroughfare having subscribed the necessary amount to pay for sweeping it for a fortnight. But a strange fatality attends all street-cleaning projects in this dirt-besmeared metropolis. Mr. SMITH, the contractor, appeared with his carts in Broadway last night, ready to commence operations; but all the operatives he had engaged to assist in his Augean undertaking deserted him, from fear of being knocked on the head by those influential persons who, from some inscrutable reason, have made up their minds that the streets of New-York shall not be cleaned. One courageous Dutchman, it seems, who probably did not understand English sufficiently well to know the risk he ran, remained to assist the Broadway contractor. But, as he was only a Dutchman, and not a Hercules, there was no use in attempting to purge Broadway with a one-hoe force, so the contractor gave up for the night, and went off and engaged a squad of Italian image-venders and organ-grinders, with whom he proposes to recommence his task to-night.

PROSPECTS OF CHEAP SUGAR.—Unfortunately for housekeepers, there are no Bears in the Sugar Market, all the operators in saccharine productions happen to be Bulls, and Bulls, too, of a roaring and rampant character. By a concerted movement, they have contrived to "get up a corner" in one of the necessaries of life, and they are trying to keep it up. Nobody is disposed to use "short" in Sugar, and so the price keeps up. But, the prospects for a full crop, we are most happy to state, are highly encouraging. The high prices which have ruled the past two years have stimulated production, while they have caused a diminution of consumption, and the natural consequences are, increasing stocks and a tendency to lower prices. The crop of Louisiana promises to be nearly four times greater than it was last year, and the yield of Maple Sugar has been much larger than was ever before known. All these causes combined, will have the desired effect of bringing down the price of this commodity, and those who have made fortunes in it, will have a wide margin to fall back upon when the decline takes place.

Amusements.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—An enigmatical narrative, called "Life's Troubled Tide,"—and watery enough to deserve that title—was produced here last night. To call it a play is an injustice to thousands who have written plays. It is a novelette, an essay, a criticism, an article, anything in a mild literary way, but most assuredly not a play. A dramatic idea must be broad, bold, and well defined. It should need no propping, but should culminate clearly and naturally. A narrative may be pleaded specially, and may depend largely on extraneous matter of the minutest kind. "Life's Troubled Tide" is a narrative in this sense, and it is enigmatical because it leaves the mind in a confused state as to who has acted most foolishly. No one attempts to act right—that is to say, with a sense of moral obligation to society.

A gentleman in difficulties determines, with the consent of his wife, to use the fortune of his daughter, as a temporary loan, in order that he may pay his debts, and maintain a reputation for commercial integrity. His wife soon after discovers that this money was not rightfully the property of her daughter, and that, therefore, it has been used almost fraudulently. She obtains this secret from another gentleman, who threatens to use up her husband on the strength of it if she will not listen to his suit. To avert this, she countenances his attentions. Her husband becomes jealous—discovers what he supposes to be an intrigue, and revenges himself by bringing the two interested parties in constant communication with each other, in the hope that their passion will die out, and that they will then feel the agony of an honest man's scorn. The wife being virtuous, her ordeal is trying indeed. By a word, she might at any moment bring the piece to an end, but the dramatist has not thought it necessary to utter this word until the end of three very long acts. By that time the villain of the piece has kindly met with a sudden death, and the husband discovers that his wife has sacrificed her peace of mind, and almost her reputation, in order that she may shelter him from the harsh opinion of the world. This is the plot, and in its manipulation, narratives like lawyers' briefs are constantly being uttered.

The piece is decidedly heavy in the first act, but improves in the second and third. The fault is rather in the subject than the treatment, which, although dull, is respectable. The two leading characters are played by Miss LAURA KEENE and Mr. WHEATLEIGH, and played beautifully; they are conventional, however. A character for Mr. T. B. JOHNSTON—a man who loves his wife so ardently that he feels flattered when she makes a conquest, and reverses her sweethearts as men of taste—is more original, but was indifferently played. Miss MANNERS was the lady in question, and chatty and pleasant in that station of life.

The piece was moderately well received, and will be repeated.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—Mrs. J. W. WALLACK, Jr., commenced a short season here last night, playing Mrs. Beverley in the play of the "Gamester." Mrs. WALLACK has a delicious voice, and a "method" which smacks somewhat of the footlights, but is nevertheless powerful and impressive. In some other characters which she is about to play, she will, we think, improve the favorable impression created last night. "Fazio" is given to-night.

BURTON'S THEATRE.—Mr. and Mrs. W. J. FLORENCE, artists in the Williams vein, who have recently made an impression in England, where Yankee characterization is almost heathen, commenced an engagement at this theatre last night. They played in three appropriate pieces with success.

STREET COMMISSIONER TAYLOR VERY SICK.—The Street Commissioner, JOSEPH TAYLOR, Esq., was at a late hour last night lying very low,—his physician giving it as his opinion that he could not live till morning. Mr. TAYLOR has been sick for more than a month.

Costa Rica to have no Control over the Nicaragua Transit—The Administration and the Utah Question—Brigham Young's Proceedings, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 8.

The President has declared that, in matters relating to the Nicaragua Transit, he will not recognize Costa Rica as having any control over it.

X. Y. Z.

[FROM THE REPORT OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 8.

DAVID H. BURR, Surveyor-General of Utah, has arrived at his home in this city.

Mr. BURR states, in conversation with friends, that the Mormon Legion is poorly equipped, and that 10,000 United States troops would effectually overawe them. Before he left Utah the Mormons had not heard of the intention of the Government to send a force thither, but they frequently laughed at the idea of the Government compelling them to obey the Federal laws, and cited the failure of the Government to put down the disturbances in Kansas as evidence of its inefficiency. He supposes that one-third or half of the Mormons, who are disgusted with BRIGHAM'S tyranny, would rise against him were they protected by the United States troops. Mr. BURR does not apprehend that the Mormons will show fight. It is the duty of every good Mormon to obey the Church as the higher law, and hence the opinion is entertained that BRIGHAM YOUNG may leave the Territory with a large force of deluded followers, provided he can find some other seat for his Government. Mr. BURR says that Salt Lake is the meanest settlement that he ever beheld, everything having the appearance of abject poverty. YOUNG's word is law, and the oppressions of the Mormons are cruel, and without remedy from the present rulers. There are about 50 "Gentiles" only in the Territory, and they are the objects of bitter persecution.

Many of our most respectable citizens have signed a call for a public meeting on Thursday after noon, to condemn the late riots, and sustain the course of the President and the city authorities, in employing military force to quell the disturbances.

According to the statement of Capt TYLER, who commanded one of the companies of Marines last Monday, he gave the order, "after the capture of the swivel from the rioters," to fire—the discharges being from one platoon only, and irregularly, each of the marines firing as they saw the flashes of pistols discharged at them by the rioters, who fired as they retreated. The Company commanded by Capt. MADDOX, according to the same authority, did not fire until a man had been wounded in the cheek, the ball coming out in his mouth.

It is confidently asserted that several of the "Plug Uglies" have recently died, while others in Baltimore are suffering from their wounds.

Justice HOLLINGSHEAD, of the American Party, has refused the application for a warrant for the arrest of Major MAGRUDER, on the charge of murder. The ground of application was that the Major had given the order to fire.

The Secretary of the Navy has not decided whether any of the five steam sloops-of-war shall be built by private contract.

A letter, received yesterday from a source in Kansas entitled to the most implicit confidence, states that three-fourths at least of the present settlers are in favor of making Kansas a Free State, including nearly one-half of the emigrants from Slaveholding States.

The New Orleans mail as late as due is to hand. The papers received by it say that the accounts of the crops in Texas were favorable. In Baton Rouge Parish the "borer" was doing serious damage to the young sugar cane.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, June 6, 1857.

The Administration has undertaken resolutely to grapple with the Utah question, and to master the difficulty by a combination of prudence with decision. They have settled upon a line of policy in regard to the subject, and it is one that may possibly be crowned with success, though it falls far short, in its aim, of the extirpation of the Mormons as a community, or the suppression of their religious practices and abuses.

King BRIGHAM will soon be dethroned, so far as his tenure of power depends upon Uncle Sam. He has held over for three years, since the expiration of his term of office, because the Government has not superseded him. This he has a right to do, under the law establishing the Territory.

BRIGHAM has been busily engaged, for some time, in preparing for a brush with the federal authorities, and for anticipated disaffection and revolt on the part of a considerable portion of the Mormon community. He has even, according to statements of Judge DRUMMOND and others, secured for himself a strong position further West, to which he can, in an emergency withdraw, with his treasure and his steadfast followers.

A writer in the States of this evening, who, as I learn, is probably Judge DRUMMOND, after stating recent occurrences in Utah, says: "To-day the Federal Government is without law, and recognition in the Territory of Utah. BRIGHAM is King of his people and country."

He proceeds to state, very strongly, what he considers the legitimate points in issue. That the irregularities of the Mormon faith are subjects of municipal regulation, and judicial action, and are above executive control, he admits; but he asserts that BRIGHAM YOUNG is guilty of treason against the Government of the United States, and that Utah is in a state of rebellion. These are the issues to be met by the United States. The question is, whether BRIGHAM is to be arrested and tried for treason. This is to be decided upon, I presume, by the facts already made known to the Government.

The President had determined, it is believed, that the authority of the United States in Utah shall be maintained, and that the laws shall be executed. But whether he will apply this principle of action to the future, or make it retrospective, is not yet known. Perhaps it may be deemed expedient to grant an amnesty in regard to all past political offences. But murder and robbery are offences which cannot be overlooked, and Mormon malefactors will be brought to condign punishment, whenever the authority of the laws and the due administration of justice shall be reëstablished. Conviction and punishment, through the verdict of a Jury, will not, however, be easily secured while the Mormon jurors are oath-bound to protect their own brother-saints.

An attempt to bring BRIGHAM YOUNG to punishment for treason, will produce a very grave issue, and one that the United States is not prepared to meet. It would unite the whole Mormon community in open hostility to the United States, and the Federal officers would be again expelled from the Territory. Even Federal troops would stand but little better chance, unless in very large numbers, and well provided for the hazards of a long war.

Judge DRUMMOND advises that this nest of vipers be crushed at once. "Every day," he says, "adds to their numbers, and, if unmolested for three years longer, they will increase to more than a million, and be capable of arming a hundred thousand men."

I hardly believe that the Administration is prepared for an attempt to crush out Mormonism and the Mormons. Their preparations for such an effort are very inadequate to the end.

Arrangements are made for sending out twenty-five hundred troops to Utah, and for increasing them to numbers to over three thousand. This force is large enough for the object anticipated by Government, but not for those proposed by Judge DRUMMOND.

The policy of Mr. BUCHANAN will be to maintain the Federal authorities in the execution of the law. This purpose he has avowed!

Col. CUMMING, late of Utah, was offered the office of Governor of that Territory, three weeks ago, and promptly declined it. Meanwhile, it was offered to another person. Indeed, two or three persons have been consulted as to their willingness to accept the hazardous and thankless position. The pay is small—twenty-five hundred dollars a year—ridiculously small. But it has been suggested that the President will consider that the importance of the service, at the present crisis, will justify him in employing the contingent fund.

I do not think, from what I learn, that the President has yet pitched upon a proper man for the office of governor of Utah, and it is to be hoped that all will decline, till he lights upon a suitable man. To find one he must go outside of the time-serving office-holders and seekers.

I notice a dispatch in some papers asserting that the British Minister has not contradicted the report of the cession of the Island in Panama Bay to England. The author of the on-paper is interested to say more than he knows. The only intelligent opinion that prevails here on this subject is founded upon the explanations which Lord NAPIER, in his capacity as Minister, has made to many persons, official and unofficial. He has stated that, as Minister to the United States, he has entire control over the naval and diplomatic operations of his country in Central America, and that in such section as has been talked of has been made.

Previous to this denial, the report gave much uneasiness in some quarters. Still, it was not considered that it needed confirmation. The New York Albion credited it, and appeared uniformly pressed believed it and chastened Mourne thunder against it.

The telegraph is generously silent that Lord NAPIER was not interrogated upon the subject. He is right as to that, no doubt. No official correspondence has occurred in regard to it, and none was necessary, especially after the explanations given by Lord NAPIER. X. Y. Z.

Movements of Gen Walker.

LOUISVILLE, Monday, June 8.

The steamer Woodward, with General WALKER and suite on board, arrived here at 8 o'clock this morning. There was no public demonstration, and there is apparently none in perspective. They leave for Cincinnati to morrow at noon, by the mail boat.

The weather is very hot, the thermometer marking 90° in the shade.

The Pennsylvania Public Works.

HARRISBURG, Monday, June 8.

In the Supreme Court, an injunction has been presented by the Canal Commissioners against the sale of the main line of public works. It was ordered that the complainants have leave to move the Court in banc on Friday next, for a preliminary injunction according to the prayer of the bill.

The American Division of the Sons of Temperance.

PROVIDENCE, Monday, June 8.

The American Division of the Sons of Temperance were publicly received at Howard Hall this afternoon, by Governor DYER and Mayor SMITH. The Division comprises representatives from nearly every State.

Fire in Reading, Mass.

BOSTON, Monday, June 8,

A fire in Reading last night destroyed CARTER'S Steam Cabinet Manufactory. The loss is $35,000 and the insurance $10,000.

Walker's Surrender—Capt. Davis' Report.

UNITED STATES SHIP ST. MARYS, }
AT SEA, May 13, 1857. }

SIR: At the latest date of my last dispatch I had the honor to say that I was then waiting for a favorable moment, when, by a timely and effectual interposition of my good offices, I might hope to engage the contending parties to bring their affairs to a peaceful issue. The information brought by Lieut. MCCORKLE, who returned on the 29th ult., determined me to go to Rivas the next day.

I reached Gen. MORA's camp in the afternoon of the 30th, accompanied by Dr. J. WINTHROP TAYLOR, the Surgeon of the ship, and by my secretary and another of my aides.

After half-an-hour's conference with Gen. MORA, I exchanged several notes with Gen. WALKER, which are transmitted herewith. (copies of which have already appeared in the TIMES) numbered from 1 to 6.

Three interviews took place between Gen. HERNINGSEN and Col. WATERS, respectively Gen. WALKER and myself, assisted by Dr. TAYLOR. At the last of them, on the morning of the 1st inst., the agreement—a copy of which accompanying note is numbered 7—received my own signature and the signatures of the other gentlemen present, and having been returned to Rivas was brought back by Col. WATERS signed by Gen. WALKER.

Gen. MORA then addressed to me the communication marked No. 8.

At 4 o'clock I entered Rivas in company with Gen. ZAVALA and his staff, who attended Gen. WALKER and his staff to San Juan del Sur, where the latter embarked on board the St. Mary's.

In Rivas the American troops—about two hundred and forty in number—were drawn up in the plain, and the agreement was read to them in general orders, and they were transfered by Gen. HERNINGSEN to my charge. Having no Lieutenant with me, I requested Dr. TAYLOR to direct their movements and accompany them to Virgin Bay to toe morning, which service, though entirely extra professional, he did me the favor to accept most cheerfully; he executed it with perfect success.

General CANAS having entered to take possession, I turned over to him the plaza of Rivas, by means of the note (the original of which is in Spanish) numbered nine; after which Gen. HERNINGSEN and myself went to San Juan.

On the 2d instant, having exerted myself in vain to persuade General WALKER to place the schooner Granada in my keeping I gave Lieutenant MACAY the order, numbered 10. Finally, however, when the preparations for the forcible seizure of the schooner were completed she was delivered up to the United States by the accompanying order of Gen. WALKER, No. 11.

The duty of connecting the Americans from Virgin Bay through the province of Guanacaste to Punta Arenas, and thence by steamer to Panama, was assigned to Lieutenant MCCORKLE by the accompanying order, numbered 12.

On the evening of the 2d inst. I went to Virgin Bay, where I found most of the officers and men in good spirits and behaving exceedingly well. Lieutenant MCCORKLE had already begun to regulate the supplies and divide the people into messes—the company organization being lost. In this he was ably assisted by several officers, whose amiable conduct under these difficult circumstances commanded my respect and grateful acknowledgments. The troops embarked for Tortuga on the morning of the 4th inst.

On the morning of the 3d inst. I crossed over to Rivas, where I visited the hospital, and the sick and wounded Americans in it. Your special attention will be invited to this subject in a separate communication.

The accompanying letter from Gen. MORA, numbered 13, was handed to me here.

The schooner Granada, of San José, was transferred to the authorities of Nicaragua by the accompanying letters, numbered 14 and 15; the former of which explains concisely my reason for this manner of proceeding.

As soon as certain information was received of the departure of Col. LOCKRIDGE from the river San Juan, it became apparent that General WALKER, now deprived of all possibility of receiving reinforcements, and rapidly consuming his mules and horses, must either succumb to the superior force of the enemy or try his fortune in a change of place. It was the opinion of those who had better means of judging than myself that one month ago he could have passed the enemy's lines, and maintained himself in the open country. Since that time desertions had become so numerous and frequent, not only diminishing his army in numbers, but demoralizing it in character, that towards the end of April the only resort left to General WALKER was to cut his way down to the coast and take refuge, if possible, on board the schooner Granada. Here again I am citing the opinion of his friends. According to the best intelligence such an attempt would have been the last effort of despair, and would have terminated fatally in less than five miles from Rivas.

The time had, therefore, arrived for determining on the course to be pursued in the case anticipated in your first letter of instructions of January 19: that is, "in the event of the expulsion of WALKER and his forces from Nicaragua by the allied armies, and of his departure to adjacent territory in Central America for the purpose of hostile and aggressive operations."

When I considered that, under these circumstances, the Granada would be destitute of a legal commission from any recognized government, or from any party then actually existing; that when was no longer acting under the authority of a sovereign State, or even of a distinct and separate government in such State, the party which had hitherto been deemed a belligerent nation having lost its footing in the country; and that, as I well knew she would be under the necessity of procuring by violence the indispensable means of subsistence, I could not bring myself to consent that the Granada thus characterized should pass from under my guns out upon the high seas. Accordingly, on leaving the ship for Rivas, on the 30th April, I handed Lieutenant MACAY the memorandum of instructions numbered 16; and in conference with General HERNINGSEN and Colonel WATERS I made known to these gentlemen my decision.

During all the transactions related in the report, my intercourse with General MORA, the Commander-in-Chief of the allied armies, was intimate.

* * * *

I am very conscious that in these novel and unusual occurrences I may have often to ask for my conduct the kind and candid construction of the Department. Feeling secure in the enjoyment of its favorable disposition while engaged in the performance of my duty, I should not allude to it here, but that Gen. WALKER has indulged in imputations against myself and the three senior lieutenants of this ship, of conduct not only improper but base, unbecoming our honor.

Knowing whatever unwilling mistakes of judgment we may have committed, that we have never wavered in our integrity or relaxed in our zeal to serve our countryman, we reflect with satisfaction upon the defence afforded us by the friendship and protection of the Department at all times, but never more than when we are absent on the public service.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
CHARLES HENRY DAVIS, Commander.

Commodore WM. MERVINE, Commander-in-Chief of the United States Naval Forces in the Pacific Ocean, Panama, New-Granada.

DEATH FROM BURNS.—Coroner HILLS held an inquest on Saturday upon the body of a young woman named MYERS, residing in Eighty-first-street, near Eighth-avenue, whose death was caused by burns. It appears that the deceased was kindling a fire, and in order to make it burn quicker, poured on some camphene, when an explosion followed and set fire to her dress. She ran screaming into the street, where her clothes were torn off by a policeman, but the injuries received were so great as to prevent recovery.

IMPORTANT FROM UTAH.

Brigham Young's Departure on his Excursion to the North—Mormon Missionaries Setting Forth—Mormonism Progressing.

From the Deseret News, Great Salt Lake City, April 29.

Pursuant to previous arrangements, Governor YOUNG, accompanied by Presidents KIMBALL and WELLS, and many others from this city and the settlements South, who availed themselves of the invitation to participate in the pleasure of a tour through the northern counties, and thence to the settlement on Salmon river, in Oregon Territory, left the city on Friday last, expecting to be gone about four or five weeks.

The arduous duties that continually devolve upon him while at home, and up n those associated with him in the management of the affairs of the church and of the Territory, induced him to seek a short release from the cares of business to refresh and invigorate his body; and knowing that the object desired could not be attained otherwise than by absent himself for a season from the scene of his labors, he resolved on making this tour, and invited those of the citizens that could leave their business without inconvenience, and would like a little pastime of this sort, to share with him in its enjoyment. How many went from the city we do not know, but some thirty or forty carriages, and many on horseback, all well provided with the necessary means of subsistence and defence, left in the course of the forenoon, and no doubt the company will be greatly increased from the cities and settlements north.

A respectable corps of scientific gentlemen have gone with the company, with the necessary instruments for taking observations in the mountains and other places through which they expect to pass, but if they acquire much knowledge of that kind, they will have to be very expert if they keep up with the company, unless His Excellency should travel with less speed than usual. We shall probably hear from the company before leaving the most northern settlements, after which nothing further may be expected until their return.

DEPARTURE OF MISSIONARIES.

Early on Thursday, April 23d, those that had been selected at the Conference for missions, that were to cross the plains on the way to their various fields of labor in the States, in the British North American Provinces, in Europe, Africa, and other parts of the world, commenced assembling on the Temple Block, preparatory to starting off together, according to previous arrangement, with their hand carts, the means of conveyance adopted, instead of horses, mules and carriages, as heretofore. Most of the carts well fitted up for the trip, with names and mottos beautifully painted on some of them, to suit the taste and fancy of the owner, and which will no doubt greatly add to the pleasure that will be derived from rolling them up and down the mountains, and across the plains that lie between this and the frontiers of Iowa and Missouri.

After assembling they were briefly addressed by President O. HYDE, and by others of the Twelve, who exhorted them to faithfulness and diligence, not only while crossing the plains, but in preaching the Gospel to the people and nations to whom they were sent, that they might reap a rich reward, and return rejoicing when their several missions were ended, and that they might enjoy the blessings of peace and the consolations of the Holy Spirit continually.

All things being ready, at 9¾ o'clock A. M., the company started off in regular order, with as much apparent cheerfulness and unconcern as though they were going to return in the evening, whereas many of them will be gone for years, and all will probably have to pass through trials, and endure hardships, of which the pulling of their hand carts across the plains will be among the least.

The company consisted of seventy-four men, with some twenty-five hand-carts, and was made up of individuals of nearly every imaginable occupation and pursuit of life. Farmers, mechanics, tradesmen, merchants and clerks—some Americans, some English, Scotch, Irish, Welsh, Danes, Swedes, Norwegians, Germans, and of other nations, were to be seen in the company, which made it an unusually interesting sight. To see such a variety of men, some of them young, some in the prime, and some past the meridian of life, leave their avocations as a moment's notice, and go forth in that way to proclaim the gospel of salvation to the nations that have been wandering in darkness, bespeaks a devotion to the principles of eternal truth not often seen, and would open the eyes of the religious world to their true condition, if they were not so sound asleep that they cannot be awoke from their slumbers. It would cost any missionary society, either in the United States or in England, several hundred thousand dollars to send out as many missionaries as went in this company, and they are only a tithing of those that have gone and will be sent this year from Utah; and where could a man be found, excepting among the Latter Day Saints, that could, without purse or scrip, be induced to take his blankets and provisions on a hand cart and haul it a thousand miles under like circumstances, before he could avail himself of any other means of conveyance? If any one knows let him speak out.

The company will probably make the trip to the Missouri River in about 40 days, where they will separate, and each pursue the remainder of his journey to the place of destination, as will best suit his convenience, with as little delay as circumstances will permit.

REORGANIZATION OF MILITIA.

HEADQUARTERS NAUVOO LEGION, }
G. S. L. CITY, March 27, 1857. }

GENERAL ORDERS—NO. 2.

1. Published herewith is the system of regulations prepared by the Board of Officers, appointed by and associated with me, by virtue of legislative authority. The Board, having completed their task, is discharged with my sincere thanks on behalf of the forces heretofore under my command.

2. I cannot but congratulate the Legion on the prospects of an organization, founded upon a system which must at once strike all as being more congenial because of its perfection and simplicity than anything heretofore presented. To all who are truly interested in the development and growth of our Territory, it will advocate its own claims to their attention and support. Owing to the pacific policy of Governor YOUNG, calls for active service have been few and on a small scale, yet our past experience with the aborigines of the soil has taught us the necessity of being always ready. Pompous displays in frequent musters are no evidence of strength and efficiency. Arms and ammunition ever at hand are the stronger arguments. We should aim, as much as possible, to associate the useful for the artificial, where but one can be had. As the negligence of one man may endanger the safety of all, so let us approach our new organization that negligence may not escape its due censure and punishment.

3. The 6th of April next is the day appointed by His Excellency the Governor, for the election of a lieutenant general. Until the result of that election is known, no particular steps will be taken in the adoption of our new system. It is presumed that, as one object is to simplify our discipline, as little confusion as necessary will be created in making the necessary changes from our present organization. To the advancement of the public good, I trust that where it is necessary no officer now holding a commission will hesitate to sacrifice his individual feelings by retiring from a position which may be no longer tenable, or which another might be more capable of filling.

4. I embrace with pleasure the present opportunity of offering my grateful acknowledgments for the hearty cooperation of the men and officers with whom I have been associated in the legion; and more especially to those who have been ready, at all times, unhesitatingly to answer my calls by engaging in the defence of our frontier settlements against a brave and subtle enemy. Under the blessings of the Almighty their energetic responses have resulted in a present general peace, and terms of friendship with our uncivilized neighbors. As the good never wish for war, and the wise are always ready for it, let us continually seek that our weapons may be made bright and ready by our industry, and preserved so by a continued peace.

DANIEL H. WELLS, Lieutenant General.

On Monday, April 20, a district muster was held in Great Salt Lake City, and an election of officers to command the first division of the Legion, and the several corps to be organized in Great Salt Lake military district, according to the new system of regulations, which resulted in the election of the following, to wit:—GEORGE D. GRANT, Major General and Commandant of Great Salt Lake Military District; Wm. H. Kimball, Brigadier General 1st Brigade; Franklin D. Richards, Brigadier General 2d Brigade; Robt. T. Burton, Colonel 1st Regiment of Cavalry; Jesse P. Harmon, Colonel 1st Regiment of Infantry; Thomas Callister, Colonel 2d Regiment of Infantry; David J. Ross, Colonel 3d Regiment of Infantry; Lott Smith, Major of 1st Battalion of Cavalry; John D. T. McAllister, Major of 2d Battalion of Cavalry. Also, Jonathan Pugmire, Jr., A. H. Raleigh, John Sharp, Seth M. Blair, Harrison Burgess, Daniel D. McArthur, Franklin B. Woolley, Robert Smith, Frederick Kesler and David Pettegrew were elected Majors, but of what Corps we have not been informed.

With most of the officers elect, the public are well acquainted, and the services they have rendered in the defence of their country, and especially in the defence of the people of this Territory, will long be remembered and duly appreciated. Those who have not seen much active service, nor had the opportunity of displaying that military talent they unquestionably possess, or they would not have been selected for commanders of such brave and warlike men as compose the militia of Utah Territory, may yet have the privilege, should they desire it, if they live to the common age of man. Several of them, being quite young, will have ample time to cultivate those principles so essential to the success of military men; and if such cannot become men of renown, who can?

The object of organizing anew the military forces of the Territory seems to be the attainment of a more perfect and simple organization than heretofore. How far success has or will crown the efforts of those engaged in this military reform remains to be seen; but in this age of change, if the system adopted does not sooner or later give place to one more perfect, there will certainly be one new thing under the sun.

ELECTION OF GREAT SALT LAKE CITY COUNCIL.

The election for Mayor, five Aldermen and nine Councilors, came off on the 6th of April at the Council House; Bishop Edward Hunter, Colonels L. W. Hardy and J. C. Little were moderators of election; and the following named gentlemen were unanimously returned by the voice of the people: For Mayor—A. O. SMOOT. Aldermen—Jesse P. Harmon, First Municipal Ward; Abraham Hoagland, Second do.; A. H. Raleigh, Third do.; William Snow, Fourth do.; Edmund Ellsworth, Sugar House District. Councilors—Zera Pulsipher, William G. Perkins, Harrison Burgess, Joseph Horn, Seth Taft, Elijah F. Sheets, Samuel W. Richards, Nathan Davis, Nathaniel V. Jones.

PSOORISS OF MORMONISM.

During the last eight or ten days the streets of the city have teemed with life and activity to an unusual extent. The military parade and election on the 20th; the arrival and departure of the mail and teams be looking to the "Express and Carrying Company" that were on their way out to make a return between Fort Bridger and Laramie during Tuesday, the 21st, and the two following days; the departure of the missionaries and of Gov. YOUNG and his party, in addition to the common business movements and transactions of the citizens, made things appear lively and interesting to every beholder, showing conclusively that the Mormon car was still going ahead, and that the backing out of a few faint hearted, irresolute and corrupt persons had not impeded its progress to the least. The only difference is, the car runs a little faster after being divested of some of the useless rubbish that was aboard and its speed will be still further increased after a few more passengers quietly step off.

All is now peace and quietness, and no great excite is anticipated till the arrival and departure of the mails create the usual excitement among the people. The California mail is expected on or before the 1st day of May, and the Eastern between the 1st and 10th, the arrival of which will set nearly every one in motion, expecting to hear some interesting news from the States, or some other part of the world; the presumption is, however, that nine out of ten will be disappointed.

The Eastern mail will leave punctually on the 2d, and the California on 5th of May, and therefore it is confidently believed that their arrival to contract time may be depended upon. If the expectations of the public are realized, there will be a great change in postal facilities which has long been looked for, and much needed in this Territory.

The weather continues cool and dry, and the amount of water that has fallen of late has been so little that with all the scientific knowledge and mathematical skill of the Superintendent of Meteorological Observations, he has not been able to measure it. The ground is becoming exceedingly dry, and unless we have rain soon, of which there is but little prospect, there will not be much feed for stock on the ranges during the Summer; but there is plenty of snow in the mountains to water the fields of the husbandman, if properly used and distributed; and with the blessings of the Almighty who giveth the increase, a plentiful harvest may be expected.

During the absence of the First Presidency, and many of the principal men of the city, a strict observance of the eleventh commandment by all will insure perfect peace and tranquility, and everything will move along in its own proper channel as heretofore, without any material effort being made to keep things right side up.

The Death of the Mormon Elder Pratt.

A PASSIONATE LETTER FROM MRS MORRIS, PRATT'S PARAMOUR—SHE DEFENDS PRATT AND DENOUNCES HER HUSBAND—AND INDULGES IN POETICAL EFFUSIONS.

From the Van Buren (Ark.) Intelligencer.

VAN BUREN, Monday, May 18, 1857.

MR. EDITOR: Having read the editorial in your paper headed "Tragical," and finding several important points in the account incorrect, I beg to be heard by this community, and the world, being yet a living witness for both the living and the dead.

For the sake of the innocent and his brethren—for the sake of aged parents and all my kindred—for the sake of my children and myself, and for the sake of truth, I thank God that I yet live.

In the first place, the article alluded to says that "Mrs. MOLEAN was induced to embrace the Mormon faith by Mr. PRATT." This is false, for Mr. MOLEAN knows that the first Mormon sermon I heard in California, himself and my brother, J. J. MCCOMB, were present, and they knew that it was at least two years before Mr. PRATT made his appearance in San Francisco; and they knew that from the time I heard the first sermon I never spoke except in defence of the Mormons and their faith; and they know that I sought diligently for my husband's consent to be baptized into the Church of the Saints, and finally obtained it in writing, and was baptized before P. P. PRATT made his appearance. These are facts which the certificate in MOLEAN's own writing and the daily papers in San Francisco, announcing Mr. PRATT's arrival, can be brought to prove that my baptism and confirmation into the Church of the Saints was anterior to the arrival of P. P. PRATT in that State.

I will here state a fact which has never, to my knowledge, been written. I took my children from the school-room, (with the permission of the teacher,) and in an omnibus repaired to the place where there was water, and in the presence of several witnesses, they were (that is, the two boys) baptized by P. P. PRATT, for the remission of sins, and by the laying on of his hands they were confirmed members of the Church of "Latter Day Saints." If any condemn this act, let them also condemn every woman who refuses to go to perdition with her children, just because her husband makes this choice!

Again, your article represents Mrs. MOLEAN as eloping from San Francisco to Utah with PRATT, and after her elopement her parents wrote for the children to be sent to them. This is also false, and my father, J. S. MCCOMB, if yet living, is a witness, with our neighbors in both places, and the children were sent from me in California to him in New-Orleans, and that on a ship

Where there was not one voice or face,
That they had ever heard or seen in other place.

In November, 1851, I embraced the Mormon faith, and in January, 1855, my children were, on account of my faith, sent from San Francisco to New-Orleans, and this without my having the slightest intimation of it until they were far upon the sea. In the morning, as was our custom as soon as their father left, (generally about 9 o'clock,) the dear children clapped their hands and said, "Now, Ma, we can have a good time, Pa's gone; we can sing and pray as much as we wish!" And they did pray that morning as I had never known an infant to pray! They kissed me and said, "Good morning, mother dear," about 10 o'clock and started for school. At 3 o'clock I looked for their return; I raised the curtain, I opened the door to look if ALBERT and ANNIE were coming, but, oh! my soul, they never came!

At 4 o'clock their father came to inform me that they were on their way to New Orleans. Said, "I put them on board the Sierra Nevada at 10 o'clock this morning, and now they are where you and the cursed Mormons can never see them again!"

That night he locked all the doors, locked me in a room, took all the keys to his room and locked the door. Can any one conceive of that desolation! My cries disturbed him, and about two o'clock he unlocked the door of the room where I was.

In the morning I went from room to room, I ran in the street and called FITZROY, ALBERT, ANNIE. But no child answered.

I heard tiny footsteps under the window, I ran and said "My children!" But they were not mine. My brother, E. C. MCCOMB, said I should go by the next steamer to my children, but MCLEAN said he would have nothing to do with it.

A merchant in San Francisco told me he would give me $20, and he would insure that in his neighborhood of merchants I could raise in one hour all the money I would need to go to my children. After this MCLEAN boasted that I was in his power, and he would see whether I could go or not. I told him the propositions that had been made to me. He said he would have me in the Insane Asylum in twenty four hours. This, however, he never attempted only in words.

Two weeks after the departure of the children, he fitted me out and put me on board a steamer for New Orleans, via Nicaragua, giving the officers strict charge concerning me, to lock me up if I began to rave.

Two weeks after the arrival of the children at my father's, I appeared before them.

I remained there three months, oppressed on all sides, being closely guarded, lest I should walk, talk, pray or sleep with my own precious children.

Under the circumstances my health declined, and I felt that I could not long survive so great a conflict of feeling, particularly in that enervating climate.

In this desperate state of feeling I once succeeded in getting my babes away, and kept them secreted four days, but failed to get away from the city. My father then pledged himself to change his treatment to me; he said I should have a room and have my children with me, and they should go and come with me, provided I would promise not to take them away from the city without his consent. With this understanding I returned to my father's house. But my health grew worse and worse, and it appeared I could not survive a Summer in New Orleans.

I then consulted my father about leaving, told him I wished to go to Salt Lake, and he said if I would not attempt to take the children he would assist me all he could.

In a few days I was on board a steamer (the Mayflower) for St. Louis, and from thence I went on board a small steamer (the Alma) on the Missouri River to Atchison, Kansas Territory, where I found the Mormon Emigration.

I engaged to cook for a mess of ten persons, to defray my expenses, and thus I journeyed across the plains to Salt Lake City.

I remained just one year, leaving on the anniversary of the day (11th September, 1856) I arrived.

While there I taught school, in which I taught ten of P. P. PRATT's children and boarded in his family seven months. The remaining four months I taught Governor YOUNG's family school and boarded in his house.

On the 11th of last September I left in a company of missionaries, consisting of about twenty elders and twelve females. I travelled in a carriage with two elders and one lady, making four of us. I furnished my own provisions and cooked for the other three, for the privilege of riding.

At St. Louis I borrowed $100 of church funds and proceeded to New Orleans. It was my intention when I left Salt Lake to go to my children, and get them if I could.

That I have done what I could; and all I could, I call heaven and earth to witness.

I got on board the steam cars with my children at my father's on Saturday at 12 o'clock, to go on business to New Orleans, a distance of five or six miles.

In front of the St. Charles I hired a carriage for five hours, expecting to leave on a steamer for Galveston, Texas, the next morning at 8 o'clock, but to my great disconfiture, there was no steamer to leave before Thursday. I stayed with my children that night, Sunday and Sunday night, at the United States Hotel, kept by MR. SMITH.

On Monday morning, not deeming it safe to stay at a public house, I took an omnibus, leaving my children at the hotel. I rode till the omnibus stopped, far down in the third municipality, inquired in a Dutch grocery for a furnished room, and the old lady pointed across the street. I went, found a woman with plain sewing in her hand at the door. She was so plain looking, so poorly dressed, and apparently so ignorant that I thought she was not likely to have visitors often. She said her husband worked on a low-boat, and would not be at home till Thursday night.

We stayed at this woman's house four days. She gave me her best bed, loaned me her cooking utensils, and gave me wood to cook with, and then helped to carry on little trunk to the omnibus. But she never asked us where we came from nor where we were going, which I think very remarkable for one of her sex.

At 8 o'clock on Thursday morning, 18th of December, 1856, we were on board the Atlantic, bound for Texas. I could not obtain a state-room, although I went on Tuesday to the agent; they were all taken. The captain, however, was kind to us, and let us occupy his room, and sent us the best of everything.

At Galveston we took a little steamer, Capt. PEEBLES, commander, for Harrisburg, where we stayed all night at a hotel kept by Capt. ANDREWS and next morning took the cars for Houston. Two miles from Houston we found a home at the house of Mr. WM GAMBRELL, who is a man of no religion, lives well, has plenty of servants and no children. His wife was like a mother to us. The three first weeks I made a change of clothing and then sought for something to do. Found employment in a dress-making establishment, Mrs. STANBURY'S, where I worked five weeks, spending two days with my children, Sunday to rest and Monday to wash and mend. On the 4th of March I left Houston with Capt. ANDREWS, Mr. STANFIELD and JAMES GAMBRELL, (the latter being a Mormon elder) to journey to Ellis county where the mormon emigration was fitting out for a trip across the plains.

Through a letter from Houston I was apprised that MCLEAN was in pursuit of me; and to avoid trouble, and perhaps bloodshed in the company, I took passage with a man by the name of CLARK, who is not a Mormon. He had a wife and three children, a poor wagon and three yoke of good oxen.

With these people I was journeying when MCLEAN and party met us. The scenes that have been in progress from that day to this are before the public. It is well known that I have been arrested upon a false oath, and dragged by civil and military officers before an excited populace, and the Court, as a prisoner, only to be coolly told that I might retire, nothing being found against me.

In behalf of the dead I have to testify, that whatever relation existed between us was of my own seeking. When he kept house with his wife, ELIZABETH, in San Francisco, I often sought his society, and if any censure me, let them censure me for the strongest impulses of my nature, which have ever prompted me to seek light and truth, despite the difficulties that might intervene between me and the object of my search.

This man was a fountain of light and intelligence, at which thousands might drink, and yet the stream flowed clear, pure and free.

I am willing to acknowledge that I have often sought his door at the dawn of day, when his wife was sick, to take some meat, bread and fruit, upon which they might subsist until the following morning.

Do any blame him for being poor! Let them lay the blame upon him who required his disciples to go with the everlasting Gospel to the nations, without purse or scrip, or even two coats.

Neither do I deny that I much desired, from time to time, to have him entertained at our house, even as I gladly entertained my husband's brethren. We had unoccupied rooms and beds, and a profusion of the good things of life, while he was poor and a stranger, and as unpopular as a certain Nazarine who once pilgrimized through the land of Judea, and could not find a place to lay his head. Upon the same principle that I was deprived this privilege, Mary and Martha would have been punished for bathing the feet of their Lord, and running to meet him when he returned from a mission.

I also confess that, when a company of Saints were preparing to leave California with P. P. PRATT, I greatly desired to be one of the number, and went so far as to ask my Father in Heaven to provide a way by which I might escape my oppression, and go with the people of my choice. If this be not right, then there is a mistake in the ancient saying: "Come with me all ye that are heavy laden, and I will give you rest!"

Six pistol balls could not avail
To make his holy visage pale;
But the fierce and deadly knife
Pierced his heart and claimed his life.

Oh! PARLEY dear, we love you well,
Yes, more than mortal tongues can tell;
And we know you'll come again—
With us to live, with Christ to reign.

Oh! God of Israel, list the cry
Of PARLEY'S blood come up on high,
And let his wounds before thee plead
For wrath on him who did the deed.

I am free to declare, before angels and men, that PARLEY P. PRATT was innocent of the charges made against him.

If the deeds of men were registered upon their faces, it would be known and read of all men that H. H. MCLEAN drove me from him; and that he by his own acknowledged and consigned to eternal death all the delicate ties that existed between us, and took before Mormonism crossed our pathway.

I also confess that when I got to Salt Lake alone, and knew of no one that I had ever seen but Mr. PRATT and his wife, ELIZABETH, I sought for their house, and asked if they would let me stay a few days to rest, and look round and see what I could do for a living. They said, stay just as long as you please, and it turned out as before stated. I also confess that it was a source of pleasure to me when I heard that he would be in the company in which I had engaged to come.

I do not deny that I washed his feet, combed his hair, and often walked, that he might ride. Neither do I deny visiting with him a number of families in St. Louis, who thought it it a greater honor to entertain him than they would to entertain any king or potentate living upon the earth.

I also state that it pained me to see him in chains, and pain would I have bathed his wrist where the cursed iron chafed his skin.

But this was nothing to what I was yet to see! Here I not seen his heart's blood dropping from the wound of the deadly knife?

That I would pain have been separated from him while yet living in New-Orleans, I will name as living witnesses, my father, J. S. MCCOMB, and my brothers, E. C. and J. J. MCCOMB, and Mr. JOHN MCCOUGAL. These all know that I sought their counsel while living in New-Orleans, to know whether I must continue to endure the degrading influence of a man who would continue to sip at the wine cup and thereby unfit himself for the society of his family.

That my statements are correct in reference to our separation in California, I will name as witnesses Captain THOMAS GRAY and family, Mr. SAMUEL WEBB and family, and my neighbors and friends in general in the city of San Francisco.

That Mr. MCLEAN put me by violence into the street at night, and locked the door against me, Captain GRAY and Dr. BUSH are witnesses; and I presume MCLEAN himself would not deny that I then declared that I would no more be his wife, however many years I might be compelled to appear as such for the sake of my children.

I presume that MCLEAN would lay it as a complaint against me that I never afterwards came to his bed!

I would appeal to every man and woman of refined sensibility to know whether a virtuous woman and faithful mother is so humble a thing that she should come again to the bosom of a man who had by violence thrust her from him, and exposed her to insult and injury in the streets of a wicked city. Whether takes the affirmative differs from the writer of this.

E. J. MCCOMB, once E. J. MCLEAN.

An American Jenkins in Paris.

To the Editor of Galignani's Messenger.

I read in the Messenger of Monday last a correspondence between Mr. CHARLES SUMNER, of Massachusetts, and certain gentlemen from the Northern and Eastern States of the American Union, styling themselves "the American merchants residing in Paris," and in that quality inviting him to a public dinner. Whatever the ostensible motive of this "demonstration," it "possesses an import" which is rendered unmistakable by Mr. SUMNER's own interpretation of it; and this fully discloses the animus and aim of this "distinguished statesman and orator's" mission to Europe. That mission, certainly "without any diplomatic privilege," but, peradventure, not without perquisites, is to initiate and, if the exigencies of the cotton market and manufacture do not forbid it, to organize a systematic agitation in this and the British capital against the Southern States of the confederacy, and that "peculiar institution" of theirs so tenderly nursed of yore and transmitted to them by dear old Mother England, and which, in very modern times, has been not less cherished and sustained by the "enterprise and activity," on the coast of Africa, by some of her Puritanical progeny in the new world. Under these circumstances can any such subdolous plea as that put forward excuse these "American merchants" for lending themselves to such agencies and influences? If they were sordid and self-seeking adventurers in pursuit of political capital rather than the honorable rewards of a liberal and enlightened trade, one could understand, or rather would not marvel at, this pseudo patriotic partisanship—this untractual display of their sectional colors in a foreign land. But are those "industrious workmen" in Mr. SUMNER's "mighty loom" warranted in assuming so comprehensive a designation as that of "the American merchants residing in Paris?" I hear not, and that many "good men and true," quite as considerable as themselves, and not less creditable "representatives of their country on a foreign mission," albeit more modest and less avid of distinction, have deemed it "wisest, discretest, virtuousest, best," not to present themselves upon this "Paris platform," and to enact no part in this notable coup de théâtre. For the rest I do not perceive what there has been in the police ecoocomical views of the senator in question which entitles him par excellence to the "admiration and regard" of the American merchant anywhere, seeing that his sometime potent voice was exerted in support of a highly protective tariff, imposing grievous restraints and drawbacks upon that "beneficent commerce" which the "Southern barbarians" would have emancipated and made as free as the winds that waft it. Now, these gentlemen will, I hope, excuse me for asking them how long Mr. SUMNER's colossal loom could preserve in its locus stanzi at Lowell or Manchester, or they sod it be kept in function, if it were not for that plant which his policy would blight, but whose fruit is feeding them and millions of months, while doing, at the same time, far more than his olive-branch, to secure the blessings of peace among the nations. You see, then, Sir, that it is due to the American merchants, and others who have not been parties to this "demonstration," to make that fact publicly known. To this end it is but just that the Messenger should report it, and so oblige many citizens from "many States" of the great "Republic," but in an especial manner one of the humblest of them, who remains, &c., &c., FRANCIS P. CORBIN, (of Virginia.)

Marine Disasters.

A letter to ELWOOD WALTER, Esq., describes the situation of the steamship Canadian:—

QUEBEC, Wednesday, June 3, 1857.

I beg to inform you, in reference to the position of the steamship Canadian, now lying aground on half-tide rock, opposite the Palace, from all the information I have been able to collect, which so far is very imperfect, the vessel appears to have received a good deal of damage to the fore part of her keel and fore foot, having gone on at considerable speed and at high water. When the tide is out her beacons are quite dry; her forward compartment fills and empties with the ebb and flow of the tide. We have no positive information as to the other compartments, but great fears are entertained that they are likewise full of water. Every possible assistance was sent to her with dispatch, and as she is now in a very exposed position, hopes are entertained that she will be got off.

A NEW WAREHOUSE CHANGING HANDS.—Messrs. ROWEN & MCNAMEE, during the last few days, have been in negotiation for the sale of their elegant marble warehouse at the corner of Pearl-street and Broadway. A conditional offer has been made them, and will probably be accepted. Their price is $500,000. It is understood that the parties proposing to buy desire the building for other than dry-goods purposes.

SPRING IMPORTATIONS, 1857,
AT LAST FALL'S PRICES.

SMITH & LOUNSBERY, NO 455 BROADWAY, near Grand-st., have now ready for exhibition a large and superior stock of VELVET, TAPESTRY, BRUSSELS, THREE-PLY and INGRAIN CARPETING imported expressly for this Spring's trade, and on till fur, ther notice will be sold at LAST FALL'S PRICES.

S. C. HERRING & CO'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES.

The subscribers, grateful for past favors and finding that a discriminating public were bestowing their patronage to that extent, that more warerooms were necessary to exhibit all their stock, have enlarged their display by opening an extensive ware and salesroom on Broadway, at No. 251, corner of Murray-st., opposite the City Hall. This enlargement of warehouse room, with the recent extensive improvement of their factory, will enable the subscribers to keep on hand at all times a larger stock of fire and burglar-proof safes than any other establishment in the world. Particular attention will be had to constructing safes for private families to match with other furniture for the security of plate and jewelry, (and housekeepers are invited to call and examine for themselves.) Also, will keep on hand and make to order all kinds of money chests, vault doors and bank vaults. Hall's patent powder-proof locks for Banks or store doors. Jones' patent permutation Bank lock, and Cryder's patent letter lock without key.

WILDER'S PATENT SALAMANDER SAFES.
Renewal of the Wilder Patent.

The public are respectfully informed that, notwithstanding the great efforts made by other safe makers to defeat at all hazards the renewal of this Patent for making the GREAT FIRE PROOF SAFE OF THE WORLD, the subscribers are happy to say that the necessary documents were this morning received from Hon. Chas. Mason, Commissioner of Patents, granting the extension for the term of seven years from this date. All infringements

THE POLICE DISPUTE.

Ex-Captain Hartt Becomes Inspector Hartt of the Seventeenth Ward, and Leads Ten Men to a New Station-House.

The Matters "Pointing" in the Twenty-First Ward.

DOINGS OF THE DAY AND NIGHT WATCH.

The Split Reaches the Court of Sessions

THE COMPTROLLER PAYS UP OLD SCORES.

The New Police Commissioners did nothing of interest yesterday.

A report was received during the day by Deputy Carpenter from Captain Walling. The Captain reports all quiet at Seguine's Point, and work proceeding briskly.

Messrs. Wood and Russell disclaim that they are acting in their appointments as Police Commissioners. The appointments made by them are in accordance with the action of the Common Council establishing a day and night City Watch. They added greatly to the list of their new appointees yesterday, and removed many "insubordinates," (on the capacity of Police Commissioners, it is presumed,) including Captain Speight, of the Twenty-first Ward, in whose place they appointed William Robinson, hitherto on service at the Chief's Office as Clerk.

IN THE SEVENTEENTH WARD.

About 5 o'clock, late Captain of the Seventeenth Ward, now Inspector HARTT, of the Seventeenth Precinct, appeared at the Seventeenth Ward Station house, and addressing the men present, informed them that he was their only legitimate commandant, and that he had called to notify them that a new Station-house had been opened at the corner of Bowery and Third-street, at which place he expected every law-abiding Policeman in the Ward to appear and answer at the sun-down roll-call.

Captain Mansfield here interfered, and informed Mr. Hartt that any further remarks from him would not be tolerated.

"I have orders to promulgate" said Inspector Hartt.

"Any orders promulgated here must be by me or with my sanction," replied Captain Mansfield, "and I shall permit no further interference on your part here, sir."

After some further remarks, Inspector Hartt retired to the sidewalk where he addressed many of the men who had come to receive their pay, requesting them to report themselves at the new Station house.

Ten men responded to the call of Inspector Hartt. Their names were as follows: William H. McMonell, Robert B. Gilmore, Charles McMahon, Lyman Crofut, William Rayner, John M. Robins, Elmer S. Lockwood, Dewitt C. Ward, John Poussen. The remaining members of the Ward—48 in number—remained.

Yesterday, Capt. J. W. Hartt called the roll under the authority of the Metropolitan Police Commissioners of the State of New-York. Eleven of the old force of the Seventeenth Police first answered to the roll-call, to wit: Sergeants Lockwood and Gilmor, and Policemen Poussen, McConnell, Ward, McMahon, Crofut, Robinson, Robbins, Rayner and Spicer, after which Capt. Hartt read the order to the men, which he received from the Commissioners of the Metropolitan Police, and addressed them in the following remarks:

GENTLEMEN: We have now entered upon a new era of things. To avoid all personal difficulty, it is incumbent upon us to avoid all occasion for it; our, in all events, to bring too incorrigible and law breakers to justice, yet at the same time to be careful to avoid all difficulty with any person, and not to hold any conversation with any one upon the right or wrong of the law, but to do our duty fearlessly and faithfully, and all will go right and eventually come to a happy ending; and that the Commissioners to whom we are subordinate, and our country, will award to us the praise of having done our duty.

After these few remarks, the force went on on patrol duty as members of the Metropolitan Police of the State of New-York. During the evening, Capt. Hartt received the congratulations of numerous friends and citizens of the district upon his reinstatement as Captain of the district, and likewise numbers of them offering their services to aid and protect the new Commissioners in the active part they have taken. It is expected that several more will come over in two or three days.

IN THE TWENTY-FIRST WARD.

The trial and dismissal of Capt. Speight was managed "peremptorily" and with dispatch. He did not receive a notice to appear for trial until the afternoon of the day (yesterday) on which he was dismissed. On receipt of this notice he wrote the following reply

NEW-YORK, Monday, June 8, 1857.

HON. FERNANDO WOOD—Sir: I have received a notice to appear for trial at the Mayor's Office this day at 2 P. M. on a charge of insubordination. With all due respect to you, as Mayor of the City, I am compelled to disobey it, not recognizing you as a Commissioner of Police, and consequently do not recognize your authority to try me. I was in hopes that I should not be called upon to decide for myself the constitutionality of the law when the two sets of Commissioners have employed the best counsel the County affords to try it. I have consulted gentlemen in whose legal solidity stands high in this community, and some of them who believe the law will be ultimately declared unconstitutional by the Court of Appeals, but they say, as law abiding citizens, it should be obeyed until it is so declared. And I have concluded to do so, and if that is "insubordination," I plead guilty to the charge. Yours, respectfully,

FRANCIS C. SPEIGHT,
Captain of Twenty-first District.

Pursuant to instructions received, Mr. Robinson, appointed by the Mayor in the place of Capt. Speight, proceeded forthwith to the Twenty first Station house, where he made the object of his visit known. He was received most cordially by Capt. Speight, the Lieutenants, and all his old associates. After consultation it was determined that at roll call Mr. Robinson should address the entire force, read his warrant from Mayor WOOD, and call upon the men to declare their opinion.

Accordingly at the sun down roll-call, the men were all summoned in front of the desk. Corporer Perry and many citizens of the Twenty-first and adjoining Wards were present.

When the names of the men had been called, Capt. Robinson stepped forward and briefly addressed the men. He said he came there in performance of a duty assigned him by the Police Commissioners—to announce that he had that day been appointed Captain of the Twenty first Ward Police, in place of Francis C Speight, removed, and he came to ascertain who were for and who were against the authority under which he acted, and by whose sanction every member of the department present held warrant as a policeman.

He then read the formal decision of Messrs. Wood and Russell, in reference to the case of Captain Speight, and concluded by desiring the men to declare their views as their names should be called.

Captain Speight said he had not much to say. He did not feel inclined to enter into a lengthened argument as to which was the legitimate power. For himself, he had made up his mind to obey the law—to obey the Metropolitan Commissioners; and as to those to whom he was addressing his remarks were by this time aware of the position of affairs, he did not deem it necessary to attempt to take them one way or the other. He would merely say that he did not recognize the power of Mayor Wood to remove him from his position, and would not be governed by the mandate which Mr. Robinson had just read. He would proceed forthwith to another Station-house district for the use of the Metropolitan police of the precinct. It was situated in Broadway, near Thirty-third street. Those who felt disposed to obey the law and accompany him would, as their names were called, answer new, and those otherwise disposed should answer old. He had nothing further to say.

Capt. Speight then called the roll. The result was as follows:

For the Old Commissioners—First Lieutenant McFarland. Privates Robinson, McIntyre, Colerwood, Toney, McCabe, O'Connor, Dunphy, Gomm, O'Neil, Hanagan, McCahill, McGuire, Austin, Tracy, Bradburn, and Doorman Smith—17.

Refused to answer, Bustead—1.

Absent, Police-Surgeon Bradford.

Capt. Speight here suggested that it would be well that all the men should go out on patrol as usual without any regard to the opinions just expressed.

Capt. Robinson objected, and demanded that the outgoing men should deliver up whatever property belonging to the city they might have in their possession.

This request was generally complied with.

Capt. Robins in sent immediately a note to Capt. Wards, asking how the men of the Eighteenth ward might "meet" the Twenty first-ward as far as Twenty-eighth-street.

The Metropolitan men were then marched to their new quarters, where they were addressed by Captain Speight, for whom they gave three enthusiastic cheers.

They were afterwards divided into two platoons, and sent out upon patrol.

PAYING THE POLICE.

Comptroller Flagg gave checks yesterday for two "pays" to the police of several Wards. The remaining members of the force will be paid to-day.

These payments were to policemen, irrespective of their allegiance to the old or the new Board, and for dues up to the 27th of May. From that time Mr. Flagg says nobody until the Court of Appeals has decided who are policemen and who are not.

THE POLICE SPLIT HAS ENTERED THE COURT OF SESSIONS.—The Police war has reached the Court of General Sessions. A force of ten policemen are constantly detailed for duty there, as sergeant of the Court, doorkeepers, guards of prisoners, &c. On Saturday Recorder SMITH applied to the new Commissioners of Police for a posse of men who were obedient to the new law. His request was at once complied with, and the officers of the Court, who still chose to serve under Mayor WOOD, Judge RUSSELL and Chief MATSELL, were informed that their presence was no longer required. But very few left, however. Of the old force, Sergeant WALSH, and officers DOUGHERTY, PELL, BIRDSALL and RELAY, shook off their old allegiance, and announced their conversion to Albany Legislation. They appeared yesterday in Court, in citizens' apparel, not having obtained the new uniform, in place of the old which they had discarded. Of new men, detailed for the service of the Court, we noticed Sergeant DAVIS, who held the same position for three years, under Judge BEAME, Recorder TILLOW, Judge STUART, and the first eighteen months of Recorder SMITH's term of office, FRANK SPICER, also an old officer of the Court, and officer TREDAX in place of those who quitted the Court in disgust at the change, and remain faithful to Mayor WOOD and Judges Russell. The new men are not all appointed, but their number will be completed to-day. It is said that Judge RUSSELL contemplates a movement on the board, by way of checkmating the Recorder. We shall probably hear something of it to-day.

Matters in Brooklyn Police.

There is much ill feeling existing in this department between the Metropolitan and Mayor POWELL's policemen and overt acts are frequently threatened, but nothing of a serious nature has actually occurred of late. A slight disturbance occurred at the Third District Station House yesterday morning between Sergeant MCLANE and an officer named WILSON. The former under the old law was an Assistant Captain and in obeying the new law secured the enmity of Mayor POWELL, who appointed WILSON as Assistant-Captain. Yesterday Sergeant MCLANE found his private desk locked and the key removed, and failing in inducing any one to return the key he broke the desk open. For this he was roughly handled by WILSON, who claimed to be in charge of the Station House. The matter has been laid before the Grand Jury.

At the Fourth District Station House Sunday night a disturbance was prevented between two similar officers by the timely arrival of the Deputy-Superintendent.

Hay in the Bonded Warehouse—Trouble.

Our correspondent's letter sought information on the point why hay was permitted in the Bonded Warehouse that was lately burned at Brooklyn. The Custom House Chiefs have been considering the question, and they answered it fully yesterday, in a report to the Assistant to the Department at Washington. The store that was burned had some $200,000 worth of sugar in it. The owners, supposing that the Government was responsible for the duties in case of fire, neglected of course to insure the duties; hence the loss must be very heavy unless Congress comes to their relief.

The Custom House denies that the store was a bonded warehouse. It had a Government lock on it, but that, they affirm, was surreptitiously obtained. The Assistant Storekeepers who had the matter in charge were ordered, the Custom-House says, to store nothing there until the hay should be removed. But, under the earnest solicitations of influential parties, they allowed the storage before the combustibles and contents—hence the difficulty. That the owners of the goods should not suffer the loss, since they supposed the Government was insuring them, seems evident. That these agents by their acts made the Government responsible to parties confiding in them is admitted,—still the law recognizes no such authorities in its officers, and unless Congress by an act relieves the sufferers, they must suffer alone. We understand the Collector of the Port yesterday dismissed the five Assistant Storekeepers, out of whose alleged carelessness the difficulty has been bred.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Brady.

DECISIONS.

The People vs. Alexander McCutter.—Motion granted on payment of $10 costs.

James B Hodden vs. David M. Mellis, &c.—Motion for a new trial denied, with costs.

Mark Isaacs vs. The Beth Hanadrath Society.—Judgment ordered for the plaintiff.

Giles B. Williams vs. George H. McLaughlin.—Motion to amend docket of judgment, &c., granted.

Jacob Van Raalte vs. James M Henry, Jr.—Default opened on payment of all costs, $10 costs of motion and oil-burner cents, and on giving a bond conditioned to pay all costs awarded to defendant in this action.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Ingraham.

James R. Rockwell vs. the Hartford Fire Insurance Company.—The plaintiff had a lot of scythes in Litchfield, Conn., insured in the defendants' office. The insurance was for $3,000, and to continue three months; after the contract to insure, but before the policy was delivered, the goods were destroyed by fire. The defendants put in a general denial; the essential defence to the claim made against them being that the agent contracting for the risk was not duly authorized by the company so to do. Verdict for the plaintiff for $2,567 50, subject to the opinion of the Court.

THE HOME OF PICTORIAL ART IN AMERICA.—Whatever the eye rests upon anything that is really beautiful it always leaves a never fading impression upon the memory, and the mind ever reverts to it with pleasing and grateful recollections. The love of the beautiful is one of the leading characteristics of the American people, and nowhere do they more display this generous feeling than in their veneration for pictures, the creation of the genius of the sons of art. We have been more impressed with this idea upon a recent visit to GURNEY's Palace of Art, No. 349 Broadway, corner of Leonard street. There the magnificent specimens of photographs, hallotypes and daguerreotypes, in all their fidelity of expression and delicacy of touch, greet us upon every side. Familiar faces, rendered more so by the bold relief in which the features are portrayed, seem to look down upon us with an inspiration of life that is truly natural. Nowhere, indeed, have we ever seen so much artistic boldness exhibited in transferring the lineaments of humanity in such a manner that the originals seem to stand before us.

The real secret by which alone GURNEY has been so successful is the close attention that is paid to every detail of the art that he has now brought to such perfection; and the devotion that for years has labored to produce this result is rewarded by the crowds who continually throng his gallery to procure his life-like photographs, hallotypes and daguerreotypes. He has just introduced the Kohinoor photographs, which are rapidly gaining for him a world wide reputation.

They are by far the most superb specimens of photographic skill that has ever yet been produced, and it seems to be impossible for anything more brilliant to be conceived by the mind of man. GURNEY's indomitable industry is continually seeking new channels to advance his profession, and he is now considered the Napoleon of art in this country. Nothing surprises us when we learn that GURNEY has established it, and this last creation—the Kohinoor photograph—has of once taken its place in the front ranks of art productions. The Palace of Photographs, No. 349 Broadway, the studio of the artist GURNEY, is one of the most refreshing visiting-places in this city, and we call the attention of our readers to the fact that there they may secure one of GURNEY's inimitable pictures.—Extract New-York Leader, May 30, 1857.

KEMP'S WORM PASTILLES.—Children who reject, with loathing, the ordinary mercurialized vermifuges, will devour these Pastilles with as much gusto as other confectionary. They certainly and safely expel all intestinal worms. BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA, the sole survivor of a score of (so called) Sarsaparillas, in its new, concentrated form, cures all external complaints, resulting from foul blood, quicker than ever sold by D. T. LANMAN & Co., wholesale druggists, No. 69 Water-street, New-York, and by all druggists. Sarsaparilla, $1, and Pastilles 25 cents per bottle.

Not for Fifth-avenue and Fourteenth street alone was WILDE's immense millinery warehouse, No. 251 Broadway, established. He is a popular house. French bonnets, dress-caps and coiffures, ribbons, flowers, and all the latest modes to every description of millinery can be had there by all, without distinction of class, at the same remarkably moderate prices.

PURDY'S NATIONAL THEATRE.—The new local drama, by G. L. AIKEN, entitled "Uncle Tom and Dred of New-York Life," was applauded to the very echo last night, and no doubt it will have a long run; the pantomime of the "Magic Barrel" and drama of the "Trial of Witness" are to be performed with it to night. To-morrow a grand afternoon performance is to be given.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—The genuineness of these invaluable remedies is easily known. Look to the water-mark of the words "HOLLOWAY, New York and London," in semi-transparent letters in the paper of the book of directions. If this is not to be seen when held to the light, the same is spurious. Sold at the manufactory, 80 Maiden-lane, New York, and by all druggists, at 25c., 62c. and $1 per box.

SEA SICKNESS.

One of the greatest surgeons, says, writing to a friend in New-York: "I am convinced that constipation has a vast deal to do with sea-sickness; the Doctor's pills acted like a charm on board—everybody wanted pills from me. I always gave the name of Dr. BRANDRETH. Some were surprised to find a 'Regular' use that medicine; but in my case it was not so singular, for my father used it before I was born."

Often, when nothing has relieved vomiting of the most serious character, whether from sea-sickness or otherwise—where the retching has been appalling—a single dose of four Brandreth's Pills has at once cured, and the patient has fallen into a sweet sleep. When the mind cannot collect itself, when the memory fails, when it is an effort to fix the attention, when our sleep is broken and our waking hours are harassed with forebodings of evil, then Brandreth's Pills should be used. If these warnings remain unheeded, rheumatism, consumption, disease of the heart, bilious affections, jaundice, dropsies, piles, apoplexies and costiveness, will suddenly present themselves. These, BRANDRETH's Pills would have prevented, but, nevertheless, these they will also cure. Use them at once; do not let prejudice prevent the use of this simple but potent remedy.

Dealers supplied better than elsewhere, at No. 43 Brandreth Building. Retail price, 25 cents a box, with directions. Agents, No. 296 Bowery, and No. 241 Bleecker street; No. 52 Division-street; corner of Broadway and Twenty second-street; Mrs. HAYES, No. 175 Fulton-street, Brooklyn.

In going to the country be sure you protect your face from tan and freckles. Use the BALM OF A THOUSAND FLOWERS, morning and night, and it will not only eradicate them, but prevent their appearance. For sale at No. 281 Broadway, and by all Druggists.

N. B.—Beware of a spurious imitation put up by a person pretending to have been a partner. We never had a partner in the BALM OF A THOUSAND FLOWERS, and all such are fraudulent imitations. Be sure each bottle has the written signature of FREDERICK & Co., on the side.

"FREDRICKS' TEMPLE OF ART."—No. 585 Broadway, opposite Metropolitan Hotel.

Hallotypes superior to any made in this City.

Photographs, in oil, pastel, and aquerelle, by FREDRICKS' corps of Parisian artists.

Photographs, in Indian ink, Parisian style.

Daguerreotypes and Ambrotypes in colors.

Gallery open from 8 A. M. to 10 P. M., and free to the inspection of the public.

FONTAINE'S CREAM OF WILD FLOWERS—for washing infants and children—superior to all soaps and lotions; prevents chafing and eruptions, and imparts health, beauty and sweetness to the skin. For removing tan, pimples, freckles, and other imperfections it is unsurpassed. Sold by all druggists. F. G. FONTAINE & Co., Nos 305 & 589 Broadway.

LONG ISLAND.

YOUTHFUL THIEVES.—Five boys, the oldest not more than 14, have recently been arrested by the Police of the Eastern District of Brooklyn for burglary. They committed nine burglaries in eleven days—in every instance stealing money and cigars.

LOST CHILD FOUND DROWNED.—The body of HUGH WHITTLE, five years of age, who has been missing for several weeks past, was found yesterday morning in a public cistern at the corner of Union-avenue and Devoe-street, Eastern District. The parents reside at No. 106 North Tenth street.

BROOKLYN BOARD OF HEALTH.—An adjourned meeting of this Board was held yesterday morning. A resolution was adopted directing the Commissioner to advertise for proposals to contract Bond-street sewer into Gowanus Canal to abate a nuisance, was adopted. A number of nuisances were reported and ordered abated, when the Board adjourned.

The Special Committee on Nuisances intends to-day to visit several hone boiling establishments and other large nuisances which have been complained of.

BROOKLYN CITY COURT.

Before Judge Culver.

HEAVY VERDICT FOR SEDUCTION.

A. Smith vs. Andrew J. Conselyea.—This was an action brought by plaintiff to recover damages for the seduction of his daughter in the Spring of 1855, when 17 years of age. Two parties reside in the Eastern District of Brooklyn, and were children together. The case occupied the attention of the Court six days, and was concluded yesterday, the jury rendering a verdict of $10,000 for plaintiff, the amount claimed. Defendant, when called to the stand as a witness for himself, swore that he never had any improper connection with the daughter of plaintiff. Timothy O'Meara, a witness, swore that he had connection with her at about the time alleged against defendant. It was so evident that O'Meara had perjured himself, that Judge CULVER, at the conclusion of the trial, required him to give bail in the sum of $2,500 to answer any indictment that may be found against him by the Grand Jury.

NEW-JERSEY.

SUICIDE.—The body of an unknown man, about 5 feet 10 inches in height, dressed in brown and white cotton pantaloons, silk vest, black nipaca coat, drab Kossuth hat, and low ankle shoes, was found, on the evening of the 5th inst., supposed to have been lying in the bushes three or four days, at Johnsonville, about two miles from the Hoboken Ferry. An inquest was called on the body. Papers found in his possession showed that he was a native of Nuremburg, Germany. The verdict of the Jury was that he came to his death by shooting himself with a pistol in the head. The paper was written in German, with a pencil, and translated is as follows:

"The reason which drives me to destroy my life was a sickness which is incurable; all my nerves are affected, and when the disease is known will injure my honor.

"In possession of some money, which my bankbook will show. Will anybody be kind enough to send the same to my brother-in-law Nuremburg? Will also my soul. I do suffer horribly. I was unable to write to my brother. FLUGLOH."

A pocket-book, containing $1 Bill of silver, a bunch of keys, and a few other articles were found in its possession, but the bank-book alluded to was not found. For further particulars, inquire of JOHN HARPER, Esq., Justice of the Peace, West Hoboken, N. J.

MILITARY EXCURSION.—The Highwood Guards Captain and A. M. HAZLETON, of Hoboken went to New-Haven on an excursion yesterday, where they will be reviewed by the Blues. They were 28 strong, and were accompanied by Shelton's Band. The Guard landed in Hoboken during the early part of the day, and were reviewed by Mayor CARPENTER and members of the City Council. At one o'clock they crossed over to New-York by the Grand street Ferry, and marched down Grand street and Broadway to the Park. While there a photograph of the Company was taken. They took the boat for New-Haven at 8 o'clock, and will return on Wednesday.

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION CONCERNING DOGS.—Mayor CARPENTER, of Hoboken, has issued his proclamation forbidding the running at large during the dog days, of dogs that are not muzzled and do not have about the neck a collar bearing the name and residence of its owner. Any person may kill dogs not so secured from harm, and whoever interferes with the process of slaying the animals will be liable to a fine of $20 for so doing.

The Hoboken Council has appointed the Hoboken City Standard to be the Corporation paper, and FRANCIS MCDONOUGH Sergeant-at-Arms of the Council.

MONDAY, June 8—P. M.

The Official Averages of the Banks in the City of New-York for the week ending Saturday last, June 6, the particulars of which are advertised by each Bank on another page of this paper, present, in the aggregate, the following changes from the previous weekly statement of Saturday, May 30:

Increase in Loans	$1,288,893
Increase in Specie	319,199
Increase in Circulation	141,882
Increase in Actual Deposits	647,192

The increase, it will be noticed, is general, and the movement in Loans consistent with the increase in the other items. The Specie line is again over thirteen millions—unexpectedly so after the export demand of last week. The steady income of numerous small sums of Gold from the interior is again sensibly felt in equalizing the general movement of the week. The line of Undrawn Deposits is rapidly approaching seventy millions, notwithstanding the continued drafts made in settlement of the Foreign Exchanges.

Including the exchanges through the Clearing-House, and the balance in the Sub-Treasury, the following is the general comparison with the previous week, and also with this time last year:

COMPARATIVE RECAPITULATION.

	June 7, 1856.	June 6, 1857.	May 30, 1857.
Capital	$60,791,000	$60,442,000	$60,442,000
Loans	103,474,921	115,383,526	114,049,633
Specie	18,166,179	13,134,714	12,310,515
Circulation	8,430,252	8,838,575	8,690,693
Gross Deposits	90,609,243	96,594,391	96,157,814
Exchanged	23,575,539	27,361,301	27,581,256

The demand for Gold for shipment this week will, from present appearances, be large. The engagements for the Arabia, sailing direct on Wednesday, already count up $1,250,000, and the whole shipment may reach $1,750,000. The amount will be more readily supplied, without disturbance to the Market, as the California packet of 20th May will be due on Friday. The Sub-Treasury disbursed to-day $162,922, against $81,217 received, reducing the balance to $12,349,393. The banking houses in Forcign business are asking 109¾@109⅞ on London to-day and 5.17½@5.16¼ on Paris. The week opens on an easy market for Money. There is not much done in demand loans to day; the Brokers being generally easy.

The Stock Exchange continues mainly in the control of the speculators against the market, who further depressed nearly all the leading dividend paying road shares to-day. The decline, thus far, and within a very few days, is equal, on New-York Central, to 4½ ₱ cent., Rock Island 5, Galena 7 ₱ cent., Michigan Central 5¼, Panama 3½, Illinois Central 1½, Cleveland and Toledo 3½, and Reading 4 ₱ cent. In Erie, the business of the day ranged from 34¼ to 33⅝, closing 33¾ ₱ cent. Michigan Southern, under the statement in the card of the Directors this morning, as to the fictitious character of eight-tenths of the recent enormous sales at the Brokers' Board, was steadier, closing 48¾@49 ₱ cent. The general market closed unsettled. State and Railway Bonds barely supported. The condition of the Share list may be illustrated by stating that Michigan Central sold below 90, Toledo below 60, Rock Island at 91, Galena at 90, and New-York Central at 83 ₱ cent.

The Land sales by the Illinois Central Company in May, were 29,417 acres for $379,299, or at an average of $12 90 per acre. For the five months of the year ending May 30, the aggregate sales were 149,560 acres for $2,059,023, or at an average of $13 80 per acre.

The earnings by the Galena and Chicago Road in May were $224,281, against $222,082 the same month last year.

The collector of this port has issued the following notice, with a view of facilitating business upon the going into effect of the new tariff:

CUSTOM HOUSE, NEW-YORK,
Collector's Office, June 6, 1857.

Importers having goods in bond which they may be under the absolute necessity of withdrawing for consumption on or immediately after the first of July next, would facilitate business by having their entries prepared and presented at the Custom House, prior to that date, or at any time after this notice, in order that the duties may be adjusted and liquidated and the necessary forms for perfecting the entries completed.

(Signed) HERMAN J. REDFIELD, Collector.

The accounting officers of the New-York and Erie Railroad have made up an official statement of the business of the first and second quarters of the current railroad year, ending 31st March. We avail of an early copy which has been sent to us to present the separate and aggregate results.

ERIE RAILROAD, FIRST QUARTER—OCT. 1 TO DEC. 31.

Gross Earnings	$1,000,052	$1,221,187
Expenses and Interest	1,295,186	1,065,150
Net results to stock	$295,766	$156,036

in 1856 $139,730 ahead of all expenses and interest. This year, $295,766 remains the difference.

$498,382, a result not unexpected after the disasters which attended the unfortunate difficulty between the late Superintendent and the employes of the Road, and the further drawback of a hard Winter. The consequences of the strike, and subsequent gross mistake of the Board of Directors in continuing the late arbitrary Superintendent in his place for nearly six months thereafter, when it was as clearly seen by a portion of the Board, in six weeks, that his removal alone would stay the mischief, may be thus summed up, from the schedule before us:

Diversion of traffic	$256,174
Increase of expenses	231,965
Increase in floating interest, &c.	11,873
Total loss, as above	$498,332

The working of the Road is now under the immediate control of the President and his Division Superintendents. They took charge about the 1st April, and have by far the best half of the Railroad year in which to work out a result for the Stock more promising than the statement now

SECOND QUARTER—JAN 1 TO MARCH 31.

	To March 31, 1857.	To March 31, 1856.
Gross Traffic	$1,098,495	$1,231,283
Expenses and interest	1,379,656	1,275,754
Result to Stock—Loss of	$281,061	Loss of $42,492

HALF YEAR—RECAPITULATED.

	March 31, 1857.	March 31, 1856.
Gross Traffic	$2,704,077	$2,959,251
Expenses	$1,904,605	$1,573,920
Interest Funded Debt	869,785	869,785
Floating Interest	31,232	19,347
Rent Union lease	41,700	41,700
Taxes	29,700	29,679
Together	$2,777,022	$2,533,954
Result to stock—Loss	$72,945	Gain $425,387

The result to the Stock of the entire Railroad year of 1856 was:

Profit over Expenses and Int. to March 31	$425,387
Profit over Expenses and Int. to Sept. 30	920,908
Total for year	$1,346,295

Deficit first half of year	$72,945
Sinking Fund Dividend	420,000
Estimate for new construction	200,000
Together	$692,945
As against profits same time 1856	920,908

There is no question, from present appearances, of the ability of the management to secure at least this result. And more, if the proper division of the traffic between this City and Lake Erie, lost through the bad conduct of last Fall and Winter, can be restored.

VOL. VI.....NO. 1786. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10, 1857. PRICE TWO CENTS.

POLICE PROGRESS.

THE GROWTH OF THE NEW BOARD YESTERDAY.

Sixty Men Tried by the New Board, and as Many by the Old.

GREAT DOINGS IN THE THIRD WARD.

The Balance Struck in Fourteen Wards.

THE NEW COMMISSIONERS.

Sixty policemen, including many detailed at Chief MATSELL'e office and elsewhere, were tried yesterday morning for insubordination or disobedience of orders. Only two—both Fifth Ward patrolmen—appeared to answer, and the complaints against these two were dismissed on their promise to abide in future by the new law. The others will be dismissed to-day.

Nothing else was done by the Commissioners.

THE OLD COMMISSIONERS.

Two of the old Commissioners, Mayor WOOD and City Judge RUSSELL, were busily at work yesterday in removing from the Department all who acknowledge the authority of the New Board, and in filling the vacancies with new appointees. Among those removed by them yesterday was Capt. HOPKINS, of the Third Ward, in whose place JOHN W. BENNETT, Second Lieutenant of that Ward, was appointed. Capt. HOPKINS received notice about 2½ o'clock to appear for trial at 3 o'clock, and at 3½ o'clock he received official announcement of his dismissal. He immediately set about procuring a new Station-house, but was not successful. One will be got to-day.

A permanent station-house for the Fifth-ward Metropolitan force has been fitted up at No. 66 White-street and the roll was called there yesterday morning.

COMING OVER.

Almost every day and from every Ward accessions are made to the new force. Officer SHANGLE, one of the Nineteenth-ward detailed officers has given in his adhesion to the new Board.

The new uniforms and emblems are almost ready, and in a day or two they will be furnished the new force.

Sergeant LEFFERTS, late Inspector of junkshops, and attached to the Chief's office, has been named for special (detective) duty at the office of Deputy CARPENTER.

In all the Wards a quiet continues between the two forces.

Capt. SQUIERS, of the Eleventh-Ward, mentioned in his report yesterday to Deputy Superintendent CARPENTER that the comparatively small force under his command are necessarily compelled to remain on duty nearly the entire day that the Ward may be properly protected. He regrets this necessity, and praises the men for their fidelity. The Captain vigorously adds: "Two additional men—Messrs. EVARTS and CHURCH, most excellent officers—broke through the meshes of deception, forsook the lawless band of FERNANDO WOOD conspirators, and reported to me for duty this morning, stating that they were conscious that we were right, and that nothing but the dread of the tirade of foul abuse, and even violence, that was sure to meet them, prevented them from coming with us in the first instance."

CAPT. BENNETT TAKES POSSESSION OF THE THIRD WARD STATION—ABOUT HALF THE FORCE ABANDON IT.

Capt. BENNETT, by virtue of his warrant as Captain, received from the old Board, proceeded last evening to the Third Ward Police Station in Warren-street to take possession. Nearly the whole force of the District, detailed men and all, were present, in anticipation of events. First Lieutenant CROPSEY was in command. Officer GILMORE, who has been acting as Second Lieutenant in place of Lieutenant (now Captain) BENNETT, detailed on special duty, was also present. Capt. HOPKINS was absent. About 7½ o'clock the men were summoned to appear, by Lieut. CROPSEY, who called the roll, and then essayed to address the men with a view to ascertain how many were in favor of the new Commissioners.

Capt. BENNETT protested against the putting of any such question, and said that no one should call the roll there unless favorable to the old or Municipal Commissioners.

Lieut. CROPSEY replied, and after some further remarks from these officers, made in a friendly way, twenty of the force present (incinding two sergeants) declared in favor of the new Commissioners, and stepped one side, and, with Lieut. CROPSEY and acting-Lieutenant GILMAN declared for the Metropolitan Commission.

The remainder of the force, twenty-six in number, remained by the old Board.

Captain BENNETT said he regretted that men who had so long acted together on such friendly terms should now find it necessary to part. He believed, however, that every man in the force was acting honestly and consistently. The matter he presumed was a difference as to a point of law, and he hoped this difference would not give rise to any hard feelings on either side, but that a spirit of kindness should continue to exist as heretofore. He then desired that those who had declared for the new Board would step forward and deliver to him their stars, caps, &c., as such belonged to the City and in the Station-house which they were leaving.

The out-going men then stepped forward and placed their stars and caps upon the desk, most of them shaking hands with Capt. BENNETT, for whom they expressed their regards with warmth, saying in substance, that they believed him to be a good officer, and regretting that their connections, as to their duty of obeying what they considered the law, demanded a separation.

Captain BENNETT received these remarks in the spirit in which they were offered. The entire transaction was condnoted most pleasantly, marred only in one instance, and for a moment by ill behavior of one of the officers who threw his star at the Captain instead of placing it upon the desk as his companions had done.

When those who declared for the new Board had left, Captain BENNETT called the roll, and assigned posts to those answering. There were also present the squad of which he recently had command, for the enforcement of City ordinances, and these he also sent on post.

The Metropolitan force of the Ward will also do duty to-night, going on their beats at 12 o'clock.

The Balance Struck in Fourteen Wards.

Not all the districts have been canvassed, and it is not clearly known, therefore, what proportion of the men in the Police Department are in favor of the Metropolitan Commission. In some of the wards, where the men have been called on to express their opinion, the canvass was neither thorough nor properly managed, and thus many forming the new still remain in the old Department. Many such are coming over daily, and the statement of the numbers upon each side which might be accurate to-day would not be so to-morrow. We give below a recapitulation of the position of the forces in each ward, with reference to the two Boards:

First Ward—For the new Board—Ten men—10.

Second Ward—The men of this Ward have not given any formal expression of opinion on the question at issue.

Third Ward—For the new Board—Capt. Hopkins, First Lieutenant Cropsey, Acting-Lieutenant Gilman and twenty men—23. For the old Commissioners—Second-Lieutenant (now captain) Bennett and twenty-six men—27.

Fourth Ward—The force in this Ward have not yet been called upon to define their position.

Fifth Ward—For the new Board—Captain Carpenter (now Deputy Superintendent) and forty-four men—45. For the old Board—(nearly all detailed men,)—17.

Sixth Ward—No formal expression has been asked from the men in this Ward.

Seventh Ward—No vote taken. All yet act under Captain Letts.

Eighth Ward—Captain Turnbull, both Lieutenants, and forty-two men—45. For the old Board—13.

Ninth Ward—First Lieutenant Sebing, the Second Lieutenant and twenty-three men—25. For the old Board: Captain Ackerman and twenty-nine men—30.

Tenth Ward—Captain Norris, on Saturday last, invited his men to declare for which Board they were in favor of. All those present answered for the old, except six, who refused to answer new or old, considering the question impertinent and "unconstitutional." Those six, and about as many more, are claimed for the old Commissioners.

Eleventh Ward—For the new Board: Captain Squires Second Lieutenant Cameron and fourteen men—16. For the old Board: First-Lieutenant Craft (now captain) and thirty-nine men—40.

Twelfth Ward.—The total number of men in this Ward is 35. They have not yet been called upon to declare themselves. Captain Porter has given in his adherence to the new Board, to whom he sends his returns. A pretty large number, if not a majority of the men are understood to agree with the Captain.

Thirteenth Ward.—For the new Board, Lieut. Steers and twelve men—13. For the old Board, Capt. McKinney, First Lieutenant O'Keefe and thirty-five men—36.

Fourteenth Ward—At sun-down roll-call on Saturday the men of this Ward were called upon to declare either for or against the old Board. No one gave in his adhesion to the new, but it is understood that nearly a dozen of the force are in favor of the new Commissioners, but refused to say so on Saturday because they believed the manner in which the question was put to be unfair.

Fifteenth Ward—Nearly the entire force of this Ward, including the officers, are known to be for the new Commissioners, to whose office Capt. Dilks has been sending his returns. Some of the men here have been detailed to the Courts by order of the Deputy Superintendent. But as yet no formal vote on the question has been had in the Fifteenth Ward.

Sixteenth Ward—No vote taken.

Seventeenth Ward—For the new Board, one Lieutenant and eleven men—12. Capt. Hart, who was dismissed from the Captaincy of this Ward some time since by Mayor Wood, is in command of the new force of this Ward, and including him, the entire Metropolitan force in this Ward is 13 men. The new Station-house is on the corner of Bowery and Third-street. For the old Board, Capt. Mansfield and forty men—41.

Eighteenth Ward—No vote had yet.

Nineteenth Ward—For the old Board, First Lieutenant Bryan and eighteen men—19. For the old Board, Capt. Toomey, Second Lieutenant McCann, and thirty-four men—36.

Twenty first Ward.—For the new Board: Captain Speight, Second Lieutenant Palmer, and twenty-eight men—30. For the old Board: First Lieutenant McParlin and nineteen men—20. The Station-house of the new force is in Broadway, near Thirty-third-street.

Twenty-second Ward.—For the new Board: Second Lieutenant Van Orden and twenty-two men—23. For the old Board: Capt. Witter, First Lieutenant Riley and eighteen men—total, 20. When the question was put in this Ward by Capt. Witter, eleven men were absent—ten on special duty and one sick. They are all claimed for the old Board.

In the fourteen Wards canvassed, 265 men have declared for the New Board, or more than one-fifth of the entire force in all the Wards when the new law went into effect. Among the number who have espoused the New Board are seven Police Captains.

The Metropolitan force will, of course, greatly increase when the remaining eight Wards are canvassed, which will be, it is expected, before the conclusion of the present week.

A SILVER STAR TO CAPTAIN MANSFIELD.

Captain WILLIAM H. MANSFIELD, of the Seventh Ward Municipal Police, was presented, last evening, with a silver star. It was presented at the Manhattan House by ex-Alderman CORNELL, in behalf of the Municipal Police of the District, and is inscribed "WM. H. MANSFIELD—Fidelity and Truth." There was a great time on the occasion.

In Brooklyn, the names of some hundreds of unlicensed liquor dealers have already been taken down by the supporters of the law, with the intention of laying them before the Grand Jury for the purpose of indictment. The Jury will have their hands full, and there will be plenty of litigation. The Times says there are at least two thousand places where liquor is sold in that city, and of these, perhaps, three hundred have applied for license. About one hundred and fifty of this number have obtained their certificates.

In Brooklyn the Police Department is in a quiescent state. The trouble in the Third District Station-house has been arranged satisfactorily—the officers of the law, under the directions of his Honor Mayor POWELL, being permitted to discharge their official duties without the risk of having their heads broken.

The Policemen in the Fourteenth Ward.

I noticed a paragraph in each paper of this morning, stating that the whole number of Policemen in the Fourteenth Ward had declared, upon a call of the roll, in favor of the Wood faction and against the Metropolitan Commissioners. The statement is untrue, and must have arisen from the fact that the Fourteenth Ward has for years polled an overwhelming vote for the party of which FERNANDO WOOD assumes to be leader. In no other manner could it have arisen, for not only are there many true law-and-order-loving citizens residing in that Ward, but several of the present Police force hold themselves ready at any moment to declare their adherence to the laws of the State. No opportunity has as yet been given them for such declaration. At the roll-call mentioned by the papers, when a count was ordered, the direct question was not put to the men, whether they were in favor of upholding the laws of the State or submitting to the dictates of a one-man power, as it should have been, but whether or not they were willing to sacrifice the support of their families. The men are mostly poor and consequently refused to do or say anything which would discontinue their pay, as they were told.

I have it upon the best authority that not less than six, and it is thought near a dozen, of the present force in that Ward are ready to give in their adherence to the only Commissioners of Police now recognized by law, and it is further known that most of the force, were they not intimidnted by threats, would at once acknowledge their true allegiance.

FOURTEENTH WARD.

QUARANTINE.

A New and Stringent Law—Boarding Quarantined Ships to be Stopped—No Evading the New Law by Running to Perth Amboy or the Sound Ports—Quiet at Seguine's Point.

The three several warrants against DOMINICK RAGANS, for violating Quarantine regulations, were made returnable to Justice WELSH, of this City, last evening. They were not returned, however, but the thing is not to stop here. RAGANA evidently supposed that he was violating only the old law, which inflicted a merely nominal penalty, that was never enforced, and under which, upon conviction, the guilty party could be quite sure, if he had been moderately active in securing the presence of the men he voted for on election day, that sentence would be reserved. Once in a while, under that law, a man would be fined $5—which he wouldn't mind much, since every time he committed the offence he made $25 at least.

RAGAN'S offence was one which has been grievous in past years. Vessels quarantined with infectious diseases on board, all persons are forbidden to visit as they lie at anchor of course. Still friends on shore are often anxious to confer with those on board, and they have generally found men enough who, for a price, would take them in row-boats alongside. The visitor would not board the vessel, but every one knows that the stench of an infected ship, when undergoing the first purification, is intolerable and exceedingly poisonous, and persons in a boat lying to leeward of such a ship, and close alongside, are no less exposed, certainly, than if they were on her deck.

Just before the close of the last session of our Legislature a law was passed which enables the Health Officer to provide more effectually against these hazardous exposures, but its provisions make the person who boards an infected ship, or has any communication with her while under Quarantine, without the permission of the Health Officer, guilty of a misdemeanor and renders him liable to a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500, or to imprisonment of not less than three nor more than six months. They make it the duty of the District-Attorney to prosecute persons guilty of such offences in preference to any indictment then in his office;—of the Courts to try the offence in preference to all other cases pending, and on conviction to proceed forthwith to pronounce judgment. There is little doubt that these stringent penalties and provisions will abate the nuisance, of which so much complaint has been made heretofore. As it has never been published we give in full a copy of

THE NEW QUARANTINE LAW.

An act to provide for more effectually guarding against the spread of pestilential diseases. Passed April 14, 1857.

SEC. 1. The Board of Health, or the Mayor and Commissioners of Health, of the City of New-York, or the Board of Health of Brooklyn, or the Health Officer of the Port of New-York, whenever in their or his judgment the public health shall require, may order any vessel at the wharves of the City, or in their vicinity, to the Quarantine ground, or some other place of safety, and may require all persons, articles or things introduced into the City from such vessel, to be seized, returned on board thereof or removed to the Quarantine or other place of safety. If the master, owner or consignee of the vessel cannot be found, or shall neglect or refuse to obey the order of removal, the said Board of Health, or Mayor and Commissioners of Health, or Health Officer, shall have power to employ such assistance as may be necessary to effect such removal, at the expense of such master, owner, or consignee; and such vessel or person shall return to the City without the written permission of the said Board of Health, or Mayor or Commissioners of Health, or a Health Officer. Whenever any person shall have been employed as above provided to remove any vessel, or to remove any article or thing introduced into the City, from such vessel, and shall in pursuance of such employment effect such removal, he shall have a lien on said vessel, her tackle, apparel and furniture, for his services and expenses in effecting such removal.

SEC. 2. Whenever the said Health officer in the performance of the duties and in the execution of the powers imposed and conferred upon him by law, or by any regulation or ordinance made in pursuance of any Statute of this State, shall order or direct the master, owner or consignee of any vessel under Quarantine to remove such vessel from her anchorage, or to do any act or thing, or comply with any regulation relative to said vessel, or to any person or thing on board thereof, or which shall have been brought to said port therein, and said master, owner or consignee, shall neglect or refuse to comply with such order or direction, the said Health Officer shall have power to employ such persons and assistance as may be necessary to carry out and enforce such order or direction, and the person so employed shall have a lien on such vessel, her tackle, apparel and furniture, for their services and expenses.

SEC. 3. The liens specified in the preceding sections may be enforced in the same manner as other liens on vessels are enforced, by warrant of attachment, in the mode prescribed in title eight, of chapter eight of the third part of the revised statutes, all the provisions of which title shall apply to the services and expenses specified in this act; and the person or persons so rendering such services and incurring such expenses shall be deemed creditors of such vessel, and of her master, owner or consignee respectively; or such person or persons may have and maintain an action against the master, owner or consignee, or either of them, of such vessel, to recover the value of such services and expenses.

SEC. 4. Every person who shall oppose or obstruct the said Health Officer in performing the duties required of him by law, and every person who shall go on board of, or have any communication, intercourse or dealing with any vessel under Quarantine, or with any of her crew or passengers, without the permission of the Health Officer, or who shall without such permission invade the Quarantine grounds or anchorage, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred, nor more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment, not less than three, nor more than six months in the Penitentiary.

SEC. 5. Exclusive jurisdiction of the offences specified in the preceding fourth section, is hereby given to the Courts of general and special sessions of the peace, of the City of New York; and it shall be the duty of the District-Attorney of the City and County of New York to prosecute all persons guilty of such offences, in preference to any indictment then in his office; and it shall be the duty of either of the said Courts to hear and try the offences against this Act in preference to all other cases pending before it. And whenever any person shall be convicted on a trial for such offences, the Court shall forthwith proceed to pronounce judgment upon him according to the terms prescribed in the Act.

SEC. 6. Such provisions of existing laws as are inconsistent herewith, are hereby repealed: but such repeal shall not be considered to revive any Act or part of an Act repealed by the laws hereby repealed.

SEC. 7. This Act shall take effect immediately.

STATE OF NEW YORK, SECRETARY'S OFFICE.

I have compared the preceding with the original law on file in this office, and do hereby certify that the same is a correct transcript therefrom, and the whole of the said original law.

Given under my hand and seal of office, at the City of Albany, this 15th day of April 1857.

Copy. N. P. STANTON,
Deputy Secretary of State.

This law blocks another game, to which we have before referred. It was well known that many of our merchants, having vessels in the West Indian and South American trade, had been arranging to evade, on a large scale, the Quarantine laws of our port, by ordering their vessels to return their cargoes, during the Quarantine season, to Perth Amboy, New Haven, or other port in our vicinity, but not within our State limits. Even under the old law, this evasion was more hazardous, than profitable, if our Board of Health had its eyes about it. Last year the Hyperion attempted to dodge Quarantine. Orders met her at Sandy Hook not to come up the Bay, but passing around Long Island, to discharge her cargo at New-Haven, this order obeyed, she came to port in ballast.

Our Board of Health forthwith sent her down to Quarantine, where she laid out the days of her purification, precisely as if she had not been so sharp. Still it was a question how far the Health Officer might order such vessels into Quarantine, if the Board of Health did not happen to be in session. The temptation to evade is very strong. Perth Amboy is a beautiful harbor, accessible to small vessels from the sea, without crossing the New-York line, and there are several ports on Long Island Sound over which New-York has no control. These outside States would not be likely to make complaint until the breaking out of an epidemic cholera or yellow fever waked them up But the new law provides that all persons, articles or things introduced into this City from any vessel that is likely to be infectious, may be ordered into Quarantine on the judgment of the Health Officer. It confers on said Health Officer the power to enforce any regulation or ordinance made in pursuance of any statute of this State, when the public health requires it. The Board of Health is a creature of a statute of this State, and hence its regulations the Health Officer is competent at all times to enforce under the new law. So it is to be presumed that we shall hear very little this year of attempts to evade Quarantine.

QUIET AT SEGUINE'S POINT.

A policeman, from the Quarantine at Seguine's Point, arrived at the office of the new Commissioners yesterday morning, with a report from Capt. WALLING. He reports everything quiet at Seguine's Point, and is of opinion that there will be no further disturbance there.

Liquor.

MEETING OF THE LIQUOR DEALERS.

The members of the Liquor Dealers' Association assembled last evening at their head quarters, Metropolitan Hall, Hester-street. Notwithstanding the rain there was a large attendance. Mr. ENOS, the President, was in the Chair. After the ordinary routine business, such as receiving monthly dues, &c., the subject came up for discussion as to the course to be taken relative to presenting petitions for licenses to the Excise Commissioners.

A motion was made that the members recede from their previous action, declaring that they would send in to the Excise Commissioners no petitions for license. It was contended in support of the motion that the individual interests of the members required that they should get licenses. If the present Excise law were declared Constitutional they would all be left in the lurch if without having licenses to sell liquor, whereas if they had licenses they would be occupying substantial ground. To apply for licenses was but little trouble and could do no hurt, while it might do great good against an emergency.

The motion was resisted on the ground that no one in ten of the members could comply with the first requisition of the new law, which was to get the signatures of twenty freeholders in their respective wards to their petition.

After a long and sharp debate, the motion was lost, when the meeting, having no special business before it, adjourned to the next regular meeting.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF EXCISE COMMISSIONERS.—The Board met yesterday morning, at 10 o'clock, in the Court-room of Common Pleas, Part First. Commissioner KERR was not present. The Minutes of the preceding meeting having been approved,

Mr. C. J. Warren, on behalf the New York City Temperance Alliance, presented the nomination of E. S. Capron as Counsel to prosecute for violations of the provisions of the Excise Law.

Joseph McKee & Son, No. 292 Broome-street, presented their application for a storekeeper's license.

The Board adopted the following order:

The sureties on each bond shall not be less than two; and may be as many as shall be sufficient to equal the amount required by the law, and each surety shall justify in double the amount for which he is bound.

The Board adjourned to meet to-day at 10 A. M. in the same place.

Fires.

IN BEAVER-STREET.—Shortly after 6 o'clock P. M. yesterday, a fire broke out in a room on the fourth floor of the building No. 91 Beaver-street. The building, which is occupied as offices of various kinds, was damaged to the extent of about $500. It is insured for $10,000 in the East River Insurance Company. The furniture in several of the offices was damaged more or less by water. In the basement, occupied by LANE & Co., stationers, some $200 damage was done. Insured for $2,000.

IN THE CENTRAL PARK.—A wooden house in Sixty-sixth-street, near Eighth-avenue, (Central Park,) was destroyed by fire about 12 o'clock last night.

TAMMANY REORGANIZATION.

THE METHOD OF ITS NEW LIFE.

Report of the Democratic Republican (Reform) Committee.

The several meetings with which Tammany has labored of late, have resulted at last in a reported set of regulations, and a basis of Union and Reform. The last of the meetings was the one at which the Report was read. It was held on Thursday night, when ROBERT J. DILLON, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of one from each Ward, appointed at a previous meeting, presented the Report given below. To-night the several Ward Associations take the matter into consideration, and to-morrow evening the Wilson Small, (alias Wood, alias "Regular General) Committee will meet and again denounce the whole scheme.

REPORT.

To the Democratic Republican Convention of the City of New-York:

The Committee appointed to report a plan for the organization of the Democratic Republican Electors of the City of New-York, respectfully report that they have concluded their labors, and submit as the result thereof the accompanying plan.

REGULATIONS FOR THE ORGANIZATION OF THE DEMOCRATIC REPUBLICAN ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK.

The Democratic Republican Convention of the City of New-York, composed of five members from each Ward, consisting of delegates from each of the late general organizations, and representing every interest in the Democratic party of the said City, in Tammany Hall assembled, in order to accomplish the objects for which they were constituted, do provide as follows:

1. The Central organization of the Democratic Republican party of the City of New-York shall hereafter be composed of delegates to be elected from Democratic Republican Associations in the several Wards, to be formed and conducted as hereinafter provided, which central organization shall be known as the Democratic Republican General Committee of the City of New-York.

2. Each Ward Association shall be so organized and conducted as to afford every member an equal voice under the rules and regulations hereby established in the election of all delegates which it may be entitled to elect.

3. The several Ward Associations shall be formed and governed by a uniform Constitution to be prescribed in detail by this Convention, and which may be only amended by the General Committee elected in pursuance of these regulations.

4. No person shall be eligible to membership whose name is not on the poll list of the last proceeding General or Charter Election, nor unless he shall subscribe his name to an obligation that he will support the party organization of which the Association is a part; that he will submit in all matters relating thereto to the action of the Association expressed in accordance with the Constitution and By-laws, and that he will faithfully support all nominations regularly made by the Democratic Party through the said organization. He shall also append to his signature the place of his residence. No person shall be eligible to membership, in any such Ward Association, previous to the election of the first General Committee, who did not vote the BUCHANAN and BRECKENRIDGE electoral ticket at the last election, nor unless he shall subscribe a declaration that he so voted.

5. Each Ward delegation in this Convention shall meet in the Ward represented by them, and elect one of their number as Chairman, and they shall also appoint two well-known, reliable and impartial Democrats as clerks; and the Ward Association hereby authorized shall be organized as follows: The delegation shall agree upon a list of Democrats, whose names are upon the poll-lists of the Ward, who shall organize the Association, and who shall, from time to time, admit new members therein as may be prescribed by the Constitution. If the delegation cannot agree upon a list, they shall decide upon the number of names to be selected, and each member of the delegation shall name an equal portion or the number so determined.

6. The Ward Associations shall be simultaneously formed in the several Wards, and the members of this Convention for the Ward shall give three days' notice thereof through the public press.

7. It shall be the duty of the delegation to provide themselves with an authenticated copy of the poll lists of their Ward, and to be in prompt attendance at the time and place designated by them to effect such organization, by enrolling the persons determined upon as herein before provided, due notice of which time and place shall be given.

8. Notice shall be given to the members of the first meeting of the Association, which shall be on Wednesday, the 17th day of June, and at the time and place designated for such meeting the Chairman of the delegation shall call the meeting to order, and receive and put to the Association a nomination for temporary Chairman, and temporary Secretaries shall also be appointed.

9. The permanent organization shall be thereupon made by the election of such officers as shall be designated in the Constitution and By-laws.

10. All persons not having subscribed the obligations and Constitution as hereby required, shall be excluded from any participation in the deliberations and proceedings of the Association.

11. The Constitution shall provide for the future admission of Democrats as members of the Association, upon being proposed and vouched for by members, and being duly elected. Every Democrat who is eligible under the Constitution and By-laws shall be admitted to membership by the vote of a majority of the members voting at a regular meeting.

12. New members shall be formally initiated, and before subscribing the Constitution, shall be informed by the presiding officer of the nature of the obligations they will assume on becoming members, to submit to the government of a majority of the Association, and to support all regular nominations made by the Democratic party through the organization of which the Association is a part.

13. The Constitution shall provide that all elections of delegates by the Association shall be by ballot, each member to vote upon the call of his name, which shall be thereupon checked upon the roll by the proper officer. After the first call of the roll, the absentees shall be called and permitted to vote in order; after which, and before the closing of the poll, the presiding officer shall permit the members present who have not voted, to deposit their ballots. Every member of the Association shall have a fair opportunity to vote.

14. The Ward Associations shall hold monthly meetings.

15. A Ward Committee shall be elected, which shall be the Executive Committee of the Association, and which shall have such sub-committees as may be provided by the Constitution or By-Laws.

16. The whole organization as above contemplated shall be completed by the 15th of June, 1857, and the names of the officers of the Association shall be reported in each Ward at or before that date, to the Chairman of the delegation from the Ward in this Convention, and by him reported, with the proceedings of the delegation, to the Convention at its meeting to be held that evening for its final action. This Convention shall then provide for the election of a general committee of five members from each Ward by the Ward Associations in accordance with the regulations hersby established, to assume, upon the final adjournment of this Convention, the power and prerogatives which have heretofore pertained to the Democratic Republican General Committee of the City of New-York, and which shall supersede all other central organizations.

17. The Constitution of the Ward Association shall provide that after the election of the first General Committee, no member of the Association shall vote at any election by the Association, unless he has been a member thereof for a period of at least one month.

18. In case of any disagreement among the members of this Convention, from any Ward, relative to any matter committed to them, the vote of a majority of the delegation shall control.

19. No person shall take any part in the organization of any Ward Association, until he shall have subscribed his name to the declarations and obligations above required.

20. Each Ward Association shall also elect five delegates to a central body, to be known as the Democratic Republican Young Men's General Committee of the City of New-York.

21. In accordance with the above regulations, each of the Ward Associations thereby authorized shall be organized and governed by the following

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE 1. This Association shall be known as the Democratic Republican Organization of the —— Ward.

ART. 2. Its officers shall consist of a President, two Vice-Presidents, a Treasurer, two Secretaries, and a Sergeant-at-Arms. The first election of officers shall be on Wednesday, the 17th day of June, 1857, and the annual election shall be on the Tuesday next after the first day of January in each succeeding year. The annual election of officers shall be by ballot.

ART. 3. The President shall preside at all meetings of the Association at which he may be present, and shall preserve order and decorum. In the absence of the President, the first Vice-President, and in his absence the second Vice President shall preside.

ART. 4. The Treasurer shall collect and keep all moneys of the Association and disburse the same upon sufficient warrant.

ART. 5. The Secretaries shall keep an accurate roll of the members, alphabetically arranged, call the same at all elections by the Association and check the name of each person voting in such manner as to show who have voted and who have not, and record the proceedings of all meetings of the Association in a book to be kept for that purpose.

ART. 6. The Sergeant-at-Arms shall see that members are properly notified of the meetings of the Associations; and he shall also be in attendance at every meeting to keep the door and exclude all persons, except members, from the private meetings of the Association, and to execute the orders of the presiding officer and of the Association.

ART. 7. The Sergeant-at-Arms shall receive a compensation for his services, to be fixed by the By-Laws of the Association.

ART. 8. There shall also be a Standing Committee for each Election District, to consist of three members, who shall inquire and report in relation to every resident of the Election District, proposed for membership; which Committee shall be appointed by the President.

ART. 9. The original members of the Association consist of Democratic Republican Electors of the —— Ward, admitted to membership in pursuance of the regulations provided by the Democratic Republican Convention at Tammany Hall, ELIJAH F. PURDY, President, and ALFRED CHANCELLOR and SAMUEL D. VANDERHEYDEN, Secretaries, on the 4th day of June, 1857. New members may be proposed at any regular meeting of the Association, and if the person proposed is vouched for by one other member, in addition to the member proposing such person, the proposition shall be referred to the Standing Committee for the Election District in which the proposed member resides, who shall report at the next regular meeting. Upon their report the Association, at a regular meeting, shall vote upon the admission of the proposed member. The vote shall be taken by the men in favor of the admission rising, and then those opposed; unless five members demand a ballot, in which case the vote shall be to admit or reject. If a majority of the members voting are in favor of admission, the person proposed shall be declared by the presiding officer to be duly elected.

ART. 10. No person shall become a member of the Association or in any manner participate in its action, unless he is a legal voter of the Ward, and has been duly elected as a member, and has affixed his name and residence to the following declaration:

"The undersigned being desirous to become members of the Democratic Republican Organization of the —— Ward, each hereby binds himself to support the Central Organization of which the same is a part; to submit to all action of the Ward organization had in accordance with the Constitution and By-Laws, and to faithfully support all nominations made by the Democratic Republican Party through the said organization."

ART. 11. Before any new member shall be allowed to affix his name to the declaration above prescribed it shall be read to him by the presiding officer, who shall also state to him the nature and effect of the obligation he will enter into by signing the same.

ART. 12. All elections of delegates by the Association shall be by ballot at such times and under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Democratic General Committee at Tammany Hall.

ART. 13. At all elections of delegates and at the annual election of officers one of the Secretaries shall call the roll of the Association. Each member shall vote upon the call of his name, and as the vote is deposited in the ballot box his name shall be checked on the roll. After the roll shall have been called through, the names of the members who have not voted shall be again called, when each of them may vote, and the name of each member so voting shall be checked on the roll. Before the final closing of the poll the presiding officer shall proclaim that the roll has been twice called, and that five minutes only will be allowed for members who have not voted to deposit their ballots. Every member who has not voted who may present himself within that time shall be permitted to vote and his name shall be thereupon checked on the roll. The poll shall then be finally closed and the votes immediately canvassed. No person shall vote at any election after the first election of delegates of the Democratic Republican General Committee unless he shall have been a member at least one month.

ART. 14. The Association shall also elect an Executive Committee, to be known as the Ward Committee, in such manner and of such number, and who shall perform such duties and have such Sub-Committees as may be prescribed by the By-Laws of the Association. The Committee shall report its proceedings to the Association at every regular meeting.

ART. 15. The Association shall hold regular monthly meetings at such times and places as may be fixed by the By-Laws.

ART. 16. Any member who shall be guilty of disorderly conduct at a meeting of the Association or who shall violate the obligation he entered into upon becoming a member, shall be liable to have his name stricken from the roll by the vote of a majority of the members voting at a regular meeting, provided that an opportunity shall first be afforded to him to disprove the allegations against him. No such person shall be readmitted to the Association within six months, nor without being again duly elected as a member.

ART. 17. The Association shall not have power to amend this Constitution, but may establish its own Rules of Order and By-laws, provided that they do not conflict with the Constitution and regulations established by the Democratic Republican General Committee at Tammany Hall.

The report having been read, was discussed by Messrs. Robert J. Dillon, Anson Herrick, Daniel E. Sickles, William J. Brisley, Richard Busteed, John Vance, John Cochrane, John Kelly, George H. Purser, and Henry H. Morange. The question was then taken upon the report, and the same was adopted, by a vote of 59 to 9, as follows:

THE FIRST-AVENUE TRAGEDY VERDICT.—The inquest upon the body of the woman ELIZA SHAW—who was found dead, with her throat cut from ear to ear, on Monday morning, in the yard of residence rear of No. 358 First-avenue—was resumed yesterday morning by Coroner PERRY, at the Twenty-second Ward Station-house. Several other witnesses were examined, but nothing further to fasten the guilt upon the husband of the deceased. Dr. WELTJE said it was possible for deceased, after losing the quantity of blood which was found on the floor of the room, to have recovered sufficiently to have gone to the window and thrown herself out.

The evidence here closed, and the case was given to the Jury, who, after a deliberation of about two hours, came in and proposed delivering a verdict implicating the husband of deceased, but the Coroner refused to accept such a verdict, and the following was then rendered:

"We find that deceased came to her death by her throat being cut by some person unknown to the Jury."

On the rendition of the verdict the husband of deceased was discharged from custody.

TERRIBLE CALAMITY!

Burning of the Steamship Louisiana in the Gulf of Mexico.

THIRTY-NINE LIVES LOST.

The loss of the steamship Louisiana, of the New-Orleans and Galveston line, has been briefly reported in our telegraphic dispatches. An extra of the Galveston News, of the 31st ult., furnishes full details of the catastrophe. It says:

"We have to record one of the most dreadful calamities that has ever happened in this country. The steamship Louisiana, Captain SHEPPARD, is now a total wreck, having been burning some six or eight miles southeast of this city, in the Gulf about 1 o'clock morning.

Our citizens were aroused by the unusual fire alarm, as the fire was in full sight. The first intelligence received was by the arrival of a boat from the unfortunate steamer, about sun-rise, bringing some dozen passengers, our fellow-citizen, Mr. GROVER, being among the number.

Mr. GROVER says that he had a berth on the starboard upper deck—that the first alarm was persons asking where the fire was, about 1 o'clock; he stepped out of his room and discovered smoke, but no fire—passed round the stern to the larboard side, where he

BOOKS OF THE WEEK.

THE ENGLISHMAN IN KANSAS—A SQUATTER LIFE AND BORDER WARFARE. By T. H. GLADSTONE, Esq. With an introduction by FRED. LAW OLMSTED, author of a "Journey in the Seaboard Slave States," "A Journey through Texas," &c., &c. New-York: MILLER & COMPANY. (Late Dix, Edwards & Co.) 1857.

Whatever the final result of the actual crisis of affairs in Kansas may be, the episode of the Border War in that celebrated Territory, will always be full of interest for the student of human nature and of American History. When the immediate political value of the events which gave a place in the world's attention to a few struggling settlers scattered along the far Western frontiers of American civilization shall have quite passed away, the collision between the "Border Ruffians" of Missouri and the "Free-State" inhabitants of Kansas will be remembered for the instructive light which it throws upon the supreme importance of social organization as contrasted with forms of polity and of administration. Every record then of the struggle in Kansas which will preserve for us the essential features of the conflict, and describe, with truth, the conduct and the character of the combatants possesses much more than a temporary or a partisan interest. It is a contribution to the history of the race and to the science of human society.

Such a record we believe this book of Mr. GLADSTONE'S, is to be. Everybody remembers, we doubt not, the graphic letters on the subject of Kansas which were so extensively republished in this country from the London Times, during the months of October and November, 1856. In those letters the Missourians and the Yankees—the slashing, swearing, savage Atchisonians—and the "dog-gunned Abolitionists," were photographed with so much unquestionable spirit, and so much self-evident truth, that, while we all blushed at the picture so presented to the world, we could not quarrel with the impartial stranger who had so truly stated what he had so clearly seen. When we came to inquire into the antecedents of Mr. GLADSTONE, we found that he belonged to a class of Englishmen not commonly given to unnecessary meddling with the affairs of their neighbors—and more disposed in general to pooh-pooh great moral questions and stern "issues," than to take them up in a fanatical spirit. He was found to be a gentleman of good position, whose relations in this country had led him to associate more with Southern than with Northern society, during his visit here—and whose prepossessions, therefore, were not to be counted on as particularly favorable to the party of the Free-Soilers in the Kansas warfare. It was impossible not to listen with attention and respect to the report of such a witness, rendered, as was very evidently the case, with so single a desire to inform the world correctly on a subject of permanent interest and importance.

The letters of Mr. GLADSTONE have grown into the volume before us. In their present form they cannot be spared from the library of any man who wishes to understand the real position of our public affairs and the probable drift of our national destiny. In language as clear as it is picturesque, and in a temper which at once predisposes the reader to sympathize with and to trust the narrator, the whole story of the Kansas war down to a period just preceding the happy retirement from the Presidential Chair of a Chief Magistrate whose name will never be forgotten till the two sentiments of indignation and contempt shall be extinguished in the hearts of the American people. From that point the progress of affairs to the date of the appointment of Governor WALKER has been traced by the American editor, Mr. OLMSTED, whose name is a sufficient guarantee for the general fairness, candor and accuracy of his statements.

What the body of the work is to the history of the Kansas troubles, the preface of the American editor is to their philosophy. In some fifty pages of vigorous thought and sound ethical feeling, Mr. OLMSTED sets forth the intense contrast between the qualities of personal character developed by the respective influences of Slave and of Free Society, and illustrated in the shock of the two systems upon the fields of Kansas. We cannot too earnestly commend this introduction to the grave consideration of our fellow-citizens in both sections of the country. The Southerner who wishes to see the effects of the institutions under which he permits himself and his children to grow up, as they are seen by honest and sincere foreign observers, cannot consult a truer and clearer mirror than is here held up to him. The Northerner who finds it difficult to understand why the citizens of the Republic at large should concern themselves with the extension of a social system peculiar to certain of the States, will find here matter of infinite moment, so advanced that the most prejudiced cannot repel its appeal, or the most thoughtless disregard it.

This American edition of the Englishman in Kansas, we repeat it, is a book of permanent value, which possesses the further attraction of an intense immediate interest. It deserves the widest circulation and the most careful perusal.

Some of the most valuable and entertaining books with which our libraries have been enriched and mankind made wiser and happier, have been the production of chance. Men have gone in pursuit of asses and have found kingdoms. Literally they have gone after gold and merchandise, and have found the materials which they have made into volumes worth infinitely more than the objects of which they went in pursuit. Idlers have gone on pleasure travels and have been forced to become authors; vagabondish boys have run away from school, and found themselves famous as authors before they were conscious of having done anything to deserve such a distinction. It was with no intention of writing Childe Harold that BYRON first set out on his travels, but he wrote that immortal poem while he was wandering, and woke one fine morning, and found himself famous in consequence. When R. H. DANA went to sea for his health he could hardly have anticipated that spending two years before the mast in a wretched little brig, where he was worked half to death, would be the means of gaining him a literary reputation. Neither could HERMAN MELVILLE have anticipated when he ran off from home and shipped as a green hand on board a Nantucket whaler to go "round the Horn," that out of so unpromising a commencement of life would grow those famous works, Typee, and Omoo. Doctor KANE'S heroic and perilous explorations in the Arctic regions in search of the remains of Sir JOHN FRANKLIN resulted in giving to the world a volume unequaled for its absorbing interest.

One of the best books we have recently seen of this class, which was produced by accident, relates to a part of our continent of which we have known next to nothing, though it is within a week's travel of New-York, until very lately. It is a part of our continent, which at once epitomizes and exaggerates all the other parts, where Nature has produced all the luxuries and riches of which her productive forces are capable. It is a region of gold, silver, diamonds, opals, oranges, and of woods almost as precious as metals and stones; where nothing is lacking but Anglo-Saxon strength and enterprise to render it the choicest spot of all the earth.

The work to which we have allluded is entitled, Explorations and Adventures in Honduras, comprising Sketches of Travel in the Gold Regions of Olancho, and a Review of the History and General Resources of Central America. By WILLIAM V. WELLS. Published by HARPER & BROTHERS. Mr. WELLS went to Honduras from California to examine and ascertain what degree of truth there might be in the reports of discoveries of gold placers in Central America, and to establish commercial relations with the Government of Honduras in connection with an association of capitalists in San Francisco. During his stay in the country, besides attending to the object of his mission, he employed himself industriously in gathering all the information he could respecting the people and their history. The materials he collected he has introduced into his volume, and given us a better book on that splendid region than has been before published. There are two points upon which Mr. WELLS' volume are especially to be commended. The style is lively, without being flippant, the descriptions are graphic, without exaggeration, and the facts are lucidly stated; the illustrations, which are very numerous, are much superior, both in drawing and engraving, to anything we have been accustomed to in similar works.

Mr. WELLS found the region of Olancho more abounding in gold and other precious raw materials than he had anticipated; the country teems with dye woods, spices, gums, medicinal herbs, gold, silver, iron, cinnabar, ivory-wood and mahogany. But they are comparatively useless, wasting their wealth, because there is no stable Government to protect the lives and the property of the people; and because the people who inhabit this paradise are the laziest set of philosophers who encumber the earth. The indolence of the Olanchalo is proverbial even in Central America, where all are indolent. Mr. WELLS gives a decidedly impressive sketch of the habits of these human sloths:

"Imagine a native reclining in a hammock attached to the rafters of a hut, through the chinks of which percolate the cooling gales of these paradisaical regions. From above, and within reach, depends a luscious bunch of plantains or bananas. He swings leisurely to and fro, watching the curls of his cigarro wreathing in fantastic figures between his vision and the blue mountain peaks that form the green valley of his birth-place. To all the great issues and sounding events of the noisy world beyond and abroad he has remained all his life in blissful ignorance. When appetite demands, he detaches a plantain, transfixes it upon a long stick, and, leaning out of his luxurious nest, deliberately toasts it at the embers smouldering near the door. This simple operation completed to his taste, Don Fulano hauls the fruit into the hammock, and discusses it, stretched at full length in his swinging eyrie."

What a pity that THOMSON could not have read this description, that he might have made use of it in his Castle of Indolence. This is one of the facts that are stranger than fiction.

It would be sheer injustice, both to ourselves and the authors of so grave and learned a work as the Indigenous Races of the Earth, to attempt to give anything like a criticism upon it in so brief a space as we are confined to here. We must be content, therefore, to acknowledge its receipt now, with the promise to review it hereafter. A book made up by so many able hands, on a topic of such great interest, requires more than a passing notice. Its title is formidable, viz.: Indigenous Races of the Earth, or New Chapters on Ethnological Inquiry, including Monography, or Special Departments of Philology, Iconography, Craniescopy, Palæontology, Pathology, Archæology, Comparative Geography and Natural History. Contributed by ALFRED MAURY, FRANCIS PULSZKY and J. ATKINS MEIGS, M. D. With communications from Jos. LEIDY, M. D., and Prof. L. AGASSIZ, LL.D. Presenting fresh investigations, documents and materials, by J. C. NOTT, M. D., and GEO. R. GLIDDON. Philadelphia: J. B. LIPPINCOTT & Co.

Putnam's Monthly, for June, is a very great advance, popularward, on the previous numbers of that Magazine since the publishers commenced illustrating their pages. The first article, entitled "Greenway Court," gives some pleasant sketches, with pen and pencil, of the old English part of the Old Dominion. It is a paper on the residence of Lord FAIRFAX, the early friend of WASHINGTON. It is one of the best Magazine illustrated articles we have seen in a long while. The article that follows it is totally different, but equally good in its way. It is a good healthy and breezy description of a Cruise in a mackerel smack, full of energy and hearty feeling. The illustrations are most capitally done.

"Miss Caley," the next article, is more imaginative, and the illustrations, by HOPPIN, are well drawn and full of humor. The other contents are varied and magazinish, and the poetry is of that sensuous character which has distinguished nearly all the poems of this work since its commencement.

The Young People's Illuminated Magazine, edited by R. PHIPPS and published by BROWN, LOOMIS & Co., is one of the handsomest juvenile periodicals we have had. The third number, for June, contains a good many capital wood cuts of a very superior kind, both in execution and design, but we do not quite comprehend the reason of its being called an "Illuminated Magazine," as illuminations, applied to books, mean colored engravings, and the illustrations to this work are not of that class. Children's books should always be strictly true, and a promise implied in the title should be fulfilled by the contents of the work.

We have received an illustrated book of a very unusual kind from a publishing house in Boston, which, we must confess with a feeling of mortification, we supposed to be an English production, until a close examination satisfied us that it was an indigenous work. It is not of the very highest order of talent, it is true, but it is of a character that is much more rare with us. It is entitled, Mr. Hardy Lee, His Yacht, being 24 Sketches on Stone, by Chinks. The title efficiently explains the nature of the book, and we can add, with very great pleasure, that the sketches are exceedingly well drawn, full of humor, and evidently by the hand of a genuine yachts-man. We are most happy to know that we have a Chinks among us. He is nothing like an imitation of LEECH, but he sketches as that incomparable humorist might have sketched if he had been a Yankee and an amateur sailor. We offer our heartiest congratulations to Chinks, and hope to have the pleasure of welcoming another volume of sketches from him. Mr. Hardy Lee will be an indispensable companion on board of every yacht on our coast, and in the rooms of every club-house.

AFFAIRS IN FRANCE.

The Paris Press on Lord Napier's New-York Speech—M. Gaillardot on the United States—The Decadence of France—The Miracle on Mount Salette—Death of Vidocq the Thief-Taker—Curious Incident in his Professional Career—Arrival of Carpentier—Miscellaneous News and Gossip.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PARIS, Monday, May 18, 1856.

The speech of Lord NAPIER before the St. George's Society of New-York has not passed unperceived or unappreciated at Paris. At a moment when the French national pride is at its zenith, the proposition that, to the Anglo-American race belongs the future empire of the world, falling from so important a personage as the British Minister in America, naturally excites in France a storm of bitter criticism. I say naturally, because England and the United States have long given the world to understand that they are enemies; while on the other hand France is the ally of England and the ancient and well-tried friend of the United States. In this state of things, and without any apparent incentive, if we overlook the patriotic influence of a good dinner, Lord NAPIER, completely ignoring the great power that fought their battles against Russia in the late war, claims for his country and the United States a future of greatness that could not but have the effect in France I have already indicated. But when the London Times in response to this speech declared that his Lordship had promulgated a great truth, and that without the friendship of the United States England would be alone in the world, the French press exclaimed with one accord, "Treason! Treason!" The present equilibrium of the two worlds was in danger.

It was not, therefore, without a well marked satisfaction that they learned, a few days later, that the British Minister held in his pocket a singular post scriptum to his after-dinner flatteries, in the shape of a rejection of the amendments to the Central American treaty. This rejection, following so quick upon the heels of Lord NAPIER'S speech, threw the question into confusion, and the French press avows its inability to fathom a situation so full of surprises and denegations.

The United States has found in France, in the person of M. FREDERIC GAILLARDET, an ardent champion of her laudable qualities, and an indulgent critic of her defects. M. GAILLARDET lately entered the editorial corps of the Presse, and from the commencement has filled an immense space in the columns of that journal. His articles, which vary from three to five columns in length, and appear every second or third day, are all on American or English subjects, but mostly the former. M. GAILLARDET'S long residence in New-York, as editor of a journal there, eminently fits him for the labor he has undertaken. The Presse, at the same time, announces the intention to devote a larger portion of its space to serious essays on the institutions and progress of foreign countries. It is thus enabled to put forward those principles of Republicanism which are the basis of its faith, by avoiding to speak of its own country; and in this programme we are rejoiced that the direction has been placed in the hands of M. GAILLARDET. To show you how advanced this gentleman is in his opinions, I quote the following from one of his late American articles, written in reply to an article of M. LAURENTIE, in the Union, on "The Monarchy in the United States and Mexico:" "On the contrary," says M. GAILLARDET, "what M. LAURENTIE calls Yankeeism is precisely the quality in which the Latin races are wanting. It is ambition, without doubt, an instinct of covetousness; but it is energy, labor, perseverance and instruction as well; it is order harmonizing with liberty, reason harmonizing with faith; it is, in fine, progress and the general welfare disseminated throughout as the ransoms of the conquest. The day when the North Americans shall have extended these vices over Mexico, there will perhaps be a nation less for diplomacy, but there will be an Empire the more for civilization, industry and commerce. A new granary and a new market will be opened for Europe, which will share find immense resources and a market centupled over that which now exists. The political equilibrium will suffer, but humanity will lose nothing; France in particular cannot but be the gainer."

In the article of the Union, M. LAURENTIE, in attempting to alarm his readers with the rapid growth of the American Confederacy, by annexations from foreign territory, states that it has risen in seventy-five years from thirteen to thirty nine States. M. GAILLARDET, in correcting this (what he calls) "material error," falls into the singular error himself of setting the States down at thirty-three.

An apportionment bill now before the French Chamber furnishes a striking proof of the assertion that the country has entered a period of decadence. In the distribution of members of the next Chamber, it is shown that while the population has increased in thirty-two departments, it has diminished in the fifty-four others. The last quinquennial census demonstrated the startling fact that the population had diminished in the whole country. The publication of the census by departments gives a clue to the causes of the decrease. It is found, in fact, that the increase is only in the departments where the large cities are located, and in the manufacturing departments. The decrease is going on in the purely agricultural departments. But let it not be believed that it is an emigration from the agricultural to the manufacturing departments that accounts for the change, for it must be kept in mind that there is a total loss in the whole country, and that the increase in the manufacturing departments has been nothing more than normal, without emigration and even in a country where the normal increase under the highest prosperity is but small. According to this apportionment bill the total loss of electors is 74,828. In deducting from this figure the augumentation of 38,843 electors in the gaining departments, the difference, which is 36,435, will correspond to the loss of one Deputy to the Chamber, according to the law, which fixes the apportionment at one Deputy for every 35,000 electors. But this loss falls in such a manner as to cause the loss of seven members. The old Chamber, which came in in 1852, and goes out the present month, numbers 261 members; the new Chamber which is to be voted for in a few weeks, will only number 254 members. The great fact to be observed in these statistics is that the loss of population falls principally on the agricultural districts. We have in this fact another proof of the remark that has often been made before, that agriculture as an occupation is repugnant to the mass of the French people. They rush into stores, hotels and restaurants, but they enter the fields only under compulsion. The deductions to be drawn from these facts are most unpromising for the future progress of the country.

You will recollect the miracle of the Mount Salette. This pious idyl of the Catholic faith originated some three years ago in a verdant arm of the French Pyrenees, and spread over the world with as much rapidity as did the discovery of gold in Capt. SUTTER'S mill-race. Two poor little shepherds, a girl of fourteen, and a boy of eleven, were guarding their cattle one day on the borders of a small stream. The distant village church bell brought them the mid-day Angelus, and the children, after eating their frugal meal, fell asleep under the shade of an exhausted fountain. When they awoke, their first care was to seek their cattle, which they soon found grazing quietly on a plateau on the mountain side. Tranquil on this point they returned to the fountain. But oh! surprise! the fountain they had left alone they now found inhabited.

A luminous cloud opened before their eyes, and discovered to the astonished vision of the children the radiant face of a lady, seated on a stone, with her feet in the dry basin of the fountain. The vision was the Holy Virgin Mary. True, the children remarked that she did not carry the infant Jesus, as the images represent. She wore a crown of roses, somewhat jauntily pitched forward. The blue scarf of the painters had been forgotten, but in its stead she wore an apron of gold over a robe of silver, decorated with stars in pearls.

The children found the vision charming, though not responding exactly to their ideas of the Virgin; but as they did not know the lady, they were about to flee, when she beckoned to them to approach. The children, seduced by the mildness of her voice, approached and were confounded when they were told they stood in the presence of the Mother of God. She told them that she had need of making a revelation to the world and that she had chosen them as the medium of communication. She spoke in French, and informed the children that she wished to divulge the cause of the potato disease, which was the common violation among her people of the Sabbath. But as she pronounced the word pomme de terre (potato) the children looked confused, not understanding her, and the Queen of the Angels, who, it would seem, in her quality as such, ought to have known that the children only spoke patois, addressed them in their own dialect. After thus explaining the object of her vision she said, "Now, my children, you must communicate what I have told you to my people," and then suddenly disappeared.

The news of this vision, as you will recollect, nearly upset the whole Catholic world. On the Mount Saletie, houses and churches were built, and the pilgrims poured in from all parts of the world, to pray at the shrine of this modern Mecca. The Abbé LEMENNIER, a witness on the trial, declares that one day he counted a multitude that would have made a grand army, and he adds that of sixty thousand pilgrims who passed the night in prayers, with their knees in the snow, their heads envoloped in a freezing fog, not a single one caught cold!

Since then MELANIE, the shepherd girl, has been carried off by an Englishman, and her companion, the boy MAXIMUM, has turned out a bad fellow. Their sudden notoriety spoiled them. The Virgin selected bed subjects for the divine mission she wished promulgated among her people.

The Pope at last sent two Abbées to examine and report upon the miracle of La Salette. The Abbé DELBON, unwilling that the church should longer rest under the scandal of this supposed miracle, published at once a report in pamphlet form, which declared the authoress of the miracle, Mademoiselle DE LAMERLIERE a false divinity, showed how she performed the miracle, brought forward the testimony of the merchants from whom she bought her costume and the various articles necessary for the deception, and gave other details on the private life and character of the pretended Virgin, which she claimed was a libel and an attack on her private character. She cited the Abbé before the Court of Grenoble last year for a defamation of character, and laid her damages at 20,000 francs. The Abbé was acquitted. Mademoiselle DE LAMERLIERE appealed to a higher Court, and the second trial has just taken place. The doors were closed against the public and the press, because the tribunal did not wish to bring more scandal on the church by the publication of details little fit for the public eye; but the judgment has been published and confirms completely that of the lower Court.

The death of VIDOCQ, the great thief catcher, last week, has again directed public attention to a man whom the world already regarded as dead, since his name had been forgotten, and the generation who had known and glorified him had almost passed away. For many years VIDOCQ has lived a quiet and retired life in the quartier Popincourt, in the midst of an indigent population, in the most unknown part of the city.

A few days before his death, says a journal, VIDOCQ was seized with a caprice which proves that the imagination of his ardent brain, which had labored so long only in the details of crime, had survived time and the approach of the dying hour. He imagined that, like a new Antæus, if he could touch with his dying feet the fresh earth, he would recover all the strength and vigor of his younger days. The fresh earth was brought, and spread on the floor at the side of his bed. VIDOCQ arose slowly from the bed, by the aid of his nurses; he extended his now attenuated herculean limbs, and when he felt the earth under his naked and crisped feet a sudden flash of life shot through his body: he drew himself up, breathed a deep inspiration, and for a moment that body which had been a terror to evil doers as well by its strength as by the intellect which governed it, was illuminated with vigor and life. But it was only for a moment; the effort was an unnatural one and too much for his force; he fell back powerless and cold. His prostration was so complete that he no longer preserved any hope, and now commenced to prepare for death. In four days he died. A worldly sentiment governed him, however, to the last. He had an ambition for a large funeral, and ordered that the sum of three francs each should be paid to a large number of workmen to follow his coffin to the grave. This was done, and there were in fact a large number of workmen, but very few black coats at his funeral.

VIDOCQ'S period of glory was the Restoration. He was the creator of the popular Brigade de Surete, of which he was a long time the chief. His memoirs, which he published, I believe, in 1829, in four large volumes, have been translated into English, German, Italian and Spanish. For a long time he was the hero, the mystery, the god of the Parisians. Himself a thief, he came out of the chain-gang to enter the police. If a robbery or an assassination was committed, the first question was, "Is VIDOCQ after the malefactor?" Or if the malefactor escaped, everybody exclaimed, "That's because VIDOCQ was not in the affair." Finally VIDOCQ fell into the exclusive business of watching for hire infidel wives and husbands, a highly lucrative and amusing occupation at Paris, but certainly not very reputable. Even in his later years so great was his renown in this business that his aid was frequently sought by wealthy people. His last exploit was the following:

A rich merchant went to him to consult on a deficit of 150,000 francs which he found on his books. VIDOCQ demanded—

"What is the age of your cashier?"

"Twenty-five. But I am as sure of him as of myself; he has also been robbed; he is a victim like myself."

"Are you married?"

"Yes."

"How old is your wife? Is she handsome? Is she honest?"

"Oh, Sir, my wife is virtue itself—honorable, attached to me, above—"

"Never mind all that; your cashier is 25; is your wife handsome?"

"Since you insist upon knowing, she is handsome, but—"

"But! but! no matter about the buts! You wish to find your money, don't you, and you have confidence in me?"

"Of course I have, since I am here!"

"Very well, then; go back home, make believe that you are going on a journey, and introduce me into the house."

This was done. The merchant left home, and VIDOCQ hid himself in a closet near the chamber of the lady. Breakfast was served, a young man was shown in, and was thus addressed by Madame:

"Very well, Arthur, he is gone, but he suspects us, and we are lost."

The rival of CARPENTIER went over a long tirade of love and desolation, concluding with these words:

"Only one road is left open for us; let us take what remains and embark for—"

VIDOCQ stepped out of his concealment. Tableau!

"My children, be calm, or I'll break both your heads," said VIDOCQ. "We understand each other, I suppose? Now, tell me, where is the stolen money?"

"We have only 100,000 francs left," replied the woman.

"Are you telling the truth?"

"Oh, I swear it."

"Very well! Give it to me." The money was given over.

"Now, then, let this affair be forgotten; never speak of it to your husband, and he shall know nothing. As for you, Sir, give me your delicate little thumbs." He placed handcuffs on the gentleman, conducted him to Havre, put him on a ship bound for America, and left him with the French adieu, "Go and hang yourself elsewhere."

VIDOCQ came back to Paris, handed the 100,000 francs to the merchant, saying, "Your cashier was the thief, but he had spent 50,000 francs of the money with a danseuse: I embarked him for New-York." Afterward no happier family was ever known than that of the merchant.

CARPENTIER arrived out by the Fulton, and was immediately transferred to the prison MAZAS. He says that he confessed, because the American court and lawyers agaced him—made him nervous. He would prefer more expeditious and straightforward justice, even if it were severer. In all probability he will get it.

The Court to which young BERRYER and his confederates in the frauds upon the Napoleon Docks appealed, has confirmed the judgment of the lower court in the terms of imprisonment, but diminished a third the amount of the fine. This, however, was a change in the verdict scarcely worth the attention, since it stands as nothing compared to the imprisonment and the large sums the culprits are condemned to restore to the corporation.

The King of Bavaria came to town yesterday with the Emperor and Empress to visit the horticultural exhibition at the Crystal Palace; but the public entry of the King will only take place on Monday next. In the meantime their Majesties are amusing themselves in the grand old style at Fontainebleau, with hunts, balls, dinners, theatrical representations, music parties on the lake, and fireworks. Only the romance of all this is spoiled by being recounted to us by telegraph or railroad, in lieu of troubadors or costumed heralds.

The Grand Duke CONSTANTINE, after leaving 5,000 francs for the poor of Paris, took his final leave on Saturday, and at the last dates was at Bordeaux.

Mlle. RACHEL has arrived in France, and is now at Montpellier. Her health, although improved, is still in a condition to prevent her from appearing on the stage.

The Spring reunion of American diplomats—a time-honored institution—is now in session here. The present is said to be a peculiarly afflicting occasion—since it is the last, at least of the present batch.

Bristol Convention—Direct Trade with Europe—Commissioner to be Sent to England—Great Interest and Excitement.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

VIRGINIA, Friday, June 5, 1857.

The Railroad and Commercial Convention of Virginia met at Bristol, according to appointment. The same became organized by the election of Hon. FRANCIS MALLORY, of Norfolk, as President, and Messrs. A. K. MOORE, editor of the Bristol News, C. W. BUTTON, of the Lynchburg Virginian, and R. G. BROUGHTON, of the Norfolk Herald, as Secretaries.

Delegations were in attendance representing the following Internal Improvement Companies: Norfolk and Petersburg, Petersburg and Lynchburg, or South Side, Virginia and Tennessee, Virginia and Kentucky, East Tennessee and Virginia, Cincinnati, Cumberland Gap and Charleston, Northeast and Southwest Alabama, Orange and Alexandria, Virginia Central, Alexandria, London and Hampshire, Manassas Gap and the Richmond and Danville Railroad Companies.

Nearly every railroad interest in Virginia was represented in this Convention, besides some other connecting lines outside the limits of the State, together with a delegation from the city of Petersburg and the town of Bristol. Great excitement prevails at this time all over the State in regard to direct trade. More interest is felt on this subject now than was ever before exhibited by the people of Virginia. It is the fixed and certain determination of Virginians to accomplish this important end, if possible. The first practical step ever taken was the holding this Convention and the business it transacted. They not only adopted resolutions, but appointed a commission to England. The expenses attending this mission will be borne by each of the railroad companies, in proportion to the length of their respective lines.

After the meeting became organized, a Committee of eleven were appointed to prepare resolutions for the Convention, which took a recess in order to allow time to the Committee to make their report. The following are the resolutions of the Bristol Convention, held on the 3d:

Resolved, That Virginia possesses the associated and industrial wealth, capital and resources that enable her to fulfill without oppressive exactions or unreasonable burdens on any, all the obligations that rest upon her, and accomplish and perfect all her great systems of public policy. That it is alike the dictate of wisdom, honor, security and patriotism, that the important and leading lines of inter-communication now in progress and unfinished within her borders, should be steadily and liberally supported with all the means for their perfect and entire completion.

Resolved, That no work of internal improvement designed for the transportation of heavy tonnage and produce from the interior to the seaboard is or can be regarded as complete or finished, until the means are afforded for direct trade from the Chesapeake and its waters to Europe.

Resolved, That the natural and artificial lines of trade which are now in use and operation among us, engaged in the transportation of an amount of domestic commodities and productions, and of foreign articles of commerce and trade, are already sufficient to maintain a line of first class steamships; and that the associated public and individual wealth and power of Virginia can readily supply the means necessary for such a line.

Resolved, That faith and justice demand that the Federal Government shall extend like facilities and advantages to the transportation of the mail by the proposed lines as it has heretofore extended to other lines of ocean steamers.

Resolved, That the works of internal improvements now in progress will derive great benefit and facilities in their construction and rapid completion from the establishment of the proposed line of steamships, which will add incalculably to the productions and trade already requiring direct lines of communication with foreign markets.

Resolved, That in view of the objects above indicated, a Commissioner to visit Europe for the purpose of disseminating correct information in that country as to the financial and industrial condition and resources of Virginia, and also to place prominently before the commercial men abroad the advantages which must follow a direct trade with us on the completion of that extended system of improvements, now so nearly accomplished, and which when consummated will connect our seaports with the great producing and consuming country stretching from the Chesapeake to and beyond the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, by the shortest and cheapest lines of intercommunication between the East and the West.

Resolved, That our Commissioner be directed more especially to confer with parties abroad in reference to the speedy establishment of a suitable line or lines of steamers between the waters of Virginia and Europe, and that he be also requested to place himself in correspondence with the managers and proprietors of the great Eastern Steamship Company, and report to the President of this Convention whether or not the vessels of that Company are likely to promote the objects of this Convention.

Resolved, That the Commissioner be authorized to say, on our behalf, that we are not merely sensible of the importance of this trade, but we are unalterably determined to establish and maintain it upon a permanent basis, and he can assure those disposed to connect themselves with us that such an enterprize will receive that support from the people of Virginia and the other States here represented which its importance commercially and politically so imperatively demands.

Resolved, That the expenses attending this commission should be borne by the Railroad Companies of the State who feel interested in the subject, in proportion to the length of their several lines; and that those who feel authorized to do so now pledge themselves to that effect on behalf of their several Companies, and that others differently situated be requested to take immediate action to that end.

Resolved, That we invite the cooperation of such portions of our country and such other lines of improvement, together with the commercial communities in our State who may have an interest with us, in establishing a line or lines of ocean steamers.

These resolutions were sustained in animated and able speeches by Mr. F. B. DEANE, of Lynchburg, and Hon. WM. B. PRESTON, of Montgomery, Virginia, and unanimously adopted.

On motion, Hon. WILLIAM BALLARD PRESTON was nominated and elected as Commissioner to Europe, in accordance with the foregoing resolutions.

The Convention determined that a copy of its proceedings should be sent to the President of every Railroad Company in the State, including those of other States whose improvements may connect with ours. It furthermore resolved, that the several Railroad and Canal Companies of this State be requested to appoint delegates to meet in the City of Richmond on the Tuesday after the first Monday in December next to further the objects of this Convention, and to consider any subjects of common interest to these Companies.

On motion, JOHN R. MCDANIEL, President of the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad Company, was appointed the Financial Agent, to assess the different Railroad Companies with the amount of their apportionment towards defraying the expenses of the Commissioner to Europe.

A resolution was adopted that when the President of this Convention convenes it again, it shall meet in Norfolk.

Resolutions of condolence were then passed by the Convention relative to the melancholy accident that befell one of the delegates on his way up to the Convention. His name was WM. MCGHEE, of Petersburg. The accident consisted in attempting to get on the cars while in motion, missed his hold, fell down and was crushed, survived a few minutes and soon expired. A wife and nine children have to mourn his loss.

In the next correspondence I shall send you an account of salt works and plaster banks in south-western Virginia, as well as the nature of that section of the country and all about it.

New-Hampshire—Inaugural Address of Governor Haile.

A summary of Gov. HAILE'S inaugural address to the Legislature of New-Hampshire, has been given by telegraph. The Governor's opinions on certain points are given more fully below:

"After specifying the reasons which impel him to the duty, His Excellency proceeds to recommend a provision of law requiring a longer period of residence in the state before a stranger can be admitted to have a voice in the direction of public affairs, and also the adoption of such provision as has been made in other States, requiring every citizen to be able to read the English language before being authorized to vote at the polls.

While cautioning the Legislature against any unnecessary mingling together local interests with such as are committed to the National Administration, the Governor says that New-Hampshire, as a sovereign State, having an interest in the affairs of the General Government, has a right to make its voice in these affairs heard over the country. As the people share it, so ought they have something to say regarding their moral responsibility for Federal laws and actions. States have power—he says—to admit to the privileges of citizenship, and to protect those whom they may so admit, under the general Constitution. 'When the highest tribunal of the country declares that citizenship is made to depend on mere color or race, the race or color so proscribed should have their minds relieved of all doubts concerning their rights under the laws of the State. With this view, and by way of protest against a principle contrary to the spirit of our institutions, it may be expedient to declare what is now true, that, under our local law, all men, of whatever grade, color or race, if injured, or unjustly deprived of their property or freedom, may at least sue for redress, and be heard in our courts.' An earnest protest against the decision of the United States Judges in the matter of DRED SCOTT is suggested, as that decision is one 'repugnant to the sense of justice and to the principles of equality which lie at the foundation in our system of government.'

The responsibility of the people for the evil of Slavery having its commencement where Slavery ceases to be local, and the history of that institution and its extension being familiar, the necessity, the address says, is apparent, that every constitutional means of resistance to the steady encroachment of the institution over territory now free, is just and incumbent. 'Pecuniary aid is not asked for from the State, as the present condition of the settlers (of Kansas) does not make it necessary or expedient. No exigency may hereafter arise; but while we confidently hope that, without the shedding of blood, and in the peaceable exercise of the rights of citizens, the cause of freedom may prevail, it is a plain requirement of duty to afford sympathy and encouragement, and, if necessary, pecuniary aid, to those who are contending for the rights of free labor in the United States Territories.'

The Governor intimates that, in consequence of the death of the late lamented Hon. JAMES BELL, Senator from New Hampshire in the United States Congress, whose terms of office would have expired in four years from the 4th of March last, it will become the duty of the Legislature to fill the vacancy."

The Fiftieth Birthday of Agassiz, the Naturalist—May 28, 1857.

From Dwight's Journal of Music.

[The following lines (as one will hardly need to be told) are by LONGFELLOW, and were read among friends at a birth-day dinner, which they will long keep in fresh remembrance.]

It was fifty years ago
In the pleasant month of May,
In the beautiful Pays de Vaud,
A child in its cradle lay.

And Nature, the old nurse, took
The child upon her knee,
Saying: "Here is a story-book
Thy Father has written for thee.

Come, wander with me," she said,
"Into regions yet unread;
And read what is still unread
In the manuscripts of God."

And he wandered away and away,
With Nature, the dear old nurse,
Who sang to him night and day
The rhymes of the universe.

And whenever the way seemed long,
Or his heart began to fail,
She would sing a more wonderful song,
Or tell a more marvelous tale.

So she keeps him still a child,
And will not let him go,
Though at times his heart beats wild
For the beautiful Pays de Vaud;

Though at times he hears in his dreams
The Ranz des Vaches of old,
And the rush of mountain streams
From glaciers clear and cold;

And the mother at home says "Hark!
For his voice I listen and yearn;
It is growing late and dark,
And my boy does not return!"

[To this we may add one of the more impromptu inspirations of the hour, by JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.]

A health to him who reached to-day
Life's height of water shedding,
Where Hope and Memory kiss and say:
Let's keep our golden wedding:
To him whose glow the heart could reach
Of glaciers that he studied,
Who learned whatever fish could teach,
Except to be cold-blooded!

To him who, if our earth were lost,
And Nature wanted counsel,
Could make it over at less cost
From ridgepole down to groun' sill:
Could call the Dodo back to youth,
Could call Ornithorhynchus,
Nay, were we gone, from just a tooth
Could good as new re think us!

To him who every egg has scanned,
From Roc to flea included,
Save those which savants find so grand
In nests where mares have brooded!
To him who gives no each full leave
(His pedigree amended)
To choose a private Adam and Eve
From whom to be descended!

But stay—for chance some thoughts are best—
I meant the health to proffer
Of him, our friend there and our guest,
And yet not that I offer:
No, rather drink this toast with me,
Worth any common dozen:
Here's Adam and Eve Agassiz,
To whom we owe our cousin!

The Object of Gen. Walker's Visit to Washington, &c.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, June 6.

General WALKER's object in visiting this city is a matter of some speculation in the press. It is suggested that he desires to obtain from the Government some disclaimer of any intention of interposing obstacles to any renewed attempt which he may make to establish his power in Nicaragua. Civil war in that State is likely to be immediately renewed. The Government could hardly be maintained there, even if new disturbing causes have arisen, in consequence of WALKER's career. A considerable portion of the people had, at one time or another, favored WALKER, and they will be subjected to such penalties by the opposite party as to force them into insurrection against every new government of Nicaragua, or any portion of the territory of the State among other neighboring States. Nothing is more probable than the recurrence of a circumstance which will induce the weaker factions in Nicaragua to call in foreign aid.

The several parties to the Nicaragua transit dispute have each made representations to the Government. Mr. GARRISON has made some propositions recently to the Government on this subject. But it is not at all probable that Gen. WALKER is coming here, as has been intimated in some quarters, to aid his grantees, GARRISON & MORGAN, in recovering their business and their great losses; for it is well understood that, of late, they had ceased to fulfill the conditions of their grant, and had withheld their aid and countenance from Gen. WALKER.

There are at least three prominent competitors for the right to the Nicaragua transit. Commodore VANDERBILT was the holder of this franchise when it was taken from him by Gen. WALKER, together with several steamers which, in the war, fell into the hands of Costa Rica. He has to receipt of the Costa Rican Government, he says, for this property, and also a claim upon Nicaragua for damages and losses to which he had been subjected. Mr. WEBSTER, an English subject, holds the grant of the Costa Rican Government for the exclusive use of the Transit, and Mr. GRINNELL, of New-York, is, it is stated, interested with him as an assignee of the franchise. Messrs. GARRISON and MORGAN have also a claim for reparation to their franchises as derived from the late Walker-Rivas Government.

The latest phase which this matter assumed was that of a coalition of interests and influence between Mr. WEBSTER and Mr. C. K. GARRISON, both of whom were recently here, and who made some propositions to the government looking to a resumption of the passenger and freight line across the Isthmus, under the joint guaranty of the United States, England, Costa Rica and Nicaragua, for the future security of their interests, against hostility from any quarter.

The consummation of such a scheme would frustrate any filibuster attempt upon Nicaragua, except through a combination between the transit company and the invading parties. ION.

Laws of the State of New-York.

CHAPTER 387.—An Act to Incorporate Homœopathic Medical Societies. Passed April 13, 1857.

The People of the State of New-York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 4. It shall be lawful for homœopathic physicians in each of the counties of this State, to meet together on the first Tuesday of May next, at the place where the County Courts are appointed to be held in their respective counties, and organize County Homœopathic Medical Societies, in the same manner as is provided in an act entitled "An act to incorporate Medical Societies for the purpose of regulating the practice of physic and surgery in this State," passed April 10, 1813. And whenever a society be organized as aforesaid, in either of the said counties, it shall be known by the name of the Homœopathic Medical Society of the County in which it shall be founded, and shall have all the powers, rights and privileges, and be subject to all the duties and responsibilities now by law given to or imposed upon a county medical society organized under the act aforesaid.

SEC. 2. If the said physicians shall not meet and organize themselves, at such time and place as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for them to meet at such other time as a majority of them shall think proper, and their proceedings shall be as valid as if such meeting had been held at the time before specified.

SEC. 3. This act shall be and is hereby declared to be a public act.

SEC. 4. This act shall take effect on the first day of May next.

WHEN A MAN MAY KILL HIS ASSAILANT!—A case was decided on Wednesday last, by the Court of Appeals at Frankfort, Ky., which settles the question to when a man who is attacked in the State of Kentucky is justified in killing his assailant. The case was from Grayson Circuit, in which MERRIMAN had been convicted of manslaughter for the killing of one IRELAND who attacked him, and the lower court charged the Jury: "If IRELAND assaulted the defendant and he had reasonable grounds to believe he was in danger of sustaining great bodily harm, or the loss of life from such assault, and if necessary, to protect his life or person from great bodily harm, he might kill IRELAND, if he had no safe means of escaping. But if the defendant could have safely retreated from the danger and by that means have saved his life and person, he is not excusable for the killing of IRELAND." The higher court however decided that this charge was wrong. That the Jury had nothing to do with the question, whether "The defendant could have safely retreated," that being a question to be settled by the judgment of the defendant himself. "In the exercise of this judgment he must act rationally. Whether an actual necessity to kill existed or not, was a question to be decided by MERRIMAN at the time. Though he may have erred in his judgment—though he could have safely retreated, yet if he acted in good faith, and had reasonable grounds to believe that his only safety was to kill his antagonist, the law excuses him."

THE PEABODY INSTITUTE IN BALTIMORE—ANOTHER DONATION.—The Baltimore Patriot says: We are enabled to state definitely that the Committee to whom was assigned the duty of selecting a site for the Peabody Institute, have fixed upon the lot in Mount Vernon-square, fronting the Monument. Added are the adjoining lots of Mr. PENNINGTON and Mr. MAY, of the same depth, giving a front on Mount Vernon-place of 145 feet, which the proprietors have consented to sell. The entire cost will be in the vicinity of $100,000, a higher price than the Committee felt at liberty to expend for a site, until they conferred with Mr. PEABODY, who, being so much pleased with this location beyond others spoken of, that he at once proposed to add $50,000 to the original bequest of $300,000, in order to have the niche structure erected on this commanding, eligible and beautiful site. A Committee has been appointed to negotiate for the purchase, which will probably be made in a few days

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

THE BURDELL ESTATE.

Testimony as to Mrs. Cunningham's Sleeping Apartment.

BURDELL NEVER RECEIVED SO MUCH AS BY MRS. CUNNINGHAM.

The Court met yesterday morning at the accustomed hour, with the usual number of spectators.

The Surrogate was compelled to close the iron shutters of one of the windows to prevent a repetition of the annoyance that he has experienced from the prying curiosity of the Park "loafers," who have persisted throughout this investigation in gazing into this room, and making anything but polite comments on the appearance, manner, &c., of the witnesses and others.

Mary Murphy sworn—Examined by Mr. Tilden: I live at No. 107 Wooster-street; I don't know my age, but am about 22; I am not married; I know Mrs. Emma A. Cunningham and the late Dr. Burdell; I lived at No. 31 Bond-street during the past year; Mrs. Cunningham employed me; I left No. 31 Bond-street on the 10th of November; I was there two months; I made all the beds while I was there; Dr. Burdell slept on the second floor, back room; there was no other bed in that room; there was no bed in the office; there is a small hall bedroom on that floor, but have never observed or made a bed in that room; there was something in there that would turn down and make a bedstead; I saw it down once; I did not notice anything else in that room; I imagine but one person slept in the Doctor's bed; I don't know where Mrs. Cunningham slept during the two weeks before I left; I was in the third story front room during that time, and made a bed there; don't know who slept there; I was never in the room early in the morning; I took a breakfast to Mrs. Cunningham in the third story front room on a Sunday morning; she was sick, lying on the bed; I never saw Dr. Burdell in the room during the two last weeks; no one told me to make the bed; I have been in the room to arrange it during the evening, at about 7 or 8 o'clock; I then usually found nobody there; sometimes I went there after that hour to see that I had forgotten nothing; I had no occasion to see Mrs. Cunningham before I went to bed; the young ladies slept in the back attic, and I slept in the next room; I went to bed at ten or half-past; the bed in the third story front room, when I made it, showed that somebody had slept in it; I can't say whether one or two slept in it; I did not knock at any of the doors; the adjoining room was occupied by Mr. Eckel; Mrs. Snodgrass occupied that small room a few days before I left; at this time Mrs. Cunningham's room was supposed to be in the attic; I can't say whose room the third story front room was at this time; when I first came it was Mr. Thayer's; I don't know when he left, but it was before Ullmann came; Mrs. Snodgrass was there three days before I left; don't know where Eckel or Mrs. Cunningham slept during that time; before Mrs. Snodgrass came there don't know where Mrs. Cunningham slept; when Mr. Eckel and Mr. Ullmann came, a room was fixed for Mrs. Cunningham in the attic.

Cross-examined by Mr. Clinton—I was there two months; I often saw the Doctor and Mrs. Cunningham speak; she went with me into his room in the morning to oversee the work; I have seen them in his room together; Eckel's book-case bedstead came to the house a few days after I came; the Doctor, I think, helped up stairs with it when it came; the Doctor went clear up into Eckel's room with it; I think this was in the afternoon; I saw him in Eckel's room helping to put it up, with a few more gentlemen; I saw Mrs. Cunningham, the Doctor, and another gentleman go out together about 9 o'clock; I don't know where they went; the gentleman who accompanied them was Dr. Spicer.

To the Surrogate—I never knew of Mrs. Cunningham's sleeping in Dr. Burdell's room; the Doctor went out of town a few days; I can't say whether it was a week more or less; he was gone about one or two days, I can't say which; don't know where he went; I don't know that Mrs. Cunningham went out of town while I was there; don't recollect her going to Goshen.

To Mr. Clinton—When Mrs. Cunningham went out, I did not ask her where she was going.

To Mr. Tilden—I can't say the exact time when the book-case came in, but it was before sundown.

Daniel Olney sworn—examined by Mr. Tilden: Lives at No. 272 Madison-street; is a carpenter, age 42; knew the late Harvey Burdell; have done work for him at No. 31 Bond-street on the 16th December; I recommended a lock to him about the middle of the month; I rendered him a bill with his name spelt "Berdell," and he said his name was not spelt right; he said it made no difference and never to mind; he said that the woman down stairs had ordered work which he had not; he would, however, pay the bill; I gave him the bill receipted, and he paid it the Tuesday preceding his death.

Cross-examined by Mr. Clinton—He did not wish to have the bill altered to his right name.

Erastus Wilson—Knew the late Dr. Burdell and Mrs. Cunningham; I think about 3d December I was in Dr. Burdell's house in his laboratory; Mrs. Cunningham let out a man, and came back to the office door and closed it, and said: "that Dr. Burdell would learn to behave himself before she vacated his house;" I presume it was intended for my hearing; it was thrown out as a threat; don't know the man whom she let out; I think the doctor was in the country at that time; nothing more passed on that occasion; I saw no one else there.

Cross-examined—I stated before the Coroner that it was seven or eight weeks previous to my coming before him; I stated that I could not fix the time with definite accuracy; I stood directly in the laboratory door when this was said; I did not speak I think to Mrs. Burdell on that occasion; I will swear positively that the expression was not—"You will learn to behave yourself, Sir, before you vacate Dr. Burdell's house;" I supposed Mrs. Cunningham was addressing me indirectly.

William Barr, sworn—Examined by Mr. Tilden: I live at No. 295 Bowery; am a barber; I knew the late Harvey Burdell; have known him for six years, and for two years past used to call to be shaved almost every morning till he allowed his beard to grow; he called to be shaved during the Summer of 1856 every morning except Sunday; before he went to the country in July he wore a goatee, the sides of his face were shaved and his upper lip; I think the last time I shaved him was 1st September, 1856; I think I saw him a month after that when he came in to have his hair cut; the whiskers were then just beginning to grow on the chin the hairs were rather short—on the point about half an inch after I trimmed them; on the sides of his face the hair was quite short—the hairs there were straggling; the color of his whiskers were a light brown mixed with gray: this was about a month after the first of September; he was regular in having his hair cut; saw him again about the first of November; he came there to have his hair cut; the moustache and goatee before I cut them might be about an inch long; the whiskers did not require any clipping, for they were quite short; they were straggling and lying close to the face; their color was brown; there was always a mixture of gray; the hair of his beard had been dyed and grown out since I last clipped it; the dye was not regularly put on: it was not black; the hair of his head had also been dyed apparently with the same as the whiskers, but from the abundance of the hair not so evenly; his speech was quick; his motions active; he stood erect; I never saw Dr. Burdell when his whiskers were long.

To the Surrogate—I cut his hair about three weeks before his death; the habit of cutting his hair monthly has continued from May, 1855; the Doctor told me he did not like his hair dyed black; he told me latterly that a lady dyed his hair, but did not say where; his complexion was light and florid, I should say; the side whiskers on the picture handed me appear thicker and longer than the Doctor's.

Cross-examined—This picture is not like the Doctor; the face is not round enough, and the beard is too black; his eyes were rather a gray; his beard did not grow fast; his beard was heavy but not unusually; his general habit was, when he went out of town, was to let his beard grow, and when he returned I shaved it off: about the 1st September he determined to let his beard grow as the mornings were getting short; his hair on his head was very thick.

Mr. Tilden—I should not take that picture for Dr. Burdell; the hair of his beard was short and stood close.

Mrs. Mary H. Crane examined by Mr. Tilden—I live at No. 256 Fourth-avenue; I am a married woman am the wife of John W. Crane, who is a dentist; I knew the Doctor; have done so twelve years; I saw him on the Monday before his death; that was the only time I ever conversed with him; I received a note from him Saturday, and went to see him on Monday, at very near 12 o'clock, I think; he merely mentioned a lady to me, to whom he had let his house; he told me that he had let his house to a very artful woman; that he had been deceived before, but never so much as by her; he seemed excited, and said she would outwit the devil; he told me that she annoyed him in every way, and that they watched him continually; that they were prying about the house, and had stolen some papers, and could keep nothing safe from them; he said she had stolen the key of his safe; he said, "Thank Heaven, I will be rid of them all on the first of May;" he said he would never make another contract with a woman—single, as I understood him; he said he had two or three married ladies to take his house; I said to him, "Doctor, you have never married?" and he replied, "No, I am further from it than ever," I spoke of his looking as young as he was twelve years ago, when I first saw him, and he said it was in consequence of his regular habits of life.

Cross-examined by Mr. Clinton—Dr. Burdell knows my husband; he walked with us some six or seven blocks 12 years ago; I have often met him; I never visited his place but once; my husband and he have met each other; I have not lived with my husband for five years; I have met the two together several times; my husband is in Europe; has been absent since 16th April; he resided for the last three years at No. 47 Bond-street; I did not call on Dr. Burdell for dental purposes; he told me he knew a lady in New-York who would be an important witness for me in the divorce suit that I had instituted against my husband; I never had any negotiations before with Burdell, and was surprised when I received his letter; I am not divorced from my husband nor he from me; I brought the suit; he said very decidedly that he would never make a contract with another woman; he told me that he was watched, that he expected foul play, but that he was prepared for it; he said he would not let his house to any single woman; he said that she had keys to everything; I am sure he said that she had stolen papers from his safe.

TESTIMONY OF JOHN CONNERY.

Sworn, examined by Mr. Tilden—I live at No. 270 Third-street, Brooklyn; am 51 years of age, and sexton of the Cemetery; I was present at the first examination of Rev. Mr. Marvine before the Coroner; I was in the room with the body when the clergyman went in; was present when he looked at the body; while looking at the body, he shook his head from side to side; after awhile, he said: "It looks something like the man I married about the mouth;" the Coroner then asked him if he recognized him as the party whom he married to Mrs. Cunningham? and he replied that he could not swear positively.

Q.—Did he say that he was not the man? A.—No, he did not exactly say that; after Mr. Marvine came out I heard no conversation of his; he said he could not swear positively; he expressed no opinion; I found the four papers handed to me at the house; they were found in Mr. Eckel's room in a kind of secretary.

The papers were as follows:
The affidavit about the loss of the note.
The agreement as to him and Mrs. Cunningham's family.
One unexecuted release.
The lease for the house.
[These papers were admitted to be in Harvey Burdell's writing.]

Mrs. Cunningham was not present when they were found; she and Mr. Shahan came in while we were looking over Mr. Eckel's secretary; one of them said there were some papers in this secretary belonging to her, and that she wanted to get them; they were then together. (Witness identified the envelope in which the papers were found.) There was some writing on it at the time.

Cross-examined by Judge Dean—I think Marvine came there in the morning of Sunday; the body of Dr. Burdell was lying on his bed dressed, I think, in a black suit.

Q.—Did not Mrs. Burdell object—that he was not dressed as he was in life? A.—No; I think he had a stand-up collar; he appeared not to have shaved; his hair was dark; I cannot remember the exact questions put to Marvine by the Coroner inside the room.

Q.—Was the question this: "Will you swear that that was the man who was married to Mrs. Cunningham?" A.—Yes, something to that effect; Marvine said that it resembled the man he married to Mrs. Cunningham something about the mouth; he said nothing about the whiskers; it was after the papers were found that one of them spoke; when Mr. Marvine was looking at the corpse I don't recollect refusing admission to Mrs. Cunningham's counsel; they were not ordered to go out; a detailed officer, myself and the Coroner were present, and maybe some others; the officer's name was McClusky.

Mr. B. Butler, the Public Administrator, identified papers found in Dr. Burdell's safe, which had been in his possession since they were given up to him. Also a small pocket-book delivered to him by the Coroner, in which no entries had been made since it was in his possession.

To Mr. Dean—I have a bag full of private letters, books and papers in my possession, delivered to me by the Coroner; she has had no access to them since that I am aware of; I visited Herkimer in the official capacity during the present Spring; I asked Taylor for his register, and understood him to say that they kept none; I was requested by counsel to see if Burdell's name was upon it.

To Mr. Tilden—Mr. Earle said they had no register or kept none; the man who kept the tavern had lately been in there, but he knew nothing about a register; I gave the little memorandum book to Judge Dean.

James C. Willett, Sheriff of the City and County of New-York, testified that he did not know Harvey Burdell; the discharges in the slander and breach of promise suits were given on the 22d October, 1856.

Joseph Wilson, the wig-maker, of whom Eckel purchased a wig, was examined. His testimony has already been published in full on the Coroner's Jury.

Charles Welden, reporter for the NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES, swore that the report now shown him was the one he took for the NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES, and it was correct, with the exception of two typographical errors.

Cross examined—I don't write short hand; the examination was not conducted with great rapidity; the Coroner talked a good deal; the witness and Coroner were talking all the time.

The Court adjourned till to-day at 10 o'clock.

SUPREME COURT—General Term, June 9.

Before Judges Mitchell, Roosevelt and Peabody.

THE JOBSON AND SICKLES CASE.

At the commencement of the May Term, a person named David W. Jobson appeared in the General Term of the Supreme Court, and stated that an attorney of this Court by the name of Daniel E. Sickles had defrauded him out of $1,500, and he, Jobson, being a foreigner, without the protection of his own country, asked that this Court would extend its protection to him. Judge MITCHELL replied to him that if he had any complaint to make he must submit it by affidavits. Since that time he has submitted his affidavits and accompanied them with a motion that Daniel Sicklee have his name stricken from the roll of attorneys, on the ground of his, Sicklee', gross immorality, &c. Yesterday the Judges denied the motion on the insufficiency of the affidavits.

Jobson said that he wished to inform the Court of other matters not contained in the affidavits. The Court would not allow him to do it, and ordered him, if he had any further complaint he must, as before, submit it by affidavit.

Jobson replied that he could not put what he wanted to express into an affidavit. He then went into some general remarks upon the injustice of the American Courts, when the Court ordered him to stop, and also to show cause this morning why he should not be committed for contempt.

SUPREME COURT—Circuit.

Before Judge Clerke.

DELINQUENT JURORS.

Yesterday Judge CLERKE ordered the Clerk of the Court to impose the $25 fine upon each Juror who absented himself, and to enforce it upon each occasion of non attendance.

SUPERIOR COURT—Trial Term.

Before Judge Slosson.

ACTION ON MARINE INSURANCE.

John Kinsman vs. The New-York Mutual Insurance Company.—This was an action brought on two policies of insurance, one upon the ship Ozark and the other her freight, which consisted of guano. The policies were both for $4,000, and were made on the same day. The Ozark sailed from San Francisco on a voyage to a European port, and stopped at Callao. Eight days out from Calleo the vessel was leaking so badly that she was forced to put back in distress, and, upon arriving, it was found that the vessel was much injured, and the freight almost a total loss. A survey was made, and the loss of the freight, taken with the repairs needed by the vessel, was estimated at $15,000. The plaintiff sues for the amount of both policies, $8,000. The defendants set up that proper exertions were not made to save the vessel and freight, and that when she left Callao she was in an unseaworthy condition. The jury will bring in a sealed verdict.

COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS.

Before Justices Osborne and Connolly.

At the Court of Sessions, yesterday, a great many cases were dismissed, the complainants not appearing. Thos. F. Brennan committed an assault and battery on David Williams, proprietor of a dance-house. He stopped, in going home with some friends, took liberties with the women, and struck Williams with a brickbat when he tried to eject him. Guilty; fined $10.

Michael Fitzgibbon, aged 14, was sent to the House of Refuge, convicted of petit larceny.

Thos. Lawler, a man with eyes bulged out by the liquor behind them, stole a pair of boots. He said he often got drunk. Sentence, 10 days in the Penitentiary.

Israel Trusty, a negro, was charged with assault and battery on John Francis, who testified that the prisoner pointed a pistol at him. It was not loaded.

Judge OSBORNE—I guess he only wanted to scare you; I convict the prisoner of assault and battery, and trying to scare you to death." Sentence suspended.

David Wright assaulted a physician. Sentence was suspended.

Bridget Monahan stole some articles of ladies' wearing apparel. She said they were on the scaine and she only took them up.

Justice CONNOLLY—"You're an old offender; that's the old story. Penitentiary for three months."

Two little boys, John Coyle and Michael Healy, were convicted of petit larceny. John cried lustily and his mother promised better behavior for him. Sentence was suspended with an admonition not to be caught here again.

Patrick Trainor was sent to the Penitentiary for two months for beating his wife who was in a delicate situation.

Richard Lakeman stole a quilt, and was sent up for 3 months. "That's cheap," said he, as he went off by the side-door with the officer.

James Haggerty was charged with stealing some shawls from his landlady. The wife of the accused testified in his behalf, and Justice OSBORNE concluded it was a matter of spite on the part of the complainant, and discharged him.

George Ellis, alias Allison, a well-known pickpocket, was sentenced to the Penitentiary for 6 months, for stealing a lady's portemonnaie.

Elizabeth Gardiner, a negro woman, was sent to the Penitentiary for 6 months. She is an old offender. She had stolen an umbrella.

Eliza Wallace, also an old offender, was sent up for 6 months, convicted of stealing a table cloth from Mary Hearn.

Mary Hart and Ann Finner were charged with stealing a piece of ribbon from Lord & Taylor's store in Grand-street. It appeared that Mary was the guilty one and Ann was innocent. "Let the little girl go," said Justice OSBORNE; and as for you, Mary, you are doubly guilty in the theft and in trying to decoy the little girl off." Mary wept long and loudly when she was sentenced to the Penitentiary for three months. The little girl went off rejoicing.

Alexander Doran, 17 years old, stole 5 pounds of sheeting. His mother plead lustily in his defence. He had been in a store and he worked too hard, and she was going to send him to sea—"Where he won't have to work so hard, eh!" said the Justice. "I think he had better go and learn some light trade. He looks delicate." He was sent to the House of Refuge.

Carl Miller, for stealing a piece of oil-cloth, was sent to the same corrective establishment.

Manus McNulty was found guilty of slapping a little boy who was making a bonfire in front of his house. Judgment suspended.

James Boylan was fined $10 for assaulting an officer in the discharge of his duty.

Miss Frank Hunter, a prostitute, had a fight with a girl about a lover. Frank was the aggressor, was drunk, and was fined $10. This was her second offence.

Mike Rooney, charged with assaulting officer Steele while he was trying to arrest him on a charge of bestiality, was acquitted, on the ground that the officer had no right to arrest him.

Thos. Camp was sent up for ten days, convicted of petit larceny.

Pat. Healy, a German, cut a woman with a knife, when drunk. She only wanted him to keep the peace. Sentence was suspended, with an admonition to let the woman alone.

Ellen Costello stole a piece of delaine, and was sent to the City Prison for 30 days.

Wm. Dalton was charged with an assault on his wife. She did not appear, and he was discharged.

Chas. Keefe, aged 11 years, stole some knives from a hardware store. His mother said he was a good boy. The Magistrate thought he might be improved. He was found guilty and remanded till Thursday.

Mary Stafford, an old offender, was charged with stealing $8 in bank notes. No one appeared against her, and she was discharged.

Lewis Carlan, a young man with a light mustache, and exceedingly well got up, resisted a policeman who arrested him for striking a woman. The policeman "gave him a light tap on the head with his club" and took him to the Station-house. He was fined $5, and went off smiling.

John Raycroft was sent up for 30 days for stealing some iron from his employer.

Arrival of Surveyor General Burr in Washington.

From the Intelligencer of Yesterday.

Mr. DAVID H. BURR, Surveyor General of the Territory of Utah, and long a resident of this city, arrived here yesterday morning. He was accompanied by his son, Mr. DAVID BURR, who left Washington in March to join his father in Salt Lake City. They met on the 13th of May at Ash Hollow, about midway between Forts Kearney and Laramie. Mr. BURR left Salt Lake on the 15th of April, in company with a large number of "Gentiles," who found the Mormon country had become too hot to hold them any longer. Only three Gentiles, KERR, BELL and MESSENHALL, and the Indian Agent, Dr. HUAT, remained behind. Dr. HUBT went south to his Indian farm on the Peetneet Reserve, about eighty miles from Salt Lake, depending upon his Indians, one hundred in number, to defend him, or protect him out of the country, as necessity might dictate.

Still later intelligence has been received by the mail which set out from Salt Lake City on the 1st of May. By this it appears that BRIGHAM YOUNG has actually undertaken his projected northern tour, carrying 300 Mormons with him as a body guard. It is also stated that a large band of Indians, Shoshonees or Snakes and Utes, amounting to about 600 in all, had marched in upon Dr. HUBT's establishment, and encamped around it, giving him as a reason for their strange conduct that they had been sent by BRIGHAM YOUNG. Much uneasiness is consequently felt for the safety of the agent.

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The particulars of the burning of the steamship Louisiana in the Gulf of Mexico, a notice of which we have already received by telegraph, have now reached us. The event occurred some six or eight miles southeast of Galveston, the fire having broke out about one o'clock in the morning of May 31. There were fifty or sixty passengers on board, beside the crew, the greater number of whom perished. The fire being amidships, all communication between the forward and after part of the vessel was cut off, and the tiller-ropes, being burnt, she was entirely unmanageable, although the engines continued to run for some time. Among those who perished was Colonel BAINBRIDGE, of the U. S. Army.

WILLIAM STRONG, of Berks County, and JAMES THOMPSON, of Erie County, were yesterday nominated by the Pennsylvania Democratic State Convention at Harrisburg as candidates for Judgee of the Supreme Court—one in the place of Judge BLACK, the new U. S. District Attorney, and the other in the place of Judge LEWIS, resigned.

Friday next has been fixed by the New-Hampshire Legislature for the choice of a United States Senator in place of Hon. JAMES BELL, deceased.

The New-Hampshire Democratic State Convention for the nomination of candidates for State officers, will meet to-day at Concord. It is thought that ASA P. CATE, of Northfield, will be the candidate for Governor.

The Buffalo City election took place yesterday. The Democrats were successful, electing their whole ticket by about a thousand majority.

Hon. JOHN WENTWORTH, the present Mayor of Chicago, was yesterday arrested by the United States Marshal, on a charge of stealing mail-bags, which were found on his premises. He was subsequently discharged on a hearing before Judge DRUMMOND, who decided that Mr. WENTWORTH received the bags in his official capacity as Member of Congress, and had a right to keep them, unless a special demand was made for them.

The new Commissioners tried yesterday sixty men for disobedience of orders. All but two of them (who appeared to answer) were found guilty and will be dismissed to-day. The old Board filled a large number of vacancies yesterday, and made many dismissals, among whom was Captain HOPKINS, of the Third Ward, in whose place they appointed Second Lieutenant BENNETT, late Captain of the Central-Park Police. Capt. BENNETT took charge of the Third Ward Station-house soon afterwards; whereupon both the acting Lieutenants, two Sergeents and eighteen men followed their old Captain by declaring for the new Commissioners. Thus far at least 270 members of the old Department in this City, including seven Captains, have declared for the Metropolitan Commissioners, under whose instructions they are now acting.

There was an ordinance adopted in the Board of Aldermen, last evening, making provision for the purchase of the State Arsenal. Several communications were received in relation to the management of the Union Ferries, and the report of the committee, directing the Company to continue running Roosevelt-street Ferry, one boat every half hour, and directing the Comptroller to advertise for proposals to lease the ferry foot of Gonverneur-street, was adopted. The report of the Street Committee was adopted. It is, in the main, the same as that published yesterday. It annuls the late contracts; authorizes the City Inspector to advertise for proposals for one and five years; to receive those he deems best for the interests of the City, and to clean the streets until new contracts shall have been made.

All was quiet at Seguine's Point as late as the rundown roll-call of yesterday. It is a mistake to suppose, as some of our correspondents evidently do, that the arrest of persons guilty of visiting infectious ships while under Quarantine was effected under the old law. The law under which the warrants were issued was a new one, far more stringent and efficacious, we doubt not, than its predecessor. By its clear reading there is little doubt that the anticipated attempts to evade Quarantine during the hot season will be given up.

Mr. JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, Street Commissioner, died yesterday afternoon at his father's residence, after only four weeks' sickness. Although the office which he held at the time of his decease was not his first official position, he having been formerly one of the Board of Ten Governors. he was only 27 years old. He leaves a widow and one child.

The Surrogate resumed his sitting yesterday morning, in the Burdell Estate case. The only testimony of much importance and interest produced was that of Mrs. MARY H. CRANE, who had heard the Doctor express his gratification that he would get rid of the CUNNINGHAM family on the 1st of May; he expected foul play from them, and that it was his intention never to marry. JOHN CONNERY, Jr., appeared on the stand to contradict the evidence of Rev. Mr. MARVINE.

The Democracy held ward meetings last evening, to enroll members, and take action towards reform and reunion in their ranks. The Reform Convention have issued their "plan of union," which the Wilson Small Committee will meet this evening to denounce, and take measures to defeat. We give the Reform Report in full.

An attempt was made at a meeting of the Liquor-Dealers last evening to get the members to recede from their previous action declaring that they would not send in petitions for licenses to the Excise Commissioners. The members declared by an emphatic vote that they would give no heed to the Commissioners, but go on and sell liquor, abiding the consequences.

A Spaniard doing business as a commission merchant, at No. 48 Pine-street, was arrested and examined, yesterday, at the Lower Police Court, on a charge of misdemeanor, for having had in his possession implements for the manufacture of spurious Spanish coins in Havana. Dies, portions of a press, &c., were found in the possession of the cook of the Spanish brig Albertini, now in port. The cook, whose name is MAYER, said he got the articles from DELONA, and had the arrest of the latter. The examination will be continued to-day.

In the Court of General Sessions yesterday, HENRY J. PETKELER was convicted of assault and battery, with intent to violate the person of ELIZA FABER. His sentence was deferred till Saturday. CATHARINE CONNER, alias Dublin KATE, indicted for robbery, pleaded guilty to petit larceny, and was sent to the Penitentiary for six months. An Italian, GIOVANNI ROBINSONI, was tried for assault and battery on BRIDGET BURNS, and the Jury brought in a verdict of not guilty.

A married woman, named SHERWOOD, was burned to death about 2½ o'clock yesterday morning, in the dwelling in Fifty-ninth-street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues. A fire broke out in one of the lower rooms of the dwelling, a wooden one, and had made considerable headway before Mr. and Mrs. SHERWOOD discovered it. Mr. S. leaped immediately from the window on the second floor, telling his wife as he did so to follow. But for some reason or other she neglected to avail herself of the only opportunity to escape, and was lost. Her body, burned to a crisp, was found some hours afterwards, and removed to the Twenty-second Ward Station-house, where an inquest was held upon it. The building was damaged to the extent of $1,000.

Broadway was swept last night, between John-street and Union Square, by Mr. SMITH'S patent machines, and no interruption was experienced from rowdies.

The inquest upon the body of the woman ELIZA SHAW, who was found dead with her throat cut, on Tuesday morning, in the rear of her residence, in First-avenue, was concluded yesterday. The verdict rendered was that the deceased came to her death by having her throat cut by some person to the jury unknown.

Mr. DE BURG'S super-phospbate of lime establishment, at Williamsburg, is to be purged immediately of the foul materials which have long rendered it an odious and dangerous nuisance.

A Ping-Ugly Cotemporary.

One of our cotemporaries in this City has published, and another has reproduced, a letter from Lecompton, in which the private Secretary of Governor WALKER is alluded to as "a writer for the NEW-YORK TIMES, who took extraordinary pains to circulate the falsehood that the great mass of the Free-State Party had acknowledged the fairness of the Census Act and its execution, and were going universally into the coming election under it."

What means of information our cotemporaries may possess with regard to the private movements, past or present, of Governor WALKER'S private Secretary, we do not pretend to know. We cannot, therefore, contradict, as of our own proper chief, their assertion that the gentleman in question has been engaged at some time of his life in the circulation of the story to which they refer. But if, from the statement thus doubly indorsed, we are to understand that the NEW-YORK TIMES is charged with the dissemination of such an absurd and preposterous proposition, then we have only to say that we cannot but lament the carelessness or the recklessness which has suffered a misrepresentation so flagrant upon the face of it, and so easy of correction, to gain currency through the columns of two journals professionally devoted to the illumination of the public mind.

The conductors of the Evening Post, in the hurry of going to press, may very well have overlooked the thoughtless blunder of their correspondent. But the editors of the Tribune can hardly advance such an excuse for the republication of a passage which they must have selected with deliberation. And we beg leave, therefore, to call their attention to the actual language of the dispatch from one of our "Washington correspondents" to which we presume that allusion is made in the paragraph extracted by the Tribune from the Evening Post. On the 1st of May we published a "Special dispatch" from Washington in these words following: "These latter (the Free-State messes) under the leadership of Governor Robinson have resolved to coöperate with the endeavors of the Administration to secure a fair expression of the will of the people in relation to the question of Slavery, and will abandon their previous policy of inactivity." This statement was given as upon the direct authority of Governor ROBINSON himself. The Editors of the Tribune will, perhaps, remember that they questioned its truth, and refused to believe that any such policy was contemplated by the Free-State men, until the address of the Free-State men themselves was published to the world, when it was found that our correspondent had been thoroughly well-informed, and that Governor ROBINSON had preferred the practical policy dictated to himself by his own sagacity and statesmanship, and advocated by the National Era, as well as by the TIMES, to the apparently aimless and unprofitable programme of obstinate inactivity and dangerous declamation suggested in other quarters. The Tribune may possibly still regret that the policy of Governor ROBINSON should have been adopted by the Free-State men of Kansas. It may possibly desire that Governor WALKER should prove to be incompetent to the discharge of the duties which he has undertaken. It may possibly hope that the affairs of that long-distracted Territory may continue to furnish for months to come, as for months past they have furnished, the melancholy material of exciting leaders and of partisan demonstrations to the more fortunate sections of our common country. And all these possibilities may serve to account for the haste which the Tribune has shown in attempting to persuade its readers that the TIMES, in demanding for Governor WALKER a fair opportunity of being judged by his acts, and in urging the citizens of Kansas to coöperate with the Federal authorities, for the purpose of peacefully securing their rights and peacefully adjusting their difficulties, is supporting the Southern "doctrine of subjugation."

As some of the readers of the Tribune may possibly take the liberty of glancing over the columns of the TIMES, also, we do not anticipate that any considerable number of persons will be induced by the observations of the Tribune to believe that the TIMES has deserted the cause for which the Tribune is polite enough to say that we have "fought so stoutly"—the cause of Constitutional liberty and even-handed justice throughout the nation and the world.

And we certainly do not expect that any very serious weight will be attached by honorable and intelligent men to criticisms upon the course of the TIMES which begin with the absolute falsification of an extract from our columns, and end with an insinuation that we have been "bought with a price."

For though we are always anxious to put the best construction upon the language of a journal with which we have a desire to have no differences that need be inflamed into disputes, we really do not see in what way we are to understand the following quotation from the Tribune of yesterday, except as an imputation first upon ourselves as the subjects of corruption, and then upon our readers as persons likely to delight in baseness and venality.

After quoting the proclamation issued by an "independent" paper in Texas, to the effect that it is at the service of every candidate or any Convention which is "prepared to pay" for its support, our ferocious cotemporary goes on to say:

"We think that should be perfectly satisfactory. And now, if our immediate neighbor, who fought the Nebraska Iniquity and the Kansas usurpation so stoutly but a few short months ago, could but give as good a reason for his shame-faced, halting support of ROBERT S. WALKER, in his subtile but thorough advocacy and practical application of the Nebraska principles of PIERCE and DOUGLAS to the affairs of Kansas, we are confident its enunciation would relieve many and please more of his readers."

From this we infer that "good reason" and good pay are convertible terms with our irresistible friend, who appears to be as anxious for a row with somebody as an Irishman at Donnybrook Fair.

Outrages upon Justice.

The proceedings which took place at the Board of Aldermen on Monday evening, in reference to Justice DAVISON, are part of a series of events which is well calculated to inspire every man in the community with very reasonable apprehensions as to our future. The disreputable gang who have for so long plundered and disgraced the City, under pretence of governing it, have acquired so much audacity in the presence of the impunity which has long attended their violations of both law and decorum, that nothing either in morals or politics seems safe from their attacks. The state of the Municipality, instead of growing better, as some sanguine optimists would have us believe, is steadily growing worse. The only thing now wanting to complete our disgrace and disorder, is that an adverse decision of the Court of Appeals should hand us over bodily to the tender mercies of Messrs. WOOD and RUSSELL, and the wise provisions of the "Dongan and Montgomerie charters." The Corporation once backed up in its abuses, and the emigrant runners, ticket swindlers and groggery keepers once confirmed in their possession of power, by the judgment of the highest Court in the State, there is nothing left for those of us who have got a throat to be cut, or a house to be robbed, but to pack up and take our departure. No civilized community of which any record is to be found in history has long held together under the dominion of such men as now sway the destinies of the City of New-York. The Parliament of "Macs and O's," which assembled in Dublin under the Second JAMES, was order, decency itself when compared with the men who are now the visible embodiment of our Municipality.

To show how very close we are verging upon one of those crises, which renders illegality the highest law, and the rudest violence the veriest of mercies, we think we need only quote the report of the scene which took place at the Board of Aldermen on Monday evening:

Alderman BANTA offered a resolution to the effect that Police Justice DAVISON be assigned to the Fourth District Court, at Eighty-sixth-street, Yorkville, and that J. SHERMAN BROWNELL, Police Justice, be assigned to the Jefferson Market Court.

Alderman TUCKER opposed the resolution.

Alderman BANTA said he wanted a Democratic justice in that District, Justice DAVISON being a Black Republican, and, in his opinion, incapable of impartiality.

Aldermen FULMER opposed the transfer, and claimed Justice DAVISON as an "American." He moved a reference to a Committee.

Alderman MCCONKEY moved a reference. He had known Justice DAVISON for more than twenty years, and knew he would act justly, independent of politics.

Alderman TUCKER pooh-poohed the idea of transferring Justice DAVISON merely because he was a Black Republican. He was a Republican himself, and the Board might as well transfer him somewhere—to Albany, for instance—if they wished. The charge made against Justice DAVISON should be proved, and he hoped Alderman BANTA would be made to prove it.

Alderman ADAME believed Justice DAVISON was partial. He was sure he had recognized the Metropolitan Police, and should be transferred to the "one-horse" Court at Yorkville.

The motion to refer was lost, and the resolution was adopted, by a party vote.

About Justice DAVISON we know and care nothing. It may be that he is a bad Justice, and it may be that he is one of the best to be found. His personal qualities have nothing to do with the matter, inasmuch as they were in no way made the subject of discussion. The scandal to which we call the public attention, is the removal of one of the Magistrates—to whose safe-keeping the peace and security of the City are committed, and whose decisions the poor and ignorant are expected to respect and be bound by—from one district to another, upon purely political grounds, without trial, without inquiry, and with a violence and coarseness of language on the part of the introducer of the motion, only to be met with in the discussions of our Common Council. Justice DAVISON, has, in the elegant language of Alderman ADAMS, been transferred to the "one-horse Court" at Yorkville, solely because he is Black Republican and has probably recognized the New Police Commissioners. The inference which ADAMS draws from these two facts—that he is, ergo, partial—is of course only worthy of notice as a specimen of bar-room logic. The sum total of this is, that the Police and all other Magistrates of the City, on whose decision the liberty and property of the great mass of our fellow-citizens are dependent, are removable with insult, at the pleasure of the emigrant runner and mock auctioneers whom our apathy and selfishness have suffered to climb into office. The governing body of this great City, in the middle of the nineteenth century, deliberately votes a censure and stigma upon a judicial functionary, first because he holds the same political opinions as the majority of the citizens of thirteen States in the Union, and secondly because he has declared his adhesion to a body created by an act of the Legislature, and solemnly confirmed in the exercise of its authority by the Supreme Court of the State. That it makes little difference to the general public where Mr. DAVISON holds his Court, we are quite well aware. That he is not a model Judge is very likely. The man in matters of this sort is of little consideration. Which excites our alarm is the precedents which we are daily allowing the paltriest case, and the most despisable agents to establish; the weakening of the reins of authority, the contempt for law, and for decency; the utter political demoralization which incidents such as we are commenting on are apt to establish. No State of either ancient or modern times has fallen in a day. The beginning of ruin and disgrace is in small scandal and petty corruption. But they are the seeds of downfall, and though the harvest be late, it is tolerably sure.

VOLUNTARY PAYMENT BY THE TREASURY.—A report appeared in our columns, some time since, of a case in the Court of Claims, Cortlandt Palmer, receiver of Leggett, Wooster and Frame vs. The United States. The claim was for a return of $550 80, duties exacted and paid on importation of linens as "colored linens," which were claimed to have been, in fact, "unbleached linens," and as such, under the acts of 1833, free from duty. The only evidence produced to prove that the linens were unbleached, was that of a member of the firm of L. W. & F., to whose competency objections were waived by the Government. Opposed to his testimony was the official action of the collector entered on record, which the Court deemed of equal weight. They, therefore, held that the allegations of the petition, as to the character of the goods, were not sustained, and refused to order testimony, in other words decided adversely to the claim.

Since that decision was rendered, an agent of the Treasury sought out Mr. PALMER, and, quite unexpected to him, offered to pay, and actually paid to him the full amount of the claim rejected by the Court as above stated, for insufficiency of proof. The opinion of the Court of Claims, although adverse, threw light probably on the subject, to the mind of the Treasury, and thus penetrated to its conscience, with the salutary result stated.

The South and Kansas.

What a man thinks is one thing—what he is supposed by other people to think is not infrequently another and a very different thing. And whenever the thoughts of a man or of a community happen to be of any significance, it is always best for us to take them on the authority of the original parties rather than from the lips of other people.

The assertion made by a Kansas correspondent of one of the New-York papers—that the "South knows that WALKER will do everything for her that can be done consistently with the safety of the Democracy in the North," has been extensively circulated from press to press and may very possibly have alarmed some of the more naive and unsuspecting friends of freedom.

It is gratifying to us, therefore, to be able to present an authentic exposition by a prominent Southern man, of the expectations which the South entertains of Gov. WALKER.

At a public dinner in Cheraw, South Carolina, Mr. KEITT, a member of Congress from that State, who achieved no little notoriety in connection with the SUMNER outrage, and the Bobadillian preliminaries of the was-to-have-been-murderous BURLINGAME duel, made the following observation:

"He expressed his want of confidence in WALKER and STANTON, both of whom he denounced as unprincipled trading politicians, who were ready to sell the slaveholders' interest in Kansas for a price. He spoke of the National Democratic party—of its want of principle, and its readiness at all times to sell the South at any price which would secure to its leaders the glorious spoils of victory. He said he went with the Democratic Party, but was not of it.

He spoke of Mr. BUCHANAN. Said he had some confidence in his honesty and integrity, but feared his power to stem the torrent of Black Republicanism arrayed against him.

He was graphic in his description of the corrupt scenes to be witnessed in Washington. How men, fallen from their high estate, paraded the street, filled the lobbies of the Representative Halls, and thronged around the Executive Department, with their price placarded in figures upon their heads. Of these were WALKER and STANTON, the one a Pennsylvania bankrupt, and the other an unprincipled political gambler. Both had sought and obtained position and power in Kansas, and were willing to wield it at the bidding of the party which would pay best. WALKER'S proposition to have the Constitution of the Kansas Convention submitted to the people, before it was presented to Congress, with a demand for admission into the Union, he denounced in no measured terms. He said it was unprecedented, and intended only to restore the State to Black Republicanism."

These remarks of Mr. KEITT we beg our readers to understand not as a contradiction, but as a confirmation and elucidation of the prophecy uttered by the Kansas correspondent referred to above.

The South, knowing perfectly well that nothing can be done for the interests of Slavery in Kansas which will not hopelessly ruin the prospects of the Democratic Party at the North—the South knowing perfectly well that the Northern sentiment which demands justice and freedom for Kansas is not an ebullition of facile fanaticism, but a settled, earnest, and growing passion of the popular heart, born of unalterable convictions, and fostered by every influence which makes the Northern States prosperous and respectable—the South, we say, knowing all this, knows with Mr. KEITT that Gov. WALKER neither can nor will lend himself to the schemes in Kansas of Southern extremists and Pro-Slavery fanatics; but that he will do his utmost to secure a free and fair expression of the popular will in that Territory—an expression which can have but one result: to bring into the Union another great Free State.

RAILROAD REFRESHMENTS.—If there is any word in the English language more shamefully misused than another, it is the word refreshment, as applied to the hurry scurry of eating and drinking at railroad stations. The dreary places in which the painful and unhealthy performances take place are called "Refreshment Saloons;" but there could not be a more inappropriate designation for such abominations of desolation. Directors of railroads appear to have an idea that travelers are destitute of stomach; that eating and drinking are not at all necessary to human beings bound on long journeys, and that nothing more is required than to put them through their misery in as brief a time as possible. It is expected that three or four hundred men, women and children, some of whom must, of necessity, be "feeble folk" and unaccustomed to roughing it, and all of whom have been used to the decencies and comforts of orderly homes, can be whirled half a day over a dusty road, with hot cinders flying in their faces; and then, when they approach a station and are dying with weariness, hunger, and thirst, longing for an opportunity to bathe their faces at least before partaking of their much-needed refreshments, that they shall rush out helter-skelter into a dismal long room and dispatch a supper, breakfast, or dinner in fifteen minutes. The consequences of such savage and unnatural feeding are not reported by telegraph as railroad disasters; but if a faithful account were given of them, we are afraid they would be found much more serious than any that are caused by the smashing of cars, or the breaking down of bridges. The traveler who has been riding all night in a dusty and crowded car, unable to sleep, and half suffocated with smoke and foul air, will be suddenly roused from his half lethargic condition by hearing the scream of the steam-whistle, which tells of the near approach to a station; but, before the train stops, the door of the car opens, and the conductor shouts at the top of his voice: "Pogramville—fifteen minutes for breakfast!"

Here is a prospect for a weary and hungry traveler to whom fifteen minutes would be brief time enough for ablutions. But washing is out of the question, even if all the conveniences were at hand, and he rushes into the "saloon," where he is offered a choice of fried ham and eggs, or tough beefsteak soaked in bad butter, tea and coffee, stale bread; the inevitable custard pie and pound cake, are also put at his service; but half the fifteen minutes allowed for breakfast having been lost while waiting for a turn at one of the two washbasins, the bewildered traveler makes a hasty grab at whatever comes within his reach, and hurries back to his seat, to discover before he reaches the end of his journey, that he has laid the foundation for a fit of dyspepsia, which may lead to a disease of the lungs or a fever.

A Company that expends thirty millions of dollars in building and equipping a road, ought not to begrudge a few hundred dollars in furnishing a suitable place for travelers to refresh themselves at, nor deny them the necessary time to do it in. Refreshment-saloons ought to be under the charge of the Railroad Company, for passengers ought not to be put at the mercy of grasping and ignorant men, who are regardless of everything but their own profit. There are very few roads in the whole country on which there is a station where a comfortable meal can be obtained, or where the necessary accommodations are to be found which passengers require when they stop. The Erie Road has the most comfortable and spacious cars of any railroad in the country, and we have no doubt that it would have a great accession of travel if there were decent station-houses on the line for the refreshment of passengers, and the arrangements of the time-tables were such that they could be enjoyed. As our great lines of railroad are laid through wild and half-cultivated regions, where the common refinements of City life are not to be looked for, the railroad managers should themselves make the necessary provision for the refreshment of passengers which they have a right to expect. As affairs are now arranged, a few days of railroad traveling are sure to end in a fit of sickness to all excepting those who have hardy constitutions, and are accustomed to the very roughest and toughest manner of living.

JEALOUSY OF NEW-YORK.—Nothing is more common than for a dwarf to sneer at a giant, and for a beggar to pretend to despise a banker. It is the involuntary homage to superiority which vents itself in defamation. Our amiable provincial friends north and south of us are continually reminding us of the immensity of New-York, by their sneers at what they pretend to regard as our mushroom greatness. We are sorry for them; but what can we do? Some cities, like some men, as Malvolio says, achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them; but New-York is great by the ordinances of nature, great by her achievements, and by virtue of the greatness thrust upon her. If Philadelphia and Boston hoot at us until they are hoarse, they cannot injure in the slightest degree our great commercial advantages, nor diminish a hair's breadth our magnificent position. The better way for our discontented and unhappy neighbors will be, to pull up their stakes and come on here and share with us in our advantages, or else remain quietly at home and say no more about the matter. One of our Boston cotemporaries has broken out in a long list of complaints against this metropolis, the upshot of which is, that our prosperity is purely accidental and fictitious, and that it will not last. Our amiable neighbor remarks with the sagacity of Bunsby:

"Take away the foreign capitalists and the dock loafers who have squatted down at the mouth of the Hudson for temporary purposes, and Philadelphia will stretch far ahead of New-York in population, and Boston surpass it in wealth and enterprise."

There is certainly a good deal of truth in this. Take away our capitalists and our enterprising merchants and it is quite possible that Philadelphia would stretch far ahead of us in population, and Boston in wealth; but what is going to take them away? They cling to us, and, instead of being taken away, they are constantly increasing; they may come for the temporary purpose of making a fortune; but, having made it, they remain to spend it; they build palaces in Fifth-avenue, and chateaux, not in Spain, but on the pleasant banks of the lordly Hudson. When New-York begins to exhibit symptoms of her decadence, you may look out for a wipe from the long tail of Monsieur Babinet's Comet.

THE PRESS IN GREECE.—The City of Athens has now seventeen newspapers issued regularly, besides four periodicals published semi-monthly. The papers are weekly and semi-weekly, and the eighteenth is to be started in a short time, under the editorial care of M. KALOPOTHAKES. Athens became the Capital in 1836, and had then only two or three thousand inhabitants; it has now a population of 36,000, and the removal of restrictions upon the Press has produced a corresponding growth of periodical literature. With all these papers, however, there is not one issued daily, nor is there a publication removed from the influence of the Greek Church. Mr. KALOPOTHAKES' enterprise inaugurates the times of Protestant journalism in the country.

CURIOUS CASE OF ALLEGED MISDEMEANOR.—A curious case of alleged misdemeanor was under examination yesterday before Justice WELSH at the Lower Police Court. The facts brought out were that on Saturday morning last, about 2 o'clock Officer CONNORE, of the Third-Ward, while patrolling his beat, discovered a man passing through Franklin-st, having a small and seemingly heavy box upon his shoulder. Suspecting something wrong, the officer hailed the stranger, and took him to the Station-house in Leonard-st., on suspicion, and narrated the circumstances to Capt. HORRIGAN. On opening the box, which was about three feet long and seven or eight inches wide, it was found to contain two dies of Spanish coin, (silver-pieces about the size of our quarter,) and part of a large press, screws, and such other fixtures necessary for the manufacture of the coin. The prisoner gave his name as VICTOR MAYER, and said he was cook on board the Spanish brig Albertina, then lying in the stream. On his person was found a note in Spanish, of which the following is a translation:

FRIEND ANDRES—You will deliver to Mr. VICTOR MAYER, cook of the Albertina, $6, as soon as he delivers to you on shore the three pieces of the machine which I have delivered to him in a box; and we have agreed that he shall land it at the place which you may designate. To which end, look out for my brother JOSE in Havana, at the agency of Bejarano, that he may go with you on board to see the cook.

Yours, F. L.

On being questioned further, MAYER stated that he was simply acting as agent for another party; that the box found with him was to be conveyed by him to Havana in the vessel in which he served, and that he got it and its contents from FRANCISCO DELANO, a commission merchant at No. 43 Pine street. MAYER was detained and inquiries were made which corroborated his story as to his service on board the Albertina, &c. After consultation with the authorities, it was determined to arrest DELANO, and he was accordingly arrested and detained. DELANO refused to answer any questions about the mysterious box, but threatened to sue for false imprisonment.

At the conclusion of the investigation yesterday—it will be resumed to-day—MAYER was detained simply as a witness, and DELANO was held as principal in the case. Both parties are Spaniards.

THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE FAIR.—The Trustees of the American Institute have leased the Crystal Palace from the Receiver, JOHN H. WHITE, Esq., from July 1, 1857, to May 1, 1858, for $6,000. The Palace will be open on July 1 for the reception of articles intended for the annual exhibition, commencing on the 19th of September.

Death of Joseph S. Taylor, Street Commissioner.

After an illness of only four weeks, Mr. JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, the well-known Street Commissioner, died last evening, at 5 o'clock, at his father's residence, in Lexington-avenue. The tidings will be sadly received by all his numerous friends, as well as by many citizens, who were only brought into connection with him in the ordinary routine of his office duties. He was eminently a popular man. The nominee of a powerful political party, he managed to secure the good-will of all parties.

Mr. TAYLOR was born in this City about 27 years ago, and at twelve years of age, after a little of such schooling as was at that time given to the children of parents of small means, he was employed as a clerk in the firm of PINKNEY & CRANE, of Park-place. In 1851, Mr. PINKNEY being dead, he was invited to become a partner of the firm, then and since known as the house of RUFUS E. CRANE & Co. He readily accepted the offer.

But, about this time, the political arena began to open before him. He was dazzled with its attractions, and preferred a life of excitement and notoriety as a politician to the quiet of a counting-house chair, or the surveillance of a large mercantile establishment. He was not long working his way into notice. And just at this time, when his ambition looked forward to the highest issue, and only wanted means of reaching it, circumstances gave birth to a political party into whose arms he hastened to throw himself. This was the Order known as the Know Nothings, whose organizations in this City, it is not too much to say, derived valuable assistance from the earnest and able partizanship of Mr. TAYLOR. The services which he thus rendered were not forgotten three years later, when the American party elected him to the office which he held at the time of his death.

The first prominent position filled by Mr. TAYLOR was that of Governor of the Almshouse. He was chosen one of the body popularly known as the Ten Governors, and performed the duties of his office, notwithstanding his youth, as well as most of his co-laborers. In 1856, after a severe contest, his opponent being HENRY HOWARD, the present Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, he was elected Street Commissioner, his election being secured by the ardent exertions of the Know-Nothings. In that office, it may be said that he has fulfilled the expectations of his friends, escaping the penalty of censure which was so liberally heaped upon some of his predecessors, and reaping the praise of vigorous enterprise and punctuality in the discharge of his duties.

That he was altogether influenced by any of the numerous temptations which lurk in the path of the successful politician, it might be too much to say, yet few will deny in these days of universal delinquency among "scheming politicians," that JOE TAYLOR could show as fair a front as the majority of his compeers. There are few instances of the elevation by the popular vote of a man so young to offices of high trust and responsibility, of which it can be said with equal truth that the discrimination of the Electors was fully approved and confirmed by the subsequent conduct of the fortunate candidate. He made few enemies; he continued to attract around him hosts of friends, and is prematurely arrested on a path which bade fair to place him on a top round of the ladder of fame, and secure to him the possession of an ample fortune.

Mr. TAYLOR married the daughter of the late Ex-Alderman MERCER, of the Second Ward, and leaves one child. His disease was marasmus. Since the 9th of last month he has been unable to attend to his official duties, but he rode out until the 30th ult., when his increasing illness compelled him to take to his bed, from which he did not afterwards rise.

Death of Governor Dugro.

ANTHONY DUGRO, a conspicuous Democratic politician, and one of the Governors of the Almshouse, died at his residence, in Tenth-street, on Monday afternoon. He was about 40 years of age, and a native of Germany.

BROADWAY SWEPT, AND NO ROW.—Mr. J. A. SMITH, who has been engaged by private subscription to keep Broadway clean for the next two weeks, and whose Irishmen pretended to be frightened and fled on Monday night, returned to the charge last evening, and made a successful attack on the thick layer of sediment which, for the last few days has concealed the Russ from mortal vision. About thirty Italians went to work about 8 o'clock, in the vicinity of Cortlandt-street, and began to hoe up the thickest of the mud, which was immediately carted off to the foot of Watt-street, by some twenty carts. Mr. SMITH, applied during the day, to the Chief MATSELL and Deputy CARPENTER, for an adequate force of police, and both those functionaries promptly responded by detailing several patrolmen to the dumping-ground and along Broadway, to be on hand in case of need. Instructions were also sent to the Station-houses of Wards bordering on Broadway, to dispatch as many men as might be needed to repress any disturbance. Just after the workmen came on the ground some fifteen or twenty First Ward "insurgents" presented themselves, inquired about the machines, and intimated that they would make short work of the horses and drivers as soon as they appeared. Further than this there was no demonstration. The sweeping machines took a bee line up the centre of Broadway about 10 o'clock, throwing the mud in a winrow towards the west. Rain enough had fallen to reduce the sediment to a thin paste, which was as easily managed as if perfectly dry. If the machines had kept off till 12 o'clock, it would have been better, for the stages dashing along through the mud scattered it right and left over the clean track the machines had left. The roadway from John-street to Canal was swept in about an hour and a quarter. The mud was too thin to be removed last night, and was suffered to lie in the gutters, whence it will be taken to-day, as soon as dry enough. The lower part of Broadway, from John-street down, was not touched, as the mud was rather thicker than elsewhere.

NEW METHODIST CHURCH ON FOURTH-AVENUE.—The subscription fund for building a new edifice for the congregation of the Mulberry-street Methodist Episcopal Church received large accessions at a meeting held in the Chapel, corner of Fourth-avenue and Twenty-second-street, last week. Among others, DANIEL DREW gave $5,000, RALPH MEAD gave $5,000, JOHN HARPER gave $2,000, WM. R. MARTIN gave $2,000, JOEL MEAD gave $2,000, LEMUEL BANGS gave $1,500. The new church, with chapel and parsonage attached, will cost $60,000; the donation of each subscriber will entitle him to the deed of a pew in the church when finished, the location, of course, depending on the amount donated. The church will stand on the north-east corner of Fourth-avenue and Twenty-second-street, 67 feet front, and 84 feet deep. The parsonage will stand next it on Fourth-avenue, and the chapel behind it, on Twenty-second-street. White marble, rough dressed, will be the building material. The steeple will be 200 feet high, and there will be accommodations for 1,200 people inside the edifice. The interior construction will, in some respects, resemble that of Dr. TYNG'S Church. The Church will probably be finished by next Summer; the Chapel is to be ready for occupation in the Fall, and will be occupied by the congregation until the larger edifice is completed. At present they occupy the wooden Chapel, formerly belonging to Dr. HAWK'S Church, which stands on the site to be built upon; 98 feet 9 inches of ground on Fourth-avenue, running back 150 feet, was purchased for $45,500. Dr. MCCLINTOCK, the pastor of this congregation, is traveling in Europe in delicate health. Rev. Mr. PRENTICE officiates during his absence.

DON'T GIVE THE NEW CENT TO THE BABY.—A fine little girl, the daughter of JAMES CRAIGIE, of the Seventh Ward, swallowed one of the new cents, on Monday, to the great dismay of the parents. Suitable remedies facilitated the passage of the dirty little coin, which saw day-light just fourteen hours afterward. The same physician, who put this eagle through, has a child now under his care in Williamsburgh, who swallowed one of the new cents about a week since. All emetics and purgatives have thus far proved useless. The patient suffers immensely from giddiness and nervous irritability. The new cent is bad plaything for children.

SWEET POTATOES FROM ANTIGUA, W. I.—The schooner Louisiana, Captain TOTT, of Cherry Stone, Va., arrived here a few days since from Antigua, with the first cargo of new potatoes, consigned to a dealer in Washington Market. This is said to be the first consignment of that article from Antigua. She brought about 650 bbls., in a good state of preservation, and a portion of them, we venture to say, the largest sweet potatoes that ever came to this market, some of them weighing 15 and 20 pounds each, and all thoroughly sound.

THE NICARAGUAN TRANSIT—THE UTAH APPOINTMENTS—MAILS BETWEEN NEW-YORK AND NEW-ORLEANS, ETC.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, June 9.

It has never been thonght that the President would recognize any control, on the part of the Costa Ricans, over the Nicaraguan route, and the supposition that he would not do so is now verified.

There is not even a shadow of truth in the report that Gov. WALKER will be recalled from Kansas, to take the place of Gen. CASS, as Secretary of State.

The affairs of Utah occupied the attention of the Cabinet to-day. The appointments to the offices there were not completed. Several gentlemen to whom they have been tendered are to be heard from. The probability is that the appointments will be announced in the course of the week, and all the arrangements perfected. The Administration, though anxious for speedy action, has been restrained by circumstances beyond its control.

A proposition has been made to the Post-Office Department, and is now under consideration, for the transportation of the mails from New-York to New-Orleans, by way of Fernandina and Cedar Keys, Fla., the route having been established by Congress. By it the mails would be carried with more regularity, and less time than now from Washington to New-Orleans.

Mayor WOODRUFF earnestly requests his friends and all good citizens to abstain from holding or attending the contemplated meeting on Thursday, in condemnation of the election riots, believing that it will do no good, and may result in a disturbance of the peace.

The statement of Mr. BURR, Surveyor-General of Utah, was that "one thousand," and not "ten," as misprinted in the New-York papers, would be sufficient to effectually overawe the Mormons.

Hon. John Wentworth, Mayor of Chicago, Arrested on a Charge of Stealing Mail-bags.

CHICAGO, Tuesday, June 9.

Hon. JOHN WENTWORTH, Mayor of the city, was arrested, this morning, by the United States Marshal, charged with stealing mail-bags, and was held to bail in the sum of $3,000. The examination will take place this afternoon. The mail-bags were found on his premises, and the proof against him is said to be positive.

CAICAGO, Tuesday, June 9—P. M.

Hon. JOHN WENTWORTH was discharged from custody this afternoon by Judge DRUMMOND. He decided that Mr. WENTWORTH, in his official capacity of Congressman, received the mail bags and that unless a special demand was made for them had a right to keep them.

THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE UNITED STATES SENATORSHIP—DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION, ETC.

CONCORD, N. H., Monday, June 8.

The Legislature has assigned Friday next for the choice of a United States Senator, in place of Hon. JAMES BELL, deceased.

Numerous delegates have arrived to attend the Democratic State Convention to assemble here tomorrow. ASA P. CATE, of Northfield, will undoubtedly receive the nomination for Governor.

The Masonic Grand Lodge of New-Hempshire, today, voted to attend the Bunker Hill celebration.

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

HARRISBURG, Tuesday, June 9.

The Democratic State Convention for the nomination of candidates for Judges of the Supreme Court in place of Judge BLACK, the new U. S. Attorney-General, and Judge LEWIS, who resigned previous to the nomination, met this morning and organized, when a number of nominations were made, and the Convention adjourned till afternoon. On reassembling final nominations were made of WM. STRONG, of Berks County, and JAMES THOMPSON, of Erie County.

Fire in Chelsea.

BOSTON, Tuesday, June 9.

A fire broke out about 12 o'clock last night in Chelsea, and destroyed nineteen dwelling houses on Cedar-street, mostly occupied by private families. A good portion of the furniture was saved. The houses were valued at $3,200 each, and were nearly all owned by GEORGE W. GERRISH.

Death of Gen. Norris, of Binghamton.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Tuesday, June 9.

Gen. JACOB NORRIS, a prominent citizen of this place, died to-day at noon.

The Democratic Caucus this evening nominated JOHN S WELLS for United States Senator, by acclamation. The Republicans will make their nomination on Thursday night.

A WOMAN BURNED TO DEATH.—About 1½ o'clock, yesterday morning, a fire broke out in a small frame dwelling in Fifty-third-street, near the Eleventh-avenue, owned and occupied by JAS. SHERWOOD. The flames spread also to some frame buildings adjoining. Mrs. SHERWOOD was unable to escape from the burning house and was burned to death. Mr. SHERWOOD states that he was awakened by his wife, who told him the house was on fire. He jumped up immediately, and, seeing the danger, leaped out of the window—a second-story one—telling his wife, as he did so, to follow him. His wife remained behind, however, (Mr. SHERWOOD thinks to save something,) and thus losing the opportunity of escape, was burned to death. The body, burned to a crisp, was found some hours afterwards, and conveyed to the Twenty-second Ward Station-house, where an inquest was held upon it.

About $1,000 damage was done to the buildings. The fire originated from some cause not ascertained, in the room directly beneath that occupied by Mr. and Mrs. SHERWOOD as a sleeping apartment.

AMBASSADOR TO RUSSIA.—The Columbia South Carolinian learns from a gentleman who has seen the letter that President BUCHANAN has tendered this appointment to Hon. F. W. PICKENS, of South Carolina, and this in the most complimentary terms. Whether Col. PICKENS will accept is not known.

Marine Matters.

MONTREAL, Saturday, June 6.

I telegraphed you that the cargo of the steamship Canadian was all saved and forwarded to Montreal and Quebec. That portion in her fore compartments will be chiefly dry goods, and will be damaged. The vessel being very large, and a rock through her bottom, it will be a costly job to get her off. They are building a platform around her, and steam-pumps have been brought down from Lake Ontario, and have gone down to the steamer. The reports that have reached you of the vessel being so badly injured are untrue. The interest for New York underwriters on the cargo would not be over $20,000, and on the vessel I believe that nothing is insured on this side of the water.—By letter to Ellwood Walter, Esq.

ADVANCE WAGES OF SEAMEN.—The movement among ship-owners to abolish the system of advance wages to seamen, promises to be generally acquiesced in by all the leading merchants of this City. The agreement has received day by day accessions of the names of the principal merchants; most of those who at first objected to signing on the ground that it would be broken, having given in their names. The Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, who have this matter in charge, are busy with their labors, and it is not unlikely that other reforms intended for the benefit of seamen may be suggested. A final disposition of the matter will be made at a meeting of the Committee next week.

Some of the passengers of the Wild Pigeon, hence for Valparaiso on the 21st of May, by way of advising their friends that they were all well, inclosed a scrap of paper in a bottle and threw it overboard. It was picked up on Far Rockaway, and sent to this office by Mr. BROOK CARROLL.

On one side was written:

"Ship Wild Pigeon, off Sandy Hook, bound to Valparaiso. This was thrown overboard May 21, 1857.

HENRY B. HAYES,
E. G. FARRO,
CHAS. W. WATSON,
GEORGE F. BURDETT. } Committee.

CHAS. K. RANDALL, Chairman."

On the reverse:

"If this is picked up please advertise in the Herald. God bless you all, amen."

Indorsed:

"This was found inclosedin a bottle on Rockaway Beach, May 24."

Servants' Wages—Exemption Laws Modified.

A bill was passed by the recent Legislature, entitled "An act to modify the exemption laws on judgments rendered for a claim accruing for work and labor performed in a family as a domestic." It reads as follows, and is found at chapter 303 of the last volume of State Laws, of which an edition has not yet been published:

The People of the State of New-York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. No property shall be exempt from levy and sale, by virtue of an execution issued on a judgment rendered in any Court in this State, for a demand accruing for work and labor performed in a family as a domestic, to an amount not exceeding fifty dollars.

SEC. 2. This act shall take effect from and after the 1st of May next.

Hon. JAMES S. SLUYTER, of the Tenth Assembly District, in the beginning of the Session introduced a bill containing the same provisions, but neglected to call it up for consideration at the request of Hon. THOMAS KIVLEN of the Second District, who had also drafted a bill on the subject. In February the present bill was introduced by Mr. KIVLEN, who had drafted it conjointly with Mr. SLUYTER. It came up for consideration in evening session, and, after a very extended debate, which was protracted, not so much by opposition to the bill as by the opportunity which offered members for making bunkum speeches, was ordered to a third reading, and finally past. The measure was loudly called for. There are many persons who are in the habit of hiring servants by the month and discharging them at the end of that period without wages. These persons have generally been protected in these cases by the exemption laws which are modified by this bill. We know of one suit which has already been commenced under it, and and probably the attorneys of his injured servants will have no lack of clients hereafter.

Republican Planks.

The following resolutions were unanimously passed by a full meeting of the Nineteenth Ward Republican Association, on Friday last, after being the subject of consideration at a previous stated meeting:

Resolved, As the sense of this Association, that the public lands should go into the possession of actual settlers only, and that too, at such prices, and in such quantities, that any industrious man may obtain sufficient to supply his family the substantial comforts and necessaries of life.

Resolved, That one ground of our hostility to Slavery is in connection with this subject. The lordly master, with his numerous chattel slaves, extends himself over, impoverishes and blasts lands which would otherwise, and for all time, sustain in comfort and prosperity ten times the number of hardy, intelligent, and industrious freemen.

The following, after being debated, and receiving a considerable support, was finally laid upon the table for future action:

Resolved, That we would cheerfully acquiesce in, and heartily support any public measure which may be devised, either by the income from the public lands, or otherwise, whereby remuneration shall be made to the master, and Slavery shall cease to exist in our land.

The next stated meeting of the Association was fixed for the second Friday in July next.

Pudding Before Meat.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In my boyish days (half a century ago) I was sent to a boarding-school in the country—a sort of Do-the-Boys'-Hall without the brimstone and treacle—where one of the proclamations to the boys before dinner was: "Whoever eats the most pudding, shall have the most meat." The consequence was that, having gorged ourselves with pudding, we couldn't eat any meat at all! Hence the economy of the arrangement, from which we did not suffer, in the least.

Since that, I have partaken of the fare of farmhouses in our vicinity, where the custom was to bring upon the table the puddings, pastries, custards and pies as the first course—bringing on the meat afterwards. As you may suppose, but little meat was required.

The object of this note is, to suggest whether this would not be a good plan to pursue at this time, when flesh food is so dear, and farinaceous food comparatively so cheap.

APICIUS.

Ohio State Medical Society Convention.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

SANDUSKY, Ohio, Friday, June 5, 1857.

The Ohio State Medical Society is now holding its twelfth annual session in this place. About one hundred physicians, from the leading cities of the State, are in attendance. Proceedings are of much interest to the profession, and possess no little interest for the public that has to swallow medicine and submit to "operations." Among others in attendance is Dr. HAYES, Surgeon of the Grinnell Arctic Expedition, under command of the late lamented KANE. Dr. DANIEL TILDEN, of Sandusky, one of the oldest and ablest practitioners in the State, is the presiding officer. Delegates are in attendance from the State Medical Association of surrounding States. Dr. BLACKBURN represents Kentucky. The Valedictory address of Ex-President ALLEN was pronounced Wednesday afternoon: subject—"State of the Medical Profession of Ohio, Past and Present." Dr. ALLEN is a venerable man, and his address was good. His reminiscences of Western practice reaching back to 1812, of course he had many a strange story to tell. He says pretty much all of the diseases of this region have changed character and type since 1820.

Among the papers offered and ordered printed are the reports of the Committee on Surgery, &c. Also one by Dr. MCMEENS, of Sandusky, on "The Geology, Topography, Hydrography, Meteorology, Mortuary Statistics, Endemics and Epidemics of Sandusky." Dr. McM. is an old West Point cadet, and a highly educated man. This paper has been in course of preparation for two years, and will possess a high degree of interest to scientific men generally. By Dr. MEAD, of Cincinnati, a paper on "Moral Insanity." By Dr. KYLE, a paper on the "History of the Veretrum Viridi, and its use in the Treatment of Disease by Quacks."

The report of the Committee on Surgery, read by Dr. DAWSON, was an elaborately prepared document, giving statistics and per centages of success in various operations. The paper will command attention in its printed form. It excited some considerable debate, but was almost unanimously adopted.

The remarks made upon the use of the new remedy Veratrum Viridi, were of much interest. The speakers had used it with eminent success in cases of high excitement of the pulse and nervous system, in the first stages of violent pneumonia and typhoid fevers, and, in a few instances, in inflammatory rheumatism. Dr. FIRESTONE, of the Newburg Lunatic Asylum, had administered it to highly excited cases, and it uniformly calmed them and gave them sweet sleep. Dr. HOLSTON, of Gainesville, however, did not give the new and powerful agent his confidence. He called it a tame lion, which should be handled with extremest care. He spoke from experiment and experience, and mentioned a case of death resulting from its use in a fever patient. The sense of the Society appeared to be to adopt the medicine in cases of high excitement and rapid pulse.

Tuesday evening Dr. HAYES lectured to a very large audience, on his "Arctic Adventures and Arctic Life." It was well received. Wednesday evening the Society attended a private soirée given by Mrs. OSAN FOLLETT. Thursday afternoon was spent on the lake and bay in a trip to the scene of PERRY'S victory. Thursday night a soirée was given the Society, at Wesh's Hall, by Mesdames W. T. WEST, MCMEENS, MUNSON and others. Thus much for the festivities of the occasion.

To-day the Society is still in session. It adjourns this P. M. Dr. HOLSTON, of Gainesville, lectures to-night, on "The antiquity of man as an inhabitant of our globe." It is understood that the Doctor is not a Mosaic in his belief respecting human chronology. His lecture will excite considerable remark, for he is an able and a learned man. Yours, VISE.

For the Warning of Ladies.

Will you kindly permit me to occupy a space in your paper, to warn ladies, particularly those from the country, of a "dodge" which is now extensively practiced by knavish shop-keepers.

Two ladies from the St. Nicholas went into a small jewelry shop on the west side of Broadway, and purchased some trifles amounting to a few dollars in value. Seeing some bracelets of a curious shape in the show-case, they asked to examine them. The shopman placed the bracelets upon the case, and after examining them, the ladies turned and went to the door, where they remained for a moment looking at some articles in a case outside. As they were about to leave, the shopman advanced to one of them and said that she had one of the bracelets in her possession. Supposing that he meant that one had inadvertently taken it with the articles purchased, she took them from her pocket, showed that it was not there, and turned to leave the store. At this, another man advanced and said that she must not leave; the first shopman still retaining his position behind the counter.

The lady became very much alarmed, and told the man that there were but three bracelets placed upon the show-case, and they were all there when she left; whereupon he pointed to the case where she saw but two bracelets remaining. Her companion, who had watched their proceedings closely, saw by their suspicious actions that the thing was concocted between them for the purpose of extortion, and accused the shopman of having secreted the bracelet for the purpose of compelling her friend to pay for it. The ladies having expressed a determination not to pay for the bracelet, the shopman behind the show-case suddenly stooped and produced it, stating that it had accidentally fallen upon the floor.

This was, of course, untrue. It could not have fallen without his knowledge, and besides these Jews are not in the habit of leaving articles upon a counter several minutes after customers have left. The knave supposed the ladies to be strangers, from the fact of their having articles sent to a hotel, and thought that they would rather pay for the bracelet than be subjected to the mortification of an accusation for theft. If the lady accused of theft had been alone he probably would have succeeded. They were informed at a store within a few doors of this establishment, that this was not the first attempt at extortion which had been made there, but that the thing was of frequent occurrence. RUSTICUS.

Affairs in Yale College.

NEW-HAVEN, Saturday, June 7, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Speculation as to who were to be the successful competitors for the Townsend Premiums, for excellence in English composition, was yesterday set at rest by the announcement of the following names:

WM. C. CAGE, Granby, Conn.
J. M. HOLMES, Chicago, Ill.
J. C. JACKSON, Newark, N. J.
N. C. PERKINS, Pomfret, Vt.
GEORGE PRATT, E. Weymouth, Mass.
A. H. STRONG, Rochester, N. Y.

These premiums are awarded to the members of the Senior Class, and determine who shall contend for the De Forest Prize Medal, which is valued at $100.

The examination for the Bristed Scholarship took place last week. This scholarship was instituted by C. A. BRISTED, Esq. It yields about $80 per annum, and continues until the successful candidate receives his second degree. Members of the Sophomore and Junior Classes are allowed to compete for it when ever a vacancy occurs. Five candidates presented themselves for examination; four from the Junior and one from the Sophomore Class. It was awarded to J. W. GIBBS, of this City, a member of the Junior Class.

The next two weeks promise to be a pretty exciting period in the college world. Last Wednesday evening the Brothers in Unity held their election, and intrusted the interests of the society for the approaching electioneering campaign to F. A. NOBLE, of the Junior Class, as their first President. The election in Linonia is to take place next Wednesday evening. Then comes the initiatory of the secret societies, Psi Beta Kappa included, on Friday and Saturday evenings. Monday evening succeeding, the Annual Wooden Spoon Exhibition occurs. Wednesday, the 17th, the Senior Class is presented to the President and closes its active connection with college; and a day or two afterwards, probably Friday, the speaking for the De Forest medal takes place. Then college relapses into its usual quiet, not to be disturbed again until Commencement. W.

Hamilton College—Clark Prize Exhibition.

Hon. AARON CLARK, of this City, some three years since established a Prize in this institution, for excellence in oratory. The third annual exhibition of competitors for this prize will be held at Clinton, N. Y., Wednesday evening, June 10. The competitors from the Senior class are: GEO. M. DIVEN, Elmira; H. JOHNSON, Buffalo; A. T. PIERSON, New-York; D. J. ROBINSON, Ithaca; W. M. ROBINSON, Port Byron; A. S. SEYMOUR, Piermont.

SUICIDE BY HANGING.—FREDERICK DRYER, a native of Bremen, 39 years of age, was found, on Tuesday morning, suspended by the neck and dead, on board the ship Copernicus, lying at Pier No. 43 North River. He had hung himself to one of the timbers of the vessel. Coroner CONNERY held an inquest upon the body, and a verdict of "Suicide" was rendered. Poverty is supposed to have induced the unfortunate man thus to end his life. He had but recently arrived from Bremen.

Views of Jefferson Davis on Cuba and Central America.

The following are the main features in the speech of JEFF. DAVIS, which was delivered at a barbecue given to him at Jackson, Miss., on the 27th ult., on his return from Washington. The extract is from the report of the Vicksburg Sentinel, which is the organ of Mr. DAVIS:

"Col. DAVIS, in his opening remarks, expressed, with evident emotion, his acknowledgments for the high honor conferred upon him. From the depths of his heart he thanked his friends, neighbors and fellow-citizens for such a manifestation of their respect, approval and confidence. He did not regard it as a mere personal tribute; he knew that other and higher considerations had induced the multitude then present to come forward and tender him so cordial a welcome on his return home. He assured them that after four years absence, spent in the service of his country, he comes back to Mississippi unchanged in all respects, unless it was that he had brought with him a deeper devotion to his beloved State. While occupying his late official position he had endeavored to discharge faithfully his duty to the whole Union; but as a man, he had always felt that his first allegiance was to the State of Mississippi. By the lonely camp-fires of the Northwest, and on the plains and amid the mountains of Mexico, while watching the stars which shone above him, his first thought had ever been that they were shining, too, on the land from which his affections had never traveled. He had returned to the State with the old sentiment of his youth and his manhood still exercising its accustomed power over his mind and his heart.

He had gone into the Cabinet with the hope that he would be able to do something in acquiring the island of Cuba—an acquisition which he regarded as important to the whole country, but indispensable to the South. In justice to the administration of Gen. PIERCE, he could say that it had done all in its power to accomplish so desirable an object. It had sent to Madrid, as the representative of the United States, the man whom, above all others, he regarded as best qualified to bring to a successful issue its policy in regard to Cuba. He referred to PIERRE SOULE, of Louisiana. The present Chief Magistrate, as Minister to London, had powerfully seconded the views of the Administration in the matter. If the negotiation had failed of the desired success, the responsibility rested not with the Administration, but with the legislative department, which had deplorably neglected to act with the firmness and decision called for by the occasion. The non-action of Congress on the President's message in reference to the Black Warrior affair, had led the Spanish Cortes to believe that, as to its Cuban policy, the Administration did not enjoy the confidence of the country; and this conviction on their part was necessarily fatal to our negotiations. Had Congress responded to the President's message as it ought to have responded, he felt sure that the result would have been far different.

He spoke at some length as to the course of the administration in reference to Central America. In conducting its negotiations with respect to that country, its action had been hampered and embarrassed by the Clayton-Bulwer treaty—a treaty which he regarded as a surrender of the Monroe doctrine, whose fatal consequences he had foreseen, and against which he had voted, in a minority of ten, when a member of the Senate in 1850. He approved fully of the great principle enunciated by President Monroe, and was prepared to stand by it faithfully and carry it out fully. He had watched with interest the operations of Walker in Nicaragua, and had earnestly desired that success should crown his arms. He had not abandoned the hope that victory would yet remain with Walker and his gallant band. If errors committed by him had led to reverses, he trusted that experience would enable him, or some one who might take his place, to avoid them for the future, and conduct the enterprise to a happy conclusion.

He had faith in American skill and courage, and believed that the cause of Walker, either under his lead, or that of some other chief who might succeed him, would eventually triumph. On a memorable occasion, he had seen a handful of American soldiers cut their way through a more numerous and better organized foe; and though affairs at present looked gloomy enough in Nicaragua, he anticipated confidently the dawn of a brighter day and more auspicious fortunes.

United States Court of Claims.

REVOLUTIONARY OFFICERS' HALF-PAY FOR LIFE—EFFECT OF THE U. S STATUTES OF LIMITATION, SO CALLED—MILITARY—REVOLUTIONARY LAND-WARRANTS.

E. B. Chamberlin et al. vs. the United States.—(On argument.)—The petition was presented by E. B. C., appearing for himself and others, heirs of Joshua Chamberlin, a Captain in the Army of the Revolution. It states that Joshua Chamberlin, in April, 1780, enlisted into the army "for the war;" was promoted to a captaincy, and served in that capacity to the close of hostilities. Capt C. died in 1812.

The petitioners claim to receive, under the Resolution of Oct. 21, 1780, the half-pay of a captain from Nov. 3, 1783, the date of disbanding the army, to the death of Capt. Chamberlin.

They also claim that a warrant be issued to them for such bounty land as they are entitled to in virtue of the services of Capt. C.

In this case, the operation of different Resolutions of the old, and Acts of the new, Congress, in the form of and commonly called acts of limitation, came in question, as to their effect upon claims for officers' half-pay.

As to bounty land. The resolution of Sept. 16, 1776, provided for granting lands to persons who should engage in the service and continue therein until the close of the war, or until discharged by Congress. The share of a Captain was 300 acres.

The resolution of Sept. 18, 1776, extended this bounty to all who should enlist for the term of during the war.

By section 2 of Act of April 26, 1802, it was made the duty of the Secretary of War to receive claims to land for military services until Jan. 1, 1803. By various successive Acts, (the last passed Feb. 8, 1854,) the time to receive such claims for bounty land has been extended to June 26, 1858.

By the Court—GILMORIER, C. J.—Held: The claim in this case, for half-pay, is for personal services rendered to the United States, in the military department, and was barred by not having been presented at the Treasury by May 27, 1794, according to Section 1 of the Act of March 27, 1792.

2. It is also barred by Section I of the Act of Feb. 12, 1793, by not having been presented at the Treasury before May 1, 1794.

3. Therefore, at the time of his death in 1812, "Captain Chamberlin had no claim for half-pay against the United States, which could be sanctioned by a Court of law, or which could descend to his heirs, or be prosecuted to judgment by his administrator, if any existed.

4. The petitioners, therefore, as to the claim for half-pay have (in this Court) no cause of action.

5. The Secretary of the Interior, to whom the duties of the Secretary of War, in relation to bounty land, were transferred by Section 6 of the act of March 3, 1849, is now authorized to issue military Revolutionary Land Warrants to such persons as shall produce to him satisfactory evidence of the validity of their claims.

6. There is, then, now existing a tribunal which has jurisdiction of applications for Revolutionary Bounty Land Warrants. Any person interested should, in the first place, apply to the Department of the Interior, and have the claim there examined.†

7. The same evidence which would be sufficient to substantiate the claim for half-pay for life, would establish also the right to the bounty land.

8. A claim for half pay for life cannot be prosecuted by the heirs, but as it is personal estate, it must be enforced by an administrator. It may be different as to bounty land.—Abstract of opinion.

* At the Pension Office.

† Should such an application at the Department be rejected, then the claimant may apply to the Court of Claims.

Hotel-Living in New-York.

From the Toronto Colonist.

These palace-like hotels are, indeed, complete colleges for the teaching of extravagance. They are to women what a museum of rare fossils is to an enthusiast in geology. They inflame their strongest and least governable desires, namely, to possess those things which are rarest, and have the greatest attraction; and, though it may possibly be unobserved by themselves, there is, perhaps, hardly a family in the United States, which, if they commence furnishing, would not have the rooms of some palace-like hotel in view, or the gorgeous trappings of a luxurious steamboat, and which might not be led into extravagance by the examples. And the worst of the evil is, that it belongs to that incradicable class which is called fashionable. It is fashionable to go to hotels, where the carpets are a species of reproach upon anything like a decently-soled shoe; where the curtains are death upon a calico dress; and where a useful herring back tweed coat would be little short of fashionable sacrilege. Until it becomes fashionable, therefore, for respectable people in New-York, and elsewhere in the States, to go to places where they will not have to pay for dirty-nosed cupids, three and even four dollars a day will yet be expended for learning extravagance, and for seeing vulgarity strutting its little hour upon moss carpets.

GRIEVING FOR LOST PEARLS.—It would be hard to tell whether most joy or sorrow has been caused at Notch Brook, N. J., by the discovery of the Pearls. Dozens are bemoaning fortunes that, in days past, they carelessly flung away. One matron unavailingly sighs over some "little white things" that she once gave her boys for marbles. A schoolmaster lugubriously remembers that he had chopped up eight or ten thousand dollars worth, with his penknife, "to see what was inside." Another genius rammed a pearl bullet down his rifle and shot away his fortune. An old lady who chuckled six months over her "good bargain with the peddler," now discovers that she paid him, in pearls, about seven thousand dollars for a calico dress. It is needless to say she hasn't laughed since. The unfortunate man who had the $25,000 once cooked for his breakfast has taken to bed, in utter despair, and refuses to be comforted.—Exchange Paper.

EIGHT PER CENT. LAND GRANT FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.—The Chicago, St. Paul and Fon du Lac Railroad Company propose to sell to Stockholders their Eight per Cent. 20 year Construction (Land Grant) Mortgage Bonds, of $1,000 each, of date May 1, 1857, and secured upon their entire Road and line of Road from Chicago to Lake Superior, and upon a million of acres of the grants of Public Lands from Congress, as made to this Company by the States of Wisconsin and Michigan.

Accompanying each Bond will be a Scrip Certificate, entitling the purchaser or his assigns, at any time at their option, to ten shares, of $100 each, of Privilege Land Grant Stock, on electing, at any time within two years from June 1, 1857, to subscribe and pay ten per cent. of the par value thereof, the same never to be subject to any further assessments, but to be credited with proceeds of sales of lands until full paid, to share dividends and be entitled to vote pro rata, as provided by said Company, and set forth in said Stock Privilege Certificate, and in their Circular to Stockholders of May 25, 1857.

The subscription price for said Bonds to be 90 per cent. their par value and accrued interest, payable 10 per cent. in hand, 10 per cent. on 1st July next, and 20 per cent. on each of the first days of August, September and October next, or as much sooner as parties may elect, at the office of the Company in New-York.

The subscription list will be opened at the office of the Company, No. 13 Wall-st, on MONDAY, the 8th inst., and will remain open till the 20th June inst.—Dated New-York, June 1, 1857.

CHARLES BUTLER, Treasurer, &c.

SIX PER CENT. LOAN OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund of the Norwich and Worcester Railroad Company, by virtue of an Act of the General Court, hereby give notice that they will receive sealed proposals until the 30th inst., at noon, at the Office of the Treasurer of the Commonwealth, at the State House in Boston, for the purchase of the scrip of the Commonwealth of four hundred thousand dollars, payable July 1, 1877, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, from the 1st day of July, 1857, payable semi-annually on the first day of January and July, on the coupons attached to said scrip, at the Treasurer's Office in the city of Boston. A deposit of 10 per cent. of the amount of each proposal will be required on their opening, to insure final payment; the whole amount of the loan to be paid in on or before the 30th inst. Proposals may be made for any part of the above loan, not less than five thousand dollars. They must specify the amount of premium offered (none otherwise will be received,) and must also give the address of the party making the proposals, and be inclosed in an envelope marked "Proposals for Massachusetts State Loan," and be addressed to MOSES TENNEY, Jr., Treasurer and Receiver-General of the Commonwealth, at the State House, Boston. The right is reserved to reject all or any part of the proposals made.

CONTINENTAL BANK, NEW-YORK, April 4, 1857.

CAPITAL STOCK $1,500,000, TO BE INCREASED TO $2,000,000.—The Board of Directors of the Continental Bank, in view of its increasing business, and in pursuance of the authority conferred on them by the articles of Association, have unanimously decided to increase the capital stock by an issue of 5,000 additional shares, of $100 each, which shall be subject in all respects to the stipulations, conditions, and limitations in said articles contained and declared with respect to the shares now existing.

The officers of the Bank having been duly authorized by the Board, hereby give notice that in accordance with such decision, and with the said articles, they will open Books of subscription, and receive subscriptions, on the 15th day of June next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M., at the said Bank in the City of New-York, from all persons who shall appear to be registered on that day on the books of the Bank as shareholders in the said Continental Bank, in the proportion of one new share of the increased capital stock at par, to every three shares then held by them respectively.

The amount subscribed, and not paid at the time of subscription, will be payable on the 1st day of July next, when certificates will be issued.

Such portion of the additional 5,000 shares as shall not be taken by the shareholders within ten days after the said 15th day of June, will be disposed of for the benefit of the Association.

The transfer books will be closed from the 15th day of June to the (8th) sixth day of July, both inclusive.

NEW-YORK CITY.

The Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen met last evening, Alderman CLANCY, President, in the Chair.

A report was received from the Committee on Croton Aqueduct Department, in favor of non-concurring with the Board of Councilmen in the draft of ordinances relative to the reorganizing of the Croton Department, and in favor of the ordinances as amended, creating an additional bureau, to be called the Bureau of Pavements.

THE STATE ARSENAL.

The Committee on Ordinances presented an ordinance to raise funds for the purchase of the State Arsenal and grounds in the City. It proposes a fund to be called the "Central Park Fund," and in addition to that fund heretofore known by that title, to be created for a loan of $275,000, which shall bear interest of 6 per cent. per annum, redesmable July 1, 1893. The Comptroller to pay the $275,000 as the price of the State Arsenal and lands, upon receiving a good and valid deed or conveyance thereof, vesting the same in the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of New-York, free from all incumbrances. It was adopted.

Several reports relating to parts of streets, from the City Inspector, were received and referred.

THE BROOKLYN FERRIES.

The following communication was received from the Union Ferry Company:

To the Honorable the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York:

The Union Ferry Company of Brooklyn have appointed Mr. James Cheshire, agent of the Greenpoint Ferry, appraiser of the boats, racks, bridges and other ferry fixtures on Gouverneur Ferry, and your honorable body are requested to appoint an appraiser for the same purpose.

The lease of the said ferry having expired, the said ferry not having been abolished as a public ferry, nor leased to other parties, the Ferry Company will claim of your honorable body judgment for the boats, racks, bridges and ferry fixtures of that ferry.

Most respectfully, &c.,

N. B. MORSE, President.

UNION FERRY OFFICE, BROOKLYN, June 3, 1857.

The following report of the Committee on Ferries was then brought up as special order, and adopted:

The Committee on Ferries, to whom was referred the annexed petition of the residents of Brooklyn and New-York, representing that the Union Ferry Company had violated their lease, relative to the managing and conducting of the Roosevelt and Bridge-streets ferries, and praying that the Common Council will direct the Company to cause three boats to run on said ferry; and, also, the subject of releasing the Gouverneur-street ferry, respectfully

REPORT:

That they have had a great number of meetings, and have given the subject that careful attention which it seemed to demand; "herewith we submit the following facts for the consideration of the Board," viz:

The petitioners represent, that on the part of the Union Ferry Company, there has been an utter disregard in the conducting and managing of the Roosevelt Ferry, and at a great detriment and inconvenience to the citizens of Brooklyn, who live in the vicinity of said ferry.

It further represents, that there is but one boat kept running on said route, while to afford the requisite accommodation for persons who travel over this ferry, there should be regularly attached to it three boats, and all kept in good condition, and running at the like rates of speed as those on the Fulton and Catharine Ferries, so that a boat should leave each side every few minutes, and one boat should be kept running all night.

The Committee will state, that the conditions of the lease of the Roosevelt-street Ferry is, that one boat shall be kept running every half hour, unless further directed by the Common Council.

The Company have more than complied with the terms in this respect; they have kept two boats running on said ferry, one boat more than their lease requires, without any direction from the Common Council, and at a great loss to the Company.

The object and desire of the Company, as your Committee believe, has been, to build up and conduct the Roosevelt Ferry, with a due regard to public convenience, and to that standard with the Fulton and other Ferries; but your Committee believe it is entirely impossible to do so, without a great loss to the Company, as, upon examination and testimony of the ferry master, it appeared, that on some occasions, during the space of an hour and a-half, he has only received fifty cents ferriage. The travel over said ferry has not increased since the establishment of the same, but, on the contrary, has been a constant expense and loss. Notwithstanding this, the Company is still willing to keep the ferry running, at a great loss, and to compel them, at this time, to run three boats, would be, in the opinion of your Committee, imposing upon them a great hardship.

The petitioners further allege, that the ferry company are circulating a report, that the ferry is an unprofitable one, which is done for the purpose of applying to the Common Council to discontinue the same, and that the petitioners have reason to believe, that the company are now endeavoring, by their own management, to run down and depreciate the ferry, with the view of giving color to such an application.

Your Committee could not discover, during the investigation, any facts that would warrant such a belief; but, on the contrary, your Committee are brought to the conviction, from all the facts presented, that the company have endeavored to facilitate travel, and to render all the accommodations that could be reasonably expected of them.

In reference to the Gouverneur-street ferry, your Committee find, that the lease expired on the 14th of September, 1854, since which time the ferry was run, and maintained by the company, up to within a few months, when they gave up running, and stopped the boats altogether.

Your Committee, in view of the facts presented, have concluded to recommend for adoption the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Union Ferry Company be and is hereby directed to continue running on Roosevelt-street Ferry one boat every half hour, in strict compliance with the requirements of their lease with the Corporation.

Resolved, That the Comptroller be and he is hereby authorized and directed to advertise for proposals to lease the ferry at the foot of Gouverneur-street, including the use of the whole of the slip for a term of ten years; the lessee shall be compelled to take the ferry house, rack and fixtures, and also the boats now owned by the Union Ferry Company, and heretofore used on said ferry, at a valuation to be appraised by three persons; one person to be selected by the Union Ferry Company, one by the lessees, and the third to be selected by the two thus appointed. The said lessees shall be required to maintain and keep up a ferry for the accommodation of the public by running every day in the year, two boats every ten minutes, from five o'clock A. M. until eight o'clock P. M., and one boat every fifteen minutes, from eight o'clock P. M. until one o'clock A. M.

Committee on Ferries.

STREET-CLEANING.

The Committee on Streets presented a report which annuls the contracts, and requests the City Inspector to go on with the work until new contracts are made. It authorizes him to advertise for proposals for one and five years. It is altered from the report in yesterday's NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES, in so far as it gives the City Inspector the right to reject all or any of the estimates if deemed for the interests of the Corporation; also, that a Committee of Conference be appointed to meet with a similar Committee of the Councilmen on the subject. The report was adopted, and the Committee adjourned.

The Board then adjourned to Monday next.

Board of Governors.

The Board of Governors met at the Rotunda on Tuesday, the President, C. GODFREY GUNTHER, Esq., in the Chair.

There is an increase of 31 upon the former weekly list of inmates of the various institutions, the present number being 6,138. There are 18 inmates of the Small-pox Hospital, not an unusual number.

It was resolved that no more transfers should be made from the Workhouse to the Almshouse until further orders, many of them being only night-walkers.

From the list of committals to Blackwell's Island, it appears that six individuals have been committed 16 times, and one person 21 times.

Governor PINCKNEY thought it unsafe to give a Committee power to allow in their discretion the visits of Sunday Schools to the Island. If one school were admitted, so must all; the precedent was bad.

The reference on vote was carried against him, Governor OLIVER warmly supporting, and Governor MALONY protesting against it.

An order was made to report the list of salaries of all the persons employed by the Board.

The motion being made to adjourn, Governor GUNTHER, the President, said that before the adjournment it was desirable that the vacancy ought to be filled with a Governor, inasmuch as the law required it.

Governor ANDERSON immediately said that he had a Governor to propose. He did not name the gentleman.

Governor OLIVER asked whether the President recognized the motion to adjourn.

The President said he did, and on vote the Board adjourned.

Five candidates have been named; two by the American Party and three by the Republicans.

A FIVE-POINTS INCIDENT.—The native ugliness of some of the young ones with whom the ladies of the Five Points Mission have to contend, sometimes crops out in a very disagreeable way. Wednesday morning, a stout lad named JAMES EAGLE, who has attended the school at the Ladies' Mission for some months past, became unruly and was called up for punishment. His first proceeding was to strike his teacher, Mrs. CASE, a heavy blow in the chest, his fist, however, striking upon a cambric pin and doing no damage. The boy then drew a knife, opened it and concealed it in his pocket. This act was noticed by some of the scholars, who grew frightened and gave the alarm, when the boy was ordered to give up his weapon. He denied that he had one, but on searching him, it was found, with the blade still open, concealed in his hose, where he contrived to slip it unobserved. He was immediately expelled from the school. With this exception, there has been nothing to mar the harmony of the school. It now numbers 226 pupils, and among them is still the famous and sharp little BABBIE.

The Turf for 1857.

NEW-YORK RACES—FASHION COURSE, L. I.—First Day—The regular meeting commenced Tuesday, June 9. There was a large assemblage of persons on the track. Two races were announced for the opening day. First race, sweepstakes for three-year-olds, mile heats, nine nominations, but only four started. When we reached the Course, Bauvecchi was the favorite against the field at $100 to $60. At the appointed time the four were called up and received the "tap," McDANIEL's ch. c. winning the race handily. Second race, the Proprietor's purse, $300, two-mile heats, brought out Lucy Phillips, Toler, Lilla, and a black horse. The former was the favorite against the field, at the rate of $100 to $20. Lucy won easy in two heats. The following is a summary of the day's running of Tuesday, June 9. Sweepstakes for 3-year-olds, $300 subscriptions, $100 forfeit, with $300 added, mile heats:

WOODCOCK & MCDANIEL, ch. colt, by imp. Glencoe, out of Motto, by imp. Barefoot	1	1

Time—3:49; 3:54.

SCHOOL MATTERS IN THE FOURTH WARD.—The Public School in Oliver-street was, a short time since, removed to the Quaker Church in Rose-street. The school officers hired the church at a rent of $3,000 per annum, and fitted it up at an expense of several hundred dollars, to be occupied by the School, but the Board of Education refuses to foot the bill, and the School Officers are held personally responsible; accordingly the school has been moved back to its old quarters in the Oliver-street Baptist Church, the basement of which is hired at $1,200 a year.

ARMY SURGEONS.—At a recent meeting of the Army Medical Board in this City, the following persons were appointed Assistant Surgeons: Dr. ROBERT BARTHOLOMEW, of Maryland; JAMES C. BAILEY, Pennsylvania; T. COOPER MCKAE, of New-York; KENLY RYLAND, Missouri, and WILLIAM A. CARSWELL, of South Carolina.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY—ARREST.—Two men, giving their names as JAMES RILEY and JOHN HARRISON, were brought before Justice WELSH, at the First District Police Court yesterday morning, on a charge of highway robbery, preferred against them by a young man named EDWARD VEATON, residing at No. 97 Roosevelt street. VEATON stated that about 11 o'clock Monday night, while passing through Cherry-street, three men, who had followed him some distance, suddenly rushed upon him and pulled from one of his fingers a gold ring worth $7. One of them then struck him in the breast, knocking him down, whereupon all three of the gang then ran away. VEATON then jumped up and cried "Watch." Policeman FAGAN, of the Fourth Ward, was at hand, and joined VEATON in pursuit of the runaways, two of whom—the prisoners—they soon caught. The accused were committed for trial.

Straw and thatBonded Warehouse.

NEW YORK, Tuesday, June 9, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The best reply to the communication in the TIMES of this morning, is a statement of facts.

An application for bonding the store burned was made on the 16th of May, and an affirmative answer returned from Washington on the 19th.

The Warehouse Department gave notice to that effect to the officer on duty, who received from the proper office, locks for the store in the regular way.

The communication of the Secretary of the Treasury was put into the hands of the Bond Clerk to make the required bond. The proprietor of the stores having executed a bond previously, supposed no further action was necessary on his part, as the old system required only one bond without regard to the added stores.

The owners of the sugars had no reason to doubt that everything was complete, hence there was no "earnest solicitation from influential parties."

As much has been said about allowing "Hay in Bonded Stores," (it was straw,) it may be as well to state that hay in bundles is contained in the same category of insurable articles as sugar, and which may be seen on any Fire Policy.

It may also be stated, in answer to a previous communication in the TIMES, that no person was "smoking on the bundles of straw," nor was any laborer in the store at the time, or for nearly an hour previous. The store-keeper, with an assistant, the Custom-House officer on duty, and a captain of a vessel, were the persons present, and for an hour before, counting sugars; and from the mode in which the fire flashed up, the impression was that it was spontaneous combustion.

The laborers were in the room appropriated to them during the dinner, and wherein smoking is allowed only.

Politeness on a City Car.

NEW-YORK, Sunday, June 7, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

My wife says: "I rode up this noon (about 1 o'clock) in car No. 13 of the Third-avenue line. At the corner of Fourth street and Bowery a gentleman pulled the bell and got out, and the car moved on again. This being the point of my destination I again pulled the bell, upon which the conductor, with a most unpleasant scowl on his face, and in a very rude, gruff tone of voice, exclaimed, 'Pull the bell once, that's 'nuff; it's yer own fault that yer don't git out on the crossing. What —— fools some women air.'"

SEA-SICKNESS.

One of the greatest surgeons, says, writing to a friend in New-York: "I am convinced that constipation has a vast deal to do with sea-sickness; the Doctor's pills acted like a charm on board—everybody wanted pills from me. I always gave the name of Dr. BRANDRETH. Some were surprised to find a 'Regular' use that medicine; but in my case it was not so singular, for my father used it before I was born."

Often, when nothing has relieved vomiting of the most serious character, whether from sea-sickness or otherwise—where the retching has been appalling—a single dose of four Brandreth's Pills has at once cured, and the patient has fallen into a sweet sleep. When the mind cannot collect itself, when the memory fails, when it is an effort to fix the attention, when our sleep is broken and our waking hours are harassed with forebodings of evil, then Brandreth's Pills should be used. If these warnings remain unheeded, rheumatism, consumption, disease of the heart, bilious affections, jaundice, dropsies, piles, apoplexies and costiveness, will suddenly present themselves. These, BRANDRETH'S Pills would have prevented, but, nevertheless, these they will also cure. Use them at once; do not let prejudice prevent the use of this simple but potent remedy.

Dealers supplied better than elsewhere, at No. 43 Brandreth Building. Retail price, 25 cents a box, with directions. Agents, No. 296 Bowery, and No. 241 Hudson-street; No. 52 Division-street; corner of Broadway and Twenty second-street; Mrs. HAYES, No. 175 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

"Thrice is he armed" against the perils of impure water and adulterated bar-room liquors, who carries with him on his journeye a few bottles of CHARLES' LONDON CORDIAL GIN, invaluable as a corrective, diuretic, and invigorant, and delicious (with a due admixture of water,) as an occasional beverage. Warehouse No. 40 Broadway. Sold by all druggists and grocers.

CLEANING THE STREETS.—Shall we ever enjoy the luxury of clean streets in this City? The point is doubtful. It seems almost impossible. Until we do, the crowd will naturally complain that daily through the mind and filth has to wend its way to witness that excellent and exhilerating Drama, "Fraud and its Victims," now so successful at Barnum's Museum. It is repeated there this afternoon and evening.

S. COATES, manufacturer of Portable Gas Works, under the patent of the Maryland Portable Gas Company, desires to call public attention to the improved apparatus sold by him, and designed chiefly for country residences, factories, hotels, &c.

These works are safe, cheap, efficient and simple in their construction, and warranted to give entire satisfaction.

Office No. 376 Broadway, New-York, where descriptive circulars may be obtained. S. COATES.

THE LIFE GIVER.—Such is the Translation of the Burmese words "Ir Churrus," of which the new medicine, the Churrus remedy, is compounded. Hundreds have already experienced the wonderful effects in consumption, nervousness and debility of every kind. Sufferers from these diseases are invited to call and try it gratuitously, at the agency, No 162½ Fulton-st. Sent to any part free, on receipt of $1,

FOR NEURALGIA OR FOR TIC DOULOUREUX, apply J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR. Relief will be immediate. Sold at 50 cents a bottle by the STAFFORD OLIVE TAR COMPANY, No. 16 State-street, east side of Battery, and by all druggists.

A gala day at PURDY'S NATIONAL THEATRE. A "Complimentary Testimonial" is to be given Manager A. H. PURDY to-day, tendered him by the company and all attachés of his establishment. Two performances (afternoon and evening) will be given. In the afternoon, commencing at 2½ o'clock, the dramatized Ledger story of "The Wild Knight, or the Unknown Crusader," to be followed by the pantomime of "A School in an Uproar." In the evening the new drama of "Ups and Downs of New-York Life," the pantomime of the "Magic Trumpet," the fairy drama of the "Mountain Sylph," and the drama of "Norah Creina."

MURRAY & LANMAN'S FLORIDA WATER.—All ordinary scented waters are utterly vapid when compared with this. It exhales the breath of flowers, gathered in the full radolence of their perfume. Sprinkle it around, and it freights the air with fragrance. A few drops on the handkerchief renders it precious to the sense. Sold by D. T. LANMAN & Co., wholesale druggists, No. 69 Water-street, New-York, and by all druggists, at 50c. per bottle.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Professional prejudices die hard, but the cures of dyspepsia, bilious disorders, and dysentery, wrought by this unapproachable remedy, are breaking it down everywhere. The liberal-minded members of the faculty admit the value of the medicine. Well they may, for it shames the old treatment by its countless cures.

LOOK IN.—Strangers and citizens will find a visit to the Phrenological Cabinet of FOWLER and WELLS, No. 308 Broadway, both "pleasant and profitable." Rooms always free. Professor FOWLER gives Charts and Descriptions of Character daily.

The ladies will soon be on the wing for the watering places; but first they must plume themselves for the season. At WILNE'S millinery warerooms, No. 251 Broadway, they will find a brilliant assortment of Paris Summer hats, together with every variety of straw goods, artificial flowers, ribbons, dress caps and coiffures, &c., at prices which will not drain their purses.

LONG ISLAND.

A HARD CASE.—The wife of a respectable tradesman in Brooklyn, occupying a high social position, was brought before a Police Magistrate yesterday, and fined $20, for stealing goods from HORTON'S large dry goods store on Fulton-street, one evening last week. The husband is in easy circumstances, and, it is said, provides liberally for his family, and what should prompt this strange course on the part of his wife is a mystery. When arrested, the woman had $40 in her pocket-money, which had been given her for "pin money."

ARREST OF A SWINDLER.—Officer WRIGHT, of the Fourth District Police, Brooklyn, yesterday arrested a man named JAMES CROPSEY, who has obtained considerable money for benevolent citizens in East Brooklyn, under the pretence that the same was to the relief of a fireman's family in great distress. The representations were all false, and CROPSEY was committed to answer.

MORTALITY.—During the week ending Saturday last, there were 61 deaths in Brooklyn: Males 27, females 34, men 8, boys 19, women 15, girls 19.

The principal diseases were: Of the brain 9, consumption and convulsions 8 each, and 4 each by scarlet fever, inflammation of the lungs, and stillborn.

The venerable and Reverend JOHN PIERPONT, of the Williamsburg 3d Unitarian Church, was last heard of lecturing eloquently on Temperance in Kansas.

ROWDY FIREMEN.—The following Brooklyn firemen have been expelled for rowdy conduct: John Hurd, foreman; S. Devoe and Daniel Pevitt, of Engine Co. No. 9; and John Henry and Robert Cox, of Engine Co. No. 6—all belonging to the Eastern District Department.

The Brooklyn Common Council has appropriated $1,000 to celebrate the next anniversary of American Independence, and $500 to keep the yellow fever out of the city.

NEW-JERSEY.

CRICKET—NEW-YORK vs. UNITED STATES.—This match was concluded yesterday afternoon in favor of the New-York players, their score being 125 runs in one innings, to a score of 97 runs, in two innings, of their opponents. The batting and bowling on both sides was good, but the bowling of Messrs. CUYP and BARKER of the New-York players eminently so. The following is the score of the two last innings:

TUESDAY, June 9—P. M.

The ease in Money, and the ability of the Banks to spare the Bullion, have induced the largest shipment of the season by the steamer Arabia to-morrow. The engagements of Gold reach nearly or quite $2,000,000, in addition to which $250,000 in Mexican Silver goes forward. Exchange on England closed firm at 109¾@¾, and on Paris 5 17½. A larger number of the Bankers than usual have remitted gold by this opportunity. Some of them, disposed to employ their money here at 7 ₱ cent. at call on select securities, or at 8@9 ₱ cent. on prime short paper, are remitting closer on account of the immediate ease of our market, and the continued full rates of interest on the other side. There was some calling in of demand loans today, preparatory to the present shipment, though not sufficient to affect the general ease of supply. The Discount Brokers are quoting higher rates by ¼@1 ₱ cent. for paper, say 8@9 ₱ cent. for prime names, 90 days to 4 or 5 months: sixty-day acceptances, 7½@8 ₱ cent. The Sub-Treasury received to-day, $262,796; paid, $289,543, and held at the close, $12,322,566.

The reports of the Stock Exchange which go out to Europe by the packet to-morrow are in singular contrast with the state of the Money market, the freedom and ease with which we are remitting Bullion, the prospects of the growing crops, and the conservative condition of trade and credit throughout the country. The list of sales at the Brokers' Board to-day exhibits a greater depression, upon the whole, than we have recorded for many months past. The pressure to sell was, for the most part, wholly artificial, though the effect produced in this way is not without extensive mischiefs. The scarcity for immediate transfer of most of the Stocks, speculated in by the thousands of shares, constitutes no bar to the determined purpose to make lower prices, the market being under the control of parties who have recently made heavy gains by their short contracts. Toward the close of the day, the dealings became quite feverish and irregular, and the heavy additional decline in two or three Stocks since yesterday brought forward buyers in the afternoon at an advance of ½@1 ₱ cent. on the lowest printed sales. The principal fluctuations since yesterday were:

The following gentlemen were yesterday elected Directors of the Hudson River Railroad Company: Samuel Sloan, James Boorman, Edwin D. Morgan, Edward Jones, John D. Wolfe, Moses H. Grinnell, of New-York; Wm. Kelly, of Rhinebeck; D. Thos. Vail, of Troy; Erastus Corning, of Albany; Wm. H. Hays, M. L. Sykes, Jr., of New-York; Robert P. Getty, of Yonkers; E. M. Gilbert, of Utica. James Roorman and Erastus Corning were elected in place of Messrs. Schoolcraft and Richmond. Samuel Sloan was unanimously reelected President, and M. L. Sykes, Jr., Vice-President.

At a meeting of the Stockholders of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Company, held on the 4th of June inst., the following gentlemen were elected as Directors for the ensuing year: Erastus Corning, of Albany, N. Y.; Edward L. Baker, of New-Bedford, Mass.; Stephen H. Perkins, of Boston, Mass.; Robert B. Forbes, of Boston, Mass.; Nathaniel Thayer, of Boston, Mass.; John M. Forbes, of Boston, Mass.; John W. Brooks, of Boston, Mass.; James F. Joy, of Detroit, Mich.; Isaac H. Burch, Chicago, Ill.; John Van Nortwick, Batavia, Ill.; Chauncey S. Colton, of Galesburg, Ill. The Annual Report of the Directors to the Stockholders was submitted, accepted, and ordered to be printed and a copy forwarded to each Stockholder.

The earnings of the Chicago and Burlington Road for May were $172,992, against $143,048 same month last year. The earnings of the Chicago and Fond du Lac Road in May were $50,168. The earnings in May, 1856, (not so much road opened,) were $19,513.

In the report of the Cumberland Coal Company to May 1, 1857, we find the following items:

Capital Stock	$5,000,000
Equal to Lands	$4,500,000
Railroad	500,000
	$5,000,000

The funded and floating debt of the Company is $762,186, (of which $467,000 is in 6 ₱ cents. due in 1864,) and the nominal assets $266,076. Against these items, which together amount to $938,262, are the following miscellaneous assets:

Mortgage on property sold	$112,000 00
Commercial Mart property	40,000 00
Locust Point property	65,000 00
Wharf property at Alexandria	12,000 00
Schooners, canal-boats and barges	195,750 00
Property other than Mining lands at Cumberland	255,736 80
Property at Baltimore	6,624 50
Property at Alexandria	1,332 00
Bills receivable and other available assets	212,845 66
Coal on hand	21,575 25
Cash on hand	15 288 26
Total	$938,262 00

The value of Exports hence of the leading articles of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods for the week ending this evening, is $938,102, against $1,425,232 the week ending June 12, last year.

Money Circulars for Europe.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, June 9, 1857.

The advance referred to in our last advices of 1st inst., was of brief duration. The next day, under influence of heavy time sales by speculators, a general depression commenced and has continued, notwithstanding a few partial reactions. The heaviest depression has been on the shares of Michigan Southern, Galena and Chicago, Erie, Cleveland and Toledo, Michigan Central, Chicago and Rock Island, on which the fall has been from 9 to 5 ₱ cent; and New-York, Reading, Hudson River, and Cleveland and Pittsburg, on which the decline has been about 4 ₱ cent. State and Railroad Bonds have experienced but a slight depression. Money continues very abundant. The specie in the New-York Sub-Treasury has been reduced $2,497,821 in May, owing to $10,500,000 of the imports of the month having been warehoused awaiting the new Tariff. State stocks inactive; sales being mainly confined to Missouri and Virginia. Missouri 1½ ₱ cent. lower; Virginia, ¾; Tennessee, 1¼ ₱ cent. higher; California, 1870 and 1875, have declined 5@4 ₱ cent. Kentucky and North Carolina, in trifling amounts, at previous prices. City and County Bonds—we note a few sales of St. Louis and Chicago 6s, and a sale at auction of a considerable lot of San Francisco 6s at 50. Railroad Bonds dull and lower. Erie 1871 and 1875 without change; 1863 and 1862, down 2 ₱ cent.; New-York Central 6s and 7s at 85 and 102; Illinois Central Construction Bonds, 1 ₱ cent. decline; Hudson River Third Mortgage, 3 ₱ cent. do.; Galena and Chicago First Mortgage Bonds have changed hands at previous prices; do. Second Mortgages, at 1½ ₱ cent. decline; La Crosse and Milwaukee First Mortgages have been sold at a slight depression; Michigan Southern Sinking Fund, 2 ₱ cent. lower; Terre Haute and Alton, 1 ₱ cent. do. Railroad Shares—The week has been marked by heavy fluctuations, resulting in a heavy depression. Erie has declined 6¾; Reading, 3¾; New-York Central, 4½; Panama, 8¼; Michigan Central, 4¾; Michigan Southern, 9½; do., new issue, 6¾; Illinois Central, 3¼; Cleveland and Toledo, 7¾; Chicago and Rock Island, 4¾; Galena and Chicago, 6¾; Hudson River, 3¾; Cleveland and Pittsburg, 4¾; Milwaukee and Mississippi,

AFFAIRS IN UTAH.

THE LATEST MORMAN OUTRAGES.

The Driving out of the Gentiles—Threats of Violence, &c.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, June 10, 1857.

DAVID H. BURR, the Surveyor-General of Utah, and others arrived here on the morning of the 7th inst., direct from Salt Lake, having left that place on the 15th of April. The repeated acts of violence against the population of Gentiles and dissenting Mormons, and the reiterated threats of murdering them, compelled all to leave, thus leaving the Territory to the tender mercies of the Mormon leaders without a United States officer to restrain them, or an unprejudiced pen to report their lawless and violent proceedings.

The party leaving embraced Judge STYLES, the only Federal Judge who remained in the Territory; PETER K. DOTSON, United States Marshal, Mr. MORRELL, the Postmaster at Great Salt Lake City, and T. S. WILLIAMS, Esq., together with a number of others, swelling the party to about a hundred persons. The obstacles which were encountered in the beginning of the journey were very great, the snow lying to the depth of many feet in the mountain passes, on the crust of which women and children were compelled to trudge many miles, and through which the men with great labor and toil succeeded in dragging the wagons Under other circumstances, the obstacles would have been considered insurmountable, but the dangers of their situation rendered the undertaking unavoidable.

This, one would suppose, will be sufficient to convince the most incredulous of the lamentable state of affairs in Utah Territory. Dr. HURT, the U. S. Indian Agent, had some two weeks before the party left, taken refuge among the Indians of his agency, to avoid the violence and excitement at Salt Lake. The party were followed by a body of "Danites" as far as the Devil's Gate, 350 miles from Salt Lake City, who were constantly watching their movements, undoubtedly with the intention of cutting off any stragglers, and seizing the first opportunity to stampede their animals, thereby leaving them on the open prairies destitute of the means of continuing their journey. The "Danites" were driven back by the report that five hundred U. S. troops were marching from Laramie to Salt Lake, followed by an army of 5,000 from the States.

At Fort Bridger, 110 miles from Salt Lake, the party were astonished by the arrival of two men, Messrs. BOVIER and HOOPS, who had been compelled to flee from Provo to save their lives. These men had refused to consecrate their property and yield to the heavy exactions of BRIGHAM YOUNG; consequently it was voted unanimously in the Tabernacle at Provo to "shed their blood" and to the call for volunteers to do the deed fifty men responded. Some friends informed BOVIER and HOOPS of these proceedings, and they, leaving their wives and children, fled to the fields, caught their horses and escaped to Fort Bridger through the mountains. They are now at Independence, Missouri.

At Green River, the party received another addition of two persons—Mr. SODA and wife, who had been concealed some days in a camp of mountaineers in a pile of buffalo robes. They had escaped from Salt Lake City a short time before, making their way across the mountains on foot, and through deep snows, a distance of 155 miles. He had been obliged to flee to save himself from the penalty consequent upon overhearing BRIGHAM'S order given to ROBERT BURTON for the massacre of TOBIN PELTRO and party.

A few days before the party left Salt Lake City, the daughter of THOMAS S. WILLIAMS, Esq., was abducted from his house, and he was arrested the next day for threatening to be revenged.

He was thrown into prison and chained to the floor, and was only released by the interference of HOWARD EGAN and the father of WILLIAMS, who confronted BRIGHAM YOUNG, and told him unless WILLIAMS was immediately set free they should all three die together; whereupon YOUNG accompanied them to prison and restored him to liberty.

All the above-mentioned persons were compelled to leave their property and business, and in some cases even their wives and children; being unable to make any arrangements for the security of the one, or the protection of the others.

The office of the Surveyor General would have been burned down, but fearing a desperate resistance from the inmates, none of the "Danites" were found sufficiently courageous to do the deed, BILL HICKMAN the most terrible of the "destroying angels" positively refusing to have anything to do with the affair The terrible and frequent exactions of BRIGHAM have produced dissensions even among this faithful band of his subjects. BRIGHAM YOUNG had left Salt Lake City on his Northern tour, the object of which was kept a profound secret, taking with him some two or three hundred men. MRS. SUTHERLAND was expecting to leave Salt Lake for the States under the protection of Mr. FERNANNIS, a Gentile merchant, who was about to return with an ox train. Many Mormons were leaving the Territory; about one thousand were making preparations to go to California. J.

Letter from Hon. Daniel Sickles—The Fabled Fight with John Kelly.

The DAILY TIMES never published the etory to which the following note refers. Our report of that meeting has been contradicted or objected to in no quarter.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: Several City papers have published reports of the proceedings of the Reform Convention, which met at Tammany Hall on Thursday night last, in which it is represented that Hon. JOHN KELLY, one of the delegates, made a personal assault upon me on that occasion. I have waited for several days in the confident expectation that this statement, which is entirely false, and without even a shadow of foundation, would receive an appropriate contradiction from another quarter. Nor could I donbt that the journals themselves, which had been grossly imposed upon by their informants, would promptly expose the deception practiced slike npon them and the public.

The articles to which I refer, also contain what purports to be a sketch of a speech made by Mr. KELLY, in which he is represented as charging several prominent members or the Committee with deception in reference to the plan of reorganization adopted, and also with aiding the passage of some of the obnoxious laws in relation to the government of this City, enacted by the last Legislature.—No such speech was made;—no such accusations were even insinnated. The whole story—speech—fight—throttling—apology and all, is a shameless fabrication, dishonoring only those who invented and promulgated it.

Very respectfully, D. E. SICKLES.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Wednesday, April 29, 1857.

The bark Napier, owned by Messrs. FREEMAN & Co., of your City, was totally lost off Rio Grande de Sud, during a heavy gale which suddenly overtook the vessel, when about 20 leagues off the coast. Many other vessels, foreign and Brazilian, shared the same fate during the same gale. The masts and sperring of the ship Sea Ranger have been contracted for. The Milford is about discharged. The ship Hound sailed yesterday for California.

KEY WEST, Saturday, May 23, 1857.

The schooner Amelia Ann from this port for New-York, fell in with brig Cynosure, of Boston, from Rockland, loaded with lime, ashore near Elliot Key, the brig having been on fire since the 12th inst.

JOHSON PURGES HIMSELF OF CONTEMPT.—Yesterday Mr. JOHSON wae early at the Superior Court room, and then in substance addressed the Court: "May it please your Honors, I have learned through those ordinary channels of information, viz.: the newspapers, that I was yesterday ordered to show cause before this Court, this morning, why I should not be committed for contempt for the remarks which I made yesterday. It is true that I have received no official notice to that effect, hut I am, nevertheless, ready to have the question dieposed of."

His Honor Judge MITCHELL briefly responded, by stating that when Mr. JOHSON was notified of any such order of the Court, it would be through the Clerk, rather than by the medium of the daily papers It would perhaps be well, however, for Mr. JOHSON to leave his address with the Clerk, that no difficulty might arise in finding him, should it be deemed advisable so to do,

Mr. JOHSON complied with the request, and so left the room.

No Utah Appointments Yet Made—Kansas Affairs, &c.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, June 10.

There are eight or ten applicants for Utah Judgeships. No Governor nor other officers have yet been appointed.

Official and private advices assure the Administration that there is no probability whatever that the peace of Kansas will be interrupted, and that the pending controversy promises a happy termination.

WILLIAM B. GEER has been appointed United States Marshal for Minnesota, vice IRWIN, resigned.

Mr. JENKINS will be superseded as Consul at Navigator's Islands.

Governor of Utah—Iowa and Massachusetts—Fugitives from Justice—Caleb Cushing's Law Opinions.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, June 9, 1857.

The Governorship of Utah remains still in abeyance, and there is no certainty that any man yet named will receive the appointment. It seems that after Col. CUMMING declined it, the appointment was offered; to Gov. PHILIP FRANK THOMAS of Maryland. CUMMING afterwards signified his willingness to accept, but the President having offered it to another, wse prevented from acting.

The Quartermaster's Department has been very active making preparations for the movement of the three regiments to Utah. Col. THOMAS, Assistant Quartermaster-General, left for Fort Leavenworth yesterday to make all arrangements and superintend the departure of the troops from that point. A number of the officers of the Second Dragoons have gone to Cincinnati to procure horses for the regiment, and will proceed to the rendezvous at Leavenworth.

Judge BLACK has lately given an opinion in an extradition case between the State of Iowa and the State of Massachusetts. It seems, in May, 1856, JONAS WYETH, of Cambridge, Mass., was indicted in Scott County, Iowa, for the crime of bigamy. On his escaping, a requisition was made by the Governor of Iowa on the Governor of Massachusetts for the surrender of WYETH as a fugitive from justice, under the act of Congress of 1793. In compliance therewith, a warrant was issued by the Governor of Massachusetts to WILLIAM HALL, the agent duly appointed on the part of the State of Iowa, authorizing and directing him to arrest WYETH and transport him to the line of the State of Massachusetts. HALL, in attempting to execute this warrant, was arrested, tried, and convicted of an attempt to kidnap, and the case is now pending on exceptions before the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, HALL being at sufferance on bail.

After the issuance of the warrant to HALL, the Governor of Massachusetts undertook to revoke and annul it, on the ground that WYETH was not a fugitive, although he was married in Scott County, Iowa, to his second wife, whom he abandoned, and was, at the time of his arrest, and is now living with his first wife in Cambridge, Mass.

The matter was referred by the Governor of Iowa to the President, and Attorney General BLACK has given an opinion that, though the Governor of Massachusetts may have exceeded his power when he revoked the warrant, and although the surrender of fugitives from justice is a matter regulated solely by the Constitution and laws of the United States, the President has no power to interfere and cause the surrender of WYETH by the State of Massachusetts, however clearly he might be of opinion that the refusal to do so was wrong, because it was a case existing between two States, in which the United States did not have original jurisdiction.

Thus it seems that the Governor of a State, in such a case may put his own construction on what constitutes a "fugitive from justice," in violation of the Constitution. In the case of a "fugitive from labor," the 2d sec. of the 4th art. of the Constitution makes it peremptory that no person held to labor, escaping to another State, shall be liberated "in consequence of any law or regulation therein," but in the case of "a fugitive from justice," in the same section and article of the Constitution, the State of Massachusetts does not deem the Constitution peremptory, in the demand thus made upon her, and claims the right to determine who shall be considered and what shall constitnte a fugitive from justice.

The President was called upon to act the other day on a law of Congress, under the opinion and construction of Mr. CALEB CUSHING, the late Attorney-General. The President remarked that if the opinion of the late law officer of the Government was correct, he had studied the Constitution for the last forty hears in vain, but that he did not pretend, however, to be more learned on the subject than any one else! Hardly a day passes but that the opinions of the late Attorney-Gensral are not called into question. In the celsbrated Fossat California land case, involving millions of dollars, and on whose possessions is situated the quicksilver mine of Nuéva Almadén, an application was made to Judge BLACK to reverse the action of Mr. CUSHING. The case had been decided in favor of the claimant before the Land Commissioners of California, and was appealed to the District Court of the United States. On a presentation of the facts to Mr. CUSHING he agreed to dismiss the appeal, but afterwards ordered it to stand. Judge BLACK being precluded by this order from reexamining the case, it can only be reinvestigated on appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Senator BENJAMIN, of Louisiana, has arrived here, it is said, in relation to the affairs of the Tehuantepec route. Mr. HARGOUS, who is interested in this Company, is now here, and Signor GARAY, of Mexico, has also just arrived, and Col. A. P. STOO is daily expected.

Mr. VAN CAMP, who charged Mr. JENKINS, the Consul of Navagatore' Islands, with piracy, had an interview with the President this morning, in which he denounced JENKINS in unmeasured terms, and demanded the Consulship, that he might return and get his property. The scene between him and the President is described as very rich. UNO.

RISE IN THE OHIO AND ALLEGHANY RIVERS—SERIOUS DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY—COUNTY CONVENTION.

PITTSBURG, Wednesday, June 10.

There is eleven feet six inches of water in the channel of the river at thie point, and it is still rising fast.

The recent heavy raine have caused a sudden rise in the Allegheny River, and the destruction of property afloat has been considerable. An immense fleet of rafts have been destroyed and a number of boats loaded with ceel and metal lost in consequence of breaking from their moorings. The loss is estimated at forty to fifty thousand dollars.

A County Convention to consider the question of doubling the county tax, to pay the interest on bonds issued to defaulting Railroad Companies, was in session here to-day, and adjourned till the 23d instant. One hundred and fifteen delegates were present, and five districts were represented.

Resolutions denouncing the purchase of the Main Line Canal, by Pennsylvania; requesting the Commissioner to apply for an injunction against it; to postpone the levying of taxes until after the reassembling of the Convention, and appointing a Committee of Investigation to report on the alleged fraude in the issue of County bonds, were possed almost unanimously.

The question of repudiation wae not passed upon, but a resolution favoring the payment of all the bonds issued was laid on the table by a vote of 73 against 28.

The Case of the United States and State Authorities in Ohio.

CINCINNATI, Wednesday, June 10.

The case of the State against the United States authorities came up in the District Court thie morning. Mr. MASON, for the prosecution, read several affidavits, the general purport of which were that the first fire came from the United States Marshal's party, and that they were very violent in their manner—treating the prisoners they had in charge very harshly.

The depositions of several ladies, agreeing with the foregoing, were also read. Sheriff LAYTON'S family physician deposed that he was lying very seriously ill and that probably he never would fully recover. Another affidavit stated that the Marshal's men were generally armed.

The Court adjourned this afternoon until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning, in order to give time to the Marshal's counsel to procure further affidavits.

New-Hampshire Democratic State Convention.

CONCORD, N. H., Wednesday, June 10.

Hon. GEORGE W. MORRISON, of Manchester, presided over the Democratic State Convention held here to-day. ASA P. CATE, of Northfield, was nominated for Governor on the first ballot; FREDERICK VOSE, of Walpole, was nominated for Railroad Commissioner.

The resolutions adopted indorse the last and all previous Democratic Administrations; pledge earnest support to President BUCHANAN; sustain the Dred Scott decision; advocate repeal of the Maine Law, and readopt former resolves, concerning the leading Democratic measures.

No speeches were made. The Convention was full and harmonious.

THE STREETS.

A PROSPECT FOR TWO MORE CLEAN STREETS.

The livers nlong Cortlandt and Dye streets are stipulating with Mr. ROBERT A. SMITH to have those thoroughfares swept and cleaned daily. The pavement here is of cobble-stones. Whether the machines will work as handsomely over it as on the Russ pavement of Broadway remains to he seen.

BROADWAY.

Yesterday the Contractor for cleaning Broadway had his men out for opening the gutters. The soft slush into which the rain of the precedieg day had turned the mud being entirely too liquid to he carried sway in the common carts, there was no other way but to let it dry in windrows, and hope for a better chance to do justice to the thoroughfare hereafter. It had not been swept before Tuesday night within six weeks!

A MUDDLE.

All the old contracts for street-cleaning have been declared null and void, excepting what REYNOLDS & Co have. Touching them, the City is in a muddle. If the contracts are not confirmed, the contractore heve a suit against the Corporation of course, for without a question the contracts were awarded them, and the streets were put in their possession. But the Common Council, by virtue of a memorandum appended to the awards, making them hinding only on condition of a confirmation by the Common Council, claim that the contracts are null. The contractors, on the other hand, urge that no such condition le recognized in the charter, and that the award of the contracts gave them the streets.

Per contra, if the contracts at this late hour are confirmed, the contractors probably will not go ahead, for there is a large arrearage due them from the City, and their credit is sadly damaged. Mr. REYNOLDS says that he began his work with a determination to do it thoroughly, and with assurances from the Comptroller that he should be paid punctually and regularly. The first night his gangs were broken up by mobs, instigated by interested parties. He proceeded, however, amid most unfavorable weather, and in ten days had removed 35,000 loads of the six months' accumulation of dirt. The dumping-grounds provided soon became so over-loaded as to impede the work, and the City failed to provide further accommodations. The first payment on his contract was promptly made, hut on calling for the next the Comptroller absolutely refused, stating that the City was bankrupt.

When the City Inspector came into office Mr. REYNOLDS's work was getting on finely, but there was great difficulty in procuring carts. He obtained some from Brooklyn and Jersey City, but as soon as they went to work the City authorities stopped them and fined them three dollars each for having no license. Still the work went on, in spite of bad weather and all these annoyances; but when bis account was presented to the Inspector, that official, says Mr. REYNOLDS, refused to pay any contractor, on the ground that the work was not thoroughly done.

Comptroller FLAGG will pay no money, of course, except under contracts legally entered into. Inspector MORTON cannot advertise until the old contracts are annulled; the Board of Health can't go beyond $10,000 in their expenditure for the purpose, and so at any turn there are suits for damages, and dirty streets, and—what a muddle!

The Comptroller has consented to pay for cleaning the Five Points, which has been in a horribly filthy condition for some time past, and the Inspector accordingly put on his carts and commenced.

DREDGING DOCKS AND SLIPS.—The Pilot Commissioners, at their meeting on Tuesday, considered the question of dredging docks and slips. Three contractors, who appeared before them, were taken to task for having dumped the mud taken from the slips at so short a distance out that it was speedily washed back again. This being the practice for some time past, the Commissioners are determined to apply an effectual remedy, and now prohibit the contractors from dumping anywhere in the East River.

The Commissioners (new) Remove 159 Men and Appoint 27—The Old Swear in a Jolly Lot of Day and Night Watchmen—Frank Spicer to His Honor—Brooklyn Policy—Sample Policemen, &c.

THE NEW COMMISSIONERS.

The Metropolitan Commissioners did a great day's work yesterday. They dismissed and removed one hundred and fifty-nine men for disobedience o orders and insubordination, and made twenty seven appointments. The names of the new appointees are:

J. W. HARTT, Captain of 17th Precinct.
G. W. Gould.	Temple Lord.
Joseph Brown.	Alex. W. Ferguson.
Jacob Carter.	Joseph Entmann.
Daniel V. Tillou.	Geo. Young.
James J. Reeves.	J. Brown.
Adam F. Hallett.	Geo. W. Ruton.
Isaac H. Albin.	Moses H. F. Boyse.
Chas. R. Wilson.	Stephen Christopher.
Zenas Crowell.	Nathaniel Crawford.
John O'Neil.	Robert R. Colfax.
John J. Willett.	Elihu Burlison.
James R. Coulter.	Chauncey Mason.
Joseph E. Gardner.	Willis West.

A great many other appointments will be made today. Twelve of the appointments already made are for the Ninth Ward; the rest are divided between the Eleventh and Third Wards. The number of applicants for place is very great.

The Metropolitan Commissioners have Stationhouses in the Third, Fifth, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Thirteenth, Fifteenth, Seventeenth, Nineteenth and Twenty-first Wards. The Third Ward Station-house, which was opened yesterday, is at No. 148 Chambers-street.

It is expected that before the expiration of the present week there will be a Metropolitan station in every Ward in the City.

THE DAY AND NIGHT WATCH.

The office of the old Commissioners was besieged yesterday with applicants for appointment on the "City Watch."

A great many of the applicants were qualified with warrants, and many others will be served in the same way to-day.

The old Board are likely to have a busy time for some weeks, if they continue to dismiss all in the Department who refuse to recognize their authority, and fill all the vacancies thus created.

MAYOR WOOD AND POLICEMAN SPICER.

Policeman FRANK SPICER of the Seventeenth Ward, was summoned the other day, by Deputy CARPENTER, to report himself for duty at the Court of General Sessions. Mr. SPIORR promptly obeyed the summons. When this "insubordinate" conduct was made known to the Meyor, he caused a notice to be served upon Mr. SPIORR, ordering him to appear for trial before the old Board. Mr. SPIORR addressed the following reply:

NEW-YORK, June 8, 1857.

Hon. Fernando Wood:

SIR: I received a notice, signed by ALEXANDER MING, as Clerk to the Commissionere of Police, directing me to eppear before you, at your office, this afternoon, to answer a compaint for acts done in my official capacity.

There are reasons why I must decline. One is, that you have already appointed a man in my place, which seems like hanging a man first and trying him afterwards, which, if not unconstitutional, at least seems unfair. Another reason is, that I believe the right to question my official acts as a policeman has passed from you. When I first served the City as an officer the appointments were made by the alderman and assistant of each Ward, but as men were elected to those places who had more regard for their own interest than the welfare of the City, and appointed such men as could render them the most aid at primary elections and continue them in office, the Legislature changed the mode of appointments and made a commission, consisting of the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge. Nobody that I am aware of questioned the right of the Legislature to change the law, I certainly held myself ready to obey any order promulgated by them. Again, the Legislature at the last session (whether deeming that you had abused the power by political dismissels and appointments I know not) but that they did make a change in the law all are aware. When I entered upon my duty as a policeman I bound myself to obey the laws, therefore when I received an order from the Commissioners of Police recently appointed under the laws of the State I felt it my duty to obey.

This so ting at defiance the laws of the State because they may not suit the political views of certain parties is a dangerous experiment, especially when the example is set by the chief executive officer of great City like this. Suppose some large operator and dealer in lottery tickets should declare that statute unconstitutional which prohibits the sale of said articles, and should continue his trade, would you not consider it your duty to enforce the law? The presumption is in favor of law, and I have obeyed it. I trust you will not be greatly disappointed in knowing that I shall not be with you this afternoon.

Respectfully yours, FRANK SPICER, of the Seventeenth Metropolitan District.

PAYING UP.

The Comptroller continues to disburee the back pay of the police—the amounts due them to the 25th of May. Only a few Wards yet remain unpaid, and the men of those districts will receive their checks to-day. The rumor that Mr. STOUT, the City Chamberlain, would object to pay some of the checks for lack of certain signatures, &c., has proved incorrect.

THE FIFTEENTH WARD POLICE FOR THE NEW BOARD.

The whole of the Fifteenth Ward Police force, (with two exceptions, both patrolmen,) declared last evening for the Metropolitan Police Commissioners. After mustering, they all marched in a body to a new Station-house at No. 10 Carroll-place. Capt. DILKE briefly addressed the men; the roll was called and one platoon sent out on duty as usual. A large number of persons witnessed these proceedings, and the enthusiasm was great.

No Money to be Appropriated in Brooklyn.

The Joint Committee of the Kings County Board of Supervisors and Brooklyn Board of Aldermen, held a meeting yesterday to consider the appropriations for the ensuing year. There were present Supervisors STUDWELL, MCLAUGHLIN, BLEEKER and SMITH; and Aldermen KALBFLEISCH, WALSH and DEL VECCHIO.

The communication of the Metropolitan Police Commissionere, asking appropriations for Police purposes, was read by the Chairman, Alderman KALBFLEISCH, who said he did not think that the communication was properly before the Committee, hut he had read it to let the members know what he had.

After an interchange of opinion, it was considered by all present inexpedient to take any action upon the matter until the decision of the Court of Appeals as to the constitutionality of the law under which the Commissioners act.

Some of the items of the general estimate were scrutinized by the Committee, and they generally entertain the opinion that Brooklyn should not be compelled to pay one-fourth of the general expenses, such as under the law are to be levied upon the whole Metropolitan District. For instance, the salary of the Superintendent, &c., one fourth, they consider out of proportion.

The Committee, after some further conversation, adjourned without taking up the estimates before them.

A Metropolitan Policeman Arrests one of Mayor Wood's Force.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, June 10, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I send you the following incident, which occurred about 11 o'clock last night, near the new Station-house corner of Third-street and the Bowery, a specimen of the malerial of which Mayor WOOD'e police is composed.

FRANCIS CRAMER, a member of the old police, was standing near the corner, and thus accosted me, pointing to Capt. HART, who was visible through the window:

"See that G—d d—d black-hearted son of a b—h; if I could get to him I would knock the head off his shoulders; I would end him and all that left the old police."

I said to him, "You are an officer to protect the rights of citizens, are you not?"

"Yes," he replied, pointing to his star, and added, "You belong to the Metropolitan Police, don't you?"

"No, Sir," said I, "I am a quiet citizen."

"You are a G—d d—d liar," said he, shaking his fist in my face, "you are no citizen; you are a black-hearted Republican."

Then followed a volley of threats and curses against the new police, and Republicans generally, while he followed me, shaking his fist in my face.

A Metropolitan policeman came out of the Station-house, and taking him by the arm walked away with him. He was evidently much intoxicated.

The M. P.'s Arrested at Quarantine.

Three of the Metropolitan Policemen, Messrs. BOWER, SHERWOOD and MCKELVEY, who arrested RAGANS at Staten Island, on Monday last, for a violation of the Quarantine regulations, were charged with an assault upon RAGANS. They all appeared before the Justice at Stapleton, and were discharged upon their word to appear and answer the complaint on Wednesday, at 10 o'clock.

Yesterday at 10 o'clock, two of the officers, BOWER and SHERWOOD, appeared for examination. The complaint was not made by RAGANS, but by J. C. HOLMES. Upon HOLMES' cross-examination, he admitted that he told the prisoner, "If it was him, he would knock their d—d brains out if they had interfered with him." He also admitted that the policemen called upon him to assist in making the arrest, but he laughed at the absurdity of the idea—he did not assist and would not.

The Judge here told HOLMES he need not answer any questions implicating himself—that if he was called upon to assist the officers and refused to do so it was a misdemeanor on his part. At this HOLMES opened his eyes, shut his mouth, and left. The officers say they are determined he shall tell his next story at the City Hall.

The officers waived an examination, and each gave bail in $250 to appear at the next Court of Sessions of Richmond County. A warrant was issued for the arrest of MCKELVEY for his failure to appear. The report that the officers drew their pistols in the boat they pronounce untrue; this was not done until they were surrounded by a crowd of boatmen and runners, who manifested a determination to rescue the prisoner, and obstruct them in the discharge of their duties. When they found it was no longer safe to resist, RAGANS let go of the post to which he had been clinging, and went with the officers, who shut him up in the Quarantine prison.

HOW HE WAS GOT OUT.

RAY TOMPKINS, Esq., came to the Quarantine gate about 2 o'clock Monday morning, and asked to see a Custom-House officer. Mr. BOWER, who went to the gate, told him he had no control over that department, and that he would have to wait until the gate was opened by the proper person in the morning. Mr. TOMPKINS then left, but returned in about 15 minutes, with one of the Custom-House boatmen, who scaled the gate. The boatman then went and called a man named JONES, a night watchman of the Custom-House, who had a key with which he opened the gate, and the two went out together. In about 20 minutes Mr. TOMPKINS returned with the Sheriff, having a writ of hab as corpus, and the two proceeded to Dr. THOMPSON'S house. Here the Sheriff handed the writ to the Doctor, and at the same time demanded the prisoner. Without reading the paper, and presuming the Sheriff had the authority to demand him, the Doctor gave the order to deliver him up, and RAGANS left in charge of the Sheriff. At 1 o'clock Dr. THOMPSON appeared before the Judge, and returned that RAGANS was not in his custody.

Yesterday the Health Officer came up to town and laid the case before the District Attorney. We hear at the City Hall that RAGANS was indicted on three separate charges of violations of the laws, and that officers are on his track. RAGANS and HOLMES will probably be proceeded against for forcibly resisting the officers in the discharge of their duties.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

A CUBAN ROBBED OF OVER $20,000 IN GOLD AND SILVER.—Georgs L. De La Vega, a Cuban gentleman, and an officer of the Spanish Government, arrived here a few days since from New-Orleans. He brought with him a large amount of money, of which $20,500 in Spanish gold and silver coin was stowed in one of his trunks. He was accompanied by a man named Desardaria Wammuria, whose acquaintance he had made in New-Orleans, and whom he brought to New-York, partly as a companion and partly as an interpreter. Both put up at a French or Spanish boarding-house or hotel in Duane-street. Here they remained a few days, when Wammuria declared his intention of returning to New-Orleans, De La Vega regretted this determination, and giving his companion money with which to pay his fare back, bade him good-bye.

De La Vega still continued at the house in Duane-street. On Tuesday evening last he had occasion to go to examine his baggage, when he found that the trunk which contained his treasure had been broken open, and all that it contained taken away. He gave the alarm, and a search was made, but no clue to the thief or treasure could he learned. At length it was remembered that during the day of Tuesday a stranger (apparently a Spaniard) had called at the hotel and hired a room. He was choice in his selection, and after being shown several, chose a room directly adjoining that occupied by De La Vega. The stranger had with him a large and very heavy trunk, which was deposited in the room assigned him. This man was sought for, but was nowhere to be found. Suspicion rested upon him at once. His trunk was opened, and found to contain nothing but brickbats. Meantime the police were notified, the renewed inquiries instituted, when it was learned that Wammuria, De La Vega's traveling companion, had not gone to New-Orleans, but was stopping, or had stopped within a day, at the house of one SANTA ROSSA, at No. 146 Third-avenue. A search-warrant was granted by Justice OSBORNE. Wammuria was arrested, and the house of SANTA ROSSA searched, but not a coy of the stolen money was found, nor any trace of it learned. Wammuria, as well as SANTA ROSSA, denied all knowledge of the robbery, and the landlord of the place where it was perpetrated knew nothing more of the transaction than that which we have given above.

De La Vega declares the amount of his treasure was known only to Wammuria, who accompanied him from New-Orleans.

Justice WELSH, who examined the matter yesterday afternoon, did not feel warranted in holding any of the arrested parties. He dismissed the matter for the present, directing the officers to be vigilant in their efforts to ferret out the guilty party.

De La Vega offers a reward of $5,000 for the recovery of the stolen money.

FIGHT BETWEEN SAILORS—ONE MAN SERIOUSLY STABBED.—Two colored sailors, named Stephen Pinkett and Samuel Watkins, were examined yesterday before Justice WELSH, at the First District Police Court, for a felonious assault upon Patrick Sheehan, also a sailor. Sheehan and the prisoners met at a shipping office in Roosevelt-street; the prisonere tried to enter the place; Sheehan tried to prevent them doing so, and "hutted" one of them in the face. A scuffle ensued, during which, it appears, Pinkett drew a knife and stabbed Sheehan in the abdomen and head. Both colored men then ran away, but were pursued by some citizens, who gave them in charge of the Fourth Ward Police. It is feared that Sheehan's wounds will prove fatal. The prisonere were committed.

STEALING AT THE ASTOR HOUSE.—Thomas Myers, a German, aged 45 years, was brought before Justice OSBORNE yesterday for stealing from one of the rooms in the Astor House a shawl and umbrella, belonging to Mr. S. W. Chase, one of the guests. The offence was committed on Tuesday evening. The prisoner was discovered prowling about the entry ways of the Astor in a very suspicious manner, and was watched. He was soon seen to enter the room of Mr. Chase, from which a moment afterwards he came out bearing a shawl on one arm and holding an umbrella. Mr. Devoy, one of the Sheriff's special aids, whose duties are confined exclusively to the Astor House for the prevention of theft, stopped the fellow's further progress, and took him in custody to the Third Ward Station-house, where he was detained all night. Myers expressed himself sorry for the deed which he had done. He said he was a single man, had worked as a clerk in Germany, and had been three and a half years in this country, during all which time he was unable to find employment. He was committed and will be tried this morning at the Special Sessions.

OPPOSED TO THE DECALOGUE.—The London Advertiser states a fact which shows that men occupying prominent positions are not above the need of the most elementary Sunday School instruction.

It says that a candidate for Parliament to the recent election, in the course of an electioneering speech, was asked—"What do you think of the Decalogue?" Confounded by the inquiry, he turned to a friend and asked, in a whisper, "What does that mean?" The friend, whose acquaintance with divinity was on a par with his own, replied by suggesting that it probably meant flogging in the army. Whereupon the candidate declared: "I entirely disapprove of the Decalogue, and will never rest till I see it abolished." The gentleman was elected, and is now a member of the new Parliament. The Advertiser adds: "We pledge ourselves for the perfect accuracy of this statement."

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE ERICSSON.

The Spanish-Mexican Dispute Still Unsettled.

Seizure of the Key of the Red Sea by the East India Company.

ADDITIONAL FROM CHINA.

The Niagara Receiving the Telegraph Cable at Liverpool.

Cotton Quiet—Breadstuffs Active—Consols 93 5-8@93 3-4.

The U. S. Mail steamer Ericsson, Capt. LOWBER, from Liverpool, noon of Wednesday, 27th, arrived last evening.

The Ericsson arrived out 7:45, evening of Friday the 22d ult.

The Royal Mail steamer America sailed from Liverpool 9:15, morning of Saturday the 23d, with 186 passengers, for Halifax and Boston.

The Royal Mail steamer Africa, from New-York, arrived at Liverpool 8:30 P. M., Sunday the 24th.

The steamship Khersonese, Capt. THOMPSON, from St. Johns, Newfoundland, arrived at Liverpool morning of 23d ult. On the 17th ult., as the ship was going 13 knots, the screw shaft snapped, and the remainder of the voyage was made under canvas.

The European and American Company's steamship Arago, Capt. BERSON, from Bremen with upwards of 400 passengers, would sail from Southampton for New-York on Wednesday, the 27th.

The Cunard steamship Lebanon, from Quebec, with troops, arrived at Gravesend at 5 P. M. on the 21st, having made the trip from port to port in 11 days and 6 hours.

Various statements have been in circulation respecting the unfitness of the United States frigate Niagara for the laying of the Atlantic Telegraph cable. She is, however, expected to proceed to Liverpool, and we have no authentic information but that she will do otherwise than was at first contemplated in respect to the shipment of the cable.

In Parliament, the subject most immediately of interest to the country has been the dower and pension of the Princess Royal. The annuity of £8,000 a year was passed without a division; Mr. ROEBUCK making a feeble remonstrance. The dowry of £40,000 in cash was brought before the Committee of Supply, when Mr. CONYNGHAM moved, firstly, that the pension be reduced from £8,000 to £6,000 a year; and, secondly, that the dowry of £40,000 be omitted. Fourteen members voted with him on his first motion, and sixteen on the second. The bill was read a first time.

In the House of Lords, a lengthened debate took place, in Committee, on the proposed amendment of the matrimonial law. Various estimates were voted in the Commons.

A new writ was moved for the seat of THOMAS G. BARING, who is appointed a Lord of the Admiralty. H. BERKELEY gave notice that on an early day he would test the House on the question of the vote by ballot.

Sir G. PECHELL called attention in the House to the increased importation of slaves into Cuba, and to the inadequate British force on that coast.

Admiral WALCOTT testified to the difficult and hazardous nature of the service in attempting to suppress the slave trade on the Cuban coast.

Lord PALMERSTON said that Lord CLARENDON had very recently renewed his representations to the Spanish Government upon this subject, and no effort would be wanting, as far as diplomatic negotiation could go, to induce the Government at Madrid to take effectual steps to put down the trade.

Both Houses adjourned over the Queen's birthday and "the Derby day."

The Paris Moniteur de la Flotte announces that the British East India

they were unable to defend ships from pirates, a treaty was concluded, containing a clause by which it was stated that the Company would occupy the Island of Perim, and place a garrison there to protect ships navigating that sea. The Island of Perim, which was first occupied in 1794, is situated between Arabia and Africa, on the very point at which the Red Sea commences, and it divides the strait into two channels. The passage to the east, on the side of Arabia, is only three miles wide; that to the west, on the African side, is about ten or twelve. On the south-west, towards the widest entrance of the straits, the island forms one of the finest ports imaginable. It is a mile in length, and half a mile in breadth, and the depth varies from 7 to 25 fathoms. The anchorage is excellent, the entrance is perfectly sheltered, and it is no exaggeration to say that 40 ships of the line might easily anchor there in smooth water 100 yards from the shore. A few ships-of-war stationed there will be sufficient hermetically to close the entrances to the Red Sea. Aden is placed in a position much less favorable, for that port is 100 miles from the straits, and the reason it was chosen, 20 years since, was that, although it possesses few resources, it has more than the island of Perim. There is water to be had at Aden by means of cisterns, and there are seasons of the year when the aqueducts can receive the torrents which flow from the neighboring hills. The island of Perim, on the contrary, is absolutely devoid of everything; it has not a drop of water; its sandy and volcanic soil produces only some stunted and dusty briars. It is uninhabited, and everything must be brought to it. It would appear from a first view to be a position little desirable, but, on consideration, it is easy to understand why the Company has made this acquisition, and why the British Government attaches so much importance to it. It is now clear, when the Isthmus of Suez is about to be opened, that the Red Sea cannot fail to become the great commercial road between Europe and Asia. It is not necessary to erect any fortifications on the island of Perim. Aden is sufficiently near to supply all that may be required. But Aden, strong as it is, does not absolutely command the strait, and the largest fleets might pass without danger between Aden and the coast of Africa. On the other hand, nothing can pass the island of Perim without the permission of those who are its masters. A detachment of artillery of the Indian army has been stationed there provisionally. A temporary arsenal and fortifications have been erected, and supplies of all descriptions have been brought from Aden for the garrison which is to occupy that desolate station.

YEH FORTIFYING HIMSELF—OPPOSITION TO YEH AT SHANGHAI.

Paris (May 28) Correspondence of London Times.

The Moniteur de la Flotte publishes accounts from China of the 2d of April, which contain some interesting details from the seat of war. YEH, the Viceroy of the Southern provinces of the empire, is, at present, at Sou-Tche Ting, a large village of Kouang-Tcheou, about fifteen miles from Canton. He has fortified himself in a good position, which allows him to maintain his communications with Pekin and with the other three provinces which, with the Konang-Tcheou, form his viceroyalty, and which are the Kouang-Si, the Kouang-Toung, and the Konei-Lin. He is, at present, at the head of an army of 30,000 men, which he is increasing every day by means of forced levies and extraordinary taxes. A few days previously it became known at Hong-Kong that a British ensign, two non-commissioned officers, some soldiers, and a few seamen, who had been taken prisoners by surprise on various occasions, were at YEH's headquarters, where they were suffering great distress. It was resolved to open negotiations to obtain an exchange of prisoners in their favor, and a foreign agent, who had formerly had an interview with YEH, undertook to manage the affair. YEH consented to receive him, and, having listened to his propositions, he replied:

"You ask me to exchange the English I have in my possession, to the number of 16, against double the number of Chinese subjects, among whom are several Tartar officers and one of the commanders of the Imperial junks. I refuse. I do not want your prisoners, and you may do as you please with them, but if you are desirous to have the 16 Englishmen, and if you have the necessary means to treat for them I will let you know my intentions to-morrow."

The foreigner who acted as agent between the parties remained at the Chinese camp, where he was tolerably well treated, and at 12 o'clock the next day he received a visit from SINGO, the first aide-de-camp of YEH, who is said to be devotedly attached to his master, and who told him that the Viceroy, having taken his proposal into consideration, would release the prisoners on condition that he was paid 500 piastres each for them. SINGO added, hypocritically, that he advised him to accept the conditions, as the Chinese soldiers, notwithstanding all the care he took to restrain their brutality, were capable of offering the utmost violence. The agent referred to Hongkong, the money was immediately sent, and the prisoners were released without injury. It was subsequently discovered that YEH had fixed the ransom at 400 piastres for each prisoner, but that SINGO had increased it in order to keep a portion for himself. Such is the detestably covetous character of the Chinese functionaries.

An unpleasant affair had occurred at Foo-chow-Foo, a port on the river Min, the principal market for black tea. The Viceroy having heard that, contrary to his commands, a considerable amount of business was transacted there, sent a company of his guards there on a market day, arrested several Chinese merchants, and burnt a considerable quantity of merchandise belonging to the English. At Saanghai there was much business doing. The Mandarin who governs there is completely opposed to YEH, and has never ceased to be on the best terms with foreigners and to protect their trade. The Imperial Government is compelled to tolerate him lest he should make common cause with the insurgents who are at his gates.

The Atlantic Telegraph.

INTERVIEW BETWEEN MR. BROWN, M. P., AND CAPT. HUDSON, OF THE NIAGARA.

From the Liverpool Albion.

We learn that Mr. W. BROWN, M. P., Chairman of the Atlantic Telegraph Company, Mr. BRETT and Mr. PICKERING, directors, accompanied by Capt. KELLS, have been on board the noble ship Niagara, Capt. HUDSON, at Gravesend, to confer and arrange with him about laying that portion of the submarine cable which is to go to the westward, to connect and bind the Old and the New World, permanently, we trust, in harmony and peace. Nothing could exceed the gentlemanly and courteous feeling with which they were received by Capt. HUDSON and his officers. After going through the ship, it was found, to their extreme regret, that, without ruining her, by cutting away stanchions there was not space to make sufficiently large circular coils of the cable to secure its safe delivery into the ocean, which, in such an enterprise, is the first point to be attended to. Indeed, this is not surprising, for although Sir BALDWIN WALKER was most anxious that the British Government should furnish suitable vessels to do their part of the enterprise, Captain KELLS was three months looking over the dockyards to find one that would do. The Agamemnon was at last fixed on, but she required considerable alterations. If time admitted, there can be no doubt that among the United States' navy would be found a suitable vessel, and that the Government would send her here to aid in this great international undertaking. Captain HUDSON stated that his orders from the Secretary of the Navy were to do everything in his power to forward the enterprise, and that he, his officers, and crew felt a deep interest in it, and were ready to do anything that would contribute to its triumphant success. It was felt by all parties that these two great nations must be united in carrying out this important work, and probably the best thing that could now be done was for the Niagara to take on board the shore end of the cable, and lead the van of that part of the squadron going to the Western World, and be ready to give every necessary assistance. In this suggestion Captain HUDSON most cheerfully acquiesced, saying he was ready to do anything the deputation wished to aid and assist the undertaking. The United States, desirous of conferring all the honor possible upon this country, sent one of their noblest ships, and to a person who knows what a vessel should be, an inspection of the Niagara would be worth a voyage across the Atlantic. Everything was in the most perfect and beautiful order. She is constructed for sailing and for purposes of war, and not for carrying such a length of cable as is necessary to annihilate time and space between the two kindred nations. None but practical engineers, who have been in the habit of laying down sub-marine cables, could foresee what construction of vessel would best answer the purpose, and leave least risk in paying out the cable; a "bight" or a "kink" might be fatal to the whole operation. This being a bold enterprise, nothing must be left to chance. After the squadron has started we shall look forward with much interest for a message from Newfoundland, informing us that all is right.

THE NIAGARA TO PROCEED TO LIVERPOOL.

From the Times, May 26.

The United States frigate Niagara, having been detained at Gravesend to make certain preliminary arrangements for shipment of her portion of the electric cable from Liverpool, is not expected to quit her present moorings until to-morrow. The steamship Agamemnon arrived yesterday morning at Greenhithe, where she is ordered to remain until Wednesday, when she will proceed up the river and take up her moorings off Greenwich, a space having been dredged to form a basin so as to enable her to float in low tide for the embarcation of her huge cargo. On Wednesday morning a party of fifty riggers from Woolwich are ordered to make the final arrangements for her reception. She is so arrive at 2 P. M.

The Slave Trade—Blockade of the Cuban Coast Urged.

From the London Times, May 26.

It surely cannot be admitted that a country like England is unable to suppress the African Slave Trade. No one can urge that the strength of the good cause falls abort as opposed to the evil. The odds are all on the side of humanity. On the side of humanity is the first naval Powsr in the world, supported by the sanction or acquiescence of every civilized State. Success, too, has not been wanting to encourage further exertions. Philanthropists can point to a long line of triumphs. From the daye when Lord MANSFIELD, in the case of the negro SOMERSET, declared that Slavery was impossible within the limits of England, to the present time the struggle has been proceeding, and both the slave-owner and slave trader, though obstinate in their resistance, have been forced to yield one position after another. England and France have both abolished Slavery within their dominions, and States which still continue to uphold Slavery have declared with more or less of sincerity that it shall be limited in extent by a prohibition of the trade which fed it. The control lies, therefore, between England, backed by the moral feeling of the whole world, and a few desperate adventurers who gain a precarious income by carrying on the traffic between Africa and the Spanish Colonies. Cuba is now almost the only country which regularly imports large numbers of negroes, and to supply the plantations of this island most of the Slavers which now pursue their odious trade are fitted out. As the Americans refuses to admit the right of search, the Slave-trade, it is said, is now almost wholly carried on under their flag. Nay, unless statements publicly and repeatedly made be false, the greater part of the slave-carrying crafts are owned by American citizens, and fitted out at American ports; so, indeed, it is declared in a resolution adopted by a meeting held at Kingston, Jamaica, in February last. The feelings of the inhabitants were, no doubt, much moved by the condition of the blacks liberated from the Slaver which had been captured by the British vessel Arab; and this meeting, which passed strong resolutions on the subject of Slavery and the Slave-trade, was the natural result.

We have no desire to echo any Protectionist opinions of the Jamaican politicians, yet as we ought to give the slave-owners, both Anglo-American and Spanish, their due, it may be said that in the minds of great numbers of them this country, by its despendence on tropical productions, and consequently on slave labor, has its share in whatever sin there may be in Slavery. If Manchester buys more than half the cotton of the United States, and we receive the sugar of Cuba and the coffee of Brazil, the fact is not without its effect on those who are on the look-out for arguments against us, and are willing enough to turn the discussion from their own inhumanity to our inconsistency in denouncing it. Of these arguments there are numbers current in the slave owning world—some plausible, some absurd, but all satisfactory to people who want excuses for their own misdeeds. "If you abolished Slavery it was with a view to foment insurrection in the Southern States; if you guarantee Free-Soil institutions to Kustan, it is to revolutionize and subject Central America. You keep a squadron on the Coast of Africa to be ready for action in any part of the Atlantic, and you demand the right of search to demonstrate your superiority over other maritime nations. In fact, you do not wish to see the Slave Trade abolished; you would rather it should continue, since it gives you opportunities of interference and aggrandisement." Such is pretty much the reasoning on the matter, and it must be allowed that, as long as we profess a desire to suppress the traffic and hesitate to take the best means for doing so, the accusation of insincerity, though unjust, is likely to find believers.

As matters at present stand, we blockade the African coast, which stretches for more than 2,000 miles along the Atlantic. What chance there is of suppressing the traffic by such means may be well imagined. The squadron consists of vessels heavily armed and manned, and able to crush any slaver that they can come near. But the slavedealers know very well that in open sea they are not likely to be caught. They build their vessels for speed; they have no heavy guns; and they cram their cargo of human flesh into the smallest possible space, knowing by experience that if they can bring into port half the number of negroes they embarked, they will make a handsome profit. Our only chance is to surprise them at the mouths of rivers or in unfrequented roadsteads of the coast while they are getting their cargoes on board; even in such cases, they will stand out to sea, hoist American colors, and defy us. As for treaties with chiefs and so-called "Kings" in the Bight of Benin, they are, of course, simply useless. Where Spanish Captains-General and New-York citizens make fortunes by the trade, how can it be expected that King Tom or King Jumbo should refrain? It seems, therefore, a most ineffective policy to attempt to stop the trade at the point of embarcation. The chief success that has yet been gained has been owing to the determination of the various American Governments to exercise strict control over their ports, and the vigilance of our squadrons has thus served to aid these States in their good intentions. But as long as the Cuban authorities wink at the landing of slaves by the thousand, while we are steaming to and fro on the African coast, there is little prospect of improvement. If, then, England wishes to make a great effort to put down the trade in its last stronghold, it will do well to turn its attention to the Cuban coast itself. The Spanish Government is bound by treaty to do its best for the accomplishment of this great object. This assistance might accordingly be demanded, and, in default, a general blockade of the harbours of Cuba, established by an English squadron. If is, we firmly believe, in vain to trust to the Spanish Government or the immediate or even the eventual prohibition of the trade; but, under the pressure of the British Minister, it might be induced to give orders for the seizure of whatever negroes were brought into port, and for the rendering of due assistance to the efforts of our commanders.

The total suppression of the Slave Trade seems not only possible, but easy, if such means were adopted. It is no small thing that, though more than one nation is interested in the continuance of the traffic, none has had the shamelessness to withhold its official condemnation. On these grounds, and with as high a moral position, it is our duty to persevere. Nor are the interests of our own colonies to be put out of the question. With the extinction of the trade in slaves there might be a better prospect for a free immigration. Talk to most people about bringing negroes from Africa to Jamaica or Trinidad under some system of apprenticeship or contract, and they will probably say that it is a Slave Trade under another name, and that the adoption of such a scheme would destroy all the influence we have acquired, and carry the world back to the worst days of inhumanity and recklessness; but once let the real Slave Trade have ceased for ever, and not only the British colonies, but even those American States which have, to their credit, abolished Slavery altogether, will find it to their advantage to bring over Africans under some wise and humane system, which will benefit the regions on both sides of the Atlantic.

Opposition to the Maine Liquor Law in England.

From the London Times.

The Maine Liquor Law has been a signal failure in the Province from which it derives its name. In Maine, if we are rightly informed, the enactment is set at defiance in a hundred ways, and even persons who are not disposed to be habitual drunkards cannot bring themselves to submit to a system of temperance by statute. The prohibition, indeed, appears in great measure to work its own defeat. Men will not cultivate the moral virtues through fear of fine and imprisonment—certainly not the virtue of temperance. Now, we are not about to sing the praises of drunkenness, or to recommend the bottle as the grand panacea for all human ills. We could say as many fine things about the evils which result from habitual intemperence as any professed lecturer from Maine, were it worth while to weary our readers with stale truisms. Could we persuade the people of this country, not to abstain altogether from fermented liquors, but to confine themselves within those reasonable limits which nature and experience point out as suitable in such a matter, we are well aware that the crime of the country would be diminished in an infinite degree. A vast amount, moreover, of misery and degradation, which is never brought at all under the cognizance of the criminal courts, is also to be attributed to the pernicious influence of "drink." We are all agreed about the facts so far as habitual insobriety is concerned, but at this point we part company with the apostles of the Maine Liquor Law. In the moist climate in which our lot is cast, and artificial as our habits of life undoubtedly are, we fully believe that an artificial stimulus, if used in moderation, so far from being productive of evil, is of positive advantage to the constitution. Almost every individual in these islands, save perhaps the agricultural laborer, leads a highly artificial existence. It is the same thing with the actisan, the mechanic, and the manufacturing operative, as with the overworked barrister, or merchant, or author. In the one case nearly the whole of a man's waking hours are spent in a heated and unwholesome atmosphere, over labor of an unceasing and monotonous kind. In the other there is a perpetual strain upon the brain, a perpetual wear and tear of the nervous system. When the time for relaxation arrives, the man whose lot it is to live like a hermit and work like a horse is not capable of the exertion which would refresh the energies the savage. He sits down to his meal with a great craving for food, rather than with a wholesome hunger, and the food act before him is rich and heavy. Water is not the apt solvent for such a meal, nor will a few glasses of cold water supply that stimulus which the languid stomach absolutely requires to enable it to perform its task. The Maine Liquor Law enthusiasts may talk as they will about the delights of the pure fountain; we are of those who believe that a glass or two of good sherry, or other wholesome wine, so far from being injurious in the case described, will rather act as a cordial, and restore the jaded energies of exhausted nature.

Now, when we claim this privilege for ourselves, we have no wish to dissociate our cause with that of our poorer fellow-subjects who may be engaged in the various operations of handicraft. What a glass of sherry is to the over-worked brain-laborer, is the glass of beer to the mechanic or artisan. If all Exeter-hall or the platforms of Maine were to rise up in pious indignation at so startling an expression of opinion, we would still say that the poor man is not the worse, but much the better, for his glass of beer. However translucent may be the aqueous theories of the partisans of total abstinence, the experience of mankind is against them. The human race broadly by their practice maintain the principle that, in one form or another, they will have stimulating drink of some kind. It is a false position, however, to assert that the decision of mankind therefore is for drunkenness. In this, as in all other things, reason should be our guide, and it is so. The enormous majority of the inhabitants of these islands make use of fermented liquors, but a very small minority are habitual drunkards. Of the 7,500,000 persons whom we assume at a rough calculation to represent the adult male population of Great Britain and Ireland, how many are habitual drunkards—how many are seen "drunk" in the course of any given twenty-four hours? Are we, therefore, to be told that, because a few weak or depraved people deliberately choose to make beasts of themselves, and to bring ruin to all about them, the reasonable liberty of the great bulk of their fellow-subjects is to be restrained by a restrictive sumptuary law to enforce temperance? We can assure Hon. NEAL DOW, of Portland, United States, who is to lecture us at Exeter Hall this day, that he is wasting his labor and his eloquence in England. We know, as well as he can tell us, that drunkenness here, as in all other civilized countries, is a fruitful source of crime. We cannot, however, compare our own, or any other country, with a nation of water-drinkers—or, rather, with a nation which uses no artificial stimulus—and for the simple reason that no such a community exists, or ever has existed in the annals of the world. This world is now of some standing in the universe, and this inference would seem to be a pretty clear one. As a matter of abstract speculation it might be curious to inquire what vices and crimes would most prevail among a nation of pure water-drinkers, unless influences far more potent than their habitual beverage were at work among them. But even the State of Maine will not supply us with the means of instituting any such comparison.

Let it not be supposed that we underrate for a moment the evils which arise from drunkenness. We merely contest, as far as our drunkards are concerned, against efforts to reform them at the cost of the temperate indulgence of the whole sober population. The Maine Liquor Law men occupy pretty nearly in the temperance question the same position as the Peace Society have done for some time past upon that of war. Our objection in either case is that these enthusiasts do positively harm, inasmuch as they combat a great and acknowledged evil with inappropriate weapons. Let us by all means do what we can for the reformation of our drunkards; let us apply all wholesome influence of religion, of education, of orderly homes, of social decencies, and of self-respect which may serve to guard those who are to come after us from so fearful an evil. We know perfectly well what the nature of it is, and what its extent, and how it is to be dealt with. The Maine Liquor Law, however, is not a weapon which will serve the turn.

Mr. Bright on Parliamentary Reform.

The following letter has been received by Mr. ALEXANDER LAING, Hawick, in acknowledgement of certain resolutions of sympathy with Messrs. COBDEN, BRIGHT, and GIBSON, on the result of the Huddersfield and Manchester elections, passed at a meeting held in that town some weeks ago. A letter on the subject from Mr. COBDEN has already been published:

GENEVA, Sunday, May 17, 1857.

DEAR SIR: Your kind note, inclosing a copy of the resolution passed at a public meeting of the inhabitants of Hawick, reached me only last evening. I lose no time in writing to say that I am very glad to find that in your town the cause of reform, free trade, and retrenchment has so many warm friends, and that you have understood and approved the policy which Mr. COBDEN, Mr. GIBSON, and myself have supported in the House of Commons. In the question of free trade little progress has been made for some years past; as to retrenchment, the word has become almost obsolete, and the military expenditure of the country is now nearly double the amount which the Duke of WELLINGTON and Sir ROBERT PEEL thought necessary in 1835, although we have no more territory to defend, and although a large number is no longer necessary to maintain tranquility in Ireland. As to reform, while almost every body professes to be in favor of it in some shape, the preparation of the particular bill to be brought forward next year, is left in the hands of a Minister whose hostility to every portion for reform since the year 1832, is notorious and undeniable. Whether on these three points to which your resolution refers, the country is in a satisfactory position I must leave the friends of free trade, reform, and retrenchment to decide.

"With regard to the promised reform, let me warn you to look not more to the question of franchise than to the other arrangements of the measure. It would be easy to double the number of electors, and at the same time to increase the aristocratic influence in Parliament. To give votes without giving representatives in some fair degree, in proportion to the votes, is but to cheat the people; and to give a large increase of votes without the security of the ballot, will subject increased numbers of our countrymen to the degrading influences which wealth and power now exercise so unscrupulously upon the existing electoral body. A moderate measure, and an honest one so far as it goes, is far more to be desired than one of great pretensions with some fraudulent scheme for defeating the wishes of the nation. A dishonest apportionment of members may effectually destroy a representation; and any trick to obstruct the free action of majorities, such as that proposed in Lord JOHN RUSSELL'S last bill, should be strenuously resisted, as calculated to undermine the very basis of representative institutions, and designed only to cheat the people of that increased power which the bill would profess to confer upon them.

Whether I shall ever again in Parliament support the policy you approve, is extremely uncertain, but I shall always retain a grateful sense of the kindness which I have received in past times, and at the present time, from the intelligent community on whose behalf you have written to me.

Believe me to be, very sincerely yours,
JOHN BRIGHT.

Advance Wages to Seamen.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The Committee appointed to confer with shipowners and ship merchants in reference to the condition of the merchant marine, have submitted their report, involving features of a somewhat novel and peculiar character. Many interested parties will adhere to and try to establish the new and long needed custom, while, on the other hand, as many, or more, will strive with might and main to render this effort to elevate seamen to an estate of honest independence null and void, for when the advance system is abolished their occupation will be gone.

Seamen, from the nature of their calling, the influence and power they exert and wield among the nations of earth, should be among the most independent and respected of men. This is now the exception, this contrary the rule, and the principal cause is the cursed system of advance wages. It always has and always will, so long as practiced, act as a powerful agent in opposition to whatever good may be attempted in their behalf. Where one is in any form benefited by it, ninety-nine are injured. It not only leaves the door open for plunder, but administers to their proverbial improvidence. It not only makes them lazy and shiftless when on board ship, but by their inefficiency endanger the property entrusted to their care. The rocks and shoals which line our coast are not half so destructive to shipping as this one thing.

The amount of advance paid ostensibly for the sailor, but of which on an average he sees no more than ten per cent., would in a very few years build a "Home" for them as large as the Astor House, and keep it in operation. The merchants of New-York may set on foot any measure they think fit to elevate the sailor, build churches and preach, erect homes and feed them, humor them while on shore, or drive them while at sea—it is all one, and vain; for so long as they pay advance, and by that single deed sanction the existence of the numerous low boarding-houses, and kidnappers, and put into the sailor's hand the very instrument of all others with which to commit moral suicide—just so long will the depravity, vice, and bloodshed, inefficiency, and tyranny reign which characterizes our merchant marine, and just so long will the sailor be the slave, the down-trodden chattel, and alas! that it should be so, the riotous and outlawed character he is. True, many avail themselves of the friendship offered them, and become men, respected and beloved; but how is it with the mass? Abolish the Advance system, compelling them thereby to put clothes on their back, and in their chests, to pay their board with money earned, to go on board their ships sober and fit for duty, and you will bear of fewer shipwrecks, with their calamitous results, and at the same time build up in your midst an army of hardy, honest, and useful citizens, free from the vices which now characterize this class of men.

Nor must the reform stop here. Do some of the owners whose names are appended to the resolution to do away with the advance, know that their ships are not driven across the Western Ocean by aerial influence alone, but by a power more tangible, in the shape of patent knuckles, belaying pins and ropeends, to say nothing of the oaths which hiss from stem to stern, and aloft, into some half cold, half frozen sailor's ear, as he vainly labors to reef or hand your canvas? Is it material whether, as officers, those in charge of the watch can tell the sun from the moon, provided they know how to drive the men, thereby driving your ships? Do you know these pets are in the habit of driving the outward-bound crews ashore, when they reach Liverpool and some other European ports, thereby not only saving the ship's bread and beef, but lining their pockets with a handsome premium awarded by the shipping master for the privilege of putting the return crew on board? What provision have you made for the crews who come across in your ships who are obtained thus, scores of whom you pay off in your offices with a dollar or a cent? Who will board them without money, clothing, or advance to cover expenses? Have you a "Straw House," on the principle of the London Institution, bearing that name, prepared for them, or, do you think these men, after working your ships across, and battling not only the elements but the after end of the ship, are of that kind to tamely submit to be compelled to wander about the streets hungry and thirsty? If you mean to simply abolish the advance system and stop there, you may as well stop now, for that will only make a bad matter worse. You must go on to the quarter-decks of your ships, and effect a radical change there, from the captain to the boatswain. No seaman, who has any regard for his character, or solicitude for his limbs, will make a second voyage or even passage in many of your Liverpool liners. Who is responsible for this but the owners, and who are the owners but those who promote and virtually sanction this work? There must be a thorough reformation from the top to the bottom, or as fast as the fabric is reared at one end it will tumble down at the other.

There is no statute to be set aside in the premises, consequently, (as is the custom now-a-days,) no fear of the validity of your action being tested. You have the matter your own way. You have, by individual enterprise, built up the Merchant Marine of the United States; and by virtue thereof, hold a position more enviable than does the Princes of earth, and here is the right arm of your enterprise and future power withering inch by inch at your side. At this moment a policy is in operation to carry your resolutions to the wall, and in such a shape that the credit of its inefficiency will be laid at the sailors' door; when, of course, you become discouraged. But he is in irons, and which ever gets him out first secures him for life, for, if the effort falls through, it will never be revived, at least, during this generation.

Now is the time for you to take your position, and if need be, against wind and tide, carry this point. With a tithe of the tact, talent and energy you exhibit on "sailing days," you can render the sailor a service for which he will thank you in future years, beside adding another stone to the edifice of regeneration.

NEW-YORK, Monday, May 25, 1857. H. F.

FROM BOSTON.

Massachusetts Politics—Anomalous State of Parties—A New Organization.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

BOSTON, Thursday, May 28, 1857.

It is a long while since I have inflicted on you a political disquisition, but in view of the approach of the State campaign, (for the Republican Convention is to be held within a month, on June 24,) you will pardon me for calling your attention to the importance of the political movements which will take place in Massachusetts during the Summer and Autumn.

An anomalous state of parties exists at present, which is as fatal to personal integrity as it is to political success. Of the four hundred members of the Legislature, more than half do not know to what political organization they belong, and no measure discussed during the session—neither the KANSAS-AID resolves, the address for the removal of Judge EDWARD G. LORING, the bank and railroad bills, nor the proposed or adopted constitutional amendments, whether affecting the naturalization laws, or remodeling the General Court—has served to draw party lines.

DIVISIONS.

It is manifest that this state of affairs cannot continue. The 108,000 voters in Massachusetts for FREMONT are not a homogeneous body. The very Legislature they chose on the same day as the Presidential election, is like them, a house divided within itself. Respectable men are surveying in retirement the political field, waiting for it to assume definite boundaries before they re-enter it. In the meanwhile, the executive control of the State remains in the same hands in which it was placed by the Know-Nothings in 1854 and 1855.

The coming campaign is destined to set these boundaries and to organize the distracted politics of Massachusetts, restoring her to the position in the van of the great liberal party of the nation, to which she is entitled by her antecedents, her intelligence, and the unanimity of her Anti-Slavery sentiment. The work which is to be accomplished here before the Fall election, is the same which will be essential in almost every State in the Union before the National campaign of 1860.

THE NEW PARTY.

I have said that the 108,000 voters for FREMONT are a heterogeneous body. The result of the coming reorganization will be the construction of a homogeneous party out of nearly four fifths of this number. The remainder will probably secede temporarily. It will be composed of very different and opposing elements, of ultra Know-Nothings on the one hand, and ultra Anti-Know-Nothings on the other.

Of the former I need say little. Their character you can readily understand. They are men who voted for FREMONT from policy, not principle. If it had been equally politic, they would have voted for Mr. FILLMORE just as cheerfully. They do not recognize any principle in politics. Their standard of political integrity is so low that the new party will be better without them than with them. They do not make special Anti Slavery pretensions, and never did. There are no men of note, and few of respectability, among them, and no one will regret their secession.

THE SECESSIONISTS.

The latter, however, deserve special mention, for they are active and zealous, and have one or two organs in the country Press, through which they present their views of men and things almost daily. Among them are a multitude of savages—I cannot honestly call them by any other name—to whom all who are not for them are against them, who bandy libellous words as lightly as a bean handies compliments at an evening party, and in whose repertoire of expression, "scoundrel," "villain," "ruffien," "liar," "cheat," and "skunk," are among the choicest terms.

These men were, most of them, old Free-Soilers, and the avidity with which they blackguard everything and body, has been sharpened by long practice. They killed off most of the respectable leaders of their own party before the Scott and Pierce campaign, and whetted their teeth in the interval between 1852 and 1856 for the havoc they now seek to make.

But the inconsistencies between their conduct then and now is glaring. They raged then against all who were not coalitionists. Now they rage against all whom they charge with coalition. One of their number, who is the correspondent of the Worcester Spy, and was President of the Worcester Disunion Convention, was the man whose influence as a Councilor of Gov. BOUTWELL, placed CALEB CUSHING on the Supreme Bench of Massachusetts, a seat from which he was able to step into the office of Attorney General. He was Chairman of the Free Soil State Committee, (and most of his fellow-disorganizers were members of the same body,) when attempts were made at a coalition between Free-Soilers and Democrats, to elect WHITING GRISWOLD to Congress over J. Z. GOODRICH in the Berkshire District, and ABRAHAM HOWLAND over THOMAS D. ELIOT in the Bristol and Barnstable District. The relative Free-Soilism of these gentlemen may be judged from the facts that Mr. GUSHING is now Chairman of the Republican State Committee, and that Mr. ELIOT, while in Congress, made a motion to repeal the Fugitive Slave Act, while HOWLAND and GRISWOLD are both Border Ruffian Democrats, and were applicants to Mr. BUCHANAN for the Boston Collectorship.

These same men also eat at the same table with Gen. WHITNEY, of Cooway, now Superintendent of the Springfield Armory, and drank whisky and water with him, on this very afternoon of the day on which, in the Massachusetts House of Representatives, he had been one of half a dozen members (out of four hundred) to vote against resolutions protesting against the passage of the Nebraska bill.

The secret of their unruliness is a consciousness of loss of power. No men in the State are more greedy than they for office, and when the present Legislature was organized, last Winter, they clamored more fiercely for spoils than the rankest Know Nothings. After they had pushed the respectability of the old FREE SOIL party into the background, five years ago, they became accustomed to rule that organization, and now that it is merged with Republicanism, they desire to exercise the same control.

Part of them were active Know-Nothings in 1854, and even voted for J. V. C. SMITH for Mayor of Boston, in December of that year, after they had cursed him in June for his zeal in assisting in the extradition of ANTHONY BURNS, the negro whom Judge LORING decided to be a fugitive slave. Their revulsion of feeling against the Know-Nothing Party, which most of them left in 1855, carries them as far in their anathemas against it and its doctrines, as their associates, who were original, and have been consistent haters of the whole organization from the day the first lodge was chartered in Boston.

I believe that I have written enough to give you an idea of these men. They too will be no great loss to the new party, although they comprise much talent and genuine Anti-Slavery feeling. They are too fanatical, too denunciatory, too inconsistent, too much given to conspiracy.

STRENGTH OF THE NEW PARTY.

The new party will gain strength by its loss of both these classes of men, for it is they whose bitterness excites counter-rancor. They are the splinters which create the feeter. From them have proceeded most of the political scandal which has abounded in Massachusetts ever since 1854, and, from the insinuations they have sown, a great crop of ill-feeling and dissension has been gathered. By-and-by they will return again, moderated and improved by their secession.

EX-SPEAKER BANKS FOR GOVERNOR.

Ex-Speaker BANKS will, undoubtedly, be nominated for Governor on the 24th of June, not from personal predilection, but because he occupies a political position in which he can operate more effectually than any other nominee, in this work of reorganization. The names of ex Judge HOAR and of Mr. CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS have also been mentioned in connection with the nomination, but they will not be seriously pressed. Although either would fill the office creditably, neither desires it, nor would either answer the purpose to be effected by the nomination of Mr. BANKS—a thorough organization of the anti-Democratic Party.

GOOD PROSPECTS.

Under the new régime we may hope for a return of respectability, long banished from the politics of Massachusetts. I do not believe that fifty gentlemen of social position have attended primary meetings in this State since 1854, except during the Presidential campaign. The standard of legislative intellect, never very high, has been woefully shridged since that year. The dignity of offices has been so diminished by disreputable incumbents, that it will require self sacrifice on the part of decent men to accept them. You can appreciate how this may be, from the instance of your own ISAIAH RYNDERS. Nothing can prevent all this from being effected, except the rankest folly,—not even the action of the Legislature yesterday on the constitutional amendments restricting the privileges of foreigners. An overwhelming majority of the people of Massachusetts desire a change in the naturalization laws, but after such a campaign as that of 1855, they will hardly be willing to try again the experiment of making a triangular fight. They know that the only way in which they can ever secure the two-thirds of the House of Representatives requisite for two successive years to such a change, is by cooperating in the construction of an harmonious party which shall sweep the State from Berkshire to Barnstable.

PROBABLE MURDER IN VERMONT.—A letter from Vergennes to a gentleman in Albany, gives the particulars of a probable murder in Starkboro' Vt. The affair was the result of an affray between two farmers, named NORTON and BRIGGS. The original cause of their disagreement was a real or supposed injury received by BRIGGS, by reason of a fire, kindled by NORTON on his own land, which had run over a portion of BRIGGS'. All efforts to settle the consequent trouble were unavailing, when, last Friday evening, BRIGGS proceeded to NORTON'S house and called him up, he having retired for the night. NORTON came to the door, and, as he did so, BRIGGS passed one arm around him and commenced stabbing him in the abdomen, face, and various parts of his body. He left his victim in a dying condition, but was arrested, and is now in Middlebury Jail. Report says that NORTON was alive Sunday night, but could not survive many hours. Both parties, we understand, have relatives in Albany and Troy.

Washington's Farewell.

From the National Intelligencer.

The following extract is from a letter written by a lady upwards of 80 years old, residing in Philadelphia, to her grandson in Washington:

"When General WASHINGTON delivered his Farewell Address, in the room at the southeast corner of Chestnut and Sixth streets, I sat immediately in front of him. It was in the room the Congress had occupied. The table of the Speaker was between the two windows on Sixth-street. The daughter of Dr. C——, of Alexandria, the physician and intimate friend of WASHINGTON, Mrs. H——, whose husband was the auditor, was a very dear friend of mine. Her brother, WASHINGTON, was one of the secretaries of Gen. WASHINGTON. Young DANDRIDGE, a nephew of Mrs. WASHINGTON, was the other. I was included in Mrs. H——'s party to witness the august, the solemn scene. N—— C—— declined going with Mrs. H——, who had determined to go so early as to secure the front bench. It was fortunate for N—— C—— (afterwards Mrs. L.) that she would not trust herself to be so near her honored grandfather. My dear father stood very near her; she was terribly agitated. There was a narrow passage from the door of entrance to the room, which was on the east, dividing the rows of benches. Gen. WASHINGTON stopped at the end to let Mr. ADAMS pass to the chair. The latter always wore a full suit of bright drab, with slash, or rather loose cuffs. His also wore wrist ruffles. He had not changed his fashions. He was a short man, with a good head. With his family he attended our church twice a day.

General WASHINGTON'S dress was a full salt of black. His military hat had the black cockade. There stood the Father of his Country, acknowledged by nations 'the first in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen.' No marshals, with gold colored scarfs; no cheering. The most profound stillness greeted him, as if that great assembly desired to hear him breathe and catch his breath—the homage of the heart. Mr. ADAMS covered his face with both hands. The sleeve of his coat and his hands were covered with tears. Every now and then there was a suppressed sob. I cannot describe WASHINGTON'S appearance as I felt it—perfectly composed and self-possessed till the close of his address. Then, when strong men's sobs broke loose, when tears covered their faces, then the great man was shaken. I never took my eyes from his face. Large drops came from his eyes. He looked to the grateful children who were parting with their father, their friend, as if his heart was with them and would be to the end."

Bloody Tragedy in Kentucky—Father and Son Shot.

From the Cincinnati Commercial, June 8.

As the Lexington and Covington train were passing, a couple of miles this side of Winchester, Kentucky, on Saturday, the body of a man was discovered lying near the road, and still a little further on another body, lying in a similar condition, was seen. The parties were Colonel JAMES PRICE, of Clark country, Kentucky, an old and esteemed citizen, and his son, a fine and promising young man. Both were found weltering in their blood, the father having received the contents of a double-barreled gun, loaded with buck-shot, in the abdomen and lower part of his body, while the son had been shot through the body by a bullet from a revolver. Both were breathing when found, and it is yet hoped that the old gentleman may survive, although no hope is entertained of the recovery of the son. The particulars of this sanguinary affair, as we have been able to learn them, are as follows:

The lady of Col. PRICE, under the name of "Molly Broom," is a contributor to the Ohio Farmer, and in a recent communication to that journal she gave a description of a family residing in her neighborhood, from the mismanagement of whose head much domestic affliction and disastrous consequences had arisen. Unfortunately, a neighbor named GAY took the matter as intended for himself, and a few days since, meeting Col. PRICE, he demanded if he considered himself responsible for what his wife wrote. The Colonel, who was unconscious of what he alluded to, replied in a rather jocular manner that he was not, and the parties seperated upon apparently friendly terms.

On Saturday morning Col. PRICE was riding on horseback at the spot above designated, his son, similarly mounted, being some distance behind, when he was intercepted by GAY, who carried a double-barreled gun, which he discharged full at the Colonel, who fell from his horse, to all appearance dead. The son at this moment hastening to the spot, GAY drew a revolver, and again fired, with such fatal effect that the son also fell. After thus disposing of his victims, who were to all appearance dead, GAY made off, and at the present writing we are not advised whether he has yet

Mr. Clinton—No, I am Mr. Clinten.

Examination Resumed—My wife told me the Doctor was going to Saratoga; I think this was in September some time; her telling me this caused me to suspect some time; her telling me this caused me to suspect some game was to be played on me, and I would not go to the house; I did not say anything about garroters before the Coroner; when I got over the next day Mrs. Cunninghem told me that the Doctor was absent; she introdnced herself to me; she said she had sent for me to inform me of the intimacy between the Doctor and my wife; she said nothing about green veil or green spectacles; she did not work me up to a high pitch; she went on telling me a long lingo which was all false, and somebody was listening.

Q.—What else did she say? A.—Keep your mouth shut and I will tell you; she said if I would onme there she would show me the intimacy between the Doctor and my wife; she wanted to entrap me as the murderer of Burdell, which she and her imps carried out; Dr. Burdell is an honorable man.

Judge Dean—He would not want a certificate of character from you.

Witness—Nor you either. [Laughter.] I have paid Dr. Burdell $300 the last year for dentistry; on the Tuesday when I was with my wife and Dr. Burdell, Mrs. Cunningham was listening; when I went there half a dozen women were always listening; I dare not go there in the night; I go wherever hy business requires me to go, just where I please in this free country; Vandolen is like you [Laughter] up here; [pointing to the moustache.] [Renewed laughter.] When I saw Eckel at the Stationhouse, his whiskers were black and long; I am not positive as to the identity of the two men; Vandolen told us that Mrs. Cunningham had men and money at her command and she could do just as she liked; Dr. Burdell told me who this patient with sores was; my wife wanted to face this woman and therefore we went up; I had no feelings against Mrs. Cunningham for making those charges against my wife, for I knew what Mrs. Cunningham's character was; Burdell called on me to tell me that he had been sued for slander; when he called I don't remember what was said only that he was afraid of her, and thet she had a man in the house, and that he wanted to get them all out, as he did not like the party; he said nothing about a breach of promise suit; the second time he called was to get me to go up to his house, but I would not go; he wished me to go up and see if Eckel was Vandolen; he told me the suits were settled about two or three weeks after the first interview; he did not give me particulars as to how they were settled; he said they were settled, and ehe had agreed to leave the house; he asked me to go again to see Eckel, but I would not; my wife was never there after I had been there with her; when he last saw me he said he was afraid of his life, and that before he married Mrs. Cunningham he would rather lose his life and his money,—and he had traced her character; he acted as if he was afraid; he stayed only ten minutes; he saw my wife; I told him I would never come to his house while that party remained there; he did not tell me where Eckel's place of business was nor did I inquire.

TESTIMONY OF CAPTAIN DILKS.

The witness was sworn and examined by Mr. Stevens: I had general charge of the Police arrangements at No. 31 Bond street during the Coroner's investigation; I made the search of Eckel's bureau myself; [Witness identified the papers already mentioned.] I found those papers in a drawer; that is the envelope; it was sort of a bed book-case; the envelope is like Mr. Eckel's hand-writing; Mrs. Cunningham wanted the papers, and told me they were hers; I was in the room the first time that Rev. Mr. Marvine went in to view the body; when he went to the head of the bed, and leaning examined the face attentively, he shook his head, and in answer to some remarks made by Coroner Connory, he said: "The man I married had longer whiskers here," putting his hands to the side of his face; he stated afterwards that there was something round the mouth that bore a resemblance to something he had seen before; he did not say that he could identify the man; I was present at his examination which was, I think, mainly conducted by the District Attorney; Mr. Marvine did not say in my hearing that there were strong points of resemblance; he did not, as far as I heard, make use of the words "points;" I was directly behind him; he did not make that statement as to points of resemblance at all, except as to the mouth; two portraits were handed to him while he was on the stand; he said the man that he married had long whiskers, so much so, that when the man came to make arrangements about the marriage, he thought he could see day-light between them.

Cross-examined by Mr. Clinton.—I recollect there was a book with an entry examined by the Jury, but don't recollect the date; I did not have charge of the Doctor's books; the Jury had them in their possession.

The witness was cross-examined at great length to test his memory in relation to the various matters that occurred on the Inquest, some of which he remembered and some of which he did not. He did not remember the names of the witnesses who testified on Sunday.

TESTIMONY OF LEVI S. CHATFIELD, ESQ.

The witness was sworn and examined by Mr. Tilden.

I am counselor-at-law, doing business in this City.

Q.—Were certain affidavits in two suits by Mrs Emma A. Cunningham vs. Harvey Burdell, submitted to you?

Mr. Clinton objected.

Mr. Chatfield—I am counselor-at law, and in the matter inquired about I acted professionally.

Witness—I was retained as counsel in behalf of Mrs. Cunningham in two suits to be brought by her against Dr. Harvey Burdell, and all the papers were examined by me; all I did, and all the information I received, was in the capacity of counsel.

Q.—(Repeated.) A.—There were; one of the affidavits I drew, but I think not the other.

Q.—Were those the affidavits upon which the order for arrest was granted.

Mr. Tilden wished to prove that the affidavits were not in the nature of privilaged communications. These affidavits were lost, and he wished to give secondary evidence of their contents.

Mr. Clinton said no loss of them was proved. The witness never had seen Mrs. Cunningham write, and therefore could not prove that the affidavits were those of the claimant.

Mr. Dean thought the question of privilege needed no argument. The common law expresely provided that no counselor-at-law was at liberty to reveal the secrets of his clients in any Court. (1st Greenleaf on Evidence, sec. 237.) Any violation of law did not come within the rule of privilege. That was the only exception.

Mr. Tilden contended that a paper placed on file passed entirely from the control of the party, and could not in any sense be deemed confidential.

The Surrogate overruled the objection at this stage of the case.

Witness—I never saw the affidavits after they were presented to the Judge, if they were; I saw one of them after it had been sworn to; I have never seen Mrs. Cunningham.

TESTIMONY OF EDGAR DAVIS.

Is a policeman in the Fifteenth Ward, and was on duty at the house No. 31 Bond-street at the time of Coroner's inquest.

The witness was called to substantiate the testimony of Captain Dilks in relation to Mr. Marvine, and in all hut minor particulars agreed with him. This witness was called on by Dr. Burdell in the month of September, to come to the house of Dr. Burdell, as he had lost a note which Mrs. Cunningham had taken. His testimony was fully taken before the Coroner, and nothing important was elicited.

TESTIMONY OF EDWARD G. COOK.

This witness testified that he was the paying teller of the Mechanics' Bank, and had been so for twenty years; was accustomed to pay checks on handwritings.

Mr. Clinton asked what they wished to prove?

Mr. Tilden said he wished to prove the genuineness of the signature of Mrs. Cunningham to the release of the 24th of January, 1856, by comparing that signature with another.

Mr. Clinton objected. Objection overruled, and exception taken.

The witness said that the signatures were identical.

On cross-examination, the petition in the case and an affidavit on commission, signed by Mrs. Burdell, was shown to the witness, and he testified that they were not the same as those he had referred to in his examination in chief.

The Court adjourned to-day at 10 A. M.

Trial of Deniny for Arson.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

The second trial of Thomas Deniny, for arson in the first degree, was commenced yesterday morning in the Court of Sessions. Eight Jurors only having been sworn on Monday, an additional panel of 100 was ordered from whom four other Jurors were chosen yesterday. Their names are:

Samuel B. Ferdon, Ninth Ward.
Bernard McFeely, Seventh Ward.
John Heald, Twentieth Ward.
Robert Harron, Fifteenth Ward.

Before the commencement of the case, Mr. Busteed, counsel for Deniny, applied to the Court for leave to be given to the Jury to visit the premises which the prisoner was charged with setting on fire. He desired they should examine them before any testimony was taken. The Recorder thought it was not necessary. If after the evidence was all before them they wished to see the premises they could do so.

The District-Attorney remarked that the premises had been much altered since the fire, and that the Jury would only be embarrassed by visiting them. The Court denied the application.

The District-Attorney then gave the Jury a history of the case they were impaneled to try. It has been fully published already in our columns. On the 5th of September, 1856, the prisoner occupied the lower floor of a four-story house, in the Second-avenue, between Thirty fourth and Thirty fifth streets. He kept a grocery and liquor store there, and used the back room as a living and sleeping apartment for himself and wife. Several families occupied the upper stories. At 3 o'clock in the morning of that day a fire broke out in the store. Officer Ware, of the Twenty-first Ward, hearing the screams of a woman, rushed to the spot, and found one of the boarders, occupying the second floor, about to throw her two children out of the window. The officer bade her be still, while he broke open the hall door and made an attempt to rush up stairs, but the smoke drove him back. He then mounted a coal box on the sidewalk and received the children safely from their mother. Some citizens coming up, they broke open the store, and found a fire raging within. There was an overpowering smell of camphene, and on examination, the floor was found to be covered with saturated shavings; shavings, also saturated with camphene, were stuffed into the store bins, and packed about the liquor casks. In the centre of the floor a hole had been bored above the cellar, and in the cellar were discovered a table on which, directly beneath the hole, was the half of a hutter firkin, and a pan filled with camphene and saturated shavings. When the fire was extinguished, a further search showed that the most extensive preparations had been made for a rapid conflagration of the building.

The witnesses examined yesterday, as on the previous trial, testified to these facts. They also proved that Deniny, who had insured his stock for $800 in the Bowery Insurance Company, had been engaged in the dead of night for a week previous to the fire in removing portions of his property, till at the time of the fire there was only $50 worth, or, including fixtures, $100 worth in the store.

The examination and cross-examination of witnesses for the prosecution occupied the attention of the Court yesterday to a late hour. The trial will be resumed this morning at 11 o'clock.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Clerke.

THE ARSENAL PROPERTY—INJUNCTION AGAINST ITS SALE.

The Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York vs. The Commissioners of the Land Office.—This morning Mr. Corporation Counsel Busteed applied for and obtained an injunction to restrain the defendants from conveying or in any way disposing of the State arsenal and the grounds appertaining thereto. Mr. Busteed filed his undertaking in the sum of $10,000. This property, it will be remembered, is embraced within the proposed limits of the new Central Park.

The following notice of the sale of the property at public auction was given in April last:

STATE OF NEW-YORK—SECRETARY'S OFFICE, ALBANY, April 28, 1857.—Notice is hereby given, in pursuance of a resolution of the Commissioners of the Land Office, that the state Arsenal property in the City of New-York, will be sold at public auction, at the Merchants' Exchange, in said City, on Wednesday, the 10th day of June, at 12 o'clock M., unless previously purchased by the City of New-York. Twenty per cent. of the purchase money will be required down, and the balance within 60 days after the sale. All payments to be deposited in the office of the "Manhattan Company," to the credit of the Treasurer of the State of New-York. N. P. STANTON.

Wednesday (yesterday) was therefore the day for the sale at auction. There is an ordinance still pending before the Board of Councilmen providing for the purchase of the property for the sum of $275,000, but owing to the third reading not yet being had, has not been acted upon. This injunction probably is to postpone the sale until the bill can pass. There are certain private parties who are very desirous that the sale should proceed, that they may purchase and turn an honest penny in reselling to the City at a somewhat advanced price.

DECISIONS.

Before Hon. Justice Peabody.

John O. Woodruff et al. vs. Otis Drury.—Motion to refer granted and cause referred to S. B. Ruggles, John F. Butterworth and David Wood, unless the plaintiff consent that the order of reference already made herein be vacated, and in that event the cause is referred to Wm. C. Russell, or, at the election of plaintiff, to the three above named.

SUPERIOR COURT.

Before Justice Duer.

SELLING BY SAMPLE.

Thomas Gilmartin vs. Wells & Provost.—This suit was brought to recover $217 64, the amount of a bill of pine apples, sold by the plaintiffs to the defendants. The defendants set up that it was a sale by sample, and the bulk did not correspond with the sample, the fact being that at the time of effecting the sale and agreeing upon the terms, the plaintiff's agent showed three or four of the pine apples to the defendants, representing that he believed them to be a fair sample of the bulk, but stating that they could examine the bulk on board the vessel. The Judge charged the Jury that this was not a sale by sample unless it clearly appeared that it was the understanding of both parties to the contract that was expressly agreed that the bulk of the pine apples should correspond with the sample, and that the mere exhibiting of a sample of the goods without any express agreement that the contract should be with reference to the sample, did not of itself constitute a sale by sample, provided the purchasers had an opportunity to examine the goods. E. Terry for plaintiff; Goodman and Jessup for defendants.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Slosson

A SMALL MATTER.

The Eighth-avenue Railroad Company vs. Jacob S. Upp.—This suit is to recover damages from the defendant for throwing snow upon the plaintiffs' railroad-tracks. They demand $1,000 damages. The defendant claims that that plaintiffs threw the snow on to his premises, and he merely shoveled it back again. The Jury rendered a verdict for the plaintiffs for six cents.

THE MARINE INSURANCE CASE.

John Kineman, vs. The New-York Mutual Insurance Company.—This was an action in regard to insurance on the vessel Ozark, reported in yesterday's TIMES. The jory this morning brought in a sealed verdict for the plaintiff, for the full amount claimed ($8,000).

MARINE COURT.

Before Judge Thompson and a Jury.

SUIT AGAINST THE CONSOLIDATED STAGE COMPANY.

Thomas Carroll vs. The New-York Consolidated Stage Company.—The plaintiff, a cartman, driving his horse and cart in Broadway, April 17, 1857, was run into by a stage belonging to the defendant, whereby his cart was damaged, himself thrown out and disabled, and his horse so injured as to have been useless ever since. Upon this case he brought a suit for $500 damages. The defendant denied generally all the allegations of the complaint. Several witnesses were examined who testified to the facts as stated, and the Jury brought a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, $175 with costs.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM.

NOTICE.

Trials by Jury will be continued during the whole of the third week in Part 2, before Judge INGRAHAM.

The calendar of causes to be tried by the Court will be called by Judge BRADY, in Part 1, commencing on the third Monday, (June 15, inst.,) at 12 o'clock.

Disastrous Conflagration in Chelsea — Loss $50,000.

From the Boston Traveller.

Thursday night, the city of Chelsea was visited by one of the most destructive fires which has ever taken place there, and which resulted in a large loss of property.

At about 12 o'clock, fire was discovered issuing from a closet in a dwelling-house, No. 162 Cedar-street, which was one of a block of about twenty-four houses. The fire spread quickly, and soon the building was in flames. An alarm was given; the firemen were prompt on the ground, but scarcity of water prevented their immediate action, and in the meantime the flames gained an alarming headway, and soon the entire building, which is three stories in height, was enveloped in flames. The flames then ran through into house No. 160, which suddenly took, was speedily enveloped, and soon entirely gutted.

The buildings were of brick, three stories in height, and very fine edifices. We have obtained the following list of the parties who were rendered houseless by this disastrous fire:

No. 138 was occupied by O. J. CONAN. This tenement was not injured by the fire, and Mr. C. only suffered in removal of his furniture. Nos. 140, 142 and 144 were unoccupied, and were all nearly destroyed. No. 146 was occupied by DWIGHT MASON, and was entirely destroyed. His loss to furniture by removal was great. Mr. HENRY MASON, proprietor of the Chelsea Pioneer, occupied house No. 148. His loss is considerable by removal. The building was entirely destroyed. The above buildings were owned by Mr. GERRISH, of Chelsea. No. 150 was occupied by HUGH JAMESON, and was entirely destroyed. He lost considerable of his furniture by removal. The house was owned by Mr. HACKETT, of Boston, but whether insured we are unable to state. Tenements Nos. 152 and 154 were entirely destroyed. They were unoccupied. House No. 156 was occupied by ALONZO EMERY, and was also completely destroyed. Mr. EMERY lost a considerable portion of his furniture by removal. Houses Nos. 158, 160, 162, and 164, were also completely destroyed. They were unoccupied. The above houses were owned by Mr. GERRISH. No. 166 was occupied by JOHN TURNER, and leased by Mr. PAICK. Mr. TURNER lost a good portion of his furniture by removal and fire. BENJAMIN ENDY occupied No. 165, which was also totally destroyed. He lost a considerable portion of his furniture by the hasty removal. No. 170 was occupied by E. O. AYRES, which was also totally destroyed. He lost a considerable portion of his furniture by removal. These buildings were owned by Mr. GIDDINGS, of New-York. Nos 172, 174, 176 and 178 were all more or less injured. The two first were burnt, and the remaining two slightly. The four last were owned by Mr. GERRISH.

The loss by this fire cannot be less than $50,000.

The Mormon Pratt's Last Victim.

From the Galveston News.

The writer of this, while on a visit to New-Orleans last March, casually met the father of the infatuated woman, Mrs. MCLEAN, whose erratic course has brought the greatest affliction upon the family, and received from him the details of this remarkable history, as far as they had then transpired. It was then supposed that she was in Houston with her children, on her way to Salt Lake, through Texas, and on our return to that city we endeavored to obtain some trace of them, but the charmed bird had flown with her young to the embrace of the serpent-destroyer of her peace, as stated in the Bulletin. We remember the deep anguish, the fast flowing tear and the faltering voice of the old man, as he recounted to us the successive steps by which his erring child had fallen into the snare of the wily Mormon, and besought us to aid him, if possible, in rescuing the little children from the fatal custody of the Saints of Salt Lake. We rejoice that they have been rescued—that the woman has been arrested in her insane career—and thet the injured husband has had the opportunity of taking vengeance upon the lecherous PRATT, and hse rid the world of his pestilential presence. But the effect of the Elder's bad deeds live after him—a family destroyed—children more than orphaned—gray hairs brought with sorrow to the grave. Such is the hellish fruit of Mormonism.

Infidelity of a Wife—Bloody Affair.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Times, writing from Cairo, Ill., under date of the 4th of June, gives the following details, as an eye witness, of a horrid affair in that place:

"A man named JOHN GALLAGHER has been living here for some two months, boarding in one of the flat-boat taverns which still infest our levee. He is represented to be a hard-working, peaceable man. Some time ago he sent for his wife, whom he left in your city, and it appears that on her trip down she made the acquaintance of the watchman of the steamer, and consented to run away with him to St. Louis, when he should get ready to take her. Yesterday morning GALLAGHER heard of this, and at first could not believe it, as he had never suspected the fidelity of his wife. He was soon convinced of its truth, however, and immediately applied to Judge COCHRAN for advice.

The Judge told him he had better take his child, and let his unworthy woman go, without making a fuss about it. This GALLAGHER concluded to do. His wife heard of it, and she called a man named ENOCH MCPHERSON, who is from Covington, Ky., and who, having a raft of lumber beside the floating boarding-house, had made her acquaintance, to assist her in retaining her child.

GALLAGHER took away his baggage, and returned last evening to get his child. He had picked the little one up, and was leaving with it when MCPHERSON said, "Give it down you, let that child be or I will cut you all to pieces." GALLAGHER paid no attention to him, and was still moving off, when MCPHERSON plunged a knife into him, but a short distance above his heart. MCPHERSON, having committed this bloody deed, ran. GALLAGHER pulled out a revolver and fired. He shot MCPHERSON three times, once in the arm and twice in the back.

MCPHERSON, finding it impossible to escape, wheeled, and approaching GALLAGHER, gave him a blow which knocked him into the river. GALLAGHER swam to the raft, a distance of twenty feet, came out, and both parties drawing their knives, went at each other. They fought full ten minutes, lacerating each other dreadfully. A number of bystanders looked on, and were so terrified that none dare interfere. Among the observers was MRS. GALLAGHER, who looked coolly upon the whole transaction without evincing the least emotion. The bloody contest was at last ended, GALLAGHER succeeded in plunging his knife clear through MCPHERSON'S heart, and he fell at his feet a dead man, without even muttering a groan.

GALLAGHER was taken into custody. He is cut and hacked dreadfully, and this morning his recovery is considered doubtful. The Coroner held an inquest last night over the body of MCPHERSON, and the Jury returned a verdict implicating GALLAGHER in the charge of murder. This proceeding is said to have been a complete burlesque. GALLAGHER has consequently been removed to the jail.

NEW-YORK LIVE STOCK MARKET.

Prepared every week, expressly for the NEW-YORK DAILY, SEMI-WEEKLY, and WEEKLY TIMES, by a careful and experienced Reporter.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, June 10, 1857.

The principal Market Places are the WASHINGTON DROVE YARDS, 44TH-STREET; BROWNING'S, on Sixth-street; CHAMBERLIN'S, on Robinson-street; and O'BRIEN'S, on Sixth-street. Our reports refer to these regular markets. Irregular sales are sometimes made at Bergen Hill, N. J., and from the Hudson River Boats.

The great sales day at the Washington Yards is on WEDNESDAY of each week. The reports from all the yards are made up for the preceding week to the evening of that day.

The receipts of Live Stock, by the Erie Railroad, during the week, ending this afternoon, were as follows:

Cattle	1089	Hogs	1-30
Sheep	2780	Horses	27
Calves	228

Beeves are sold by the estimated dead weight of the four quarters; the so-called "fifth quarter" (hide and tallow) is not reckoned in here as it is in Boston and some other cities. When cattle are weighed or estimated alive, the dead weight is reckoned at a certain number of pounds to the 100 lbs. of live weight, as agreed upon. The general rule in this market for medium cattle is 56 lbs. to the 100; 44 lbs. being allowed for the "fifth quarter" and offal.

The average prices to-day, as compared with last week, are about 1c. lower.

We quote:

REMARKS UPON THE BEEF MARKET.

The Beef market has been well supplied during the past week, as will appear evident from the fact that 3,191 cattle have been on sale since our last report. A portion of the stock kept back from the last market was brought in the next day, and considerable sales were made on Friday of last week, and heavier still yesterday. About 500 head were thus sold at ALLERTON'S alone, which, taken from 2,635—the receipts at that market for the week—leaves 2,335 for to-day's sales. This was some 300 head more than were wanted, even at a reduction of 1c. ₩ lb., on most grades, from last week's prices....Most of the cattle at Forty-fourth street to-day were of a quality quite superior to the majority offered there for several weeks past. True, we noticed one or two lots of the "lean kine," but with these exceptions there were both single pairs and good-sized droves of choice animals. Some of them were of the class alluded to in former reports as being too heavy for the warm weather and high prices, both of which incline hutchers to purchase medium-sized cattle, not over fat. A portion of these heavy bullocks were discarded at prices less than were paid for steers weighing 700 lbs net. Of the States, Illinois contributed 1,017, and Ohio 909 head for one market alone, making about two-thirds of the numbers from all the States. Since the misunderstanding between the ALLERTONS and the Hudson River Railroad, very few cattle come over that route, the owners choosing the Erie, or the Central road, and the convenient double-decked propellers on the Hudson River. It will be observed by the table of routes that 1,659 cattle received at ALLERTON'S came by these boats, while the Erie Road brought 900 head. Boston and other Eastern buyers made free purchases at Albany, securing some 500 or 600 head.

The following are the principal lots on sale to-day including a few disposed of last evening:

We present, as usual, a few extracts from our copious notes of the transactions of this day:

Capt. HUTCHINSON had 51 Ohio Cattle, which J. C. HOAG was selling for 13c.@14c. They were common Cattle, with the exception of a few choice Steers. One extra large pair of five-year-olde weighed 4,580 lbs. grose at home, and sold to WM. FLORENCE at $340, or fully 14c. ₩ lb. Ten of the finest were Steers of the Captain's own feeding. D. BRILL took five of them at $515, or 13c. ₩ lb. Home weight of the drove was 1,390 lbs.

EMERSON & TROTTER brought in a very fine lot of 136 Steers from Clarke County, Ohio, which were fed by N. TROTTER. The home weight was 1,600 lbs., and were bringing 12¾c @13c. GEORGE AYRAULT salesman. Also, 49 head for VANDUZER, selling for 12¾c. These were fair still Cattle, weighing 675 lbs., net.

SNOWDEN & CHARLES offered; through B. BARTRAM, salesman, 89 mixed Cattle, from Indiana, a few of which were too large and fine for a dull market like the present. Seven of them, fed by GRYSINGER, of Wayne County, weighed at home 2,100 lbs. each. They were offered for $1,200, or 13c. ₩ lb., buyers' option.

BEACH & SMITH were selling for S. LESTER, 84 rough still-fed cattle, from Illinois. They were of unequal weights, end running out at 11c.@13c. ₩ lb.

The same parties sold 18 Dutchess County, N. Y. Cattle, of fine quality, at 12c.@13¼c ₩ lb.

PURCHASE, WHEATON & Co. were selling the balance of 111 medium Ohio cattle which they bought at Bergen. They sold 60 head of them yesterday. Estimated weight 700 lbs., and the lot was running out at 11c.@12½c. S. SOMERS took 7 of the choice ones today at $65 each.

W. H. HARRIS sold 29 good Ohio cattle for J. MCPHERSON at 12c.@13c. They were estimated at 750 lbs. net.

He also wholesaled 74 Illinois cattle for KELP & JACOBY at about 12c. They were fair 700-lb. cattle.

ECKSTEIN & LAUTERBECK were selling 114 fair Kentucky cattle, bought at Buffalo, which they say will not afford them any profit at 12c.@13c., the prices of to-day. Estimated weight, 750 lbs.

J. BRYANT forwarded 95 good Ohio cattle, which C. G. TEED was getting about 13c. for in the morning. It is not likely they would average quite that figure; estimated 750 lbs. net.

LOCKMAN & ALVORD furnished 123 fair New-York cattle from Onondaga County, which were fed by Mr. HORTON. Home weight 1,400 lbs., and bringing a little more than $100 each, or 12c @13c. ₩ lb.

ALEXANDER & VIRGIN furnished 105 of their Illinois cattle of fine quality, which they estimate 700 lbs. net. R. MURRAY was selling them at 12c.@13c.

J. T. ALEXANDER offered 119 fairish Illinois cattle, rated 725@750 lbs. net, which S. ULERY sold at 12c.@13c. ₩ lb.

D. G. CULVER sold on his own account 115 head of good Ohio cattle, rated at 750 lbs., at an average of about 13c.

W. H. BELDEN had 70 fairish Illinois cattle, rated 700 lbs., which were bringing 12c.@13c. ₩ lb.

T. C. EASTMAN furnished 52 fine steers from Sangamon County, Ill., weighing at home 1,550 lbs. S. SHERMAN was getting near 13c. ₩ lb. for them. EASTMAN left 64 of the same quality at Albany, which probably went to the Brighton market.

LAMB & BUTLER forwarded 84 more of their Illinois-fed Cherokee cattle, estimated to weigh 600 lbs. net. They were not over fat, but brought by T. WHITE & SON about 12c. ₩ lb.

MILCH COWS WITH CALVES.

Milch Cows are sold at each of the above yards, usually with their Calves at their sides. The prices vary somewhat with the supply and demand, and vary greatly, of course, upon the milking value. The particular fancy of the buyer has also considerable to do with the price. Not unfrequently a Cow is sold at $90@$100, or even $120. The general price throughout the year for ordinary Cows is $30 to $40 or $50. Quite a number sell above $50, and more, perhaps, below $30. We often see apologies for Cows gn at $20 @$25. The weekly reports from the different yards will give the weekly fluctuations.

The receipts for the week show a falling off of more than 100 head from the footings of last week. Milkmen are now pretty well supplied for the season, and cows are dull at a decline in price.

ALLERTON reports 23 Milch Cows received during the week, selling at $30@$35 for common, $40@$50 for good, and $50@$60 for extras. A few as high as $75. Stock light with but little demand. Prices about as last week.

BROWNING reports receipts of 26 Milch cows, selling at $25@$30 for common, $35@$40 for good, and $50@$70 for extras. Cows are not as high as last week, although this market is not well supplied.

CHAMBERLIN reports 73 Milch Cows, selling at $25@$35 for common; $40@$50 for good; and $60@$65 for extras. Market about as last week, with dull sales.

O'BRIEN reports 132 Milch Cows, selling at $30@$40 for common, $40@$50 for good, and a few at $60@$65. Some extra Durhams from Kentucky are held at $100 @$140 each. They are choice stock and should go upon the farm for breeders instead of into the stables of milkmen.

VEAL CALVES.

Veal Calves are sold by live weight, each animal being weighed alive at the time of sale. "Bobs"—that is, Calves a few days old—are usually sold by the head at such prices as can be agreed upon, sometimes for hut little more than the skin is worth. The principal places of sale are ALLERTON'S, BROWNING'S, CHAMBERLIN'S and O'BRIEN'S.

These have been in good supply, with a gain of about 200 head for the week. Prices have advanced at most of the markets. Some of the finest calves bring 8c. ₩ lb. General selling prices are 6c.@7½c. ₩ lb., live weight.

ALLERTON reports receipts of 722 Veal Calves, selling for 6c.@7c. A few at 7½c., and some choice ones at 8c., ₩ lb., A brisk market at advanced prices.

BROWNING reports receipts of 33 Veal Calves, selling generally at 5c.@7c. ₩ lb. live weight. A few choice ones at 7½c. Receipts are light and the market scantily supplied.

CHAMBERLIN reports receipts of 117 Veal Calves, selling at 5c@7c. ₩ lb. live weight. Market not as well supplied, but prices rule about the same.

O'BRIEN reports 96 Veal Calves, selling at 6½c.@ 7½c., selling fair at advanced prices. Supply sufficient for the demand.

SHEEP AND LAMBS.

These are chiefly sold at ALLERTON'S, BROWNING'S, and CHAMBERLIN'S, at so much ₩ head for a particular lot of Sheep or Lambs, or of the two together. They are also frequently sold by live weight, as this is readily ascertained. The actual prices at the different yards seldom vary greatly. The difference in reputed prices is generally due to variation in the quality. When they are sold by weight, it is usually the net weight, which is ordinarily one-half what they weigh when alive, the pelt and offal making the other half. If fat and small-boned, they will dress 55 lbs., and in some cases 60 lbs., ₩ hundred. The average run is about one-half the live weight.

The Sheep market is better supplied than it has been for several weeks past. The receipts show a gain of about 2,200 over last week. Prices have declined a little. The market is generally very good.

ALLERTON reports receipts of 863 Sheep and Lambs, which hronght 13c.@14c. ₩ lb., dressed weight. One lot brought 7c. ₩ lb., live weight.

BROWNING reports receipts of 3,153 Sheep and Lambs, selling at 11c.@12c., net. Lambs are bringing $4@$6 each, or 16c.@18c. ₩ lb. The receipts have nearly doubled those of last week, and prices have fallen 50c. to 75c. per head on Sheep and nearly $1,00 per head on Lambs. New-York, New-Jersey and Ohio have contributed the principal numbers.

CHAMBERLIN reports receipts of 2,761 Sheep and Lambs, selling at $3,50@$7,50 per head. Arrivals more free, and prices have fallen a little.

REPORTS OF BROKERS' SALES AT BROWNING'S FOR WEEK ENDING JUNE 9, 1857.

JAS. MCCARTY reports sales of 1,470 Sheep and Lambs at $

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The United States Mail steamer Ericsson, from Liverpool on the 27th ult., arrived last evening. The news is four days later. It is now stated that the report of the unfitness of the Niagara for the reception of the Submarine Cable was without foundation in fact. According to last advices, she was about to proceed to Liverpool for the shipment of the cable. We have little general intelligence by this arrival. The Spanish-Mexican question remained in statu quo. Dispatches were expected from Madrid, after the reception of which negotiations would be continued, and the dispute, in all probability, be adjusted. It is announced that the British East India Company have seized the Island of Perim in the Straits of Babelmandel, and completely commanding the entrance to the Red Sea. The act is done under authority of a treaty, concluded some two years ago, by which the Company was to occupy the Island. Later intelligence from China represents Commissioner YEH as fortifying himself and making great preparations for the approaching war.

Late news from Mexico represents the country as very much agitated on the subject of the expected Spanish invasion. Extensive preparations were making at Vera Cruz, both in the Castle of San Juan and in the town, and Government was to raise a force of 25,000 men to be held in readiness for any contingencies that might arrive.

Interesting details of the latest Mormon outrages which have been brought to the notice of the public, will be found in the DAILY TIMES this morning, obtained from sources entitled to the utmost credit. The driving out of the United States authorities by the Mormons is the crowning act of their aggressions against the General Government.

The New-Hampshire Democratic State Convention yesterday nominated ASA P. CATE as candidate for Governor. The resolutions adopted indorse all the Democratic Administration, and sustain the Dred Scott decision. There was no speech-making.

The case of the State authorities of Ohio against the United States authorities came up before the District Court in Cincinnati yesterday, and various affidavits were submitted on the part of the prosecution, when the matter was adjourned until this morning.

The recent heavy rains have caused a considerable rise in the Ohio and Alleghany Rivers. In the latter the loss of property in consequence has been very serious. Whole fleets of rafts have been swept away, and many barges loaded with coal have been sunk.

The lovers of fresh meat will be glad to learn of a more abundant supply of beeves at yesterday's market, and a decline of about 1c. ₱ lb. in prices. There is, however, no certainty, nor even a probability that the decline is permanent, and people should not abandon the idea of a substitute for the morning steak at 18c.@21c. ₱ lb. Fresh fruits and vegetables are becoming quite plenty, and, with fish and eggs, will help to satisfy the most urgent requirements of consumers, while animal food commands such high rates.

The Board of Aldermen and Councilmen met last night, specially, to pay the usual respect to the memory of a recently deceased public officer—the late Mr. JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, Street Commissioner. A series of resolutions were adopted in both Boards, declaratory of their high appreciation of the personal and public character of Mr. TAYLOR. The death of Dr. VACHE was also noticed in a fitting manner. The funerals will be attended by the Common Council, and the usual badge of mourning will be worn for thirty days.

The Committee in reference to the removal of steamboats, listened, yesterday, to Mr. ISAAC NEWTON, and a few other gentlemen, but nothing new was elicited.

The sale of the State Arsenal property at the Merchant's Exchange was yesterday adjourned by A. J. BLEECKER (N. P. STANTON, Esq., Deputy Secretary of State being present) to the 24th of June, at the same hour and place. An injunction from the Supreme Court suddenly effected the postponement.

Yesterday, Judge CLERKE granted a temporary injunction restraining the Board of Commissioners from selling the Stats Arsenal and the land which it occupies. The land is wanted for the Central Park.

The entire Police force of the Fifteenth Ward, with two exceptions, declared last evening for the Metropolitan Police Commissioners, and went to a new Station-house at No. 10 Carroll place. The new Board made twenty-six appointments on the Police yesterday, and removed 159 members of the Department for insubordination and disobedience of orders. The old Board busied itself in removing the insubordinate and appointing others in their stead.

Yesterday the Burdell Estate case was again before the Surrogate. Mrs STEVENS and her husband, CYRENUS, testified as to a person named VANDOLEN calling on them with a message from Mrs. CUNNINGHAM, whom they afterwards thought to resemble ECKEL. Capt. DILKS and Officer DAVIS were examined as to the identification of Dr. BURDELL'S body by Rev. Mr. MARVINE. The remaining testimony was unimportant.

In the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, the second trial of THOMAS DENINY, charged with arson in the first degree, was commenced. The prisoner, it will be remembered, has occupied since his first trial, when the jury disagreed, a large and unenviable share of public attention. With the exception of one additional witness, the testimony taken yesterday was the same as that elicited at the former trial.

A Cuban named GEORGE L. DE LA VEGA, recently arrived from New-Orleans, was robbed on Monday night, at a hotel in Walker-street, of $20,500 in Spanish gold and silver coin. His trunks were broken open. The thieves have not been arrested, neither are they known.

A man named JAMES O'NEIL, a resident of Fourteenth-street, was found in First-avenue with his throat cut, but not so badly as to destroy all hopes of his recovery. He states that while turning the corner of Seventeenth-street and First-avenue, about 11 o'clock Monday night, he was suddenly seized by two men, one of whom drew a knife and inflicted the injuries from which he was suffering.

DANGERS OF PUBLISHERS.—The loose condition of the law of copyright makes it necessary that publishers should act with a good deal of caution in adopting English publications, in the assumption that they are of British manufacture. The publishers of the cheap class of British periodicals have long been in the habit of helping themselves to American works, giving them new titles, and then publishing them as original. Even the better class of English Magazines do such things continually, and it is often rather difficult to tell in reading a British periodical whether its contents are American or English. Our own publishers, it is well known, have long been in the habit of doing the same thing, and occasionally they "put their foot in it" by copying from an English publication a story that has already been published and copyrighted on this side of the Atlantic. Such an accident befel the publishers of one of our largely circulated weekly papers very recently. They found a capital story in one of the London papers, made it their own, gave a new name to it, advertised it extensively, and after having published part of it discovered that it was the production of an American author who had published and copyrighted it some years ago in Philadelphia. The author forbid the publication of the remainder of the story, and so the matter rests for the present. A few more such accidents as this will probably have the effect of convincing publishers that their true interests will be promoted by publishing none but original stories.

The Cuban Chimera.

Among the fantastic conceptions of ancient genius which were saved by the affectionate ashes of Vesuvius from the lava-flood which destroyed so much of the beauty and splendor of Pompeii and Herculaneum, and are now treasured by the pious King of Naples, is one which has attracted no little attention from the antiquarians of modern Europe. It has been baptized by the title of the "Woman caressing her Chimera," and it represents a lovely female figure of the Grecian type, who gazes with passionate tenderness upon a hideous little monster, which she embraces with her soft white hands.

You would say that in the ardor of that intense affection there might be life and warmth enough to kindle a factitious beauty in the elfish feature of the impracticable little wretch upon whom all these fascinations are lavished. But no!—a little horror he was, a little horror he is, and a little horror he will remain to the end of the chapter. The adoration of which he is the object, the sympathy which leads us all to desire that he may become what his delicate admirer believes him to be, are alike wasted upon his insensible clay.

What the Chimera in the ancient fresco is to the heartsick woman who is infatuated by her own conviction of his graces, that is the notion of Cuban annexation to a large party of enthusiasts in this country—of whom Mr. Ex-Secretary-at-War DAVIS is the most notable recent montbpiece. We can perfectly well understand the passion which leads so many Americans to desire that the "ever-faithful Island" may be added, a glorious Southern Cross, to the constellation of our Republican banner. Cuba is not merely a beautiful and prosperous Paradise in itself, a "Summer isle of Eden" of which poets and sugar-refiners dream with an almost equal tenderness. It is the key of the Gulf. It is the practical determining condition of that "Monroe Doctrine" which has for years been paraded as the ultimatum of American policy. What the destruction of Carthagena was to ancient Rome, that we have been taught to fancy the acquisition of Cuba is to modern America. Give us the Moro Castle, and the Western Mediterranean is ours. Cape San Antonio shall be our Gibraltar, and from the guns of the farther fortress of Cuba we shall volley forth Democratic law and Republican policy throughout the Northern and the Southern Hemispheres of the New World.

The passion for size, as the London Times some time since felicitously remarked in treating of the mammoth steamer Great Eastern, is one of the most ineradicable in the heart of man. We are all of us easily captivated by the promise of magnificent possibilities. Great premiums in prospective make fools of the shrewdest bankers. Great empires to conquer turned the brains of an ALEXANDER and a NAPOLEON. And it is not amazing, therefore, that the thought of Cuba and its fancied consequences should inflate the speeches of our Buncombian Ciceros beyond the usual limits of rhetorical exuberance, and carry whole audiences of shouting citizens captive. Our objections to all this sort of thing are not theoretical but practical objections. We do not see what valuable result is likely to follow from all this amiable cosseting of the delusion that Cuba can be bought, seduced or conquered into the embraces of the American Union. Granting that we love Cuba as ardently as the ancient lady of the Pompeiian fresco seems to love her loathsome little abomination, we do not see that our love is at all more likely to convert Cuba into an American State than was the frantic passion of the daughter of Panthenope to develop her Chimera into a Cupid.

The heart of Spain is set upon Cuba. No Spanish Minister would dare to propose a cession of Cuba. The diplomacy of sixty PIERRE SOULES—the financial astuteness of a family of ROTHSCHILDS would be alike thrown away upon a nation so resolutely, so passionately committed to the preservation of a darling possession as is Spain to the retention of Cuba. Nothing but force can wrest it from her grasp. And that force must be a greater force than the United States is likely to be able to exert in such a cause. For while a large portion of the richest and most influential sections of this country are either directly opposed to the acquisition of Cuba, or utterly indifferent to that acquisition, the simple fact is that in a struggle with the great maritime powers for supremacy in the Caribbean Sea, we should be original to put forth efforts which it is not in our present competence to make without an entire remodeling of our whole offensive establishment.

The acquisition of Cuba, then, is a ridiculous and unstatesmanlike "notion." We do not believe that Mr. BUCHANAN is weak enough to indulge the idea that such an acquisition is a thing to be seriously thought of, and when we hear Mr. Ex-Secretary DAVIS, whose chief claims to the recollection of the country rests upon his treachery in regard to Kansas and his insolence in regard to Lieutenant-General SCOTT, publicly boasting that he went into office in 1853, "with the hope that he would be able to do something in regard to acquiring the island of Cuba," we find in that silly boast only another reason for congratulating ourselves and the country that we have been delivered from the vacillating sway of the incongruous Cabinet to which General PIERCE thought it proper to entrust the destinies of a great people and the peace of the civilized world.

IMPORTANCE OF KNOWING FRENCH.—In this happy country of ours, where any man may be anything, from President downwards, everybody should know a little of everything, particularly French, so as to be prepared for an emergency. Several capable men have missed good appointments as foreign ministers because they could not speak any language but their own. A knowledge might be the means of securing an embassy, perhaps to France, where a smattering of the language will be found extremely convenient to an ambassador. Our present representative to the Emperor of France labors under the disadvantage of not being able to speak the language of the country; but fortunately for us the Emperor can speak English, so that our minister can have intercourse with him without the aid of an interpreter. But all Frenchmen cannot speak English, and HORACE VERNET, the great battle painter, is one of them. We are likely, it seems, according to a correspondent of the Providence Journal, to be deprived of the services of the great French artist in decorating our national capitol because he does not understand English, and our minister cannot speak French. Mr. MASON, it is said, received instructions to make an offer to VERNET, and sent for him to communicate the intelligence to him. The minister read the dispatch to the artist, who could not understand a word of it; and when some one asked him whether he intended going to America, he replied that he did not know he had been invited. Perhaps some friend has been found before this to act as an interpreter between the minister and the artist, and the Frenchman will have learned the honor that has been paid him.

Reciprocity of Forbearance.

There is nobody who has ever talked much either with rabid Southerners or moderate Pro-Slavery men at home, who must not have been thoroughly dosed with appeals to the North to let the matter alone—not to meddle with it—and to leave the South to the settlement of its own affairs. We have been assured, usque ad nauseam, that the only result of further agitation is to rivet the chains of the slave more tightly, by the irritation caused in outraging honest prejudices. Right or wrong, we are told, the slaveholder will not have himself browbeaten into emancipation. Be the institution good or bad, the planter was born and has grown up in the midst of it, and by decrying him for his connection with it, and dictating to him the course he should pursue, far from hastening the deliverance of the slave, we only rouse the choler of his master. No books may be published, no sermons may be preached, south of Mason and Dixon's line, containing the smallest hostile allusion to the question of Slavery, not so much for any danger that might be caused—for the bondage of the negroes is voluntary—but because the chivalry cannot brook outside comments upon matters par excellence domestic. Southern sensitiveness and Southern prejudices exact at home a censorship of the press more rigid than that of Russia; and, not content with this, would fain impose silence on the North.

Now, before we pay much attention to arguments of this sort, we may fairly look for something like a reciprocity of forbearance. We have our prejudices also; weak and foolish they may be, but such as they are they are just as much entitled to respect as those of anybody else.
